A letter received at this office from Mrs. T. D. Gross, states she is making her home with her sister, Mrs. Robbins, formerly Mrs. Mays. They are in South Dakota, not far from the Missouri river, and she thinks she will improve in health and like the country. She sends thanks to Sheriff Plum and wife, for kindness shown when she was here.

EPITOME OF THE WEEK

FUNERAL OF THE LATE GEN. JOSEPH E. JOHNSTON.

The Irish Campaign—Schooner Ashore—Drove Her Insane—Killed by the Cars—A New Base Ball League.

GEN. JOSEPH E. JOHNSTON.

North and South Unite to Do Him Honor.

Funeral services were held over the remains of the late Confederate General, Joseph E. Johnston at St. John's Episcopal Church, Washington. The church was crowded with Confederate veterans, and many people prominent in official life. The services were of the simplest character; no attempt at decorating the church was made, and no flowers save a wreath of immortelles on the coffin were visible. This symplicity, characteristic of the man, was observed at his earnest request, as he did not desire any display. Though the church was filled with battle-scarred veterans, there was not a uniform visible to announce the fact. The last great soldier of the civil conflict was buried as a civilian, not as a soldier. Rev. Dr. Douglass, the rector of St. John's Church, assisted by the Rev. Dr McKim, Confederate chaplain of Johnston's command during the war, conducted the services.

The Irish Campaign.

A London cable says: Michael Davitt, in an interview, said he was going to Sligo to assist in the anti-Parnell campaign. He expressed himself as positive that Alderman Colliery, the McCarthyite candidate, would win and thought the only question was whether his majority would be 2,000 or 3,000. Mr. Parnell's challenge to Maurice Healy, Mr. Davitt said, was made in a moment of exultant stupidity. On St. Patrick's day, the city of Cork was en fete and Parnell's egotism led him to believe that the demonstration was in his honor. Regarding Mr. Parnell's chances of re-election, Mr. Davitt said that in his mature opinion Mr. Parnell would certainly lose his seat if he should resign and seek return at the hands of his present constituency. "There are only two seats for Ireland," said Mr. Davitt, "to which Mr. Parnell could be elected with certainty. One is that of East Wicklow, which includes Avondale, and the other is that for North Dublin."

A Schooner Ashore.

The brig Joseph Barrigan, from Jamaica, W. I., for Havre, with logwood, went on the beach at Long Branch, during a dense fog. Two seamen jumped overboard, and one Thomas Lawson, was drowned. The other man was rescued. The Captain, Layons, says the vessel, which is half a century old and so unseaworthy that several crews had refused sail on her, had behaved badly during the voyage. He had lost his bearings and did not know that he was any where near land. It is likely that the brig will be allowed to go to pieces where she lies, as she is hardly worth saving.

A Colored Man Lynched.

The lynching of John Dances, (colored) at Columbiana, Ala., was the sequel to his attempt several months ago to outrage Mrs. Brewton Petts, a highly respectable white woman in Shaby County. A body of armed men went to the house of Jailor Slaughter and forced him to unlock the jail cell. They then took Dances to a tree half a mile from town and hung him. The jailor, Deputy Sheriff Smith and a Mr. Elliott came to the rescue of Dances and were forced to go along. About two hundred men in all participated in the lynching.

The Grant Monument.

At a meeting of the Grant Monument Committee in New York, arrangements were perfected for breaking ground for the monument on Gen. Grant's birthday, April 27. The committee voted to ask the State Government to set aside for a term of years all interest accruing from the refunded direct tax, $2,133,000, recently received from the federal government, for the purpose of the monument.

The Grip.

The grip continues to spread desolation through the homes of Pittsburgh and suburbs. Physicians, hospitals, and funeral directors are taxed as they probably never have been before. At the Pittsburgh Department of Health the record showed 442 deaths during the month of March, the larger proportion due to the ravages of the grip. In Allegheny City there have been 149 deaths.

A Tremendous Sensation.

New Orleans special: The indictments returned in blank, turn out to be against Detectives D. S. O'Mally and Thomas McCristol. L. Adams was not indicted as was first supposed. District Attorney said that a tremendous sensation was in store for the public before the end of the week, but he positively declined to give a hint of what it would be.

Drove Her Insane.

Miss Kate Detweiler, a handsome young lady of 24 years, hung herself at Canton, Ohio. She had been suffering from a severe attack of the grip, and while delirious from the fever, suicided.

The Pinkertons Win.

The bill prohibiting the bringing of detectives into Ohio to help the police or military, known as the anti-Pinkerton bill, which recently passed the House, was defeated in the Senate.

Thirteen Killed.

A Berlin cable says: An explosion occurred in the Florentine mining pit at Beuthen, Prussian Silesia, killing thirteen men and injuring many more.

Charles F. Chickering Dead.

Charles F. Chickering, whose name is famous wherever pianos are played, is dead.

Killed by the Cars.

Lizzie Pond, aged 20, while walking along the Cincinnati, Wabash and Michigan railroad, at Anderson, Ind., stepped from the track to escape an approaching train. Her clothing was caught by the cars and she was dragged 100 yards, her brains being dashed out against the ties.

Base Ball.

A Northwestern Base-ball League was organized at Jackson, Mich., consisting of the following cities: Fort Wayne and Evansville, Ind.; Detroit, Grand Rapids, and Bay City, Mich., and Toledo, O.

Harrison's Threat.

A New York Mail and Express Washington special says: President Harrison has determined upon summary measures to relieve American pork, which is the subject of so much German opposition. Minister Phelps has been notified to demand of the German authorities that the embargo be at once removed, else the President will proceed to exercise the authority given him by the last Congress, and by proclamation close our ports against German imports. The announcement amounts to nothing less than a threat, and the result will be interesting. The State Department officials refused to discuss the matter. There is no doubt that the communication has been sent to Minister Phelps, for the President so informed a Senator who called upon him.

KIDNAPED A MILLIONAIRE.

A Wealthy Detroit Citizen Captured and Held for Ransom by Bold Bandits.

Detroit special: Joseph Perrien, proprietor of one of the largest flouring mills in Detroit, and a half millionaire, was called to his door by a stranger the other night with a message purporting to come from an intimate friend who was reported as ill and desiring Mr. Perrien's attendance. Mr. Perrien left his home with the stranger about 10 o'clock, entered a coupe with him and went away. At 1 o'clock in the morning the Perrien home door-bell was rung and an envelope thrust in by a young man who immediately disappeared. The envelope contained a check for $15,000 on the Peninsular bank, of which Mr. Perrien is Vice President and a large stockholder, a promissory note for $15,000 payable in five days, and a letter to Mr. Perrien's nephew, Mr. Hesselbacher, advising him to cash the check, negotiate the note, or failing either, to raise $15,000 on his own property to be paid as a ransom for Mr. Perrien, who was being held by some parties whom the letter did not disclose. The letter appointed a rendezvous at which the money might be paid. Both note and check bore Mr. Perrien's genuine signature.

LATER—Joseph Perrien, the wealthy miller who was kidnaped, has returned home safe and well. He says he attempted to jump out of the coupe, but two masked men with revolvers prevented. They gagged and blindfolded him. When he was released he was forced to write and sign a check, note, and letters. His captors finally told him their game was up, and then blindfolded him and dumped him in the outskirts of the city and drove away.

BOLD ROBBERY.

Two Laporte, Ind., Citizens Kidnaped and Robbed of Valuables.

Chicago special: John Wilson and Henry Matthews, two prominent citizens of Laporte, Ind., were seized by three burly ruffians, while they were waking to their homes, a few miles outside that city, and thrown into an empty cattle car which was on its way to Chicago, attached to the regular cattle train. The train had stopped, but started as soon as the daring deed was committed. The ruffians threw the men to the floor of the car and robbed them of their valuables, which they only succeeded in taking after a desperate struggle. The robbers sprang upon their victims, and over and over they rolled, each man fighting for supremacy. The noise of the rapidly moving train and the cries of the huddled up cattle drowned the shouts of the men for help. The men who were big and strong, fought desperately for their lives, but the three robbers were too much for them. After a battle of nearly half an hour the nearly exhausted men were hurled from the rapidly moving train and left lying bruised, bleeding, and unconscious by the roadside. Two hours afterward they were found and conveyed to a neighboring house, where they were revived. As soon as their story was learned the Chicago police were notified, but so far no arrests have been made. The wounded men were taken to their homes. They are both seriously injured, but not necessarily fatal.

BRUTAL WORK OF STRIKERS.

A Reign of Terror at Braddock, Pa.

A special from Braddock, Pa., says: The west end of Braddock is under a reign of terror. August Coulson, a Swede, came here from the East to go to work at the Carey blast furnaces. He was met at Copeland station by his brother-in-law, John Martin, and in making their way toward Rankin Station with two valises thrown over their shoulders were thought to be men coming to go to work in the wire mill where a strike is in progress. They were set upon by a crowd and unmercifully beaten with stones and clubs. Martin is under a doctor's care. Coulson, being a stranger, got lost in his flight and has not yet turned up. Martin thinks that Coulson has been dangerously hurt. John Penny was attacked by a crowd while returning from work at the wire mill. He drew a revolver and warned the crowd to stand aside. He was afterward arrested for carrying concealed weapons, and held for trial. Andrew Hanson, another Swede, was stripped of his clothing and is confined to his bed as a result of injuries sustained from rough treatment by a crowd of strikers. The police are now keeping the West End under surveillance. An outbreak is expected at any moment.

A Prospective Duel.

Berlin special: The Kaiser and Chancellor Caprivi are very much stirred up over the unpleasant position in which the young wife of old Prince Reuss, the German Embassador at Vienna, has got her husband by insulting the son of the Roumanian Minister. It is difficult to see how Prince Reuss can avoid fighting a duel now that the Roumanian Minister has resigned in order to obtain satisfaction for the insult to his son. The Prince is a general in the Prusian army and could not refuse the challenge without incurring the charge of cowardice. On the other hand he is not a man of fighting disposition, and prefers a quiet, easy life, from which the lively temper of his wife is continually dragging him. It is even said that there is a story similar to that of Joseph Potipihar's wife behind the animosity of the Princess toward the young Roumanian.

An Artificial Flood.

A large tank of the National Cotton Seed Oil Company burst while being tested with water at West New York, N. J., sending a huge volume of water down a steep hill. The water struck a tank containing 300 barrels of oil, which burst and swelled the torrent. The house of Michael Taft was in the path of the torrent and the cataract damaged it considerably. Mrs. Taft was caught in the flood and was badly injured. Michael Taft, her son, was also badly injured, so was also a man named Barthol. There were several persons more or less injured but their names could not be ascertained. The damage to the oil company is estimated at $15,000.

Asphyxiation.

Des Moines, (Ia.) special: Reuben S. Hatton, a bookkeeper in the employ of the Central Loan and Trust Association, and an unknown woman, supposed to be from Kansas City, were found in a room in the Oriole block, which was occupied by Mr. Hatton as a sleeping room. Death was caused by asphyxiation. Hatton lay disrobed upon the bed and the woman was clad in her usual wearing apparel. Empty liquor bottles were scattered profusely about the room, indicating that the dead persons became stupified by liquor before the gas, which had been partially turned off, was extinguished. The affair has caused a great sensation, chiefly because of the high church and business connection of the dead man's relatives.

An Editor Killed.

Ernest Hardenstein, editor of Business, a weekly paper, and John Cashman, editor of the evening Post, met in mortal combat on the streets of Vicksburg, Miss., with the result of Hardenstein being killed. The difficulty was caused by a discussion of the action of the citizens of New Orleans in the killing of the Hennesy assassins. Cashman surrendered and was locked up. He said he had been advised by warm friends that Hardenstein would attack him and he was prepared for the worst when attacked by Hardenstein. No pistol was found on Hardenstein's body and he is believed to have been unarmed at the time of the encounter.

A Wonderful Hypnotist.

San Francisco special: Senator Fair's daughter, Jessie, married Herman O. Beach, of New York, and he has two sons, James, jr., and Charles. Recently James, jr., was discharged from a hospital where he had been seriously ill, due to drinking. When he was discharged, Dr. Brown, the hypnotist, put him under the influence, and for several hours exercised his influence on Fair's palate and told him to go and drink no more. Fair could not drink, and even the smell of liquor was abhorent. The brother, Charles, went to Brown and the operation was treated in his case with a like result. Brown has gone East to make a visit prior to a trip to Europe.

Chopped His Wife's Head Off.

Wheeling (W. Va.) special: News of one of the most atrocious murders ever committed in this vicinity has just reached here. Peter Richmond ordered his wife to pick up a pair of scissors which were on the floor, and, because she did not immediately obey, he seized an ax and struck his wife on the head, felling her to the floor. He then struck her several blows with the edge of the weapon, leaving her head hanging by but a shred. He then attacked his mother, who ran from the house screaming for help. Richmond was overpowered by the neighbors and bound to the floor. He is supposed to be insane.

California's New Senator.

Charles N. Felton has been elected U. S. Senator from California to succeed the late Senator Hearst.

Senator-elect Felton was born in New York fifty-eight years ago, and went to California when he was 17 years of age. He engaged in mining and mercantile pursuits and entered politics as a Democrat. He afterwards became a Republican and was elected to the Assembly for four years. He declined renomination six years ago, and was sent to Congress from the Fifth District. He has also held the position of United States Sub-Treasurer of San Francisco.

Buried Treasure.

An old citizen of Creston, Iowa, has received a letter from a priest in Lisbon, Spain, apprising him of the fact that a Spanish exile who was formerly his associate as an employe of the Burlington roundhouse here had just died leaving him $5,000 upon the following conditions: The citizen is to give the priest a bond in the sum of $40,000 guaranteeing that he will unearth and restore to the Spaniard's only heir, a daughter, jewels to the value of $40,000 buried in Creston. A chart giving the exact location of the treasure is to be sent the citizen on receipt of the bond.

Chinese Beheaded.

A detective from British Columbia states that during his stay in Victoria he saw enough to convince him that the Chinese in the Province were administering punishments according to their own civil criminal code. He says he got on the track of two cases in which criminals had been tried under their code and secretly beheaded. He is of the opinion that many Chinamen are thus dealt with on the Pacific coast, of whose cases the local police never hear.

Dastardly Deed of Polanders.

John Troutman and Edward Jones, while on their way home, at Shoemakers Patch, Pa., were attacked at a lonely spot on the road by three men. While one held Jones at bay with a revolver thrust into his face, the others attacked Troutman, stabbing him repeatedly. The wounds are believed to be fatal. Three Polanders have been arrested on suspicion of committing the crime, of which no one knows the cause.

Crushed to Death.

While William Wessemann was assisting at the machine used at the Bass Foundry and Machine Works, Fort Wayne, for crushing car wheels, one of them fell on him, crushing him to death. He leaves a wife and three children.

A Parricide.

A Hillsboro, Ohio, dispatch says that William Moore, a wealthy farmer and stock breeder, living in the northern part of Highland County, near New Vienna, was shot and killed by his son, Oscar, who claims that he acted in self-defense. The son has been arrested.

Senator Blair Accepts.

Ex-Senator Blair has accepted the Chinese mission, and has arranged to sail from San Francisco to the flowery kingdom on the 1st of May. He has already received his instructions from the Secretary of State.

Belgium vs. France.

The Belgium Government threatens to renounce the copyright convention with France, which expires next February, if France persists in her protective policy. This will be a hard blow to the French printing and publishing trades.

In Chili.

Official advices from Chili state that the Government troops have retired to Salama. They have abundant materials and provisions.

Ohio Appropriates $100,000.

The Ohio Legislature has passed the World's Fair bill appropriating $100,000, and it is now a law.

OUR FARMERS' RIVAL.

WHEAT AND CORN IN THE ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

Great Increase of Production—Reciprocity with Brazil Will Not Help Our Farmers—Argentine Will Take Brazil's Market—Reciprocity with Europe Wanted.

While Mr. Blaine has been doing something to open South American markets to our farm products, a rival of our farmers is springing up in South America itself. Consul Baker, of Buenos Ayres, who has represented our Government in that city for sixteen years, has recently sent a report to the State Department in which he says that "it is only a question of time and immigration for the Argentine Republic to become one of the great grain producing regions of the world."

When Mr. Baker went to that country, cargoes of flour from New York, Baltimore and Richmond were of frequent occurrence, but our treasury reports for last year do not report a dollar's worth of flour sent there. Sixteen years ago he found that the opinion was held that the Argentine pampas were unsuitable for cultivation and would always be devoted to pasturage. This opinion was based upon the scientific utterances of Dr. Burmeister, the great German naturalist, who occupies a position of high authority in Argentine.

Not satisfied with this judgment of the scientist, the President of the republic laid out land into farms and established farming colonies. Large estates heretofore devoted to pasturage have been divided up into smaller tracts suitable for farming, and everything points to a very great development of wheat and corn growing at an early day. In 1875 there were only 271,000 acres in wheat, in 1889 there were 1,035,000 acres. Corn occupied only 249,000 acres in 1875; in 1889 there were 850,000 acres. Exports of wheat and flour in 1889 reached $2,100,000, exports of corn $12,977,000. But the crop of 1889 was a failure, owing to a protracted drought, and exports of wheat were only one-tenth as great as in the two previous years. This will be seen from the following figures of Argentine exports taken from the "Handbook of the American Republics" which is issued by Mr. Blaine's Pan-American bureau in Washington:

	Bushels.
1880.....	42,829
1881.....	5,772
1882.....	62,659
1883.....	2,292,352
1884.....	3,986,663
1885.....	2,864,138
1886.....	1,288,362
1887.....	8,733,984
1888.....	8,721,751
1889.....	834,232

After the small exports of 1889, the first three months of 1890 showed an enormous increase. Wheat and flour exported rose to $20,200,000, and the exports of corn for the three months were $9,897,000.

An important fact to note is that Brazil was a large buyer of these breadstuffs, one-seventh of the wheat exported; one-fourth of the corn, and one-fifth of the flour exported in 1889 went to Brazil. As the Argentine Republic is so much nearer to Brazil than we are, it can hardly be hoped that our farmers will long be able to sell their breadstuffs in Brazil in competition with it. From Buenos Ayres to Rio Janeiro, the capital of Brazil, is about 1,000 miles, a voyage of only three to five days, while from New York to Rio Janeiro is 4,800 miles and takes from twenty to twenty-five days.

This fact is all the more important when it is remembered that Brazil has no duty at all on wheat, and the duty on flour, which is to be removed for us, is only 10 per cent. It is thus seen that our farmers have a powerful rival on almost an equal footing, and fifteen to twenty days nearer the Brazilian market than we are. It seems at best to be only a question of time when it will be impossible for us to ship breadstuffs to Brazil.

The capacity for the development of wheat raising in Argentine may be seen from Consul Baker's estimate, that at present there are only about 5,800,000 acres in wheat, while there are 723,500,000 acres suitable for wheat-growing. It is therefore almost true to say that for every acre in wheat now there are 100 acres that may be put in wheat.

That the wheat acreage of Argentine will soon be enormously increased is certain. A year ago a firm of agricultural implement makers here in the United States had an order from that country for 25,000 plows to be used in turning over the rich prairie land of Buenos Ayres. At the same time it was reported that the activity in ship building on the Clyde was due to the demand for steamers in the trade between England and the Argentine Republic.

While Mr. Blaine is chasing the will-o'-the-wisp of a market for breadstuffs in South America, it would be a good thing for him to devise ways and means for preventing Europe herself from going to South America for her supply of breadstuffs. So long as European countries are repelled by McKinley tariffs from selling their goods to us, just so long will they be forced to seek other markets. If they sell in South America they are bound to buy grain there in exchange for their goods if they can find it. The more freely we admit European goods the more do we increase the demand in Europe for our agricultural products.

Two Republican Views.

Two leading Republicans have just expressed certain views about the tariff question which are significant. Senator Hale, of Maine, has given his views as to the part the tariff will play in the next national campaign.

"It will be impossible," he said, "to keep the tariff from being one of the leading issues of the campaign, because if no general tariff law is reported in the House and no fight is made to remodel the entire law, some changes will be suggested and probably attempted. The people will expect this, and the tariff questions will be constantly under discussion by the masses."

The other Republican is the now defunct Ingalls, who has been visiting Boston, and has stated to a Republican paper there the attitude of Western Republicans on the tariff question. He shows that a great change has come over the dream of Republican prospects in the West. The ex-Senator said:

"The views of Western Republicans, or those who have hitherto been identified with the Republican party, have undergone an essential change on the tariff question, and among such there is now a demand for tariff revision and reduction. They regard the present system as inequitable and as favoring the manufacturer and the merchant more than the producer and the consumer. In their estimation the tariff question follows the silver issue in consequence and importance.

"Reciprocity is regarded in the West with favor, but there is no enthusiasm over it. It is regarded very largely as a device of politicians intended to distract people from the real issues in which they are interested. It has no great political significance at present."

Full Tariff Prices.

For some months the prices of imported dry goods in the New York market have been gradually moving upward toward the new tariff standard. The large importations last summer and fall, made at that time in order to escape the new McKinley duties, overstocked the market, and for some months it was not possible for the importers to realize the full prices which the McKinley law would eventually make necessary.

It seems, however, that the time has come when full new tariff prices are demanded and, with much hesitancy and objection, are paid. The New York Commercial Bulletin has just said, in reviewing the foreign dry goods market, that prices "are firm, and as strong in promise of continued stability as in actual condition. Importers feel perfectly sure of their position, and express no lack of confidence in their ability to maintain full new tariff prices throughout the season. Buyers have about abandoned hope of breaking the market by a holding off of the demand. Nevertheless, current prices do not suit them."

It must not be supposed that these foreign goods are entirely such as only the rich can buy. Many of them are the goods of the poor man. Nearly every yard of linen goods worn in this country comes from Europe. Most of the cheaper stockings have been imported, and the same is true of corduroys, cotton plushes, etc. The imports of all kinds of cheap foreign dry goods would be vastly greater if it were not for the McKinley tariff wall. The tariff is a thing to prevent the people from getting what they want.

PROTECTING RAISINS.

Tariff Cost to the Country—California Raisin Business Already Prosperous.

Perhaps no single item shows so well the sting of the tariff as raisins. The Census Bureau has just made public the statistics of grape and raisin production for 1880. By comparing these statistics and those of raisin imports for 1890 very striking results are obtained.

According to the census returns, 41,166 tons of grapes were used for making raisins last year, producing 1,372,195 boxes of raisins, weighing 27,440,000 pounds. Besides these raisins fit for table use, 23,252 tons of grapes were dried for other purposes, like cooking. It would be safe to estimate the dried grape product at 14,000,000 pounds. Nearly all of the above were produced in California.

The New York Merchants' Review estimates the price of California raisins at 10 cents a pound, and of the dried grapes at 7 cents. On this basis the raisin product of the country last year was worth $2,744,000, and the dried grapes $980,000, a total of $3,724,000.

Now the Treasury Department reports that during the year ending Dec. 31, 1890, we imported 44,798,000 pounds of raisins, valued at $2,315,000, or a trifle above 5 cents a pound. The old duty on raisins was 2 cents a pound; the McKinley duty is 2½ cents. The McKinley duty on last year's importations would have been $1,119,900.

This is the sum which the taxpayers are now compelled to pay to insure big profits to the California raisin producers. The raisin business is already so profitable in that State that men have been rushing into it headlong. A California paper has recently stated that the vineyards of that State already in bearing, and those planted but not yet in bearing, will have a capacity of 7,750,000 boxes of raisins, or 155,000,000 pounds. The annual protection, then, guaranteed by the tariff law will be equal to $3,875,000.

But there is another side to this matter. The California raisins are of very excellent quality and readily bring 10 cents a pound wholesale, while most of the foreign raisins are not up to the California standard of quality, and are bought mostly by poorer people. This may be seen from the fact that the imported raisins come in at about 5 cents a pound. The California raisins find their way mostly to the tables of men who are able to buy the best quality of food. Why should the cheap raisins of the poor be taxed one-half of their value in order that the prosperous vineyard owners of California may get a higher price for raisins sold to the rich? Are not the poor paying too much for the whistle for these California raisin men?

Protection in Pennsylvania.

A Pennsylvania paper has been commenting upon the census returns for that State. It finds that "it is a melancholy fact, in contrast with the excessive increase of mining population, that the farming population of the State is steadily declining. Where any agricultural counties show growth the increase is in the towns at the expense of the country."

Pennsylvania is usually considered the State which gets the lion's share of protection, and it is there that protection to American labor should produce good results, if it can be done anywhere. But here is what the Pennsylvania paper says on the subject:

"Skilled miners, who once earned good wages, have been supplanted by Bohemian and Russian peasants, who never saw the mouth of a mine until brought to this country. With the frequent stoppages of labor, in order that the corporations might maintain prices of coal against consumers, two miners do not earn much more in a year now than one earned in a former period. Industrial production, though increased, has not kept pace with the unhealthy growth of population: and as a consequence there is a great deal of distress among the working people of the mining regions. Pennsylvania has, therefore, no reason for self-congratulation upon this portion of the State's increase of inhabitants."

Protection is asked for in behalf of "American labor;" but in Pennsylvania it supplants American with "European pauper labor."

Reciprocity at the Other End.

Mr. Blaine's reciprocity with Brazil does not seem to be viewed in that country in exactly the same hopeful light in which the American protectionists see it. The reduction of Brazil's duties on manufactured articles, it is hoped here, will give our manufacturers a decided advantage in that country over their English rivals, but this opinion doesnt seem to prevail in Brazil.

The Rio News, a paper friendly to reciprocity with this country, has recently been discussing the Blaine treaty, and it shows that our manufacturers are not going to get entire control of Brazalian markets, by any means. It says:

"In regard to cotton and hardware, our English friends may rest content—the treaty will work no great changes in this respect. The 25 per cent. reduction will barely equalize the cost of the goods to the importer, while the unwillingness of Americans to establish commercial houses in the country, and to give the customary credits, will more than offset any slight advantage the treaty can give. Treaties and legislation may injure commerce, but after all no sound and prosperous trade is ever built up without individual effort and initiative. Mr. Blaine will have to conjure up something besides a reduction of 25 per cent. on duties before he can turn the tide of importation in South America from England to the United States."

In showing that American lack of enterprise prevents us from having a monopoly of Brazil's market, the Rio paper is simply saying what our own trade papers and business men have said repeatedly in the past in explanation of our limited sales of goods in South America.

The trouble has been that our manufacturers have been taught to rely on the Government to hold the home market for them against all comers: thus they have come to look upon this home market too much as their only field of operations. With high tariff prices guaranteed to them at home, they have been slow to push out into foreign markets, where they will have to face a frowning world of competitors. It is time for American manufacturers to put out to sea and learn to swim in deep water.

Free Wool for Mixing.

The tariff reformers have frequently asserted that one of the best reasons why foreign wools should be admitted free of duty was that these wools were necessary for mixing with our native wools, in order to get the best results in manufacturing cloth. This assertion is made by wool manufacturers themselves.

A recent number of a Boston trade paper confirms this statement in an incidental way. This paper says:

"Important changes have been made in the manufacture of dress goods at the Arlington mills. They have adopted the method of the Providence (R. I.) worsted mills in preparing their raw material. Instead of using foreign wool only, as in past years, they have begun the new season by using a combination of Australian, domestic fleece and Territory wools. The Fletcher mills at Providence have made a great success in making dress goods and worsteds under this plan, and the Arlington will no doubt do the same. As a consequence the latter mill has been a heavy buyer of fleece and Territory wools since the beginning of the year, and has been the chief factor in reducing the stock of territories in this market. This combination of three kinds of wool gives a top finish that makes a good selling grade for the present demand."

The fact here quoted is printed by the Boston paper as a mere matter of trade news; the tariff on wool is not in the writer's mind at all. This confirmation of the free-wool argument is therefore all the more striking and convincing.

Wise Words from Simpson.

Congressman Jerry Simpson, of Kansas, has been talking in Washington to a newspaper correspondent about the ills from which the farmers are suffering, and the remedies which he proposes. He shows that he is "right side up" on the tariff question.

Complaining that parallel lines of railroad running East have combined in order to put up freight rates, he was asked whether he did not expect any benefit from Southern routes in competition with Eastern. To this question he replied:

"Well, we did take a good deal of interest in a proposal to improve Galveston harbor, as it promised to give us a more easily accessible outlet through the Gulf. But, dear me! with our present protective tariff, what's the use? No sooner is an opening found anywhere for getting American products out of the country than the Government stops it up again at a custom house, so that nothing can get into the country from outside without paying an extortionate toll. The trouble with commerce, as with any other form of exchange, is that it takes two parties to conduct it: and we Americans can't expect other peoples to buy our goods if we refuse to accept theirs in return."

Socks, or no socks, that is sound doctrine, and the coming forward of stalwart, common-sense farmers like Simpson to teach it to the people and enforce it in Congress bodes no good for McKinleyism. It means that this monstrosity is tottering to its fall.

Watch the Little Things.

There is a barn upon the Allegheny Mountains so built that the rain which falls upon it separates in such a manner that that which falls on one side of the roof runs into a little stream which flows into the Susquehanna, and thence into the Chesapeake Bay and on to the Atlantic Ocean. That which falls on the other side is carried into the Allegheny River, thence into the Ohio, and onward to the Gulf of Mexico.

The point where the water divides is very small. But how different the course of these waters!

So it happens with persons. A very little thing changes the channel of their lives. Much depends upon the kind of tempers we have. If we are sour and ill-tempered no one will love us. If we are kind and cheerful we shall have friends wherever we go. Much depends upon the way in which we improve our school days. Much depends upon the kind of comrades we have; much upon the kind of habits we form. If we would have the right kind of a life we must watch the little things. We must see how one little thing affects another thing, how one little act takes in many others.—Golden Days.

SOME time last fall a trust of type foundries was formed to get the full benefit of the 25 per cent. protection. Recently the Iowa State Register, the leading Republican paper of Iowa, wanted to buy new type and found that the price was one-third higher. This paper has a habit of discovering the deep schemes of the Cobden Club, and then shouting itself hoarse against "British free trade;" but here is what it said when it knew that the "combine" had put up the price of type: "Competition is a necessary and indispensable factor among American manufacturers, and all combines must be made to understand than when they form trusts to decrease discounts or to advance prices, the duty on goods manufactured by the combines must be removed." As nine-tenths of domestic industries are controlled by combines, the Register's remedy would be practially "British free trade."

WHEN our forefathers made the first tariff in 1789, they selected articles of luxury on which to lay the highest duties. In this way carriages were taxed at the highest rate found in the first tariff law. But our fathers had a different idea of what a high tariff is from that which prevails now. The highest duty in their tariff was only 15 per cent. We have many McKinley duties ten times as high, and some even higher.

THE Nebraska State Lumbermen's Association has accepted the proposition of the United Lumbermen to consolidate the two organizations. A convention is to be held in Chicago in May to complete the consolidation, and then the trust will include practically all Western dealers. It is already announced that the few independent dealers will be boycotted. The duty of $1.50 per thousand will, in a large measure, prevent competition from Canada.

THE prices of domestic-made pocket knives have been advanced since the McKinley bill increased the duties on cutlery. A pearl-handled knife, with a variety of useful blades and fixings, which sold at retail in New York last fall for $1.50, is now sold for $2. The high McKinley duty made this increase necessary on the German knife, and then the domestic makers put up prices to the same point.

THE little State of Rhode Island holds its election for State officers in April. The Democracy of "Little Rhody" is very wide awake, and declares that "it believes in a freer trade with all countries, exchange and barter being the life of business"

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites Of Lime and Soda.

There are emulsions and emulsions, and there is still much skimmed milk which masquerades as cream. Try as they will many manufacturers cannot so disguise their cod liver oil as to make it palatable to sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion of PURE NORWEGIAN COD LIVER OIL, combined with Hypophosphites is almost as palatable as milk. For this reason as well as for the fact of the stimulating qualities of the Hypophosphites, Physicians frequently prescribe it in cases of

But do not use the dangerous alkaline and mercurial preparations which destroy your nervous system and ruin the digestive power of the stomach. The vegetable kingdom gives us the best and safest remedial agents. Dr. Sherman devoted the greater part of his life to the discovery of this reliable and safe remedy, and all its ingredients are vegetable. He gave it the name of a name every one can remember, and to the present day nothing has been discovered that is so beneficial for the BLOOD, for the LIVER, for the KIDNEYS and for the STOMACH. This remedy is now so well and favorably known by all who have used it that arguments as to its merits are useless, and if others who require a corrective to the system would but give it a trial the health of this country would be vastly improved. Dr. J. W. Bergen:

Dear Sir:—By this time, I presume, you will want to know how I am getting along with Bergen's Asthma Cure.

Well, you have heard of persons obtaining a new life. Now I really feel that way myself. When I began taking Bergen's Asthma Cure, I was just coming out of a long siege of it, and was reduced to 115 pounds; weak, short of breath, chills, fever, and badly demoralized generally, coughing from half an hour to an hour every night.

Since commencing, from the third night, I have not lost ten minutes' sleep all night, cough gone, gained seventeen pounds, chills gone, fever gone, shortness of breath and difficulty of breathing gone, consequently I feel a thousand per cent. better. I thank God every day that I ever saw your advertisement, and that I was induced to write to you.

This is peculiarly encouraging in my case, as I had suffered so long and was so discouraged about my case, having tried everything. I am telling the good news every day.

Push on the good work; you are on the right track.

Yours Very Gratefully,

From the Hon. Harvey D. Colvin, Ex-Mayor of Chicago:

CHICAGO, July 24, 1890.

S. H. KLINCK—DEAR SIR: I am pleased to say that I consider your remedy the best medicine in existence, for the human afflictions you claim to cure. I suffered from catarrh with bronchitis for many years. During that time I employed physicians and faithfully tried many so-called remedies advertised to cure this disease, without any material benefit, when a friend induced me to try your remedy, claiming others had been cured by it. The first bottle gave me the most pleasing results. I have continued its use and I cannot say too much for it. It found me too near the grave for comfort and restored me to health again. It adorns my toilet stand and by using it occasionally I am kept well.

I would not be without it if it cost $25 per bottle. I earnestly recommend it to all my afflicted friends.

HONEST FAME.

BY HOWARD C. TRIPP.

My feet hath trod the sordid sod
Till they are weak and lame;
But still I stray along the way
That leads to honest fame.
But who will care when I am there
Within that palace grand?
For honest fame is but a name
Traced on Time's shifting sand.

And soon or late the grand or great
Shall lose their heritage,
And they shall all sleep 'neath the pall
Of a forgotten age.
The things we trust will turn to dust,
The jewels that we prize
Will sometime be within Time's sea,
And lost to human eyes.

But others trod the dusty sod
Till they were old and lame,
And long did stray along the way
That led to honest fame.
And few did care when they were there
Within that palace grand;
Their honest fame was but a name
Traced on Time's shifting sand.

Dr. Elfenstein's Mission

A Remarkable Romance.

BY EMILY THORNTON.

CHAPTER XXXI—Continued.

While she thus spoke a change, indeed, came over her listener. Surprise gave place to hope, hope to joy, and as the last words were uttered the Doctor had risen and clasped both her hands in his, while he exclaimed:

"I see it all now! I have been rash, harsh and cruel in my judgment, and scarcely dare ask you to forgive me. But I must be forgiven or I can never rest."

"You are forgiven. But let me hear how this animal was discovered and also how he looks. As I fed him so long and he frightened me so terribly, I should be one of the first to know."

"You shall hear the whole story at once. Come to the sofa, dear Ethel, and let me hold your hand in token of peace being fully established between us, and then

'I will a tale unfold, whose lightest word
Will harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young blood,
Make thy two eyes like stars start from their spheres.'

"First, then, let me say you were deceived. The man calling himself Sir Reginald Glendenning concocted an infamous lie for your benefit when he told you that an animal was concealed in that room. It was no ape, but his own poor brother, Sir Arthur, whom for twenty-five years he held chained to the floor alone, dead to the world, in that horrible prison."

"Oh, Doctor, Doctor! can this be true?" exclaimed the poor girl, shuddering deeply at his words. "Did I indeed push that wretched food to a human being? It is too terrible to believe. I cannot endure the thought!"

"You did; but be calm, for God ordered it to be so. Remember that, and that through you, He sent him a knife, which aided him, at last, to escape."

"Thank God that I did that! Never can I forget the anxiety I felt, after committing what I then thought a terrible blunder. I feared the ape would kill himself. When he escaped that night, I knew after a few minutes that it was the supposed animal, and fearing the discovery of its existence through my means, I prevented you from examining the place. I had taken a solemn vow never to reveal his being in life, neither the fact of a concealed room."

Ethel then went over her whole experience while at the Hall, to which Earle listened with intense interest, ending with Sir Reginald's rough usage when she was dismissed, to which he also listened with fierce indignation.

When Dr. Elfenstein, in return, told his listener that Rev. Edwin C. Stiles and Sir Arthur were one, her amazement knew no bounds, and with breathless interest she listened to the whole tragic story.

"What has been done with the body?"

"It was taken to Glendenning Hall this morning, where it lies in state. The servants all returned, and I have loaned Mrs. Clum to the place until I come back from America, as while absent my cottage will be closed."

"Are you going to leave us, Doctor?" murmured his companion, in dismay, as she heard these words, and he felt the hand he still held tremble and grow cold in his clasp.

"I must, for a very short time. I alone know the whereabouts of the younger brother Firtzoy, who was so many years regarded as the murderer. This gentleman sent me here to clear his name from this foul calumny. To-day I see it unstained, and as he is now the baronet, and a great invalid, I go to bring him back in triumph to his home. Poor gentleman! his days are numbered; but with care and attention I feel that he can reach the home of his boyhood in safety; but there must be no delay. A vessel leaves Liverpool to-morrow, and in it I must take passage, if possible, in order, as a medical man, to look after his health in this, to him, eventful voyage."

CHAPTER XXXII.

AN OLD, OLD STORY.

"Yes, now," resumed Earle Elfenstein. "I have fulfilled my trust, and can carry to him the most blessed news the poor man could hear in this world. Ethel—let me call you Ethel this once—I, too, know what it is to take a solemn vow, for I took one at the bedside of Mr. Rappelye, the name assumed by my employer, to this effect: I would dedicate myself to this cause, and in order to do this I would allow nothing to interfere with this, my work.

"Even at the outset I had a temptation to swerve from this promise set before me. It was on the ocean when I saw a sweet young girl alone, with a great sorrow and anxiety. Oh, how I longed to take this young traveler into my arms, and bid her rest in my care, my love. Yes, from the first meeting on the sea I have struggled against a wild and yearning fondness for you, my darling. Now I am free to yield to that blessed feeling, and I thus joyfully avow it, and ask if it meets a return. Speak to me, dearest," he added, as he passed his arm around her slight form, and drew her tenderly toward him; "is this dear girl to be my darling—my own sweet wife?"

For one moment the bowed head rested on his shoulder, then, as he met no resistance, it was raised, and kiss after kiss was pressed upon the ripe, red lips that murmured softly:

"Yes, your darling; yours forever and ever."

"Ah, dearest, this repays for all doubts and struggles of the past. How hard it was to refrain from telling my love that eventful night, when you clung to me so closely in your fright. Dearest, you loved me then, did you not?"

"Yes, indeed; and long before. I wept bitterly as you left my aunt and myself in Liverpool. I loved you so deeply, even at that time, and with anguish felt that we were then parting forever. But we met again, and then I feared the cruel circumstances in which I was placed would meet only distrust and scorn. Dr. Elfenstein, answer me solemly, do you believe all that I have told you, and can you hereafter trust me fully?"

"I do and can," murmured the enraptured lover, "and thus seal the words!"

Drawing her again into his arms, he kissed her passionately, saying as he did so:

"My peerless darling, would I need not leave you. But a very few weeks will reunite us, never again to be parted. As soon as I return, I shall want my wife. Shall I have her?"

"Perhaps. But oh, Doctor——"

"Nay, dearest; commence again, and call me Earle."

"Yes; Earle, my Earle, will you surely be back by Oct. 5?"

"Yes; positively. This is but the last of August; I shall have plenty of time to reach here then. But what is to happen on that date?"

"It will be my twenty-first birthday, and then, as I told you once, a package is to be opened, and I shall learn my true name, and receive a small sum, enough for my support. Had you forgotten this? Will the uncertainty of my relationships cause any change in your feelings? My dear aunt assured me there was nothing to be ashamed of in my family record."

Ethel asked this question with a sudden timidity of feeling, a dread she could scarcely account for.

This dread, however, was instantly dispersed by his answer.

"Change in my feelings? Nothing but my death can change my love for you! I only hope the news you will learn on that date will increase your happiness. Whatever it may be, it shall not delay our union one hour, I promise you that; will you promise me the same?"

"I will," she murmured, "since ours will be a marriage founded on the purest love; no worldly expectations or disappointments shall sever us."

A little while longer the lover lingered, then, as memory pressed hard upon him, his many duties and limited time, he rose to leave.

"Shall I not see you again before you sail, Earle?" asked Ethel, loath to part, now that the time had come.

"I fear not. Indeed, I know not. I am obliged to visit a neighboring town to place my patients in the hands of a certain skillful physician there, who, I am told, will come to this place during my absence, as he has just sold his own practice in order to retire from public duty for the remainder of his life. Then by four to-morrow morning I leave here, in order to catch that steamer. You will be happy now in the thought of my devoted love and our speedy reunion, will you not, while I am away, my dear Ethel?"

"Oh, yes," was the reply, but even as she spoke a soft sigh fluttered from her lips.

"Why that sigh? I shall write as soon as I arrive, and you will answer. We shall hear from each other though separated."

"I know all that, but I fear something may happen on the ocean.

"I know those natural fears, but God lives and reigns at sea as well as upon land. And now, my dearest love, my golden-haired darling," said he, opening his arms for a last embrace, "one kiss more, and then, indeed, I must say farewell and tear myself away."

So, happy in their reciprocated love, they fondly embraced and parted.

Little they thought as they each passed from sight what important changes would changes would take place in the fortunes of at least one of them before they met again.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

NEW SURPRISES.

After Dr. Elfenstein had left the castle, he leaped into his gig with a light step and lighter heart, and, touching his horse with a whip, started off at a rapid pace for a village about fifteen miles distant. On the way he passed the post-office, and running in asked for his letters and papers.

Among the letters was one from New York, and the black envelope filled him with dismay, as he felt sure it was the forerunner of sorrowful news.

Opening it with a trembling hand, he found his worst fears fulfilled.

It contained the dreadful news of his mother's death, just two weeks before.

Heart disease had again seized a victim.

Without the least suspicion that she was the subject of such a malady, she retired one night in cheerful spirits and her usual health, to be found in the morning a cold, breathless corpse.

Poor Elfenstein! the shock was to him a terrible one. He had loved his mother tenderly, and was anticipating the greatest pleasure in soon seeing her again, and perhaps inducing her to accompany him back to his English home.

Now all was vain.

She was dead; and all that remained to tell of her memory was a green place in Greenwood, where they had placed her by the side of her husband.

She had been buried over a week; as the August heat was so intense that year, all thought of keeping her body until he could be summoned to the funeral was impracticable, and Earle's own good sense told him that this was the only wise course to be pursued under the circumstances.

Controlling his feelings as best he could, the mourning son resumed his seat and drove onward, resolved, although dazed by the suddenness of this blow, to attend to his duties to the living, even though his own heart bled.

We will not follow him upon that ride, which proved successful—a physician of well-known capability being secured to attend to his patients during his absence—nor will we paint the incidents of his voyage, which proved to be short and propitious, but will present him next to our readers when just entering Mr. Rappelye's house at Yonkers.

His appearance was expected, as he had telegraphed of his arrival in New York and intention of leaving for his residence on the early train.

The same elderly colored man-waiter Tony, answered the bell, and when asked after his master's health, replied:

"Tol'ble; only tol'ble, massa. To-day he seems lively agin, but yisterday he was way down at de mouf."

"Tell him, then, please, that Dr. Elfenstein has arrived and wishes to see him, if convenient."

Bowing low, with several nimble flourishes, the sable servant immediately vanished, soon reappearing to conduct the visitor to the room of the invalid.

A bright smile greeted him, and the firm pressure of his hand told that he was truly welcome.

The sick man certainly had gained some strength since he had left, for now he sat beside a window, in a large easy chair, and it was evident that he could carry on a conversation without the presence and aid of Mr. Gray, his lawyer.

After a few polite and friendly remarks, Dr. Elfenstein drew a chair close to his side, and, laying a finger upon his pulse, smilingly said, as he did so:

"I am going to see now, my dear sir, how much news you can bear to be told. Do you feel strong enough to bear a good large amount?"

Grasping his hand in one of his thin ones, the poor man answered, eagerly:

"Yes, indeed, I do! If you have news that I yearn to hear it will be better than all the medicines I have swallowed in a lifetime. Doctor, tell me at once, has the mystery been solved? Is my innocence established?"

"Perfectly established. Your brother was not murdered, only terribly abused. He has been found, and died a natural death in my own house."

Clasping his hands together, while large tears rolled over his pallid cheeks, the innocent brother raised his eyes to heaven and murmured, reverently:

"For this, Thy great mercy, I thank Thee, O God!"

A long pause ensued, Elfenstein purposely refraining from saying more until his first agitaton had passed away.

Then, as discreetly as possible, pausing every once in awhile, to note the effect on his feeble form and to watch his varying pulse, he slowly told him the whole story, leaving the reading of the affecting journal until another day.

"Oh, my brother, my poor, dear brother! how terrible must have been his feelings all those years of solitude and despair. Doctor, thus you see my own troubles have been but a speck upon the ocean compared with his."

"Most true; and now, dear sir, you must also be aware that, since both brothers are dead, you have become possessor of title and estate. Allow me to be the first to congratulate Sir Fitzroy Glendenning."

The old man received the kind pressure of his hand and tender words, with deep emotion, then suddenly exclaimed:

"And to you, oh, thank God, it is to you, and you only, I owe this speedy discovery and this great joy."

Bowing his head upon his clasped hands he remained thus silent and thoughtful for several minutes.

At length he broke the spell with these strange words:

"Since God in his great goodness has thus established my innocence, I am no longer afraid to own and claim my son, and he need never be ashamed to call me father!"

"Have you indeed a son, my dear friend? This, then, will be to him also a joy. I did not understand that you had been married."

"I had been secretly married, and my wife, Clara Mowbrey, who was the orphan daughter of the late Presbyterian minister in ——, a small village about fifteen miles from ——shire, came with me to America unknown to any one, for she had no near relatives. She embarked, I say, with me, bringing our little boy, aged two years. A fever broke out on the ship during our long passage, and my darling wife died just two days before we arrived in port. It was after she had been laid away to rest in Greenwood that my sickness came upon me, caused by great grief and trouble, and Mr. Elfenstein came to my relief.

"It was to him I solemnly gave my only child, my little Earle. I then assumed the name of Rappelye, not even his wife knowing of the change."

"Sir, what can you mean? Did I hear aright?" exclaimed Elfenstein, starting forward, pale with surprise, as this singular assertion fell upon his ears.

"You did! My dear son, you did! You are my own child and heir, Earle Elfenstein Glendenning, and to you will fall at my death my title and my estates. Come to my arms, my dear boy, for it is twenty-five years since I have held you thee."

Clasped then in a close, fond embrace, father and son shed tears together—tears of thankfulness and joy.

Thus, while Earle Glendenning still mourned for the only mother he had ever known, his mother by adoption, the wound, so suddenly inflicted, was partially healed by the gift of a fond father, over whose feeble health and declining days he now had a perfect and tender right to watch and guard.

As soon as calmness was restored, the young man again resumed his seat, and, still holding his father's hand, told him the story of his meeting his sister (whose countenance had reminded him strongly of some person, and now he saw that it was himself) and her niece on his outward trip; of that sister's death, and his love for Ethel, and related her trying history; then told of their engagement, and the daughter he should give him as soon as they returned to their English home.

The old man heard the story of his love and waiting bride with a happy smile, and decided to allow Earle to arrange his business matters as soon as possible, in order to start for the home of his boyhood on a certain steamer, which was, they found by consulting the papers, to sail in two weeks.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Another View of It.

While deploring the decline of hospitality, it must not be forgotten that there is always a reverse side of the shield. Many people decline to receive guests because their generosity has been abused. Particularly is this true of country folk, who are popularly supposed to be gratified by any visit that varies the monotony of rural life. Friends from town take possession of her house in summer, and Mrs. Homespun, already overburdened, becomes a mere drudge that they may fare well. The guests profess to be charmed with all they see, and enjoy the wide veranda, the old-fashioned garden, the cool parlor and airy chambers, to their hearts' content. It is nothing to them that their careless usage leaves its mark upon everything; that carefully kept carpets lose their freshness under the ceaseless tramp of feet; that easy chairs shed casters or arms, and the piano is pounded out of tune; what matters this, since they are not called upon to repair damages? The charms of their society are supposed to compensate for everything; and they ride away at last, self-satisfied and smiling, promising to repeat their visit; and in all probability Mrs. Homespun receives no letter from her guests for weeks or even months. I know a doctor's wife who has been greatly imposed upon in this way. Her home was the stopping place for boy and girl cousins on their way to college. They were troublesome, coming day or night, and often using the family horse that on one occasion young America almost drove to death. Ten years after, this cousin thought she would like to attend a missionary convention in the city and make a visit at the same time. She wrote kindly and asked if it would be agreeable. Patiently this dear woman waited for an invitation, which never came. Her letter was treated with silent contempt. In another instance a man and his wife passed eight weeks with his widowed mother, who gained a poor living from a few barren acres. At parting, instead of slipping a substantial check into her hand—for his means were not small—he gave her an embroidered handkerchief! Many stories of this sort could, unhappily, be told; but they savor too much of gossip, and are simply made use of here as facts in support of an assertion.

PROF. COHN of Breslau, Germany, has found by careful experiment that the heating of damp hay to a temperature sufficient to cause spontaneous combustion is due to a fungus.

LEARN to believe in your own individuality.

HUMOR.

A Practical Joke.

Sharply—I had a great lot of fun last night at Wooden's expense.

Wicks—How was that?

Sharply—Well, I took him to dinner and to the theater, and then we did the town, and I let him pay for it all.

A Precedent.

Mr. Sprightly—Miss Oldgirl, won't you waltz with me?

Miss Oldgirl—Oh, thank you, Mr. Sprightly, I should like to, but I fear that I am too old to dance.

Mr. Sprightly—By no means, Miss Oldgirl; I saw a lady dancing last week who was quite a little older than you.

Miss Oldgirl—Really, now, Mr. Sprightly—what was the dance? The waltz?

Mr. Sprightly—No, it was the St. Vitus.

A Seasonable Episode.

The Cutter—Do you want anything else on the stone beside the boy's name?

Bereaved Parent—Well, you might just put on a pair of skates.

One Use of the Diamond.

At object lesson: Teacher—What are some of the uses of the diamond?

Johnny—I only know one.

Teacher—Well, let me hear that.

Johnny—To make popper dream he is going into bankruptcy.

Protecting Grandma.

Grandma had been bargaining with the grocer on the matter of getting in some winter provisions, and had just asked the lowest figure on a barrel of sugar, when little Eddie came running in.

"I'll tell you what I'll do," said the grocer. "I'll put you in a barrel of sugar——"

"You shan't put my dramma in a barrel er sooger, needer," shouted Eddie.

The Use of Superstition.

In the restaurant: Snodgrass—Are you superstitious, Snively?

Snively—Superstition is for children.

Snodgrass—Then let me have that bill of goods I placed with you this morning on thirteen months' time.

A Particular Customer.

Particular Customer—I want an oyster stew and I don't want the oysters and liquors and milk all mixed in a mess and merely heated. I want the milk carefully boiled first, then the oysters added, next the liquor, and finally, after it is taken off, the seasoning. Be very particular about the milk. It must be sweet and rich, and above all things, be careful to get good butter. Only the best and freshest gilt-edged dairy butter should be used. As for the oysters, I want the very finest to be obtained anywhere; no common mud oysters for me. Now don't forget.

Waiter—Yes, sah. Do you wish the oysters with or without, sah?

Customer—With or without what?

Waiter—Pearls, sah?—San Francisco Wasp.

Was It Amiss?

She—And you really think that a miss is as good as a mile?

He—Yaas, and a great deal better, for one can kiss a miss when one couldn't kiss a mile, don't cher know?

Judicial Leniency.

Judge Stuffy—Have you anything to say before sentence is passed upon you?

Prisoner—The ring I am accused of stealing is not gold. It is fire gilt.

Judge Stuffy—Gilt being acknowledged, I will only pass a sentence of six years.

So Very Sick.

A little beggar newsboy on Park Row got a quarter the other afternoon for his shrewdness and honesty. He approached a kindly looking man just in front of the Journal office and asked for a few pennies, explaining that his father was sick and that his mother was in need of money.

"What is his complaint," asked the man, as he put his hand in his pocket.

"He is sick of work, sir," said the little fellow, and then he grinned with joy as the man smiling gave him a quarter.—New York Journal.

Smart Yankees.

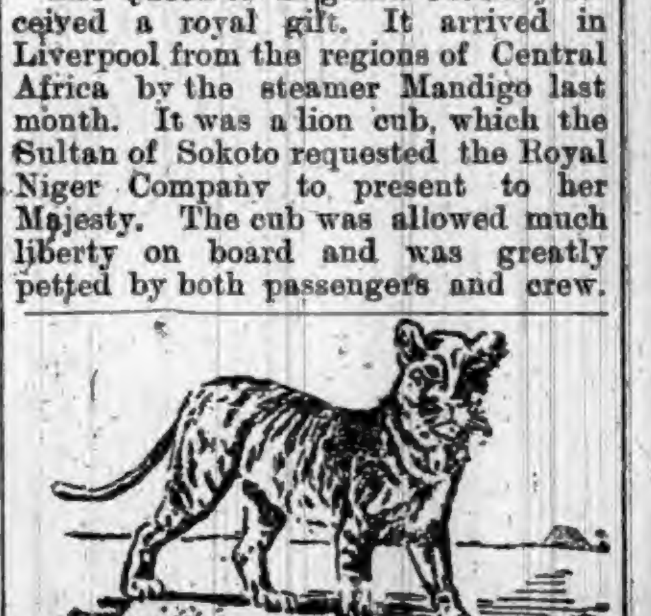
Colonel John C. Calhoun, of the Southern Club, tells a good story of the first visit of an old negro to Atlanta, Ga., when the electric cars were first introduced there. The old negro stood for a long time on the street corner watching the electric cars go by and then to an acquaintance remarked in a wondering way:

"My goodness! The Yankees freed the niggers and now they've freed the mules. What'll happen next?"—New York Journal.

PET FOR THE QUEEN.

Victoria in Receipt of a Lion's Whelp from Central Africa.

The Queen of England recently received a royal gift. It arrived in Liverpool from the regions of Central Africa by the steamer Mandigo last month. It was a lion cub, which the Sultan of Sokoto requested the Royal Niger Company to present to her Majesty. The cub was allowed much liberty on board and was greatly petted by both passengers and crew.



Mr. Bartlett went down to Liverpool to bring it to the Zoological Gardens, where it is now safely lodged.

COLD water is a remedy long favored by those believing in the hydropathic treatment of disease, but now it would seem that it is also efficacious as a deterrent to suicide. Recently Miss Jessie Gilmore, a young lady of Augusta, Kan., having had a misunderstanding with her betrothed, wrote farewell letters to all her friends in town and her lover in Burton, mailed them and started for Walnut River to put an end to her misery. She carefully prepared for the fatal plunge, but first tested the water, and finding it too cold her nerve failed, and she readjusted her attire and returned home. The letters had been read during her absence, and a search party organized to recover the body. Differences were adjusted, and now in place of a funeral there will be a wedding.

FRIENDSHIP improves happiness, and abates misery, by doubling our joy and dividing our grief.

How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

W. J. McELROY, Macon, Ga.

John S. Jackman will open up a fine new stock of boots and shoes in the building heretofore occupied by Wilson & Son.

The revival meetings of the radical wing of the U. B. church lead by Rev Mr. Loudy, closed last week with about seventy accessions.

Rev. M. M. Marshall has rented the dwelling owned by G. Abbey at the south end of Wayne street, on the west side, which he will shortly occupy.

R. W. Hill, who has been spending some time in Sheffield, Ala., returned last week and stopped in Waterloo to visit Dr. Carpenter's family, before returning to his home in California, Mich Mrs. Carpenter is a daughter of Mr. Hill.

Bishop Becker of the U. B. church, preached in that church last Thursday evening to a crowded house. He also preached a very learned and excellent sermon at the same place to a good audience Saturday, the 21st, at 10:30 a. m.

The redicals have again succeeded in having the church suits which should have been heard in Auburn this week, were carried over to the May term of court. This is a great disappointment to the liberals who were very anxious to have the case tried.

The church case tried at Richmond, Ind., some time ago is now in the supreme court. On Saturday March 14, the seceders were allowed to hold a quarterly meeting in that church and during the meetings the church was burned to the ground.

Saturday, March 21st, Mr. Maxson and wife entertained Bishop Becker at dinner where your correspondent was also a guest. Discussing the good dinner provided was first in order, after which several hours were delightfully spent in conversation and in listning to music of a high order, from Miss Mattie Maxson.

Miss Mattie Maxson is the possessor of a beautiful and valuable lace pin The set is a very fine chrysolite It was presented to her by Bishop Becker, who selected this with a number of similar ones on the top of the Mount of the Transfiguration, when in the Holy Land several years since J Maxson has mounted it beautifully and in quite a unique manner, so that the faces on both ends of the gem show at once.

BUTLER.

The bad roads have brought about a small wood famine.

The new mill advertises to commence business April 30, we believe they mean March 30.

Eli Bryan, living three miles west of town has sold his farm and has bought the Hart property near the schoolhouse, and will become a resident of Butler.

Two marriages took place in the city last Sabbath, and the day was not over favorable for marriages either. The elder Miss Watson and Walter Goodman, and Henry Leibold and Miss Ettie McClellan. The writer has good words for all.

About twenty-five boys ranging in age from ten to eighteen years, have taken it into their heads to form a club and have rented a room, and are indulging in all kind of juvenile amusements, desirable and undesirable, such as boxing, fencing, sword practice and playing of games. Perhaps the most of their exercises are right, proper and commendable, but we have grave fears for such a gathering of young boys together without the restraining hand of an older person to guide and control their effervescing spirits and guide them into the right channel where by their inexperience they might be led in the wrong direction.

Died March 17, 1891 at his home in Butler, Ind., in the thirty-first year of his age, Eugene Mock. Deceased was born in Mohicanville, Ashland county, Ohio, Nov 3, 1860, at which place, and at Big Prairie, Wayne county, Ohio, and at Ontario, Richland county, Ohio, he received his early education. He moved with his father to Butler in 1873, where he completed a fair education in our public schools. In 1884 he spent some six months in a commercial college at Alleghany City, Penn., and returning to Butler entered the employ of S. G Stone, in his drugstore. He afterwards became bookkeeper for Knisely Brothers, where his life work terminated. On Jan. 2, 1889 he was united in marriage with Hattie Porter, a teacher in the public schools of our place, who survives him. His funeral took place from the M. E. church March 19, Rev. Stone officiating. He was a member of the Butler Oddfellows, who conducted his funeral services. Eugene Mock was a bright, honest, social, industrious young man, and his untimely death has cast a gloom over our community, that is as marked as it is unusual.

Text Book Law Amended.

The main feature of the amendments to the text-book law are these:

To complete the adoption by receiving bids for spellers, grammars, physiologies and histories. Trustees shall order books for each year's school on the first Monday in June, and shall gather as much information as possible as to the number of books needed, that they may order enough and yet not more books than are needed. Indigent children are to be furnished books free. Books are to be shipped to the nearest railroad station to corporation where books are to be used. Trustees are permitted to pay for the books when received out of any school funds (tuition excepted) not needed for other current or specific purposes, funds to be immediately re-imbursed as soon or as fast as the books are sold. When books are settled for in this way, the trustee needs to make settlement with county superintendent but once a year instead of every three months "Adopted books shall be uniformly used throughout the state." In order that trustees may ascertain quite accurately the number of books needed they should require of each teacher a full final report showing the names and number of pupils that are or will be promoted at the beginning of the next term and the books that they will need. This will also assist teachers very much in making proper promotions and prevent very largely the very bad practice of self promotion. The law provides for intermediate orders for books when needed, but the trustees will readily see the time, money, and annoyance that will be saved if they can so arrange as to make but one requisition per year. Now that the schools will soon close there is no time for any delay.

The Housekeeper's Friend.

The pioneer friend to the American housewife is "The Household," a monthly publication founded by Geo. E. Crowell in 1868, and printed at Brattleboro, Vt., until last January, when it was moved to Boston that it might better serve its rapidly increasing list of subscribers.

"The Household," as its name implies, is devoted to the family, and contains helps and suggestions fitted to every department of the home, and to every member of the family.

Practical women contribute practical articles to the kitchen, dining room and sewing room. Mrs D. A. Lincoln, author of the famous "Boston cook book," furnishes practical kitchen talks, and a menu for one week, in each month's issue.

The Easter number of The Household is now ready. It contains an elegant cover, choice Easter stories, and the practical departments are illustrated. you can obtain copies at the news stands, or you can send ten cents to The Household Company, 50 Bromfield St., Boston.

The Easter—March—issue contains the offer of three costly presents to the three subscribers who obtain the largest lists of new subscribers to The Household between March 1st and August 1st. The first present is a $700 horse and carriage, the second an upright Miller piano, and the third a Columbia bicycle. This is the first time a horse and carriage have been offered by a publisher in payment for obtaining new subscribers It affords an opportunity for the ladies to obtain the best Household publication for one year, and also to secure for themselves a fine horse and carriage, or for a favorite pastor or officer of a lodge. Another special feature is that every bride in the country, of six months or less, can have The Household for one year, by sending ten two-cent stamps and a printed notice of her marriage enclosed in the letter, addressed to The Household Company.

"Give me the man," said one of fame,
"Who whistles as he goes."
Would one of March wind say the same,
That tootles as it blows?

Remarkable Facts.

Heart disease is usually supposed to be incurable, but when properly treated a large proportion of cases can be cured. Thus Mrs. Elmira Hatch, of Elkhart, Ind., and Mrs L Baker, of Ovid, Mich., were cured after suffering 20 years. S. C. Limburger, druggist at San Jose, Ill., says that Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, which cured the former, "worked wonders for his wife." Levi Logan, of Buchanan. Mich., who had heart disease for thirty years, says two bottles made him "feel like a new man., Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is sold and guarranteed by F. E. Davenport. Book of wonderful testimonials free. 4

Sheepskin Shall you send your son to college?

Hardup No, I cannot afford it; but I've bought him a cape overcoat.

A National Event

That holding of the world's Fair in a city scarcely fifty years old will really benefit this nation as much as the discovery of the Restorative Nervine by Dr. Franklin Miles is doubtful. This is just what the American people need to cure their excessive nervousness, dyspepsia, headache, dizziness, sleeplessness neuralgia, nervous debility, dullness, confusion of mind, etc. It acts like a charm. Trial bottles and fine book an "Nervous and Heart Diseases," with unequaled testimonials, free at F. E. Davenport's. It is warranted to contain no opium, morphine or dangerous drugs. 4

Teacher Freddy, how is the earth divided?

Freddy Between them that's got it and them that wants it.

Guaranteed Cure for LaGrippe.

We authorize our advertised druggist to sell you Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, upon this condition. If you are afflicted with la grippe and will use this remedy according to directions, giving it a fair trial, and experience no benefit, you may return the bottle and have your money refunded. We make this offer, because of the wonderful success of Dr. King's New Discovery during last season's epidemic. Have heard of no case in which it failed. Try it. Trial bottles free at Robbins & McCord's drugstore. Large size 50cts., and $1.00. 4

The Sugar Trust people refuse to show their books. Very likely because they can't. Some bibliomaniac has borrowed and failed to return them.

Very Peculiar.

Many cases of so called consumption have been cured by Dr Marshall's Lung Syrup. This medicine is peculiarly adapted to this class of diseases and we know of several lives that have been saved by its use. These cases are hard to overcome, but by the persistent use of this medicine you will notice a change for the better. Don't delay, but begin at once, and continue to use it as directed and we are positive it will help you. Sold by F. E. Davenport. 13

"Dear wife," said Sam Jones in a dispatch to his wife the other day, "I licked the mayor of Palestine, Tex., this morning; will preach in Taylor to-night."

Good Looks.

Good looks are more than skin deep, depending upon a healthy condition of all the vital organs. If the liver be inactive, you have a bilious look, if your stomach be disordered you have a dyspeptic look and if your kidneys be affected you have a pinched look. Secure good health and you will have good looks. Electric bitters is the great alterative and tonic acts directly on these vital organs. Cures pimples, blotches, boils and gives a good complexion. Sold at Robbins & McCords drugstore 50c. per bottle. 4

SHERIFF'S SALE.

By virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb circuit court, in a cause wherein James O. Blake is plaintiff and William Sprankle, Mary Sprankle, his wife, John J. Baxter Anna Sprankle, Sarah Myers, August C. Treutman, Henry J. Ash, Robert H. Lane, Charles W. Bell and James F. Cummings are defendants, requiring me to make the sum of seventeen hundred nineteen dollars, sixty-five cents, with interest on said decree and costs, I will expose at Public Sale, to the highest bidder, on between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m., of said day, at the door of the Court House in Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate to-wit:

The west half (½) of the northeast quarter (¼) of section two (2) in township thirtyfive (35) north, of range thirteen (13) east, and also twenty-one and fifteen one hundredths acres off the east end of the north half (½) of the northwest quarter (¼) of said section, described as follows, to-wit:

Making the northwest corner fifty-eight rods west of the northeast corner of said lot, thence east to said northeast corner of said lot, thence south to the southeast corner of said lot, thence west forty-five rods, thence north twenty-eight rods in a straight line to the place of beginning. Situated in DeKalb county, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs. Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

1846.

Something of the same kind is suggested by seeing during winter days, loads of firewood to me of goodly size and some of illusory dimensions, for sale to improvident towns-people, or if not salable, as a last resort, unloaded on the walk for the printer to apply on his subscription. As were the furs and hides in early day, so was the home-made soap, cloth and produce with cordwood or firewood of a later day.

Philip Fluke, who came in 1844, and who is still a resident of Auburn, being by trade a tanner, immediately began to put up a tannery on the northeast corner of Seventh and Jackson streets. In the fall of that year 'Squire Ralston framed and put up for him a bark mill, and having prepared vats, Mr. Fluke pioneered the making of leather in the village. This was a great convenience to farmers as it supplied a home market for pelts and hides and was a benefit to the place.

On the lot east of the tannery there stood for many years an old frame building where Mr. Fluke lived, but all this has been changed. The old frame was moved away. Mitchel Houston bought a part of the lot fronting Main street and put up a one-story brick building where he had a meat shop; then directors of the Farmers Bank purchased his interest and used the structure for their banking office, and later this was pulled down and the present beautiful block erected on the site. The vats have long been filled in and the old tannery was in use as a harness shop; then Smith & Madden became owners of the west lot, and after a fire that swept away a row of low, wooden buildings, that enterprising firm of marble dealers, built the unique stone front block which now adorns the place.

As indications of the great advance in real-estate values, the fact is here stated that the middle one-third of of the Main street lot was sold recently by Mr. Fluke to C. C. Shaffer for $4,000. At this rate, the entire lot would be valued at $12,000. a handsome price.

Mr. Fluke, having retired some years since from business, occupies a fine brick residence located near the Lake Shore depot, on Seventh street, on the north-east corner of his farm. He has, of late platted a part of this land and eligible building sites convenient of access are in the market for sale.

Henry Moneysmith, a blacksmith, and William Albright, harness-maker, settlers of 1844, were valuable accessions to the settlement. The latter built the house, later moved back from the street and repaired and now owned and occupied by Dr. Matheny, our popular town trustee.

In this house Mr. Albright lived a number of years, and in it died, both himself and wife, after an interval of several years.

Joseph Garver was an early resident upon the lot now owned by Edward Eldridge and followed his trade of hatter.

George Wagoner, now living in the northwest of town near the stave factory, came to Auburn in 1845. He was a member of that most useful guild, the blacksmith's, and had his shop on the present site of Christopher Shafer's furniture store. His home stood to the rear of the shop which later came into use as a grocery.

As the county seat where court was held Auburn attracted members of the legal profession and following a somewhat apocraphyal lawyer named W. Smith, had come Egbert B. Mott, whose remains now lie on the lot owned by the widow, on east side of North Cedar street next north of J. W. Baxter's residence. Judge Mott came in 1843 and the Hon. John Morris in 1844. Judge Morris, now of Ft. Wayne, is a familiar figure in our circuit court and ranks high as a legal practicioner. Age, honor and success have not changed his kindness of heart, nor city residence the simplicity of his manners, and he deservedly enjoys the respect and affection of a large circle of acquaintances and friends. In pioneer sketches is related an incident respecting the home life of Messrs. Morris and Mott, which illustrates the strenuous efforts of the villagers to get a living, and the chivalric spirit with which they met the necessities of sickness and lack of home help.

Judge Morris was at home, rather "hard up" for funds, as was fashionable in that day, and, his wife, being in rather poor health, he was scrubbing the house with coat off, sleeves and pants rolled up, and in a perfect deluge of sand and suds, when up stepped a gentleman from the vicinity of Enterprise, and inquired where "Lawyer Morris" was to be found. The man with the mop modestly replied that Morris was his name, when the stranger, eying him askance, told him that he had a case before 'Squire Somebody, in which "old Doc Ladue" was his antagonist, and that he wanted to get two good lawyers on his side, "being as the old Doc was rather crafty."

During this short speech Morris was a deeply interested auditor, and, when it was finished he quickly laid aside his broom and mop, rolled down his sleeves and pants, put on his "fix ups," dressing his "lower extremities" with one boot and one shoe, for want of mates, and in a very short period he and Mott were on the trail for 'Squire Somebody's, away up in Franklin."

A fee of $10 rewarded their services and came very opportunely.

In commenting upon this incident Judge Mott said, "In the early history of Auburn, there was scarcely a man but that, at some period, was under the necessity of plying the mop, handling the skillet or bending over the wash tub; and that, owing to the above cause and to the scarcity of female help, he himself had been compelled, for two weeks at a time, to perform all kinds of household and kitchen service.

The Celebration.

Yes, on Monday evening, the Sons' of Veterans celebrated their third anniversary, in the new G. A. R. Hall. Our people were fully acquainted with the two previous celebrations held by them in the Opera House, and notwithstanding the fact that the rain came down in torrents, before the time for opening, people began to arrive from all directions in such crowds that the spacious hall was immediately filled to its utmost capacity. Everything was tastefully arranged and one's eyes could not be restrained from roaming about the elegant room and drinking deep in the beauties of its furnishings. At the proper hour Capt. A. L. Kuhlman, arrayed in his neat fitting uniform, adorned with bright buttons, shoulder straps and neat badges, that flashed and sparkled beneath the brilliant incandescents, and the air and dignity of a military hero, mounted the rostrum, and everybody realized that the show was about to begin. The exercises were opened with a voluntary by the Wilcox Family, which was very cheering and appropriate. This orchestra is hard to excel as every member is a talented artist. Then came a patriotic selection by Messrs. Warrick, Bell, McIntosh and Allen, with Miss Lettie Meese as organist. This quartet is a first-class one and the applause bestowed upon them during the evening proved that their favors were appreciated by all. Rev. J. W. Stringfellow then lead in prayer, after which, came welcome address by the Captain, which was very short, but brimming over with excellent thoughts and patriotic purposes. He gave a digest-in-brief of the Order and the principles inculcated by it. Recitations were given by Misses Pheby Fretz, Mary Hamilton and Helen Ralston. The young ladies did themselves great credit. The selections were good and their rendition showed the reciters to be more than amateurs. Among the musical treats, was a song by Master Pres Wilcox. He is an exceptionally fine singer and the hearty applause of his hearers evidenced the fact that he was the hit of the evening. He afterward did some fine playing on the violin. Miss Pearl Wilcox favored the audience with an almost inimitable banjo solo. The feats performed by her, while playing on that instrument were wonderful. She was encored, in answer to which she gave a mandolin solo, which pleased all and proved that she is a young lady with rare musical ability. Taking everything into consideration, this was one among the best entertainments our people have been to for some time, and the beautiful uniforms worn by a number of the officers of this camp, removes all doubt that the boys mean business and will entertain as they advertise.

Coughing

IS Nature's effort to expel foreign substances from the bronchial passages. Frequently, this causes inflammation and the need of an anodyne. No other expectorant or anodyne is equal to Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It assists Nature in ejecting the mucus, allays irritation, induces repose, and is the most popular of all cough cures.

"Of the many preparations before the public for the cure of colds, coughs, bronchitis, and kindred diseases, there is none, within the range of my experience, so reliable as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. For years I was subject to colds, followed by terrible coughs. About four years ago, when so afflicted, I was advised to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and to lay all other remedies aside. I did so, and within a week was well of my cold and cough. Since then I have always kept this preparation in the house, and feel comparatively secure." —Mrs. L. L. Brown, Denmark, Miss.

"A few years ago I took a severe cold which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continual use of the Pectoral, a permanent cure was effected."—Horace Fairbrother, Rockingham, Vt.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

MICHIGAN LETTER.

Some Early Reminiscences of Auburn and Vicinity.

DUSHVILLE, Mich., Mar. 21, 1891.

MR. EDITOR:

A COURIER of date of March 12th, '91, has found its way to my humble home, away here in this Ultima Thule of Uncle Sam, and in an article bearing the caption, "Auburn and Vicinity" I find these words:

"There were more or less of bilious complaints and physicians here in demand. The pioneer doctor was reported to have been named Ross, and only his name survived his advent."

As Dr. Ross lived for a time in a part of my father's house, and I was thus quite intimately acquainted, I will call attention of some of the oldest settlers to some of the doctor's life and sayings.

I distinctly remember his talk one evening on physiology.

The doctor stated that in the "gullet" there was a valve which moved backward and forward, separating the liquid food from the solid.

My sister Laura, afterward Mrs. Dr. Emanuel, was observed with an immense smile on her face, whereat her mother asked her the cause and was answered that she "was just thinking how busy that valve would have to move when she was eating bread and milk."

The Doctor kept a hog, or rather, a pig. He was raising his winter's pork. The poor pig never fancied himself as having fallen into a very pleasant place. However, it grew a little, and after it had been starved on dishwater until it was past hope, the Dr. killed it, "butchered", the doctor said. Wesley Park, Leans Ingman and my father, all of whom had loaned meat to the doctor on the strength of that pig, were all present and "in at the death" or soon after. The pig was hanging up to cool at the end of the house, when, at a preconcerted signal, the gambrils were cut from the pig, and Mr. Park, seizing the pig's tail in his teeth, ran off with it, followed by the other visitors. However, after they had worried the doctor for a while they returned the pig, much to the delight of the doctor, who decided to call it a good joke.

The doctor's family were troubled with scabies for the whole three years of his residence in Auburn and he was unable to cure it. His practice was effectually ruined by the incoming of Dr. Cosper and others.

I notice also in the same number an account of the death of my old friend and comrade, J. S Brubaker. Simpson was a good brave soldier—peace to his ashes.

Just after we had been driven from Mission Ridge, our regiment (44th Ind.,) and the 18th Ohio were lying behind the embankment of a railroad from which rails and ties had been removed, awaiting results. Simpson was not satisfied and determined to have a better view, and so crawled up to where the track had once been and lay down with his eyes toward the tunnel.

Directly he called out, "Lieutenant, I believe they are fixing up this track for a road. I believe I see a wagon coming now."

Just then a puff of smoke revealed the kind of a wagon which was coming and Simpson gave a bound over the side of the embankment. The next moment a ten pound shot came whizzing along and tore up the ground for 20 feet, where Brubaker lay, covering Co. F. with dirt and gravel.

Another column of the same COURIER announces the death of Samuel Ralston, and another, the death of an old schoolmate D. C. Headley.

Truly I must soon get mustered out or I shall be alone.

The Memoir of Jefferson Davis.

Belford Company, of New York, have just issued Jefferson Davis, Ex-President of the Confederate States. "A Memoir, by his wife," in two large octavo volumns of more than 1,600 pages, liberally illustrated. For a considerable time Mr. Davis had meditated an autobiographical work which should not only give to the world the salient facts of his personal history, but should also include his public acts both under the Federal Government and under the Confederacy, as well his correspondence, documents, relations with the celebrated personages of the country, and the beliefs and principles which guided him as the President of the seceding states during the four years' struggle. After he had collected a vast quantity of memoranda and had written important sections, but before he had arranged any portion of his work as he intended, he was suddenly cut off by death. His wife, however, had, in her many years of close union with him, become so thoroughly acquainted with his whole history, his ideas, and aims, and had aided him so far in the projected work, that she was enabled to take up the pen where her husband had dropped it and continue the volumes to the completion. The book is written with candor, earnestness and force; with a desire to avoid offence, and yet with a rigid insistance upon fact; unsparing, and yet without bias. It is, in reality, the first authentic voice with which the South has spoken—the voice of its leader, claiming to be heard and judged as he was, and for what he did; to receive the verdict of to-day and of posterity. Whatever opinion may be held upon the principles involved, there can be no question of the perfect fairness, earnestness, and scrupulous justice of these remarkable volumes.

TRUSTS IN GLASSWARE.

MANUFACTURERS COMBINING INTO TRUSTS.

They Want All the Profits of McKinleyism—Highly Protected Already, McKinley Gave Them Still Higher Protection—Profits of the Business.

A dispatch from Findlay, Ohio, has recently appeared in the papers as follows:

"The Western Flint Bottle Association, comprising thirty-seven factories, at a meeting last night decided to close their works on June 1 instead of July 1 as heretofore. This is for the purpose of maintaining prices and compelling jobbers to come to the manufacturers' terms."

This is one of the trusts in the glass business. Another is the trust of the manufacturers of table glassware, which was started only a month or two ago, and which is now completing its organization. The McKinley law made heavy increases in the duties on glassware; and now the trusts are making haste to get all they can out of the advantage that McKinley has given them.

The increase in the tariff duties from 40 per cent. to 60 per cent., not to mention the imposition of duties upon packages, which would add nearly 25 per cent. more, was entirely uncalled for, since the old duties were practically prohibitive. Nevertheless this scale of duties upon glassware was insisted upon in the conference committee by Mr. McKinley. What his purpose was, backed as he was by the manufacturers in Ohio and western Pennsylvania, could not be surmised at the time. It is now however perfectly plain. Nine of the largest manufacturers of tableware in Ohio and Pennsylvania have united and applied for a charter under which a table glassware trust has been formed. Their purpose is to control the output of glass and raise the price. This combination was born in Mr. McKinley's district, and the more active manufacturers concerned were among those who contributed large sums to carry on his campaign last fall. Abundantly able to control the markets here even with glassware upon the free list and to export large quantities besides, they are not content with their present profits but aim under the McKinley tariff to charge as much for their goods here as they can force consumers to pay, relying upon the foreign market to take the surplus, at reduced rates.

They have secured what they wanted and will not hesitate to carry out their plans. One of these companies declared dividends of 60 per cent. in 1883, 60 per cent in 1884, and about the same since. Another has declared nearly the same amount in the same time, and its stock has advanced over 200 per cent. since 1885. Another has doubled its capital out of its earnings for the past three years. When carefully managed these works make not less than 25 per cent. profit each year. These figures show how reckless the McKinleyites were in raising duties where there is absolutely no necessity for an increase. Some of the flint and lime-glass makers went before McKinley's committee and pretended that they were being driven out of the home market by German competition. These men had much to say about the low wages of German labor. It is a specimen case, showing how a lot of smart manufacturers can pull the wool over the eyes of a committee of protectionists, ready and willing to be deceived, and eager to find an excuse for giving the highest kind of protective duties.

The increase of these duties is rendered all the more inexcusable in view of the great and rapid development of the glassware industry under the old duties. That growth is reflected in the following figures:

	1880.	1890.
No. of establishments	91	144
No. of furnaces	162	225
No. of pots	1,559	2,624

Great as this development is, it is not so great as it would have been if the glass industry had the benefit of free raw materials; for the tariff on these is a great burden on this highly protected industry itself.

Of the raw materials used soda, potash and lead are imported to a greater or less extent. If soda is used in the form of soda ash it is very largely imported, since a little only is made here. But salt-cake is often used as a substitute for soda ash, and of this the greater part is of domestic production. Soda ash pays ¼ of a cent per pound duty or 26 per cent., and salt cake $1.25 per ton or over 28 per cent. These duties affect the manufacturer of lime glassware only.

Potash is largely imported and is free of duty. The chief raw material, with the exception of sand in quantity, and the costliest of all used in the manufacture of glass is lead. One-third of the total weight of lead glass is lead. Since lead in the form in which it is used in glass manufacture is worth to-day from 6¼ to 9 cents per pound, at wholesale, it will be seen that in every pound of glass made with it there are from 2 to 3 cents, worth of lead.

The duty on pig lead from which red lead and litharge are made is 2 cents per pound or 72 per cent. On red lead and litharge the duty is 3 cents per pound, or 66 per cent. and 85 per cent respectively. The smelting and refining of lead in the United States is in the hands of a "trust," which manages to keep up the price here above the foreign price by nearly the whole amount of duty. Red lead and litharge are the form in which glass manufacturers use lead, and these products are made by the manufacturers of white lead. It happens that the same trust controlling the production and price of pig lead is also in control of the production of white lead, red lead, and litharge. The excuse which they offer for the high prices which they charge the glass manufacturers is the high price of pig lead, which, however, is not the price they pay for it, but the price they charge their competitors. Nothing shows more clearly the handicap that is placed upon the manufacturers of lead glass in competition with foreigners in the markets of the world by these high duties than the sworn declaration of Mr. Macbeth, a large manufacturer and exporter of lead glass, who appeared before the Ways and Means Committee of the House early this year. Mr. Macbeth declared that for materials which cost $40 in Germany he had to pay here $79.63, or nearly 100 per cent. more; and that upon the materials used in making 1,800 gross of lead chimneys, or one week's production, the enhanced cost on account of the tariff on the materials used was $650. Why should manufacturers and consumers be taxed in this way to support the lead trust. This tax restricts production and consumption, and handicaps our manufacturers in the export trade in which there is a great demand for American glassware. Must our export trade in glassware follow that of paints? The high duties on lead in connection with those upon linseed oil, both of which products are in the control of trusts, have killed our once flourishing trade with foreign countries in paints. Shall they be allowed to do the same with the only foreign trade which we have in all our glass industries—the export of glasswares?

To Whitewash McKinleyism.

It is said that the high protectionists of the United States Senate are not exactly pleased with the work of Labor Commissioner Carroll D. Wright. They do not deny his conscientious devotion to the truth, it is said, but they think that some of his recent investigations have not taken just the best turn for the high tariff cause. It is doubtless the Commissioner's recent publication of his investigations into the cost of producing iron and steel in the United States and in Europe that has given the protectionist magnates dissatisfaction.

At any rate, just before the adjournment of Congress a resolution was passed by the Senate authorizing the Finance Committee to collect evidence as to the effect of the new tariff law. In view of the violent attacks upon the McKinley law, they desire some figures gotten together by its friends with a view to showing that the effects of the law have been good, and that a high tariff deserves to be perpetuated as the support of our industrial system.

In order to secure this evidence the Finance Committee is authorized to sit where and when it pleases, and it is governed by no restrictions as to hearing both sides and permitting the cross-examination of witnesses. The understanding is that there will not be so many hearings as there will be letters sent to the right persons to obtain facts bearing on the effect of the new tariff. Price lists will be sought and statements as to wages paid under the old tariff and the new, and as to the development of old plants and the establishment of new ones.

The protectionist majority of this committee is partisan enough to warrant the belief that it will make a report in which McKinleyism will be whitewashed and made to appear as a thing of beauty. But McKinleyism has been emphatically condemned by the people; and it is too late in the day to try to galvanize that corpse into a semblance of life again.

Wanted a Rubber Trust.

Efforts to form trusts are reported very frequently since the day of McKinleyism began. A scheme has been on foot for some time to unite all the rubber boot and shoe establishments of the country into a combination to control prices and regulate output.

The Boston Boot and Shoe Recorder says that "the recent financial troubles put an end to all negotiations for a time." Then it goes on to say: "Now it is stated that still another movement of the same kind is on foot, that a prominent banking house in New York City is interested in making the deal, and that the bank expects to realize a good sum in commissions through floating the stock of the proposed new combination. This movement will probably follow the course of the previous efforts in the same line. Some companies when approached are found anxious to sell; others will sell at a fair price, while still others name figures that stagger the would-be buyers."

From the latter remark it appears that the rubber boot and shoe business must be very profitable. The ever generous McKinley, however, was not satisfisd with the old duty of 25 per cent. Nobody apparently came to ask for an increase of duty, but as McKinley had contracted the habit of raising the tariff wall, up went the duty on rubber boots and shoes to 30 per cent. This was done without any evidence that domestic manufacturers are suffering from foreign competition. If there are any imports of rubber boots or shoes at all the Treasury reports do not give them.

And now the effort to form a rubber trust! When it comes let McKinley bless it as one of the "beneficences" of his tariff law that he said the people might expect.

Total Appropriations, $1,003,000,000.

The enormous extravagance of the last Congress in voting away the people's money in order to make tariff reduction impossible will almost certainly result in a large deficit next year, and already there is talk about the necessity of devising new methods of raising revenues to meet the permanent appropriations saddled upon the country by the protectionists.

The total appropriations made by the last Congress are calculated by Senator Allison and ex-Congressman Cannon to have been $988,000,000; but in this sum they do not include the direct tax refund, which will amount to more than $15,000,000 additional. The total is thus more than $1,003,000,000, making an increase of over $170,000,000 more than the appropriations of the previous Congress.

When the country is brought face to face with an empty treasury next year nobody will be rash enough to propose a further increase of tariff duties. The people have already shown what they think of McKinleyism, and they will stand no more of it. In finding new ways of raising revenue an income tax graded according to wealth is already mentioned by some as most likely to meet with favor in the next Congress.

When such a system of direct taxation has been introduced it will prove the entering wedge for the destruction of the protective system. Under this system the rich are not bearing their due share of taxation. When, therefore, the people have found that another system can be put into operation, which will shift the burdens of taxation from the poor to those who are better able to bear them, they will soon become eager to give protection itself its death-blow. The equalizing of the burdens of taxation is the crying need of the day, and the taxing of the many for the benefit of the few is the first great injustice which must go.

Women Pay McKinley Prices.

A New York paper reports that women who go shopping there now are hearing much about the McKinley law. One woman related her experience in buying spring goods as follows:

"I've heard about the McKinley law wherever I've been to-day. I went out to buy stuff for an ordinary every-day dress. Last year I got suitable goods for $1 a yard, and that is about what I have paid for the last three or four years, sometimes going as high as $1.25. I believe that it is only an inconsiderable percentage of New York women who buy more expensive materials for their every day street costumes.

"I could not to-day buy material for my dress for less than $1.60 to $1.75 a yard. Material of similar value was easily obtainable last year at from $1 to $1.25 a yard. There is nothing desirable in any of the stores in regular lines at the old prices. I had to take my choice between buying cheaper stuff than I have ever worn before or paying from 50 to 60 cents a yard more than I have ever paid before.

"My shopping tour this morning has convinced me that Mr. McKinley and his friends have taken considerable purchasing power away from the few dollars that I have to spend on dress, and I shall never believe a Republican when he tells me that the tariff is not a tax."

The Celluloid Trust.

There is no falling off in the making of trusts. The Celluloid Company, or trust, has recently bought out the manufacturers of lithoid and zylonite, and consolidated them into a single trust. All the celluloid collars and cuffs made in the country will pass through the hands of this trust. An office has been opened in New York to handle the entire product.

The Celluloid Trust is well bolstered up by the tariff. On all manufactures of celluloid there is a duty of fifty cents a pound and twenty-five per cent. equal to an ad valorem duty of forty-nine per cent.

Trusts will continue to thrive, and will throttle competition so long as the people are foolish enough to vote them the protection that makes monopoly possible.

The present tendency among all our industries is in the direction of trusts, and nine-tenths of these industries, it is said, are already controlled by trusts.

The President on McKinleyism.

President Harrison has recently had a talk with the correspondent of the New York Tribune. He gave his views of the tariff agitation and the McKinley law thus: "Most decidedly, I think there should be no more agitation upon this subject until the McKinley bill has been fairly tried. It has been charged with numerous faults. There is no reason why its workings should be prejudiced by malevolent predictions. The bill has been already long enough in operation to indicate that much that was charged against it is untrue. A period should be permitted to pass long enough to test fairly the character of the measure. Then, if it can be shown by such fair and impartial trial that it has faults, let them be eliminated, but until such period is passed, I should be strongly against any further agitation of the tariff question." But the tariff agitation cannot be stopped. The President can no more stop it than Mrs. Partington could sweep back the rising waves of the Atlantic Ocean.

The President dilated upon one of the beauties of the McKinley law as follows:

"Under this act the American merchant can get raw material, for the duty is not charged where such material is imported to be manufactured into articles for exportation, and so the American merchant will be able to sell at the same point of advantage as the English merchant, with the additional advantage of free entry into ports where treaties are made."

But this is a singular position for a protectionist President. The Republican party keep reiterating, with parrot-like simplicity, that the tariff is not a tax; yet this Republican President points out that the drawback on raw materials enables the American merchant "to sell at the same point of advantage as the English merchant." A drawback is a refunded duty; but if "the foreigner pays the tax," it is not necessary to refund the duty on raw materials to our manufacturers in order to place them on the same footing as their English competitors. Is it not a strange piece of legislation, too, to give our manufacturers untaxed raw materials when manufacturing for the foreign market, and to exact heavy taxes upon materials to be used in making goods for the home market?

"The home market is the best market in the world," say the protectionists. At least it is long-suffering and slow to wrath.

Opposing Human Progress.

Protection is getting a pernicious brood of ideas in this country which needs to be destroyed. The starting point of the protectionist heresy is in the proposition that the powers of the Government can be rightly used to protect manufacturers from competition. Whatever gives our manufacturers a bigger job and bigger profits, it is held, is good for the entire country.

This thing spreads. The laborers employed in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing at Washington made a curious though logical application of this protectionist principle during the recent session of Congress. The laborers saw that if the steam plate printing presses in the bureau were removed, it would give them a bigger job and bigger profits. The power of the United States Government was invoked to protect the printers from the "ruinous competition" of steam machinery; and the protection Congress obediently voted a law removing the steam presses. As the result of this measure the spendthrift legislators found it necessary to increase the appropriation for the bureau by $100,000. Now that the printers are protected from competition it is impossible to print revenue stamps with the hand presses as fast as they are ordered; and Secretary Foster has been pleading with the men to permit the use of twenty steam presses to catch up with the orders. The men, however, are inexorable and will not yield one jot of their "protection."

Every outsider sees how absurd the whole business is. On this principle the self-binder would have to be driven from every wheat field in order to make a greater amount of labor for men with the old grain cradle; and the threshing machine would have to go in order that men might beat out the grain with flails.

But these cases, absurd as they seem, are precisely parallel to the proposition of the protectionists that we must manufacture everything at home in order to make more employment for labor. They do not see that the demand for machinery and the demand for untaxed foreign goods are at bottom one and the same thing. In both cases you want to produce the greatest possible amount of goods with your labor, or get the most for your money.

The laborer who wishes to burn reaping machines or the one who sets aside steam presses are no more unreasonable than the McKinleyites who try to keep back the stream of foreign goods from coming into the country.

The saving of labor, not its creation, is the end and aim of human progress.

An Imported Industry.

Protectionist organs are rejoicing in the removal of a gingham factory from Glasgow, Scotland, to Fitchburg, Mass., as the result of the McKinley tariff law. These organs do not state that the price of ginghams went up considerably at once after the McKinley law went into effect as the result of the increase of duty imposed by that measure. So anxious is this firm to get the advantage of the present conditions that it has begun work with hired looms from Philadelphia.

Recently, in the Italian Chamber of Deputies, Sig. Crispi, formerly Italy's Prime Minister, applied a vigorous, yet anything but flattering, epithet to a member, at the same time warning the victim of his barbed words not to show undue resentment, as he (Crispi) carried a gun ready for use. So American methods of legislation spread to less favored lands, and the benign influences of our free institutions shed their blessings and revolvers widely. Italy must see the superiority of the revolver to the stiletto, the former favorite rib-tickler in aristocratic circles. After all, we do not seem to keep far in advance of the decaying monarchies of the rusty old world.

When the McKinleyites were making their tariff law they calculated that the sugar bounty would reach $7,000,000; but the Treasury Department has been figuring on the bounty, and finds that about $9,000,000 will have to be paid out the first year, with an indefinite increase next year and years following. It is reported that an unusually large crop of sugar cane will be planted in Louisiana this year, to get the bounty of two cents a pound.

A year ago the price of cod liver oil in large wholesale lots was from 32 to 35 cents a gallon. The duty was then 25 per cent. McKinley changed the duty to 15 cents a gallon, which is equal to an ad valorem duty of 53 per cent., and now the price of domestic cod liver oil is 40 to 43 cents a gallon. It looks as if the tariff is a tax in this case.

"Marked down" is the technical term to be used for a boy's beard which is just making its appearance.

They were each fined $50 and costs. State Fish Commissioner Dennis was present during the entire trial and made a hard fight. Other prosecutions will follow.

—Nixon Rush, Sr., was run down by the local freight, while switching, at Fairmount, and fatally injured. He was walking alongside a switch when the corner of a box car struck him, knocking him down, and, his clothing catching somehow, he was dragged for some distance. Mr. Rush is deaf and did not hear the engine approaching.

—A distressing accident occurred near Delphi. Augustus Stoner and Ovan Million were hunting ducks along the Tippecanoe river. The rifle Million carried was accidently discharged, and the bullet entered young Stoner's abdomen, injuring him so badly that he died in a few hours. The boys were 15 years of age, and both belonged to prominent families.

—A powerful gas well was opened up in the geographical center of Kokomo, the only one that has been drilled in the city limits for two years. It is owned by a local syndicate, who will sink other wells immediately. This well is for the purpose of supplying gas for operating an electric street railway and the Watson-Bruner planing mill and furniture factory.

—Judge Snyder, of the Montgomery County Court, has made a ruling in the injunction suit to restrain the city of Crawfordsville from putting in an electric light plant for the purpose of supplying light for public purposes and to private consumers. He held that the city can put in the plant for the purpose of street-lighting, but could not furnish light to private consumers, unless the Supreme Court shall make a new ruling.

—Gov. Hovey has pardoned Arthur Vance, of New Albany, who was sentenced to the Floyd County jail for thirty days for petit larceny. Since his incarceration his health has become impaired, and having consumption, his confinement was telling on him severely. He was sentenced March 10. Vance belongs to a good family and can live but a short time, the disease of which he is a victim being hereditary. He is 17 years old. The offense consisted of the theft of $2.

—The test that was made in the growth of the German sugar beet in the soil of Bartholomew County has been made by a Government chemist, and is very satisfactory. The beets produced on the farm of Frank Graves show 14 1-10 per cent. sugar, or 280.20 pounds of sugar per ton. The Government bounty of 2 cents a pound on this showing would be $5.60 a ton. If raw sugar can be sold for 2 cents per pound, the product of one ton would be $8.40, after paying the bounty. There will be a large amount of the French sugar-beet grown this season. It is estimated that at least four tons of these beets can be produced on one acre, which will make the crop profitable, and may tend to revolutionize the agricultural interest in that part of the State and establish a factory there.

—Rather a romantic marriage occurred at Russiaville recently. James R. Pollock, a wealthy farmer and widower, living two miles west of that city, was married to Mrs. Theresa Hudson, widow of the late William R. Hudson, and daughter of Hon. James Thompson, of Irvington. The ceremony was performed at high noon by Rev. Hayden Rayburn, at his residence in Kokomo, after which the wedding party drove to the country home of the groom, where they were cordially received by the members of the united families, consisting of several children from each. The romantic features of the match are as follows: Twenty-five years ago James R. Pollock and Theresa Thompson were lovers, and their troth was plighted; but owing to some slight misunderstanding they drifted apart and each married other companions and each raised families. The last courtship was short and sweet, being rapidly developed into a happy consummation.

—A strange coincident occurred in the death of two brothers, John and Daniel French, farmers, of Vigo County. Daniel died suddenly one night, and while eating breakfast, the next morning, John fell from his chair and expired instantly.

—Thomas Burton, aged 83, one of the oldest inhabitants of Connersville, died recently. He was a shop-mate with Andrew Johnson in a tailoring establishment in Nashville, Tenn. He also had a trunk given him by ex-Gov. Blue Jeans Williams.

—The City Council of Noblesville have decided to advertise for bids for the construction of water-works on the rental system. The question was recently carried by a popular vote, and the Council is now ready to receive bids for the construction of the works.

—The other night there was hung to the flag-staff on the court house at Greensburg an effigy, with a black flag above and below. On the flag were words of warning, while attached to the effigy were several lines of a malicious nature written in red ink. The matter is causing much comment.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

NERVINE TONIC

—AND—

Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar.
It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the Great South American Medicine Company, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by the native inhabitants of South America, who rely almost wholly upon its great medicinal powers to cure every form of disease by which they are overtaken.

This new and valuable South American medicine possesses powers and qualities hitherto unknown to the medical profession. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and diseases of the general Nervous System. It also cures all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the Great Nervine Tonic qualities which it possesses and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body and as a great renewer of a broken down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the Lungs than any ten consumption remedies ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic almost constantly for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

All these and many other complaints cured by this wonderful Nervine Tonic.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir, are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied, and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This recent production of the South American Continent has been found, by analysis, to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its magic power to cure all forms of nervous derangements.

Crawfordsville, Ind., Aug. 20, '86.

To the Great South American Medicine Co.:

Dear Gents:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If everyone knew the value of this remedy as I do, you would not be able to supply the demand.

J. A. Hardee,
Ex-Treas. Montgomery Co.

Mr. Solomon Bond, a member of the Society of Friends, of Darlington, Ind., says: "I have used twelve bottles of The Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and I consider that every bottle did for me one hundred dollars worth of good, because I have not had a good night's sleep for twenty years on account of irritation, pain, horrible dreams, and general nervous prostration, which has been caused by chronic indigestion and dyspepsia of the stomach and by a broken down condition of my nervous system. But now I can lie down and sleep all night as sweetly as a baby, and I feel like a sound man. I do not think there has ever been a medicine introduced into this country which will at all compare with this Nervine Tonic as a cure for the stomach."

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR CHOREA.

Crawfordsville, Ind., May 19, 1886.

My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with Chorea or St. Vitus's Dance. She was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to handle her like an infant. Doctor [illegible] neighbors gave her up. I commenced giving her the South American Nervine Tonic; the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of the nervousness, and rapidly improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the South American Nervine the grandest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to everyone.

Crawfordsville, Ind., June 22, 1887.

My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus's Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus's Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. ☞ No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the Stomach, because the experience and testimony of thousands go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to The Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted Stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

Mrs. M. Russell, Sugar Creek Valley, Ind., writes: "I have used several bottles of The South American Nervine Tonic, and will say I consider it the best medicine in the world. I believe it saved the lives of two of my children. They were down and nothing appeared to do them any good until I procured this remedy. It was very surprising how rapidly they both improved on its use. I recommend the medicine to all my neighbors.

Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I can not express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen.

Ed. J. Brown, Druggist, of Edina, Mo., writes: "My health had been very poor for years, was coughing severely. I only weighed 110 pounds when I commenced using South American Nervine. I have used two bottles and now weigh 130 pounds, and am much stronger and better than have been for five years. Am sure would not have lived through the Winter had I not secured this remedy. My customers see what it has done for me and buy it eagerly. It gives great satisfaction."

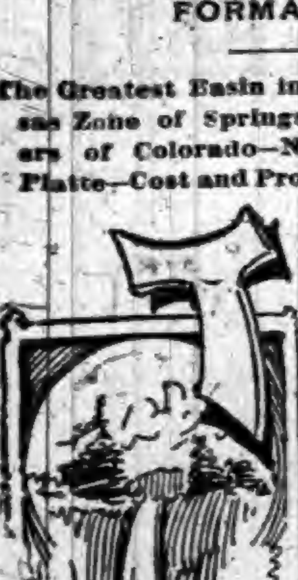
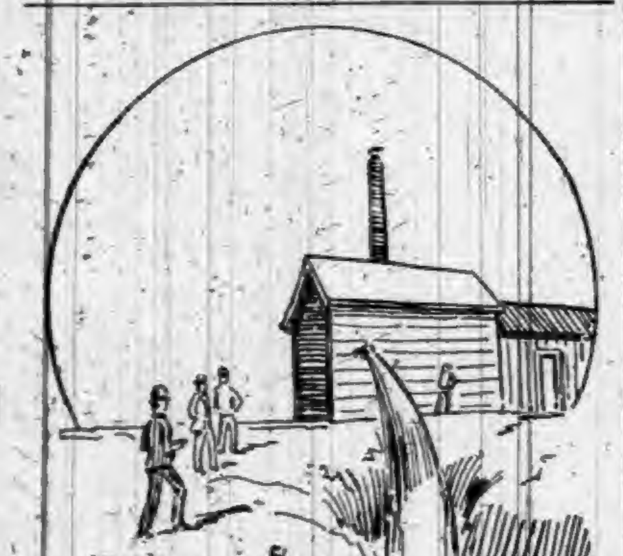
CURIOUS AND INTERESTING INFORMATION.

The Greatest Basin in the World—A Kansas Zone of Springs—Underground Rivers of Colorado—Nebraska's Invisible Platte—Cost and Profit of Artesian Wells.



THE report of the artesian well investigation makes a volume of 400 pages. A field of inquiry, heretofore untouched, is opened up by the Government. The results are most interesting. They establish many valuable facts, hitherto unknown, as to the extent and character of the underground water supply of the great plains. The investigation shows the existence of an artesian basin in the Dakotas, known as the James River Valley Basin, which is tapped by about 140 wells, scattering all over a territory of 400 miles or more in length from north to south, and from forty to fifty miles in width. In this area, says the Globe-Democrat, the present flowing wells in North and South Dakota are confined. Failures to find flowing water by rock-bored wells have occurred along the eastern line of the valley. This line, or the dividing line between the James River and the Red River of the North, probably marks the eastern boundary of this great basin. West of this line, in the Dakotas, borings for artesian waters have been successful when made deep enough to penetrate the water-bearing stratum—the Dakota sand rock. This sand rock, which underlies the James River Valley, is composed of a very soft, porous, whitish sand of unknown thickness. It has been penetrated eighty feet with a drill without reaching its lower bed. It is so soft that the drill penetrates it in many localities by its own weight. It lies from 600 to 1,800 feet below the surface of the country.

Colonel Nettleton, the irrigation engineer, says: "I think I am safe in saying that the Dakota artesian basin is the largest and strongest yet discovered in the United States, or even in the whole world. There are some wells of very large diameter that discharge more water than some of the Dakota wells, but when the size of the bore is taken into account the Dakota wells not only yield a greater amount but maintain a flow very nearly that which is due to the hydrostatic pressure less the resistance caused by the friction of the water through the pipe. Some artesian wells will show considerable pressure when they are closed, but discharge comparatively small quantities of water when allowed to flow freely. This indicates that the supply is not fully maintained, or, in other words, the water-bearing stratum is of such a character as to impede the passage of the water freely through the rock. Nearly all of the Dakota wells throw out large quantities of sand with the water when allowed to discharge freely. Some of them have thrown out thousands of cubic yards of sand."



HURON (S. D.) WELL, SHOWING DISCHARGE THROUGH 6-INCH PIPE.

At Redfield, Spink County, the townspeople have been sprinkling their gardens the past few years, with highly beneficial results. Encouraged by this, they have laid pipes across the creek from the well to a little valley or bottom, where there is about ten acres in cultivation, for the purpose of further testing the benefits of irrigation.

At Hitchcok, Beadle County, they have a little well, 3⅝ inches at the bottom, that discharges 1,240 gallons per minute and has a pressure of 154 pounds per square inch. This little well supplies the town with water and drives a flouring mill with three sets of rollers, and actually makes forty barrels of flour daily. The proprietor told Mr. Coffin that the natural pressure was so steady and regular that there was absolutely not the variation of a single revolution in twenty-four hours. And yet this water is wet after doing this work, and some of it is being utilized to irrigate about seventy acres in a very systematic manner on a farm adjoining town. The waste water from this well in the past few years has overflowed several tracts of lands. Grain that grew on land thus overflowed the past year was exceptionally a large yield, while grain on adjoining fields not thus overflowed was a failure.

At Groton, Brown County, the town authorities have set apart a plat of ground of something over four acres for a park. There is a hydrant standing at one corner of the park. The town authorities, realizing that the prosperity of the town depends upon the prosperity of the farmers, have donated the use of that lot and that hydrant for the purpose of making a test of irrigation. This experiment is being watched with a great deal of interest by the surrounding farmers.

At Frankfort they have a well that has become uncontrollable because of ignorance or carelessness or accident in putting it down. It is throwing out immense quantities of mud (shale) and sand. The situation is truly becoming alarming. But the water is wet and they are using it. A sort of company of twenty-five or thirty have "chipped in" and constructed a ditch from the well to an adjacent farm, where they are irrigating about 300 acres as an experiment.

The underground water supply of Western Kansas possesses some features peculiar to itself. Prof. Gregory says an almost continuous zone of springs stretches, like the half of an Indian's bow, from the west line of Nebraska, curving downward through the Platte country, across the Republican and Smoky Hill districts, and through the eastern portion of the others. Inclosed within this arc may be found a number of deep pools, often spoken of as springs and sometimes as natural wells. The water does not flow from these—at least there is no surface stream, but they furnish unlimited supplies of water. One such is noted in Greeley County, another in Kearney, another in Seward, and others of the same sort are scattered over this region. One such pool south of the Arkansas River, near the line between Kearney and Hamilton Counties, is of great depth. Local report has it that a sounding of 400 feet failed to "touch bottom." Others are known to be of great depth. At least three of these pools have been formed within the past ten years by a sudden caving-in of the surface of the ground, disclosing a deep body of water where there was before dry prairie or sand hills. One such phenomenon is reported as occurring within the current year. At a few places along the Arkansas River chance overflows have scooped out small hollows below the level of the underflow waters, and constant streams flow from these, commonly but erroneously called springs.

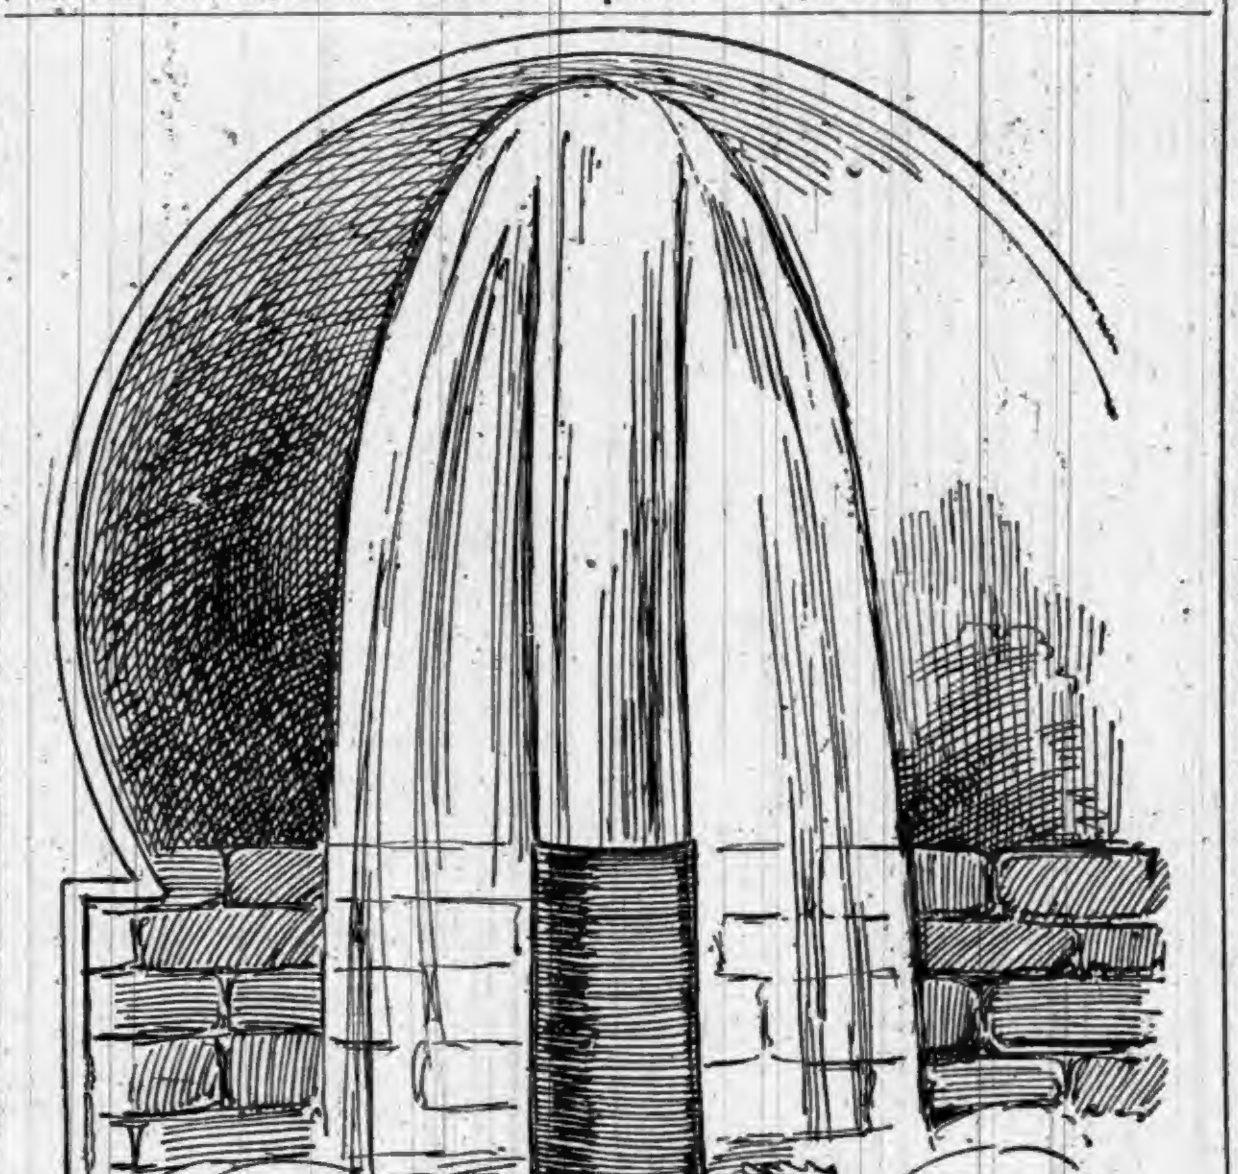
[Throwing a 4-inch stream 61 feet in the air. Depth, 725 feet; bore, 6 inches; discharge, 8,000 gallons per minute.]

In Wallace County, Kan., the first permanent water of the Smoky, just below the embouchure of such a spring-fed affluent, has been used for irrigation since 1873. Prof. Hicks regards the development of the water in this tertiary formation as a controlling factor in the development of the resources of Western Nebraska. Prof. Bailey suggests similar conditions in Wyoming. And this is largely true from the Pecos to the Platte.

Colorado, according to Engineer von Diest, presents some phases of underground water supply not found elsewhere. It is stated on good authority that at Platteville a stream of water flows audibly thirty feet below the surface in a northwesterly direction, and where this stream is intercepted by dug wells the water rises to within five feet of the surface.

The South Platte, in Weld and Morgan Counties, swells suddenly at several points, and increases in volume without visible side flows. Well-diggers state that everywhere in Northeastern Colorado water is found at varying depths, which by pumping appears to be almost inexhaustible. A certain Mr. Williams, a well-digger, says that he never struck a point in Eastern Colorado where he could not find water.



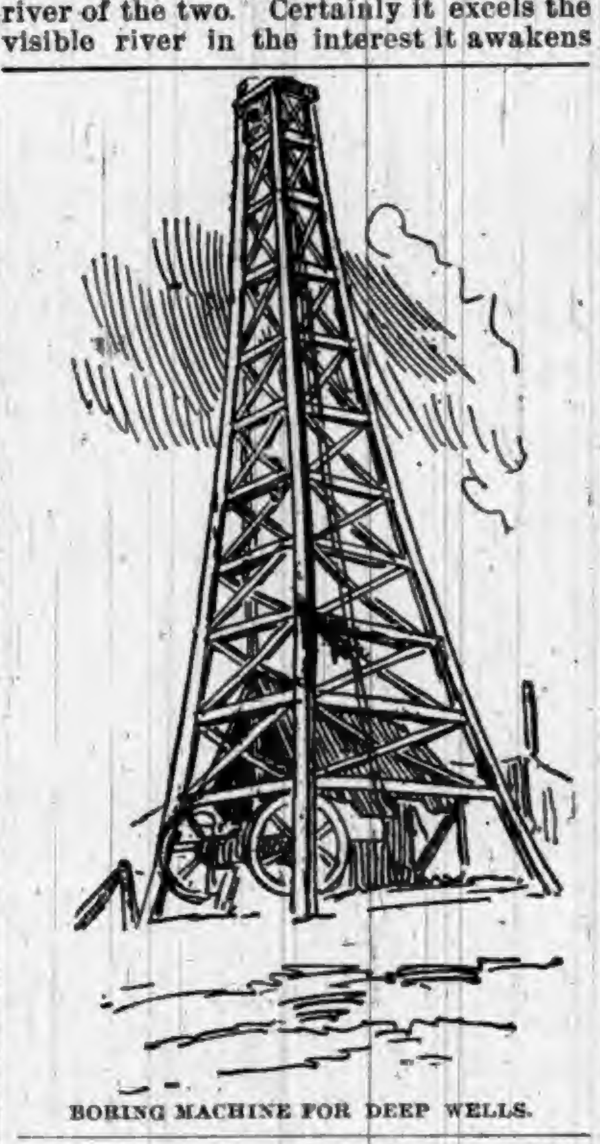
ARTESIAN WELL AT BATTLE MOUNTAIN.

In Utah about 2,000 bored wells have been sunk into the higher water-bearing stratum of the Salt and Utah lakes region. These wells rise through small bore pipes, from one and a half to three inches in diameter, with a flow of from two to five inches above the casing. Evidence goes to show that no diminution of pressure has yet occurred.

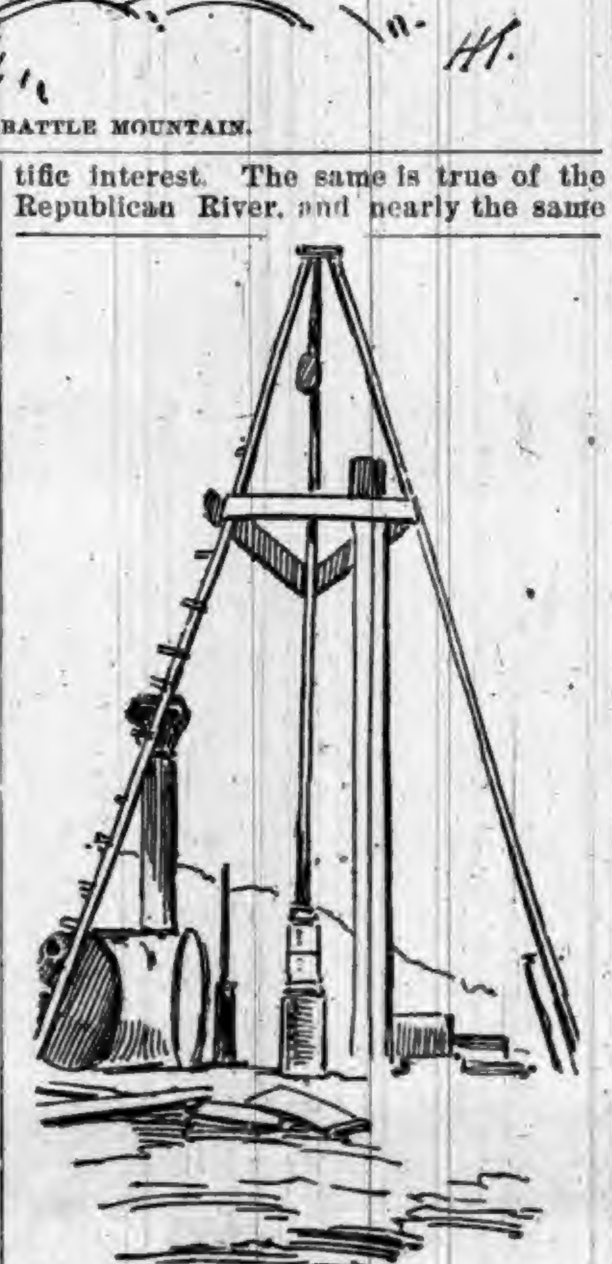
Geologist Lewis E. Hicks of Nebraska offers an intelligent presentation of the stratigraphical conditions which determine in his field the direction, the flow, and the pressure of subterranean waters. Nearly all such waters in Nebraska "have a tendency to rise in wells and fore-holes, and sometimes throw out at the surface." Prof. Hicks considers the rain-fall the ample source of his supply. The aggregate volume of such precipitation is enormous. It amounts, he says, "to more than 100,000 cubic feet on each acre, or 5,000,000,000,000 of cubic feet annually for the whole State." The mean discharge of all the rivers of Nebraska is estimated at nearly one-fourth of this great total. Evaporation and seepage absorb the balance. However, the "underflow along the incline bodies of porous rocks is undoubtedly a more important source of moisture than all the rivers which enter the State."

The existence of great levels of this sheet water has been determined and demonsrtated. Many streams have a steadier volume in their channels than the precipitation and their incline warrant. It is believed that they are eroded deep enough to receive a supply of this undersheet flow. The water bearing strata of the State are geologically known as the perma carboniferous. The youngest rocks of the stratum are the most valuable. Artesian flow has been obtained from this stratum, and, contrary to usual experience, the limestones appear to yield more than the sandstones of the same area.

The visible Platte River is a conspicuous phenomenon, but the invisible Platte, which is buried from sight in the sands and gravel, is probably the larger river of the two. Certainly it excels the visible river in the interest it awakens as an impressive physical fact, and its economic importance is equal to its scientific interest. The same is true of the Republican River, and nearly the same of the Big Blue. The Niobrara, in that part of its course where it attains considerable volume, flows in a rocky bed, and nearly its whole volume is in sight. But the other large rivers flow in channels excavated in soft material, and are choked with their own silt to such an extent that a large part of the water percolates through the silt in the channel, or among the sands beneath the alluvial bottom lands, or spreads even more widely, entering the porous beds far beyond their immediate vicinity.



BORING MACHINE FOR DEEP WELLS.



IN SAN LUIS VALLEY: DRIVE OR SHALLOW-BORED WELL MACHINERY.

The large towns in the Valley of the Platte obtain their supply from the underflow filtered through sand and gravel, thus becoming as excellent in quality as it is practically inexhaustible in quantity. At Fremont fifty "points" driven within a small area, but to different depths ranging from 50 to 90 feet, furnish abundant water to the whole city. The water lies in a bed of sand and gravel 45 feet thick beneath 10 feet of tenacious clay, which serves both to exclude surface water and to confine the underflow, so that it rise nearly to the surface. As a test of the capacity of this plant, 2,300,000 gallons have been pumped in twenty-four hours.

Some very natural questions as to the cost and profit of artesian wells are answered by Col. Edwin S. Nettleton. The flow of water from the average Dakota well is small when compared with the carrying capacity of an ordinary irrigation canal, yet by the aid of storage reservoirs a well having a flow of 1,000 gallons per minute can be made to serve over 1,000 acres of land per annum. This estimate is based on the assumption that the water can be held in a reservoir when not being used for irrigation, and one-half of it may be lost by evaporation and percolation, and in transporting it to the field, also assuming that nine inches in depth per annum will be required in addition to the rainfall for the growing and maturing of crops.

The investigation shows that artesian wells of six inches in diameter, and from 800 to 1,200 feet deep, cost from $3,200 to $5,000—we will say $5,000, including reservoir—then we have $5 per acre as the first cost to provide for irrigation. The average cost for irrigation from canals in Colorado is $3.20 per acre, the maximum sometimes being as high as $12 per acre. From these estimates it will be seen that the cost of water from this class of artesian wells is not excessive, especially when we take into consideration the increased value of land when brought under irrigation. Take Texas for example: The average price of land with means of irrigation, according to the returns from several hundred inquiries, is $8.72 per acre. The estimated value of the same land is placed at $73.50 per acre, provided it can be supplied with water for irrigation purposes. According to these estimates the average increased value of land in the semi-arid portion of Texas will be $64.78. This rate of increase will be less in the more northern portion of the country, but in no instance will it be less than $10 to $15 per acre, so that a wide margin is left to cover an excess in the cost of water per acre or a greater amount of what is necessary to serve an acre than is assumed in the above estimate.

Station Master and the Nobles.

An amusing incident occurred on a Southern railroad in England in connection with the Duke of Norfolk and the Marquis of Bute. The duke and marquis were fellow travelers, and when the train stopped at —— station a companion joined them in the person of the station master himself, who was going for a jaunt some twenty miles further up the line. The duke and the station master, who were both diminutive men, and therefore fond of talk, soon got into conversation, while the marquis, a tall, robust man, was inclined to be reticent, until he found his friend, the duke, up to his ears in conversation, when he himself joined, addressing most of his remarks to the stranger.

At length the train arrived at B——, and the marquis bid a hearty farewell to the duke, and with a kindly adieu and a shake of the hand from the stranger the marquis quitted the carriage, while his dispatch box and wraps were secured, to the surprise of the station master, by a tall, powdered footman, and the train soon glided again out of the station. Silence was not, however, long maintained; the station master breaking out with the question. "I wonder who that swell was?"

"That," replied his companion, "was the Marquis of Bute."

The answer seemed to dumfound the station master for a time, but presently he exclaimed. "Well, now, I do think it kind of him to talk to two such snobby little chaps as us, don't you?"

The duke nodded his assent and had a good laugh. When the train drew up again his grace affably bid his companion "Good-by," and, on alighting on the platform, was received with the greatest deference by a throng of Jesuit priests, this incident again setting the station master the task of inquiry, who inquisitively asked a brother official who that little bloke was.

"That," replied the guard, "is the Duke of Norfolk."

The station master, after this, declared he would never travel first-class again as long as he lived.

He Knew How.

A typical American workingman, quite browned by the sun, muscular, intelligent and smiling, stood upon a platform of boards supported by barrels in front of the porch of an apartmen thouse just off Fifth avenue carving a gargoyle from a block of brown stone. He was American, because he could work while he talked, was master of his plans, his tools and himself, wore clothes that fitted him, and replied courteously to the many questions of an interested group of bystanders. The block of stone from which he was evolving a face was supported by a pillar of polished Scotch granite, and was part of a somewhat impressive entrance of an expensive pile of stone and mortar, but neither the fact that he could not afford to spoil his job, nor that his studio was in the open air and his performance free to all critics, seemed to trouble him. He hammered, smiled and talked, and the chips flew all around the human circle.

"Yes," he said, "I carry the pattern in my head. (Chip, chip.) What is this to be? A Venus. (Chip.) Yes, a Haytian Venus would not be a bad one. (Chip, chip.) This is Portland stone, the best there is for cutting and the best in the world for builders, any way. (Chip.) How do I keep from making a wrong cut and spoiling the stone? That's my trade, sir; that's knowing how to do it."

Thus he went on chipping at the stone, cutting a deep gash here and hammering off a great chunk of the sandstone there, seemingly reckless of the havoc he was making, but smiling away until, between his mallet and graving stone, he seemed to have transferred his smile to the face that began to gleam from the rough brown surface of the rock.

SITTING BULL was a deeper-dyed villain than has been generally supposed. He could play the accordion.

Paper Made of Iron.

In the great exhibition of 1841 an American specimen of iron paper was exhibited. Immediately a lively competition ensued among British iron manufacturers as to the thinness to which cold iron could be rolled. Mr. Gillett rolled sheets the average thickness of which was the eighteen-hundredth part of an inch. In other words, 1,800 sheets of this iron piled one upon the other would only measure one inch in thickness. The wonderful fineness of this work may be more readily understood when the reader is informed that 1,200 sheets of the thinnest tissue paper measures a fraction over an inch. These wonderful iron sheets were perfectly smooth and easy to write upon, notwithstanding the fact that they were porous when held up to a strong light.

Those Trusts.

City Man—What's the matter, my friend?

Mr. Hayseed—I'm mad as a hornet, 'bout the way the things is goin'—trusts and combines, an' monopolies everywhere. I just had to pay a cent more for a ball of string, and they told me it was on account of the twine trust.

City Man—Well, it is a shame the way these combines force things up, raising the price of everything—wheat, corn, potatoes, butter apples——

Mr. Hayseed—Eh? Do trusts raise the prices of farm produce? Oh, well, mebby they ain't such bad things arter all.—New York Weekly.

Man the Life Boat!

Ere your wave-battered, dismasted hulk is dashed to pieces upon that cruel reef by the resistless waves. Save, too, a shattered physique, fast yielding to the attacks of disease with that imperial renovator of health and strength, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The range of its powers is wide, its action prompt and thorough, its use always safe. Chronic indigestion, debility and nervousness, malarial complaints, rheumatism, neuralgia, inactivity of the kidneys and bladder, and that physical decay without apparent cause, which is often premature, are speedily checked and ultimately cured by this medicine of many uses and sure results. Sleep, appetite and vigor are improved by this helpful tonic and regulator, the use of which likewise tends to remedy undue leanness.

Humanity and Hypnotism.

Mr. Upton—I don't believe that story about a Philadelphia father hypnotizing his baby so that it would sleep while he and his wife went to the theater

Mrs. Upton—Nor I. No father would be brute enough to think of such a thing.

Mr. Upton—No-o, of course not.

Downton (the next day)—Say Upton did you hear that story about a Philadelphia father hypnotizing his baby?

Upton—Yes. It isn't so.

Downton—How do you know?

Upton—I tried it on mine and it wouldn't work.—Street and Smith's Good News.

Patent medicines differ—One has reasonableness, another has not. One has reputation—another has not. One has confidence, born of success—another has only "hopes."

Don't take it for granted that all patent medicines are alike. They are not.

Let the years of uninterrupted success and the tens of thousands of cured and happy men and women, place on the side of the comparison they belong.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

And there isn't a state or territory, no—nor hardly a country in the world, whether its people realize it or not, but have men and women in them that're happier because of their discovery and their effects.

Think of this in health. Think of it in sickness. And then think whether you can afford to make the trial if the makers can afford to take the risk to give your money back as they do if they do not benefit or cure you.

Jay Gould's Story.

Jay Gould always has something witty or humorous to say.

A rich and exacting man had a colored servant boy employed named Jim. This Jim was expected to be on hand all the time. One fine morning Jim was absent and his employer went to his old father's house and asked for the boy. The father said:

"'Boss, you can't have Jim any more.'

"'Why, what is the matter? I will have him.'

"'Oh, no, boss; you kain't hev Jim.'

"'Well, why can't I?'

"'Kase he's dead.'"

"August Flower"

For two years I suffered terribly with stomach trouble, and was for all that time under treatment by a physician. He finally, after trying everything, said stomach was about worn out, and that I would have to cease eating solid food for a time at least. I was so weak that I could not work. Finally on the recommendation of a friend who had used your preparations with beneficial results, I procured a bottle of August Flower, and commenced using it. It seemed to do me good at once. I gained in strength and flesh rapidly; my appetite became good, and I suffered no bad effects from what I ate. I feel now like a new man, and consider that August Flower has entirely cured me of Dyspepsia in its worst form. JAMES E. DEDERICK, Saugerties, New York.

PRICKLY ASH BITTERS

One of the most important organs of the human body is the LIVER. When it fails to properly perform its functions the entire system becomes deranged. The BRAIN, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS, all refuse to perform their work. DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, RHEUMATISM, KIDNEY DISEASE, etc., are the results, unless something is done to assist Nature in throwing off the impurities caused by the inaction of a TORPID LIVER. This assistance so necessary will be found in

Prickly Ash Bitters!

It acts directly on the LIVER, STOMACH and KIDNEYS, and by its mild and cathartic effect and general tonic qualities restores these organs to a sound, healthy condition, and cures all diseases arising from these causes. It PURIFIES THE BLOOD, tones up the system, and restores perfect health. If your druggist does not keep it ask him to order it for you. But then, the present incumbent is a republican, See?

THE last state republican platform declared distinctly that a new salary law must be made, and not to take effect on officers elected at the time it was passed. The democrats made just such a law, and now republicans are objecting to it. Were they honest at their state convention or are they honest now? They could not be honest in both these opposite views.

REPUBLICAN papers are claiming the late legislature was a poor one. All wrong, gentlemen The legislature, was in the main a good one. It enacted many good laws and few bad ones. It saved money for the state, and made a number of laws for the relief of the common people. What republican legislature ever did these things?

AUBURN - - IND.

The L. L. O. Annual.

This popular event took place Tuesday evening at the residence of S. D. Hanna on South Jackson street A number of the ladies were sick or had members of the family sick, and could not attend. But those who could be present, and the fortunate guests, had a very fine entertainment, just as they always do. The first thing was the quotation of a witty parody on Maud Muller, "Kate Ketcham," each member giving a verse. Then the class song an original one composed by Mrs. Hodge, and sung by all the class The address of welcome, by the president, Mrs. Barns followed. It was well received Mrs. Carrie Bodine Hull, then executed a fine piano solo, and then came a song by request of the club, given by S D Hanna, which like the other excercises was heartily cheered. Then came the event of the evening, for the club always brings out a new and bright feature. It was a Grecian drama, in which Mrs. Xantippe Socrates and her "neighbor gossips" took part. The leading part was taken by Mrs. G. V. Schaab, the others being Mrs. Hanna, Mrs. Garwood, Mabel Hartman, Miss McTighe, Mrs. E. Zimmerman, Mrs. Houser and Mrs. Cal. Husselman All were dressed in Greek costume which was very becoming and graceful. The ladies never looked better. And the acting and speaking were superb. It beat the Greek drama at college, for ladies look the characters and assume the dress with more grace and dignity. Miss Woodhull gave a piano solo and Mrs. Garwood and Mabel Hartman sang to the accompaniment of Jessie Weaver. All did their parts excellently and the club has abundant reason to feel proud of its ninth reunion. Each of these seems better than any other could be, perhaps because it is the newest and freshest to the mind. But we don't see how the next can be any better. The usual lunch followed, and then a social of an hour or so. All speak highly of the meeting, and commend Mrs. Hanna's good taste and care, as well as "Sam's" able assistance and bubling good humor. And the guests—well they feel proud of the compliment of an invitation as well as thankful.

The Coming Caucus.

Now let us have a full turnout and a general interest in selecting good men for the places to be filled. We have an abundance of excellent material, and if our town is not well managed during the coming year, it will be for want of interest in going to the caucus and selecting suitable candidates, The democrats have a majority of the voters of the city, and if the right men are nominated will elect every man on the ticket. Let us make no mistakes. Let business men, especially, be present at the caucus, for they are in general, the men who must furnish most of the taxes, and are so far deeply interested It will not do to remain away, and then complain, because suitable men were not selected. Let every taxpayer be present, with his choice fixed on the man who will fill the place best.

Let us make the choice, in cases where there is a contest, by ballot, improving however, on last year's method. Then we gave the nomination to those who merely received a plurality. Now let us require a majority over all. No one can then complain. If several ballots are taken, and there are three or more candidates, it might also be well to make a rule that after each ballot, the one lowest on the list, be required to drop out. That however is not a vital point. But these things should be taken under consideration, while we are waiting for caucus day to arrive. Then whoever gets the nomination, let everyone be prepared to abide by the result. If the selection is made, as we have indicated, it would seem to be so fair, that no one would have a right to object. Let us pick out the best men, and then elect them. It is in our power to do both.

Democratic Caucus.

The democrats and others who will act with them in our endeavors to give the city a good, economical government, are requested to meet in caucus at Ensley's Hall on Thursday Evening, April 9,

at 7 o'clock, for the purpose of putting in nomination candidates to be voted for at the May election as follows:

One trustee for second ward,
One trustee for the fifth ward,
One clerk,
One treasurer,
One marshal.

Let us have a full attendance.

Lafayette Buss brought us Friday a sample of the fine clay found on his farm near Hudson. We believe it to be free from iron, and if so, it would no doubt make white brick, like that known as "Milwaukee brick," He says Forney Brothers, of Smithfield, intend to try it at their brick yard this summer.

The Auburn Windmill Co. have been doing a great deal of work for the Kinlinger factory, especially in shaping and fitting up the woodwork of the buggy gearings. They are a busy set there and turn out a good deal of work besides the regular windmill business, which we are told is large and rapidly increasing.

Read the letter of E. R Coburn, Dushville, Mich. It will be a pleasure, especially to the old 44th veterans, who will remember him. We do not remember who ordered the copy of the COURIER sent to him, but it was probably some of his old friends, as we never knew him He may be assured, however his letter was welcome.

Frank Scholes, of St Joe, has been assisting Surveyor Houk for a time. Mr Scholes is a practical engineer and has had a great deal of experience in that line. He was an engineer for the Pennsylvania company when they laid out their system of tracks etc., at Stony Island, near Chicago, and was also the chief man on the famous "Little River" ditch beyond Ft. Wayne.

Kendallville News: F. W. Hayden, the one armed printer, whose home is at Otsego, Mich., was in the city one day last week. To see Hayden set type with one hand—his left hand at that—and lift a stick of type and "dump" it as skilfully as any printer, ought to inspire any able-bodied workman to a full determination to never shirk his duty or beg for bread he has not earned. Such men always have our best wishes for success in any laudable undertaking.

Kendallville News: The work in the Indianapolis pension office has grown to enormous proportions. A reporter of the Indianapolis News recently elicited the following facts from Pension Agent Ensley. Since 1860 over $100,000,000 has been paid out for pensions in the state. These are now over 54,000 in the state, 1,400 of them being under the act of last June. About $3,000.000 is distributed quarterly. The regular and extra force, in all 47 persons, paid out in four days, beginning with March 4th, $1,582,000.

Cal. Husselman probably has the most extensive private drain in the county. He has just completed putting in the main drain deeper than before, and when done, it will completely reclaim the low fields across the road and west from his house. Over twenty years ago, he put down small tile, the first make of Paulus Calkin, and since has made improvements and changes. Now the main ditch 1800 feet long, has twelve-inch tile, averages six feet deep while the laterals and upper lines have 4, 6. 8 and 10 inch tile The entire length including laterals is over two miles. That is pretty good for one farm.

For Sale.

Ladies Have Tried It.

A number of my lady customers have tried "Mother's Friend," and would not be without for many times its cost. They recommend it to all who are to become mothers. R. A. PAYNE, Druggist, Greenville, Ala. Write The Bradfield Reg. Co. Atlanta, Ga., for particulars. Sold by F. E. Davenport, and all druggists.

A Lady's Perfect Companion.

Painless childbirth, our new book tells how any woman may become a mother without suffering any pain whatever. Also how to treat and overcome morning sickness, swelled limbs, and other evils attending pregnancy. It is reliable and highly endorsed by physicians as the wife's true private companion. Send two cent stamp for descriptive circulars and confidential letter, sent in sealed envelope. Address FRANK THOMAS & Co., Publishers, Baltimore, Maryland.

Notice to Contractors.

Notice is hereby given that the Board of Commissioners, of DeKalb county, Indiana will, at the time and place named below, let to the lowest and best responsible bidder, the construction of the following work, to-wit:

The masonry and earth work to repair driveway to cemetery, at Cedar Chapel, Butler township Sale to take place on the grounds on at 10 o'clock a. m. Plans and specifications at Surveyor's office. A good and sufficient bond will be required of the successful bidder for the faithful and prompt performance of the contract, as required by law. The right to reject any or all bids is reserved.

JOHN HOFFELDER, President of Board.
Auburn, Ind., March 27, 1891.

City Politics.

But little new has arisen since our last. The chief interest settles on the marshal's office. For this there are two new candidates, Samuel Fretz and John W. Jones. Both will be good for the place. No new names are out for other offices, if we except a mention of J. H. Gogerli for councilman of the second ward, and we are not certain he will accept. In the fifth ward there have been no new names. We have not learned whether Mr. Heberling will run again, but are told he does not desire it. He has been a good officer. The other names have been already given, J. E. Ensley and Ex-Clerk Husselman. No new names for clerk or treasurer, as it seems to be conceded to George Grund and Charlie Jones respectively.

Court.

Judge Powers is having the grip, and R. D. Best is holding court for him. The case of Peter Shull for divorce was tried, and Mrs Shull given divorce, but the matter of alimony is not settled. The rest of the time has been taken up by the case of Gregg vs Blaney, mechanic's lien, which was on when we closed.

Married and Settled.

Frank Joliffe and Miss Maud Baker were married last Thursday evening in their own home on South Cedar street, Rev. H. M. Lamport, of the M. E. church officiating. It was a very sensible way that Mr. Joliffe took to start out in life. He had furnished the house and everything was ready to commence house keeping, which the young couple did. And they are now living there as cosy as possible. We rather like this style, and trust they will never regret the step so sensibly taken.

Directors' Meeting.

The regular semi-annual meeting of the directors and officers of the Northeastern Indiana Agricultural Association will convene at the office of the secretary in Waterloo, at 10 a. m., April 13, 1891. As usual there is important business to come before the meeting, including changes and revisions of the premium list, and all who have changes to propose, should be on hand that day. Let there be a full attendance.

Taxpaying time is drawing to a close rapidly. We are glad to see so many kindly remember the COURIER when in town to pay taxes. These little sums come very handy these hard times.

Say, friend, how is that house you had painted a year or so ago? Is it faded, blistered, cracked or chalked off? If so, go to Beuret and get a paint that will stand the test of sunshine, heat and rain, with good results.

W. B. Brown has planted a row of fine large trees along the south side of his residence lots. They are much larger than commonly planted, but he has taken great pains to get those that will live. He got them of Hi. Cupp, west of town.

CORA SHUGERS is still on WEST SEVENTH STREET, where he continues to deal out first-class LUNCH to his customers. His stock of Fruits and Confectionery is one of the most complete in the City. While in town just call and see what he has in the line of SEASONABLE GOODS. 11tf

Remember that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has no equal as a specific for colds, coughs, and all affections of the throat and lungs. For nearly half a century it has been in greater demand than any other remedy for pulmonary complaints. All druggists have it for sale.

Seats in the Garrett Opera House for the young ladies' entertainment at Garrett this evening can be secured at Davenport's drug store. Special train leaves the Wabash station, foot of Main street, at 6:30 and return after entertainment closes. Round trip 25c. We hope to see a goodly number of our people go over.

Last Sunday evening, the Church of God Sunday school celebrated Easter by giving an entertainment. The little folks did admirably, and the older ones deported themselves creditably, and made the occasion enjoyable for all. An unusually large audience was present and everything worked with a harmony of interest. All seemed to go away feeling that they had been entertained by a band of little folks, who are likely to come to public notice ere long.

Binder twine is 3 to 5 cents cheaper now, so Brown & Culbertson tell us. "All on account of the McKinley bill," as republican editors say. Now we submit this to these same papers. The tariff has been largely taken off of this binder twine, and the price goes down. This proves that the tariff was a tax on it, making the price higher. Taking off the tax makes the price lower. Ask Brown & Culbertson. Then go and tell your readers once more that the "tariff is not a tax," and that "the foreigner pays it."

A. Lewis has his lumber building completed and is gradually filling it with choice grades of stock. He has not done things by halves and his customers can drive right in under a roof and load up without being compelled to endure the burning heat of a summer's sun, or the soaking rains so common and frequent in that season of the year. Convenience and comfort, combined with practical utility are the elements which have drawn a mark of prominence across his ideas of improvement, and people can buy building material of him just as cheap as if it were stacked out in the weather. The Lake Shore road has donated a car load of gravel toward grading this yard, which distinctly manifests the peculiar and substantial interest they are taking in the enterprise.

Fo 50 cents you can get elegant gilt papers with borders and ceilings to match at Davenport's. 11tf

G. W. Craig who has been sick so long, is slowly improving. The same may be said for Mrs. Henry Ford.

The Texas cowboys take Simmons Liver Regulator when bilious. J. E. Pierce, Ranchero Grande, Texas.

Communications as late as Wednesday noon have to wait till next week. Please remember, the earlier the better.

Howard McCord is starting the work on his residence by Mrs. Silvers' on North Main street. It is to be a fine one.

MARRIED: At the residence of Rev. W. L. Meese March 28, William J. Watson and Bertha Grimm both of this county.

The latest fad in wall paper is "boxed ceilings." Davenport has these articles in matched decorations from 80 cents to $15 per room. 11tf

Miss Ada Myers, the new milliner, next to Rainier's, North Main, sells at bottom prices. Call and see the lovely goods and styles.

Do you intend to repair or repaint? Then Beuret, Auburn, will sell you the best paints at living prices. It will pay you to call on him.

Say, pa, wont you go to John Harris' and buy $15 worth of goods and me one of those elegant cook books? They are so lovely and useful. 11tf

W. H. Leas, C. M. Phillips and Gen. Blair Waterloo attorneys, were over here bright and early Monday to resume work in the court room.

David Greenwalt, of the Junction, is now a clerk at Woodworth's drugstore in Ft. Wayne, and the Press of that city speaks highly of him.

Call on Beuret, Auburn, North Main, for paints, oils, tinware, spouting, nails, gasolene stoves, and all sorts of hard ware. He proposes to sell you goods.

Just think of it! John Harris gives an Unabridged Webster's dictionary with every $30 purchase of goods. Don't forget the place at Auburn Junction. 11

Say have you ever seen those beautiful encyclopedias at Geo. Morr's. If you have not, call and see them, and inquire how you can get one as a present.

Rain began again Sunday night, and did not stop till Tuesday morning. The roads became almost impassable. We have been in a state of siege for several weeks.

Two or three of our subscribers, wanted to bring us maple syrup on subscription. As we have forgotten the names, we might say, we are ready for it any time now.

Mrs. Funk has just received a new and complete line of spring millinery which she invites the ladies of Auburn and vicinity to call and inspect, south side square. 12tf

The L. L. C. will meet this week with Mrs. Brown. Lesson, page 109 to 119. Mrs. Zimmerman, leader; An afternoon in Classic Concord, Mrs. Hull; Neighborhood Gossip, by the club.

The Presbyterian church was profusely decorated with beautiful flowers Sunday, and it was noticed that many of the children remained after Sunday school to attend the morning service. A good plan.

There will not be any service at the M. E. church next Sunday, as Mr. Lamport is absent, and the new man, not yet appointed. Keep your eye on the COURIER to see who the new man is when it is decided.

B. C. Zeigler wants all the POULTRY and VEAL CALVES he can get. He pays the highest market price. Those who have anything in that line to dispose of will profit by seeing him at the Palace Meat Market. 9tf

It's all over town! What is all over town? Why, mud of course. This fact, however, has nothing to do with the comfort to be obtained from Kessler Brothers' popular brands of cigars. They are leaders, so don't forget it.

Next Sabbath eve, Prof. Myers will conduct a song service and give a lecture at the M. E. church to the young people and old. Come and enjoy the service and you will be highly entertained. The choir will sing several fine selections.

Good Friday was about the darkest and most dismal of the many we have had for several weeks; but very appropriately, Easter Sunday dawned on us with a bright, clear sky, and pleasant weather. But Monday morning it was raining again.

The C. L. S. C. will meet next Saturday with Mrs Baldwin. Program. The church in the United States, Mrs. Moss; Walks and Talks, Mrs. Plum; The Intellectual developments of the English People, Mrs. Baldwin; An English Sea River, Mrs. Schaab; Incidents of English sea life in Tudor Times, Mrs. Carruth.

Citizens in the north part of town are being annoyed by the overflow of water, and are asking the town board to help them out. But there is little the town board can do, for the ditches are county affairs located and constructed by direction of the court, and are now, we suppose, in the control of the county commissioners. There is likely something wrong in the construction that the county board may be called on to see about and if possible, to correct.

Trustee Robert Reed, of this township, has posted up notices that he will be at Brown & Culbertson's in Auburn, on Saturday afternoons of each week till May 1, for the purpose of licensing dogs as required by the new law, and transacting other township business. It will be well to remember this, as this work is done only during April.

Dr. David N. Fitch, a graduate of the Chicago Veterinary College, has located in Auburn and will give his attention to diseases of domestic animals. He has not only taken a thorough course in surgery and dentistry connected with his profession but has had valuable practice, including a year with Dr. Paxton, of Laporte, a well known veterinary surgeon and graduate of the famed Toronto college. The Doctor has located in the Case building, in the dwelling part at the west end, where he will be found, by all who need his services.

A. Lewis has finished up his immense building for lumber storage, putting on a steel roof, as a better protection against danger by fire. The building is two stories high, and all the lighter kinds of dressed lumber will be stored on the second floor, the heavier below. No building of the same size, for the purpose is found along the lines of the Lake Shore road, so the company inform him. To show their appreciation of the value of his business, the company offered him free, a car load of gravel to be used in filling and improving the grounds and streets in and about his establishment. The improvements he is making, put a different look onto things about there.

It is very plain, why the drunken editor of the Garrett Bologna, objects to Marshal Pfefferl. Joe. won't let him run on the streets drunk for days at a time, in fact not at all. The marshal scared him home the other day, and he feels the deprivation of not being allowed to make a disgraceful spectacle of himself. Hence he fills three columns with advice to Auburn to take up some other candidate. Auburn papers have never had a word to say as to Garrett candidates. They have better sense. They concede that Garrett can attend to her own business. The COURIER will insist that whoever gets to be marshal shall agree to keep drunken men, including the editor of the Garrett Clipper, off the streets, even if they are put into the calaboose. Decency demands it.

EPITOME OF THE WEEK.

THE ITALIAN MINISTER AT WASHINGTON RECALLED.

The Steamer City of Detroit Goes Down—Edwin Booth Retires from the Stage—Reservoir Breaks—Lock-Out Ended.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

The Italian Minister at Washington Recalled.

Washington special: Quite a flurry was occasioned here by the announcement that Baron Fava, the Italian Minister, had presented his letters of recall and demanded his passports from this Government. The report was construed at first as a declaration of hostilities, but an examination is pronounced by diplomats and high officials of the Government to be void of the sensational features or significance that was at first attached to it. The Minister's letter of recall was presented at the State Department and is said to have been the customary formal document, and to have stated that the business relations would be conducted by Marquis Imperiali, the secretary of legation, as charge de affaires. It is stated, however, that the letter of recall received by Minister Fava himself indicated a dissatisfaction on the part of the Italian Government with the progress of negotiations relative to the recent events in New Orleans, though whether this expression of dissatisfaction was intended to reflect upon the Minister himself or the United States government is not clear. The officials of the State department are silent on the subject, as is Baron Fava himself. Numerous attempts have been made to obtain expressions of opinions from Secretary of State Blaine, Private Secretary Halford, Baron Fava and others in high official circles, but they all insist that discussion of the matter would be entirely improper and impolitic.

Steamer Goes Down.

Detroit special: The steamer City of Detroit, of the Detroit and Cleveland line of steamers, went on a rock at the Lime Kiln's Crossing in the Detroit River during a fearful storm. The shock stove a hole in her bottom and she gradually sank to the bottom in twenty feet of water. The steamer had twenty passengers and 125 tons of freight on board. There was no commotion among the passengers, as few were aware anything had happened until all danger was passed. The passengers were taken off by the steamer Riverside and returned to this city. The vessel lies on the bottom in twenty feet of water, and wreckers have been sent from Detroit to raise her. The extent of the damage cannot be estimated at this time, as the electric lighting machinery, the dining-room furnishings and other valuable equipment of the steamer is below the submerged line. The vessel is valued at $375,000.

Parnell and Healy.

The communications which have been passing between the whips of the rival Irish factions with regard to the proposed registrations of Mr. Maurice Healy and Mr. Parnell, and a new election in Cork city have had no result at all. Nothing will be done until Parliament meets. Parnell skulks with far more resignation than he fights nowadays, and his evident determination to back out of his challenge and wisely enough to avoid political death as long as possible, seems to have quashed all hope of a by-election in Cork.

Reservoir Breaks.

A break is reported in one of the embankments of the Mercer County, Ohio, reservoir situated just above Celina, and the people in the immediate neighborhood have abandoned their homes in alarm. The reservoir contains 3,000 acres of water, and is located at a considerable elevation above the surrounding country. The heavy rains have brought the surface of the water to the top of the embankment and a serious inundation is threatened.

Another War in Prospect.

A dispatch received in New York says that rumors of war between Hayti and San Domingo are current. The old dispute, the boundry line question, is the cause of the strained relations of the two countries. The dominican representative at Port Au Prince has been recalled and diplomatic intercourse has ceased.

To Succeed Huston.

A special from Washington says the latest rumor about the treasurership is that the name of E. H. Nebecker, of Fountain County, Indiana, is being considered for the place. Mr. Nebecker is a local politician of some means, who has served as a member of the Republican State Central Committee.

The Lock-Out Ended.

The locked-out clothing cutters of Rochester, N. Y., held a meeting and passed resolutions repudiating the Knights of Labor and the leaders and denouncing the boycott. The manufacturers have determined to receive the applications of the men for work, and the lock-out is therefore at an end.

New Railroad.

The contract has been let for the completion of the Findlay, Fort Wayne and Western Railway from Ottawa west to Fort Wayne, where connection will be made with a road to Streator, Ill., making a continuous line from Pittsburgh to Chicago and the West.

Submarine Cannon.

In the experiments in the lake of Como with a submarine cannon, invented by Signor Toselli, a shot, which was fired from a depth of thirty-three feet, was sufficiently effective to sink a boat. Further experiments will be made with a larger gun.

Edwin Booth Retires from the Stage.

Edwin Booth, the eminent tragedian, announces his retirement from the stage after this season. He has ordered his manager to cancel all dates made for him next year, and states that his present engagement at the Brooklyn Academy of Music will be his farewell.

Perished in the Flames.

John Luscias' residence at Saginaw, Mich., burned, and Mrs. Luscias perished in the flames. There is a mystery connected with the fire, as it was the third time the house had been fired within six months.

A Serious Phaze.

The results of the lockout of the clothing cutters of Rochester, N. Y., by the leading manufacturers are already assuming a serious phaze among the thousands of employes who are dependent upon the clothing industry for employment and support. The manufacture of clothing in that city has grown to an annual output of nearly $11,000,000, and has become one of the principal industries of the city. Nearly all the clothing manufacturers will have finished work on all clothing cut by the locked out men by the end of this week, and unless the cutters return to work or others take their places 20,000 people will be thrown out of employment. The manufacturers will attempt to resume work as soon as possible with cutters from other cities. Maj. William Sheldon has begun an action against the Clothing Cutters' and Trimmers' local assembly for $15,000 damages for conspiracy, intimidation and extortion.

A New Scheme.

Lansing (Mich.) special: Attorney General Ellis, replying to inquiry whether the State can legally issue bonds for the purpose of paying bounties to those who did not receive them, says such action would be illegal, but suggests that the State can issue bonds to the amount of $694,000, that amount of the total issue of the bonds authorized in war times having never been issued, and in addition the State can devote to the payment of bounties the $500,000 which it will soon receive from the general government as its share of the direct tax levied during the war and now about to be refunded. This course will probably be adopted and over a million of dollars be distributed among the veterans who volunteered early in the war and received nothing from the State, while those enlisting in 1864 received liberal bounties.

The Pope and the World's Fair.

A Chicago paper says: His Holiness, Pope Leo XIII., is out with an apostolical benediction upon the World's Fair and a plan to erect a beautiful stone monument in honor of Christopher Columbus at Buenos Ayres. He says: "It is proper as well as useful to render homage to men who have merited so well of Christian faith and human society. Columbus, in accomplishing by his genius and perseverance such great deeds, has been the fountain in both hemispheres of so great influence upon mankind that few men can be compared with him. Hoping that the honors preferred him will serve to stimulate the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago, we give to your project the praise that it merits and at the same time as a token of fraternal love, we give the apostolical benediction."

Cork Court House Burned.

London special: The fire at the Cork Court-house in which the Tipperary rioters were being tried, proved most destructive. A heavy wind prevailed baffling the efforts of the firemen and the melted lead poured down in a stream from the roof. The whole Court-house was destroyed, including the municipal chamber, and many documents, some dating back several centuries were consumed. By great effort and risk some of the more valuable documents were saved. The Union Jack sank with the flagstaff amid the mass of flames and the crowd cheered its fall. The roof crashed in and the walls fell, with imminent peril to the bystanders, who escaped injury, however. It appears that the fire was caused by a heated flue igniting the woodwork of the roof. The trial of the Tipperary rioters remains unfinished.

A Horrible Story.

An inquest was held in the London (Eng.) Hospital on the body of a Russian Jew named Racien. From the evidence it was learned that he arrived in Liverpool on an American cattle boat. He complained that he had been cruelly treated on board the vessel. He said that he had been compelled for seventeen days to sleep on the deck and live on bread and water, although he was ill. His companions testified that many such cases occurred, because destitute men wanting to go back to their native land were compelled to work abnormal hours and eat miserable food, and were paid $1 on landing. A verdict was rendered in accordance with the evidence, the Coroner remarking that if the testimony was true a horrible state of affairs existed on these steamers.

Shot at His Wife.

E. Morgan Landon, of Louisville, Ohio, who for some time has figured in sensational matters, is now under arrest for shooting with intent to kill his wife. He was granted a divorce some time ago, and he has been making himself as obnoxious as possible. He is the prosecuting witness in a case against the Marshal of Louisville for the misuse of his official authority. The divorced wife, who has been making her home in Canton, was visiting her sister in Louisville, when Landon went to a window and shot at her, the ball just grazing her shoulder. He was overpowered and disarmed by his brother-in-law before he could shoot a second time. The divorce was a sensational one, and it was attempted to show that the Marshal arrested Landon on a trumped-up charge and then visited his wife.

It Failed.

An attempt was made on the Pennsylvania road to wreck the New York limited vestibule train by placing a heavy rail across the track near Claiborne, O. The train was running at a high rate of speed when it neared the obstruction. The engineer saw the rail and applied the air-brakes in time to prevent what might have been a horrible accident. The railroad officials think the attempt was for the purpose of robbery, as at this point the track is over a high embankment, down which the cars would have gone if derailed. It was in this locality that the express company was robbed some time ago. The officials are making every effort to discover the perpetrators.

A Queer Accident.

Mrs. O. Ereckson, who lives in the tenement at No. 30 Fourth place, Brooklyn, N. Y., stepped on a parlor match upon the floor, and as a result she is now in the Seney Hospital, at the point of death. As soon as the match exploded the flame ignited her skirts, and in an instant she was a mass of flames. The unfortunate woman ran screaming to the hall, where a strong draft was blowing. Before assistance could reach her her clothing was nearly burned from her body. Ambulance Surgeon DeForrest came in response to a call. He found the woman was horribly burned from head to foot. The explosion of the match set fire to the furniture. The flames, however, were extinguished before much damage was done.

Arsenic in the Food.

Mr. and Mrs. John Losey, residing eleven miles northwest of Jackson, Mich., are in a precarious condition, poisoned by arsenic eaten at supper. They lived on their grandmother's farm and a continuous row has been in progress for a year. The old lady served a notice on the Loseys a few days ago to get off the place. A few evenings afterward the Loseys ate a hearty supper, and immediately after both became alarmingly sick. Dr. Lewis Ward, of Hillsdale, being in the neighborhood, was sent for and he said arsenic was the cause. He analyzed the cabbage eaten at supper and found a large quantity of the poison.

The Grip Has Captured Chicago.

Chicago special: The deaths reported from pneumonia and kindred ailments last week were 900, probably the largest number ever recorded in this city. A careful estimate justifies the statement that nearly a quarter of a million people are under medical treatment. Every branch of business is crippled by the prevailing sickness. Dr. J. D. Hammond said: "The present epidemic of the grip is as bad as the season of cholera, so far as the number of people affected is concerned. Every doctor that I know is overrun with business."

A Powder Explosion.

A keg of powder exploded in J. E. Ruley's grocery at Madisonville, Ky. J. B. Stewart, clerk, and D. A. Bondurant, customer, were badly injured. Stewart's face and hands were burned to a crisp, and before his recovery will probably lose both eyes. Bondurant was badly burned and injured by flying particles. The store was wrecked and the buildings adjoining were badly damaged. The accident was caused by the discharge of a rifle in Stewart's hands while in close proximity to the powder.

Lemcke Declines.

J. A. Lemcke, of Indiana, who has been prominently mentioned as the probable successor of United States Treasurer Huston, has informed the President that his health was so bad that he did not desire to be considered in connection with that office any longer, especially as he had arranged to go abroad in May. It is stated at the White House that while Lemcke had never been tendered the treasurership, his name has been favorably considered in that connection, and also that Huston's resignation will not be accepted until his successor shall have been appointed.

Unconstitutional.

At Muncie, Ind., Judge Lots sustained a motion to quash the indictments against Superintendent Kennedy, of the Muncie Pulp mill, charged with violating the eight-hour law in employing a day and night force working thirteen and eleven hours respectively, and paying weekly wages for their work. The court held that the indictments were based upon an unconstitutional act, inasmuch as no definition is given of what shall constitute a violation of the law. Muncie attorneys applaud the decision.

A Dangerous Counterfeit.

The secret service officers declare the counterfeit two-dollar silver certificate a most dangerous one. The vignette of Hancock is as fine as the original, and the lettering and lathe work is an exact copy of the treasury note. In fact, the only difference is too minute to be visible to the naked eye. Attention was called to this counterfeit some time ago, and has been called to it at frequent intervals since, but the unknown counterfeiters watch the secret service bulletins closely.

James J. West Acquitted.

The Supreme Court of Illinois has reversed the judgment of the Cook County Criminal Court in the case of James J. West, ex-editor of the Chicago Times, who was convicted of embezzlement in connection with the affairs of the Times Company and sent to the penitentiary for five years. Mr. West has been at large on bail since he appealed from the decision of the lower court a year ago.

A Behest for the Colored People.

The will of the late J. D. Lewis, of Philadelphia, was admitted to probate. He left an estate valued at $100,000, and after bequests to his widow and two children, he left the balance in trust to form the Lewis bureau of civil rights, its object being to protect colored citizens and to secure them the civil rights as enjoyed by all other classes of American citizens.

Killed for Refusing to Elope.

Robert Bartlett, town marshal of Priestville, Ky., being infatuated with the young wife of Conti, a prominent physician there, shot her through the breast because she would not elope with him. Mrs. Conti will die. He also fired two shots at M. C. Hunt and wife and escaped. Bartlett is a genuine desperado.

Gas in a Hollow Tree.

Workmen, in clearing a strip of woods near Lebanon, Ohio, discovered gas in a huge oak tree. The presence of gas was noticeable from the opening as the saw plowed its way into a tree. It was ignited and burned, forming a semi-circular blaze for twenty minutes. The tree had an eight-inch hollow for a distance of ten feet.

Miss Weston Fuller Married.

Miss Weston Fuller, daughter Chief Justice Fuller, was married at Washington to Archibald Lapham Brown, of Chicago. A large number of invitations were issued to both the church and reception, and the affair was one of the most brilliant social occasions of this season.

Wealthy Widow Kidnapped.

Mrs. Margaret Chapeton, a wealthy widow, belonging to one of the oldest French families in Detroit, has been missing for some time, and it is hinted that she has been kidnapped. Mrs. Chapeton is 73 years old and very eccentric, one of her fads being to carry a large sum of money at all times.

Schooner Chapman Lost.

Advices from Hawaii say that the missionary schooner Chapman was lost on the west coast of Tapita, November 30, 1890. She was bound from Honolulu to the Pitcair Islands. The crew numbered sixteen, and they were all drowned.

A Fatal Blast.

The cupola in a blast furnace, at Terre Haute, Ind., exploded. Michael Garvey and Patrick Hurley were fatally burned, and it is believed that two other men are buried under the debris.

Stand Pipe Falls.

The stand pipe of the Defiance (Ohio) water works collapsed and fell, wrecking the engine house and severely injuring several persons. The town is now without water.

Choked to Death.

Nicholas Haige, aged 50, choked to death, at Indianapolis. While eating dinner a piece of meat got into his windpipe and before it could be dislodged he was dead.

VIRGINIA LIFE-SAVERS DO NOBLE WORK.

A Captain's Wife and Child and Six of a Norwegian Bark's Crew Find Watery Graves Off Cape Henry—Thrilling Description.

The Norwegian bark Dictator, from Pensacola, Fla., to West Hartlepool, England, laden with pine lumber, with a crew of fifteen and the captain's young wife and little boy of 3 years, went ashore in a strong easterly gale four miles south of Cape Henry, Va., and two miles north of the Virginia Beach Hotel. The weather was so thick that the vessel was not seen until 9 o'clock a. m., and then she was in the breakers broadside on, within a quarter of a mile of the shore. Full crews from two life-saving stations, those of Cape Henry and Seatick, under command of Captain Drinkwater, were promptly on hand and began firing lines to the ill-fated bark. The guns could not deliver the lines so far, though they were repeatedly fired. The ship finally succeeded in getting a line ashore tied to a barrel, which the surf carried to the life-savers. The breeches buoy was quickly rigged and sent to the vessel, but unfortunately the bark's crew were ignorant of its use, and the rescue was delayed until Captain Drinkwater, of the life-saving crew, wrote instructions, put them in a bottle, and sent it to the Dictator by the line connecting the vessel with the shore. The men on board broke the bottle at once, as could be seen by glasses from the shore, and proceeded to carry out the directions.

The first man was delivered ashore in eight minutes, and seven others were rescued before sunset, four of whom came ashore in a life boat which was capsized, but the men succeeded in reaching the shore in a half dead condition, one man having his arm broken. During the entire day the ship rolled and pitched terribly, and made the work of rescuing the unhappy sailors exceedingly difficult and slow, as the life line would tighten or slacken in response to the motion of the vessel. Once the line broke with a man midway to the shore, and he was hauled back to the bark half dead. The line was mended and the same man safely landed. The beach was lined with people who had come from the country houses and the hotel, and to the spectators the anxiety and suspense was awful, as they could plainly see the people on the bark and hear their constant cries for succor. At nightfall there were still nine persons on the bark, and among the number the captain, his wife, and little child. The captain had urged his wife all during the day to take the buoy and come ashore, but she steadily refused, as she would not leave her husband and child, and only one could take the buoy at a time. The wife and child were already greatly exhausted, according to the report of the sailors. At night the work of rescue was continued, and the captain vainly besought his wife to make the attempt for life. It has been impossible to get the names of the rescued to-night, owing to the fact that they are entirely exhausted and all are foreigners. Lloyd's register gives the captain's name as Jorgonson. The bark is a complete wreck and went to pieces fast; the sea was tremendous. All that could be gathered from the half-dead sailors as to the cause of the stranding of the vessel was that they did not know where they were, the sun not having been seen for four days, and the weather so thick last night and this morning that they struck the breakers before they could see the coast. The life-savers worked all day with great heroism without food since morning. The apparently slow progress of the work of rescue is due to the fact that a life-boat could not live in the surf, and that the guns would not reach the bark, and that the crew could not use the breeches buoy until they were instructed from shore, which caused great delay. The captain, just before the ship went to pieces, sprang into the sea with his son strapped to his back and reached the shore alive, but the boy was lost, making a total of eight lives. The Dictator was trying to make Hampton Roads, having been fifteen days disabled by hurricanes.

WENT WEST FOR NAUGHT.

A Pennsylvania Damsel Travels to Spokane Falls for a Husband to Meet Disappointment.

An advertisement inserted in a Chicago matrimonial paper by Harry F. Fleming, a wholesale baker, of Spokane Falls, Wash., caught the eye of Miss Grace Glassgow, of Marklesburg, Pa. She is a petite brunette of 30, and is the eldest daughter of Professor Samuel L. Glassgow, a leading educator and prominent figure in Huntington County politics. An ardent correspondence ensued, photographs were exchanged and Miss Glasgow finally accepted a proposal of marriage from her unknown Western wooer. The gallant Fleming furnished her with a through ticket and an abundance of money for the traveling expenses, and Miss Glasgow left quietly for Spokane Falls. The other night she returned unexpectedly to her parents' home still unmarried, weary and dejected over her fruitless and fatiguing journey. She had met her fiance, but his material and physical charms were not in keeping with his written and pictured representation of himself, and so the disappointed damsel nullified the engagement with a frigid farewell bow.

Big Mine in Danger of Flooding.

At Plymouth, Pa., Dodson colliery, one of the greatest in the coal fields, is in danger of total destruction. Water is breaking into it from abandoned workings. The mine is connected with a vast number of old works. The water has gained such headway that the work of pumping machinery seems to be of no avail. The suspension of the colliery means a total loss of work to 800 men and boys.

Liabilities Large, Assets Small.

William Younger, the owner of the large flour mill at Catasaqua, Pa., has made an assignment, having confessed judgment for $44,000. Other liabilities will swell the total to $90,000. The assets are $12,000.

Closed by the Sheriff.

The doors of the wholesale clothing house of R. Newboner & Co., Milwaukee, are locked and the Sheriff is in possession.

MARTIN'S GRAVE CRIME

THE RECENT SENSATION AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

His Erratic Exploit at Washington—He Boasted That He Would Go to the White House and "Do the President Up."

It appears that the attempt to secure the release of young Harry Martin, who attempted to break into the White House when intoxicated the other night, without any punishment whatever will not be successful. An effort, however, is likely to be made to have the offense charged against him changed, so that he can plead guilty to it and pay a fine. A change which has been suggested is that he will be charged with assaulting Policeman Kenney, one of the officials of the White House.

It is now learned that the assault was of a more aggravated character than has been supposed. It is said to be true that young Martin, when crazed with liquor before he started to the White House, told some of his companions that he was going "to do the President up." The language attributed to him in words is: "I am going to do up the President." If it could be sustained in court, and the President or the Government chose to prosecute, it would be a very serious offense indeed. Under any other Government than this such conduct would not be excused as a drunken freak.

It appears that when Martin broke through the window of the red parlor the President himself came to the rescue, and that he assisted the two police officers in capturing the young athlete. The story is that President Harrison, on hearing the noise and seeing the difficulty the policemen had in struggling with the young fellow, himself procured a rope by cutting away one of the ropes that fasten the curtains at the window, and with the officers' assistance bound Martin securely. The President himself tied the knot, being very much less excited than the officers. The President has been entreated by a great number of influential people since the event not to permit any action to be taken against the young man.

RACED WITH A WATERSPOUT.

Thrilling Experience of a Norwegian Steamer in West Indian Waters.

At New York, the little Norwegian steamer, America, came in from the West Indies with a story of a race with a gigantic waterspout. The steamer was 100 miles off Hatteras on March 23, making her way north in a moderate sea over which hung low and heavy clouds. Suddenly from the northwest, the direction of the land, a great waterspout was seen approaching. The America was headed in the direction that would give the spout a wide berth, but it came down on the steamer so rapidly that the captain put the vessel on a northeasterly course and signaled the engineer to crowd on all the steam. Then it became a race between the waterspout and the little steamer. The former was shaped like an hour-glass. Its base was about thirty feet in diameter, and it tapered up for seventy feet, where it became seemingly no more than a foot in thickness. Then it spread out again, and its top was lost in the clouds. The waterspout was revolving from right to left with great rapidity and roaring like a small Niagara. The signal cannon of the America was loaded and run out, ready to fire at the approaching monster, but the steamer won the race and the spout passed fifteen feet astern of the America.

The commotion of the water caused by the waterspout as it whirled by the America lifted the vessel's stern completely out of water.

Gave Up the Gold.

A lump of gold was received at the Treasury Department at Washington from New York and placed to the credit of the conscience fund. Accompanying it was a note signed "Honor," which stated that the lump of gold had been left in "Honor's" possession for some time, but, as he believed that the gold belonged to the Government, he now turned it over to the Treasury. The lump of gold will be sent to the mint, its value ascertained, and "Honor" informed through the press of its value.

Negro Murderer Lynched.

Tom Hunter, a negro employed by R. L. Burks in the telegraph office at Cumberland Gap, waylaid Burks and killed him. Hunter was captured at Middlesborough, Ky., and returned to Cumberland Gap, when a mob took him and hanged him to a tree and fired 100 shots into his body.

Why He Spins No Yarns.

"How is it, lieutenant," asked a young man of a gray-mustached naval officer—so says the New York Times—"that with your many years of sea life, involving, no doubt, many strange adventures, one never hears you relate your experiences of the sea?"

"Well," was the answer, "I will relate to you a little instance of misplaced confidence. Some years ago I was attached to a ship on the China station. One night it was my turn to take the midwatch. I settled myself on the starboard bridge-rail.

"In a few moments I noticed a commotion in the water close to the ship. There appeared not more than a half-cable length from where I was standing a most gigantic sea serpent. I had often read of such things, but had never believed in them, but I could not doubt the evidence of my own eyes. In a moment it vanished, to reappear the next instant almost under our bow. The moon was shining brightly and I got a good look at it. The monster's head was fully as large as an ordinary flour barrel, and it was at least twelve above the water.

"It disappeared in a few minutes. The next morning I related my experience to my brother officers and soon after turned into my bunk. Just before lunch I felt like drinking a glass of beer, and, ringing for the boy, ordered him to bring me a bottle. The rascal didn't appear in a reasonable time, and I rang for him again. 'What's the matter with the beer, Jim?' I asked.

"'Nuthin' de matter wid de beer, Mr. Bobstay.'

"'Then why don't you bring it?'

"'Can't do it, Mr. Bobstay. De doctor done stopped yore beer. Said dat a pusson dat sees such snakes as you wuz talking about dis morning orn't to hab no more beer.'

"And that is the reason that I don't like to tell remarkable stories.

Beautiful Things in Glass.

One of the most-beautiful and wonderful structures of glass was executed by Scaurus, called the Crystal Palace. The building consisted of three stories, supported upon 360 columns. The first story was of marble, the second of glass and the third of gilded wood. The lowermost columns were thirty-eight feet high, and between these columns were 3,000 brazen statues. The area of this building could accommodate 3,000 people.

The Portland vase, much spoken of, was found during the sixteenth century in a marble sarcophagus, in the outskirts of Rome. For two centuries it was the principal ornament in the gallery of Princess Barberini, at Rome, and was then sold at auction to the Duchess of Portland for £1,872—about $10,000. It was thenceforth spoken of as the Portland vase, previously known as the Barberini. It was placed by the Duchess in the British Museum, where it was much admired by visitors, being very beautiful and of curious workmanship. One day a madman named Lloyd was passing through the building, and, stopping in front of the vase, gazed at it for a few moments and without any warning raised a stick he carried, and with a terrific blow broke it many pieces. The parts were gathered up and a skillful workman called in who succeeded after a great deal of labor in mending it, and did it so well that the most-careful scrutiny fails to detect where the pieces are joined. The vase is composed of two layers of glass, the lower one of a deep blue color, the other of an opaque white. The figures are etched in white, standing out upon a background of pure blue.

Another famous vase is the Strasbourg. It was discovered in 1825 in a coffin. The network is of red glass and the inscription of green. It was disinterred by chance by a gardener, who with his spade broke a three-cornered piece out of the top. In the fifteenth century Venice became known all over the world for its manufactories of glass, and to prevent the importation of the art into other countries the glass-makers were placed upon the Island of Murano, and they were placed under the strictest inspection, and the law forbade, under the severest penalties, any workman from taking his art to a foreign country. If he succeeded in disobeying the law, his nearest relatives were to be cast into prison and kept there until he returned. If he persisted in remaining abroad an emissary would be employed to assassinate him.

"Father," began the boy as he looked up from his First History, "are silver mines very fresh?" "Fresh! What do you mean?" "Why, they have to put salt on 'em to make 'em keep, don't they?" "What nonsense! I don't understand you." "Well, I heard some men in the car say you salted a silver mine and made a hundred thousand dollars, and I wanted to know what the salt was for." The way that boy was hustled off to bed made him dream of cyclones all night.

Habits are curious things. Ben Franklin or some other philosopher said that man was a bundle of habits. Good habits stick to a man and so do bad ones; and, therefore, it is well to be cautious about forming 'em. I heard a preacher say once that not one man in 10,000 ever changed his habits after he was 45 years old. At home he wants the same chair to sit in and the same bed to sleep in and the same kind of clothes to wear. If children are raised to brush their teeth and comb their hair and keep their finger-nails clean, they will do it all their lives. If they begin early to chew tobacco and smoke, they will never quit it. A man is right-handed or left-handed, according to habit, and he will put on the same shoe or boot or stocking first every morning without thinking about it. Settled habits, if they are good ones, are like settled religion. There is a power of comfort in 'em, and a man is not happy if he makes a change.—Bill Arp.

All that in this world enlarges the sphere of affection or indignation is to be reverenced, and all those circumstances enlarge it which strengthen our memory or quicken our conception of the dead; hence it is no light sin to destroy anything that is old, more especially because, even with the aid of all the attainable records of the past, we, the living, occupy a space of too large importance and interest in our own eyes; we look upon the world too much as our own, too much as if we had possessed it and should possess it forever, and forget that it is a mere hostelry, of which we occupy the apartments for the time, which others better than we have sojourned in before.—John Ruskin.

"ONCE a dead-head always a dead-head applies to our business as well as to any other," said the manager of a well-known steamboat line. "You see this bundle of letters on my desk? Well, they represent one day's request by mail—received to-day—for passes next season. There is one letter there from a man who fifteen years ago was book-keeper in a steamboat office in Buffalo. For three seasons I sent him an annual pass and then he went into the forwarding and commission business in New York. He hasn't been in the steamboat business during those years, and yet each year, regularly, comes his request for a pass. I have declined his proposition yearly since 1885 and I see I must do so again. It only shows, however, the evil of starting a man in a bad habit."

Scott's Emulsion Palatable as Milk

Shoot the Spy

A cough or cold is a spy which has stealthily come inside the lines of health and is there to discover some vulnerable point in the fortification of the constitution which is guarding your well-being. That point discovered the spy reports it to the enemy on the outside. The enemy is the changeable winter climate. If the cold gets in, look out for an attack at the weak point. To avoid this, shoot the spy, kill the cold, using SCOTT'S EMULSION of pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda as the weapon. It is an expert cold slayer, and fortifies the system against Consumption, Scrofula, General Debility, and all Anæmic and Wasting Diseases (specially in Children). Especially helpful for children to prevent their taking cold. Palatable as Milk.

SPECIAL.—Scott's Emulsion is non-secret, and is prescribed by the Medical Profession all over the world, because its ingredients are scientifically combined in such a manner as to greatly increase their remedial value.

CAUTION.—Scott's Emulsion is put up in salmon-colored wrappers. Be sure and get the genuine. Prepared only by Scott & Bowne, Manufacturing Chemists, New York. Sold by all Druggists.

Dr. J. W. Bergen:

Dear Sir:—By this time, I presume, you will want to know how I am getting along with Bergen's Asthma Cure.

Well, you have heard of persons obtaining a new life. Now I really feel that way myself. When I began taking Bergen's Asthma Cure, I was just coming out of a long siege of it, and was reduced to 115 pounds; weak, short of breath, chills, fever, and badly demoralized generally, coughing from half an hour to an hour every night.

Since commencing, from the third night, I have not lost ten minutes' sleep all night, cough gone, gained seventeen pounds, chills gone, fever gone, shortness of breath and difficulty of breathing gone, consequently I feel a thousand per cent. better. I thank God every day that I ever saw your advertisement, and that I was induced to write to you.

This is peculiarly encouraging in my case, as I had suffered so long and was so discouraged about my case, having tried everything. I am telling the good news every day.

Push on the good work; you are on the right track.

Yours Very Gratefully,

CHICAGO, July 24, 1890.

S. H. KLINCK—DEAR SIR: I am pleased to say that I consider your remedy the best medicine in existence, for the human afflictions you claim to cure. I suffered from catarrh with bronchitis for many years. During that time I employed physicians and faithfully tried many so-called remedies advertised to cure this disease, without any material benefit, when a friend induced me to try your remedy, claiming others had been cured by it. The first bottle gave me the most pleasing results. I have continued its use and I can not say too much for it. It found me too near the grave for comfort and restored me to health again. A Remarkable Romance.

CHAPTER XXXIII—Continued.

In order to do this, the household goods, as well as the contents of the stable, were to be sold at auction; while the elegant house and grounds would be put into the hands of an agent to be disposed of as soon as a suitable offer should be made.

These things were all accomplished in due time, and on the day when the Queen was ready to sail, Dr. Earle Glendenning, as we must now call him, together with Tony, who was retained in their service, half carried, half led his still suffering parent into a comfortable stateroom, where the latter instantly induced him to lie down, in order to rest after his journey from Yonkers.

Soon they were steaming away from shore, and Earle noticed that every breath his father drew seemed to revive him, and before they arrived at their destination his old enemy, asthma, had almost departed, and his other difficulties were also exceedingly lessened.

By the time they reached Glendenning Hall Sir Fitzroy was able to walk around with a cane, and really seemed to have taken a new lease upon health and life.

With joy Earle marked this change, and when he saw how intensely happy he was thus to be restored to his own home and rightful place, and how proud to boast an honorable name and righteous life, he thanked God and prayed that he might be spared long to its enjoyment, for his lengthened days he knew would add to his own pleasure, as it was so sweet to own a father's love, a father's blessing.

But in his heart he felt that no hope of permanent change for the better could be possible, as his maladies were innumerable; therefore, he redoubled his watchfulness over his beloved form, standing ready to aid by skill and advice, as far as Providence would permit, to check the great weakness he felt sure would ensue as soon as a reaction, after all this excitement, should take place.

I need not describe the intense delight of the lovers when they were again united, or the surprise Ethel felt on being told that Earle had found a father since he left her, and a new but rightful name and inheritance.

This news he had not written, preferring to tell it in person.

Sir Fitzroy was delighted with his future daughter-in-law, for Earle could not rest until he had taken Ethel to the Hall, in order to make them acquainted.

His feeble health made this visit perfectly proper, and certainly gave great pleasure to the old gentleman. From that time he, as well as Earle, looked forward to the wedding-day, which was finally decided to take place by the twentieth of October, with profound pleasure.

A few days after their arrival at the Hall, Sir Fitzroy told his son that he felt sufficiently recruited from his fatigue to visit the ruins, and see the room so long the prison of his unfortunate brother, and, leaning on Earle's arm, he proceeded to the mournful place.

It was well a skilled physician attended him on this sad visit, as he was greatly overcome by all he saw, that so vividly told of the cruel sufferings one he had loved had endured for twenty-five long years.

The tears he shed over each symbol of that long captivity were almost unnerving, and Earle led him away from the spot, resolving that all these harrowing remembrances should, if possible, be removed from the place. If not in his father's lifetime, at least as soon as he had passed away.

But to his great surprise, after he had rested and become calm, Sir Fitzroy said voluntarily:

"I never, never wish to go there again! I have seen it all once—let that suffice. Now I wish the old ruined part with the concealed room torn down as soon as it can be done."

"Father, I am rejoiced to hear you say so. The place is too full of sadness to be allowed to stand. I wish all to be bright and beautiful before my bride comes home."

"Study out, then, Earle, what you would like to erect in their place. The tower with its beautiful views can remain, and something ornamental take the place of those terrible ruins."

Earle waited for no further orders, but that very day engaged workmen to at once demolish all evidences of that sin-dyed spot, and soon an elegant gallery for pictures and statuary stood where had been, hitherto, but neglect and decay.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

ETHEL'S BIRTHDAY.

The time for opening the package left in Ethel's charge by Mrs. Nevergail was now fast approaching, it being the first of October, and consequently she began to feel exceedingly anxious in regard to the unknown parent, who was to present himself upon the fifth.

What sort of a person should she find in him, and would he be satisfied with her attainments and appearance?

These questions were continually presenting themselves to the mind of the poor girl.

On the morning of the second, a letter was placed in her hand by one of the servants, and as "private" was written on the outside, she at once repaired to her room, in order to read it while alone.

The contents, to her surprise, ran as follows:

"Very strange will it seem, my daughter, to receive this, your first letter, from an entirely unknown parent. Not from any lack of paternal feeling have I denied myself the pleasure of seeing my only child until she reaches her twenty-first birthday, but from a train of circumstances which made this course the wisest. I, however, am now counting the days when I shall at last clasp her in my arms, and give to her a father's kisses and blessings. I presume you have in your possession a package to be opened on that eventful day. I have seen Mr. Rogers, and he has told me of the death of your foster mother, and that you are residing at Castle Cairn, the country residence of Edward Worthington, Duke of Westmoreland, situated in ——shire.

"My child, I shall leave Liverpool on the morning train, reaching the castle at noon. Until my appearance on the scene, I prefer that you do not open the package. Together we will break the seal. Until then I will only sign myself, your affectionate FATHER."

Noon of the long expected day at length arrived, and her grace the Duchess of Westmoreland, who condescended to feel considerable interest in the young governess of her granddaughter, together with Lady Claire, was seated in the drawing-room, striving to calm the unusual agitation of the anxious and excited Ethel, who restlessly paced up and down the elegant apartment, or flitted from window to window, in order to watch the drive, to catch the first glimpse of her coming sire.

At length her weary watch was rewarded by seeing a hansom dash up to the entrance and an elegant-looking gentleman descend.

One moment passed, then the door opened and the stranger entered.

Tall and exquisitely proportioned, with an air at once distingue and easy, handsome features and large dark eyes, hair and full beard a rich brown, in which blended a few gray threads. This was the picture of the one who paused a moment near the threshhold to survey the little group of ladies.

Then, as Ethel advanced a few steps to meet him, he exclaimed:

"My darling daughter, I am rejoiced to see you!" at the same time folding her to his bosom in a joyful embrace.

Holding her away from him at length, for another look at her beautiful face, he added:

"My child, you are the perfect image of your mother, and to my partial eyes she was the most beautiful woman I have ever seen."

These words were spoken in so low a tone that the ladies present had not caught their meaning, and murmuring in return that she must introduce him to the waiting Duchess, he allowed her to lead him forward while she presented him as "my father."

Drawing close to her grace, on being thus introduced, he turned a half-quizzical look upon her, which caused her to spring up instantly as she met it, exclaiming;

"Edward! Can this be my son Edward?"

"My own, dear mother! then you do know me after all these years?" was the answer, as he held forth his arms to embrace her.

Amazed at this unlooked-for revelation, Ethel and Lady Claire clasped hands in mutual sympathy, and looked on in silent wonder.

After this fond greeting, the Duke turned and saluted his sister's child, whom he had never seen, after which he took Ethel's hand, and leading her to his mother, said:

"Now, dearest mother, let me ask for a share of your love to be given to my daughter, Lady Ethel Worthington, for in her you see your own granddaughter."

"Edward, this is a surprise, indeed," returned her grace, as she pressed the sweet girl to her bosom and kissed her bright, young brow. "Ethel has already won our affections during her brief residence here, without knowing that she could lawfully claim them. But now, please, tell your mother who you married, and why you kept your marriage so long a secret?"

"Before answering your question, my dear mother, we will proceed to open the package left in Ethel's charge."

Taking the small bundle of what seemed papers and letters from his daughter's hand, the Duke cut the strings and drew forth the contents.

The first thing to meet the eye was a marriage certificate, setting forth that on October 18, 18—, just twenty-two years before, in New York City, Edward Worthington, only son of Charles, tenth Duke of Westmoreland, was united in marriage to Florence Nevergail, daughter of the late John Nevergail, of London, by Rev. Henry Morris, D. D.

Next came to view a magnificent circle diamond ring which he had given to her at the time of their engagement, and a plain gold band, containing their joint initials and the date of their marriage.

The last was his wife's wedding ring.

Then appeared a small locket, set with diamonds, containing the likenesses of both; and as he threw the gold chain to which it was attached over Ethel's neck he bade her wear it hereafter, "for the sake of her parents."

As the Duchess and Lady Claire looked at the beautiful face of Ethel's poor, young mother, they were each struck with the likeness she bore to the picture, and thought she might almost have been its original.

"Now, my dear mother and daughter, I will tell you why I have so long concealed the fact of my marriage.

"You, mother, can scarcely blame me when you remember the set and stern disposition my father ever possessed. His will was law, his rule a rod of iron, and a child daring to disobey him was sure to be punished with the utmost severity.

"When I was only a stripling of nineteen years, I had accompanied my father to a fox hunt, and after the chase was over, on our return ride he commenced talking about my being heir to his title and wealth, and about the intense desire he had that when I married I should select a wife from a certain number of ladies belonging to the nobility.

"'I remember that,' I replied. 'But, father, perhaps I could not love either of the persons named. Surely you would not wish me to marry without my heart's affection being enlisted?'

"'I surely do not expect love to have a single consideration. Wealth, title and beauty are all that is requisite.'

"'Father,' I replied, 'I have always expected to love some sweet young girl, and on that account solely to marry her.'

"'Then your expectations will meet a sudden and grievous disappointment,' was the stern reply.

"Wheeling his horse so that he faced me in the road, he extended his right hand towards heaven, and then and there took the solemn oath.

"The words were so seared into my heart by my astonishment that I could never forget a single one of them:

"'Once for all, Edward, hear me and mark what I say: I solemnly call on God to witness that never will I consent to your wedding any person not in your own rank in life! Never, boy; remember that. Never.

"'This vow is now recorded above, and I shall never break it. See that you never ask it of me.'

"From that hour matrimony and ladies lost all charms for me. I, as you know, mingled little in society, and found my chief amusement in study, hunting and traveling. When about twenty-six years old I went to America, and while in New York I accidentally met Gertrude Nevergail, who was the daughter of Sir Geoffrey Glendenning, our neighbor at the Hall. She, in making what they considered a plebeian marriage, had been cast off and disowned by her proud father and all her friends and relatives.

"With her husband and his young orphan sister, Florence Nevergail, they had left England; and Nevergail soon became a talented lawyer, respected, and received into the best society in New York City.

"It was then, at their house, I first met and passionately loved my beautiful Florence. Infatuated to the wildest degree with this young lady, I could not leave the place, and before many weeks passed I discovered that she reciprocated my warm devotion.

"When she did confess her feelings, I saw at once that asking for the consent of my father would be useless, so I urged a private marriage. To this she consented, if I could gain the approbation of her brother and his wife.

"In remembrance of their own happy life, brought about by a marriage solely for love, their consent was soon given, and in their presence we were united.

"I took my darling then to the —— Hotel, one of the finest in the city, where I engaged a suite of apartments, and dropping my title, I lived with her the happiest year of my life, under the simple name of Edward Worthington.

"But, alas! our joy was but for a brief period, for when our little girl was only three weeks old, she left me for a brighter world—a never-fading heritage on high.

"After her death I was inconsolable. Life for me was aimless; so I cared not what became of me. Then Mrs. Nevergail came with her sisterly advice and consolations, and in her pious efforts I again regained my outward composure.

"Outward, I say, for within my heart remained that horrible, overwhelming, wild, and utter desolation.

"Mrs. Nevergail, with the consent of her good husband, then offered to take charge of my infant child, saying that perhaps at present I might not desire to announce my marriage, or her existence, to my proud and stern father.

"After giving the matter consideration, I consented to their plan, and made up this package at that time, to be kept until this birthday. I charged them to keep my secret sacredly, and to give my little one their own name (her mother had already named her Ethel), and bring her up in every respect as they would had she been actually their own.

"I informed them that on this birthday she might be told this story, but until I reclaimed her I desired her to remain with them. If at this date my father still lived, I should settle upon her a suitable allowance, and perhaps visit her occasionally in New York without his knowledge.

"One year ago he died, and I at once wrote to Mrs. Nevergail the fact, and told her that I had now inherited the dukedom, and should consider myself free to recall my child.

"She instantly answered to the address I had given her, communicating the fact that she was a widow, very near her end, and begged me to leave Ethel with her until she should pass away, or until, at any rate, the fifth of October. She told me she should sail for England very soon, taking Ethel with her, and said that I could hear of her at the residence of her cousin, Mr. Rogers, at any time. I called there last week, as directed, only to hear of my kind friend's death, and the astounding news that my sweet daughter was even then an inmate of Castle Cairn.

"Gladly I repaired hither, to meet at once daughter, mother, and niece. May we never more be parted!"

"Amen, say I to that!" ejaculated the happy Duchess. "I have been lonely, indeed, without my son. Now I am old and need a son's care and attention."

"Which care, rest assured, shall always be yours," again repeated the Duke, as he stooped and pressed a warm kiss upon her still handsome cheeks.

When in the morning Dr. Glendenning called and was told the news, that the poor governess was no other than Lady Ethel Worthington, acknowledged daughter of the Duke of Westmoreland, his heart sank within him, and he could only whisper in trembling tones:

"Will this noble relationship cause you to regret our engagement? Oh, Ethel, Ethel, will this part us?"

"Never!" was the glad reply. "My father knows too well the value of a true love, and he surely will not refuse his consent to our union. If he does, I am of age, and have promised that nothing shall stand in the way of our marriage."

Nothing did separate them.

The Duke was much pleased with Dr. Glendenning's manly demeanor, and when he timidly asked for his daughter's hand he smiled brightly and gave his consent.

So Lady Ethel Worthington married Dr. Earle Elfenstein Glendenning, amid great rejoicings and vast displays of wealth, beauty and fashion, after which the "bonnie" bride was welcomed gladly to the remodeled and greatly improved Hall, a place that still bore so strange a history.

Sir Fitzroy lived nearly two years after the marriage of his son, and these years were unclouded by a single sorrow.

He loved his children fondly, and was greatly beloved by them in return.

He died at last quite suddenly, and was laid to rest beside his brother Arthur in the family vault.

Sir Earle Elfenstein Glendenning, M. D., and his beautiful wife, Lady Ethel, were ever regarded with true affection by all their neighbors and tenants; and when, at last, the Duke, after his mother's death, did, in his loneliness, love and wed a second time, a lady of rank, the Countess Teresa Lovell, they found in the new Duchess a rare addition to their circle of dear ones, and the most happy intercourse ever existed between the two families.

But a few more words remain to be said; and those relate to persons whose names have been mentioned in the course of this story.

Lady Claire Linwood developed rapidly, and a few years saw her a lovely woman, whose beauty, amiability and wealth attracted much attention and many suitors. She married early one who had gained her whole heart, Lord George Ashton, and they now reside in London, a devoted and happy couple.

Poor Constance Glendenning, in losing husband, title and wealth, became a melancholy invalid. The fate of her former lover, whom she dearly loved, was so impressed upon her heart and imagination that after she heard it in its hideousness the very name of her husband in her presence brought on nervous tremblings to such an extent that the subject had to be banished entirely from her hearing.

The real facts of the case were that all the first warm love of her heart had belonged to Sir Arthur, but when assured that he was dead, she had allowed ambition to rule her movements, and for the sake of position had given her hand to Reginald, a person she both dreaded and disliked.

Bitterly, however, had she regretted the unwise step, for he had proved an unkind, morose and ugly companion, and under his influence she had allowed her whole nature to change from gentle sweetness to cold, apathetic heartlessness, as well as selfish indifference.

The horrible exposure of her husband's sin produced at length another revulsion of feeling, and with deep remorse her heart returned to her early love, clinging ever to his memory, only to shed tears over his sorrowful fate and devotion to herself, tears of unavailing regret.

So she had lived and so at last she died. Just two years after she left the Hall she breathed her sad life away, and her last words were:

"Arthur, Arthur, my only love, I come to thee now, nevermore to be parted."

[THE END.]

THE following are some of the large salaries paid in New York: Chauncey M. Depew, President of the New York Central, $75,000; R. A. McCurdy, President of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, $60,000; H. B. Hyde, President of the Equitable, $60,000; W. H. Beers, President of the New York Life, $60,000; Frederic P. Olcott, President of the Central Trust Company, $60,000; John A. Stewart, President of the United States Trust Company, $50,000; Richard King, President of the Union Trust Company, $50,000; J. W. Alexander, Vice-President of the Equitable, $45,000.

THE Chicago Tribune thinks we don't want Canada for the following reasons: "The population of Canada has ceased to grow. There is more debt and more taxation every year, but no more people. The Dominion debt to-day is quite $290,000,000, and Sir John thinks nothing of adding ten or a dozen millions every year. His ordinary expenses for federal purposes reach $40,000,000 and his revenues about $30,000,000, and thus the net debt per individual has gone merrily on until every man, woman and child in the Dominion stands to-day accountable to the country's creditors for over $50."

Willie—You bet! I'm going to be an Artic explorer.

"An Artic explorer's life is full of hardships, Willie."

"Yes'm. But I can stand 'em, I reckon."

"I like your spirit, my boy. There is a great deal of glory to be gained in a career of that kind."

"Yes'm. And you don't never have to wash your face."

"Prisoner," said the Judge, "it is my duty to say that I approve of the verdict the jury has rendered. The crime you committed was one of unusual atrocity. With murder in your cowardly, treacherous heart, you stole up behind your victim and stabbed him in the back. You gave him no chance to defend himself. It was the act of an assassin. You have shown that you have an abandoned, malignant heart, destitute of any redeeming qualities whatever. You are capable of any crime."

"That isn't fair, Judge," protested the Arizona cowboy, an indignant flush dyeing his bronzed cheek. "I never stole a horse."

Conclusive Proof.

Office boy—There was a man in to see you to-day.

Neverpay—Who was he?

Office boy—I don't know, sir.

Neverpay—Well, say, Johnny, do you think he was anybody I owe?

Office boy—Oh, no, sir; he's never been here before.

A Slight Mistake.

A fond father, blessed with eleven children and a very domestic man, tells this story:

One afternoon, business being very dull, he took the early train back to his happy home, and after a time slipped upstairs to help put the children to bed. Being missed soon, his wife went up to see what was going on. Upon opening the nursery door she exclaimed:

"Why, dear, what in the world are you doing?"

"Why, wifey," said he, "I am putting the children to bed and hearing them say their little prayers."

"Yes," said wifey, "but this is one of our neighbor's children, all undressed!"

And he had to redress it and send it home.—London Moonshine.

He Oiled His Own Watch.

A prosperous farmer recently entered a jewelry store in Bay City, Mich., and asked if the repairs on his watch, which he had left there a short time before, were completed. The proprietor said the watch was ready and delivered it with the remark: "Next time don't use quite so much kerosene." The man looked surprised and embarrassed, but managed to say: "I guess I won't oil it any more at all. It costs too much." He paid his bill and departed. After he had gone a reporter asked if the man had actually put kerosene oil into his watch. "Certainly he did," said the jeweler, "and he is not the only one who does it. We have cases of a similar kind every few weeks, and people who one would think know better are generally the ones who commit such folly. I suppose a little kerosene would not do a watch much harm, but when it is poured in something happens and we are called upon to remedy the difficulty. I suppose I should not complain, for it is a good thing for us, but it is strange how foolish some people are."

Miss Alice Palmer, state organizer of the W. C. T. U., will give a free lecture in the M. E. church, Tuesday evening, April 14. Mis Palmer is a pleasing speaker and all should hear her.

The indications are that that the radicals will compel the commencing of another injunction suit at Corunna, on account of their arbitrary acts in regard to the Sunday school at that place.

The Woman's Branch Missionary Society for this conference will convene in the U. B. church, April 15 and 16. Mrs. Sage, the returned missionary from Africa, will be present and address the meetings.

Charley Rease, whose home was with his uncle, Rev. H. C. Smith, during his pastorate of the M. E. church here for two years, is now here visiting his numerous friends. He is a law student in the law college, at Indianapolis.

Cyrus Bowman and hired girl, of Smithfield, took a taste of poke root last Sunday, which he had dug for some stock, and the result was quite a severe case of poisoning However, they soon recovered after calling a physician from this place.

Rev. Mr. Everett, of Butler, preached a good sermon in the U. B. church here last Sunday morning, after which, Rev. S. P. Klotz received twelve persons into church fellowship. They were about as fine a lot of young people as is generally found and will help to build up the U. B. church in this place.

Brother L., in his published report of the revival meeting, he utterly ignores the valuable aid rendered by Rev. Mr. Wilmoth—not even so much as mentioning his name in connection with the same. However, many who heard him, think Brother W., is entitled to his full share of the credit in said meeting.

Monday morning the sun came out bright and a lovely rainbow in the west was visible. Some time afterwards a part of a rainbow could be seen towards the north. Easter Sunday was a lovely day, and in the churches generally, the worshipers were singing "Christ is Risen." The lovely morning following and the rainbows so beautiful seemed like a glory over our risen Lord, and a fitting end to the happy time. Soon a change came bringing clouds and rain, and a cheerless look generally.

BUTLER.

Gabriel Miller is reported quite sick.

A number of new dwellings are under way.

Last week was quite dull in town owing to the roads.

Mr. Plum, of this place, has secured a moderate pension.

E P. Masters is confined to his home with an attack of rheumatism.

Father Revett has improved and says that he is not going to die until the roads are good.

Rev. Wilkinson father of Mel. Wilkinson is visiting his son prior to his departure to conference.

Gus. Wolf has returned from the east and is filling his little store room to overflowing with salable goods.

Geo. Palmerton has sold the house he bought a few months ago and is erecting a new one in the same addition.

Geo. Handy has bought Mr. D. Sewell's residence on West Depot street and Mr. Sewell is building on the same street.

A number of the Butler Lodge I. O. O. F. are arranging matters to attend the institution of a lodge at St Joe April 1.

Foster Jadwin, of Orland, visited his Butler friends last week. He expects to enter into some employment in this vicinity this summer.

Preparations are being made for the coming corporation election. Elections are no longer very tame affairs but are attended with much expense and preparation.

An eastern horse buyer got into a racket at Egerton and run his horses over here where they have been attached. We understand a reward of $500 is offered for his apprehension.

The sick list has materially increased. Among those seriously sick are Mrs. Glenner, Mrs. Sophia Bowman, Mrs. Baily, Mrs. Bruce, Mother Headley, Mother Revett besides several others.

Butler's 10-year bug bear removal of the Wabash shops seems to have got an effectual quietus at last and all hopes of her sister cities carrying off her property seems to be at an end. We can now lie down at night with a reasonable assurance of not finding our real estate cut in two before morning and one half landed in Auburn or Montpelier.

UNION CHAPEL.

John Brown has moved into the house with his mother, Aunt Mary Brown.

William Healy from near Butler moved into Geo. Reed's vacant house.

Samuel Morr and wife were the guests of Jacob Grim and family last Sunday.

The Sanctified people are holding a series of meetings at Green Lahnum's.

It is rumored that there will be a quiet wedding on the east side before long.

John Hoffman from near Pleasant Lake, was the guest of Geo. Reed last week.

F. J. Yesbera and Lewis Esselburn are making big improvements on their marsh lands.

Samuel Morr, from near Wooster, Ohio, was visiting with friends in this neighborhood last Friday and Saturday.

Mr. Samuel Brown was pleasantly surprised last Monday. His friends gathered in to remind him of his forty-second year of life. Many were the presents given in token of love and esteem. When dinner was announced forty-nine seated themselves around the table where they partook of a bountiful repast. It was a day which to Mr. Brown will long be remembered—a day when the bonds of friendship were woven tighter, and also a day that marked the expiration of one more year of life. How sad it seems that the friends who met there last Monday will never meet again as they met on that day. When Mr. Brown addressed his friends he said: "Friends:—To-day you have met with me, and we have enjoyed ourselves; this day has not hung heavy on us, but has fled so swiftly that none have scarcely marked its departure. So it is through life; we speed on and when life is almost finished, we look back and compare it to the rising and setting sun. Friends I thank you for remembering me and in years to come may we all remember this day and regret its departure. And may it help to bind us in a closer friendship, is my prayer. God bless you all."

UNION CHAPEL.
LAST WEEK.

As bad as the roads are it is nothing to see people moving.

The Liberals are going to hold protracted meeting at Union.

Rev. J. J. Fred is still carrying on meeting at Norris Chapel.

John Carper is making preparation to build a fine house this summer.

F. Wingard from the west side, and M Overs of the east side, are on the road with their butter and egg wagons.

Hay is very scarce, and some of the farmers are talking of making sales in order to dispose of their live stock.

Sheriff Plum was on our streets one day last week giving the boys a call to come before Tammany Hall and they went.

Silas Franks our lumber man, does not stop for bad roads but keeps his teams busy getting in logs. Silas is a hustler.

We learn that Jonas Howey has been granted a patent on an improved crosscut saw. We are glad that Jonas has made a success of his work.

Wm. Watson, J. M. Shelby and C. R. Grimm were off to Silver Lake, last week duck shooting. They succeeded in bagging four brace of mallards.

Rudolph Welch whom many will remember and who formerly lived in this neighborhood but now a prominent lawyer of Topeka, Kansas, visited in this vicinity.

Mrs. G. D. McGowan met with quite a surprise last Friday. Her many friends came in to celebrate with her, her 6th birthday. It was an enjoyable time, and long to be remembered.

Democratic majority, 234,847.

In the light of these facts how absurd is the claim made by republicans that the republican party put down the rebellion. If the party furnishing the greatest number of loyal men in the late war is to be given the credit of preserving the union, that honor belongs to the democratic party, for 234,847 more democrats than republicans responded to Lincoln's call for volunteer troops. The Ohio Boundary.

This question seems to puzzle some of our exchanges and even some of our people. But there is not much in it. Who believes that this line varies twelve miles in coming up from the Ohio river? It may vary a little, a thing that often happens, but it will not be changed. It has been established nearly ninety years and it would create too much confusion to disturb it now. The best article we have seen on this question, appears in the Hicksville News, and is from the pen of Hon. A. P. Edgerton. He gives quite a historical sketch of the boundary line and treats the questions involved in an able manner. He sees no danger of disturbing the established line.

A Fatal Mistake.

Physicians make no more fatal mistake than when they inform patients that nervous heart troubles come from the stomach, and are of little consequence. Dr. Franklin Miles, the noted Indiana specialist, has proven the contrary, in his new book on "Heart Disease," which may be had free at F. E Davenport's, who guarantees and recommends Dr. Miles' unequaled New Heart Cure, which has the largest sale of any heart remedy in the world. It cures nervous and organic heart disease, short breath, fluttering, pain or tenderness in the side, arm or shoulders, irregular pulse, fainting, smothering, dropsy, etc. His restorative nervine cures headache, fits, etc. 5

A Boston woman was last week granted a patent on a stocking supporter which an expert says will support a Boston woman by royalty for a good many years.

A Wonder Worker.

Mr. Frank Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be consumption and incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds and at that time was not able to walk across the street without resting. He found before he had used half of a dollar bottle, that he was much better; he continued to use it and is to-day enjoying good health. If you have any throat, lung or chest trouble try it. We guarantee satisfaction. Trial bottle free at Robbins & McCord's 5

"Eve," said Adam, a few minutes after he had eaten the apple. "Yes, Addie?" "I believe we are going to have trouble in our midst."

Electric Bitters.

This remedy is becoming so well known and so popular as to need no special mention. All who have used Electric Bitters sing the same song of praise.—A purer medicine does not exist and it is guaranteed to do all that is claimed. Electric Bitters will cure all diseases of the Liver and Kidneys, will remove Pimples, Boils. Salt Rheum and other affections caused by impure blood.—Will drive Malaria from the system and prevent as well as cure all Malarial fevers.—For cure of Headache, Constipation and Indigestion try Electric Bitters—Entire satisfaction guaranteed, or money refunded.—Price 50cts. and $1.00 per bottle at Robbins & McCord's Drugstore. 5

A girl in Springfield, O, legally changed her name twice within twelve hours—first by adoption and then by marriage. Having three names in one day beats Chicago's best record.

How to Succeed.

This is the great problem of life which few satisfactorily solve. Some fail because of poor health, others want of luck, but the majority from deficient grit—want of nerve. They are nervous, irresolute, changeable, easily get the blues and "take the spirits down to keep the spirits up," thus wasting money, time, opportunity and nerve force. There is nothing like the Restorative Nervine, discovered by the great specialist, Dr. Miles, to cure all nervous diseases, as headache, the blues, nervous prostration, sleeplessness, neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, fits, and hysteria. Trial bottles and fine book of testimonials free at F. E. Davenport. 5

"Is 'bursted' good English?" queries a Tribune correspondent. No. Nor good American either. Bust is the word.

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

1846.

Daniel Hartsuck was a law student with Judge Morris in his office with the clerk which office stood on the southwest corner of the Court House ground. The little old building with its overhanging front, stands on Jackson street and is occupied as a tailor shop by our genial, old-time acquaintance and friend George W. Stahl. Mr. Stahl has been a familiar figure upon our streets for more than thirty-five years and while very few remember the "Emporium of Fashion," where in halcyon days of early manhood he manipulated the shears and goose and took the measure of his customers, yet no one long a resident of town, but has at least a passing acquaintance with him, whose hearty laugh all knew and found contagious.

In 1845 the Timothy R. Dickinson with his family became residents of Auburn. Mr. Dickinson preceded Mr. Eldridge in ownership of the property upon which the latter is now living. The house was built flush with the sidewalk or where a sidewalk now is, and an office stood, in the '60's, adjoining the home on the north.

Mr. Dickinson was in build tall and guant, quiet and reserved in manner, and ranked high among the members of the bar of DeKalb county.

He came from Portage county, Ohio, and on motion of J. M. Morris was Nov. 1, 1847 admitted to the bar of DeKalb county court and was the only one so far as we can learn who advertised his business. His advertisement as attorney at law and solicitor in chancery, may yet be seen in the newspapers of Lagrange and Steuben counties in those days when DeKalb was mostly forest, broken by clearings, and Auburn had not sufficient incentive to lure a printer to locate here.

Mr. Dickinson together with other leading citizens of Auburn was attracted to remove to Waterloo as that village prospered and grew and there he lived to enjoy the respect of the community and to practice his profession till summoned away by the grim Messenger, who has populated our grave yards and every little while rapaciously calls another and another pioneer and settler away, till few remain.

Messrs Mott, Dickinson and Morris won honorable names in their practice, deservedly succeeded well, and of the three, Judge Morris still hale and hearty alone survives; still pleads with forensic ability at the bar and bids fair to lead in his chosen profession for years to come.

In the spring of 1846, far removed from the excitement incident to the acquisition of Texas and the consequent breaking out of hostilities along the Rio Grande River, Auburn had little of moment to break the dull monotony. Few papers were received and letters sometimes not prepaid cost so much that correspondence was limited and domestic cares and mutual society occupied the time.

At the court house, the county business was methodically done and time not needed then was put to good use as heretofore said, at home. The job of assessing the county was done by W. P. Means, at a cost to the people of $110.66. The sum paid him was less than is now charged for assessing a townless township but people thought little of foot travel then, and his annual visits to the settler's homes treading forest paths were more satisfactory probably to him than are those paid by modern assessors in less and more populous areas.

The job of building an office for the auditor on the northwest corner of the public square was let, and in the fall, S. W. Ralston resigned his office as county agent after filing a report of his sales but was retained as keeper of the pound on the court house grounds.

In December of 1846, Charles Probst was appointed county surveyor for a term of three years but it seems left no record of his work in the official papers and books of the county.

Wesley Park was allowed $29,50 for 29½ months rent for room for treasurer's office. One dollar a month for office rent though a very moderate charge is suggestive of the early beginning of construction fees now grown enormous and against which popular opinion has been so decidedly outspoken.

For a library belonging to the county, O. C. Houghton was directed to make a bookcase of plain suitable material and in this library were many volumes of most excellent reading. What has become of that library and of the McClure library whose shelves in what is now the sheriff's office were well filled with works on science, travel, history and miscellaneous topics?

Receipts from all sources from taxation were less than the first installment of taxes this spring for 1890 paid by the Lake Shore railroad on its property in the county; and the delinquent list was of enormous dimensions. Thirty-nine discriptions were advertised for sale in Butler township alone and the aggregate of the county was over 450.

In default of printing press in DeKalb County, Miles Waterman, county auditor in 1846, caused the delinquent list to be published by Messrs Bennet & Owen, proprietors of the LaGrange County Democrat printed at Lima, LaGrange county. The first number of this paper was issued Nov. 4, 1845 and the 53d number contains, save a few advertisements, nothing but the delinquent tax lists of Noble and DeKalb counties.

A Pioneer Gone.

John Surfus, one of the best known of the early settlers of the region along the south side of DeKalb and north side of Allen counties, died at his home on the Allen county side of the line, March 31, 1891. He was born in Warren county Ohio, Oct. 7, 1812, and his age was therefore 78 years, 5 months and 24 days. He was married to Ellen DeLong, June 29, 1843, in the then little town of Ft. Wayne. He had already prepared a home and they moved to it at once, and began housekeeping, on the farm where they have lived ever since. To them were born 12 children, 9 of whom, and his aged and honored wife, survive him.

They had been married 48 years and 10 months. Mr. Surfus was always a careful business man, though always liberal. He early accumulated a competency, and was owner of several fine farms in both counties, though his home was in Perry township in Allen county. He was always a prominent man in his neighborhood and was held in high esteem by all who knew him. Among the children now living, is Mrs. Wm. Murphy of this place. The family have many other relatives about here, Mrs. Fair, and Mrs. Perry Fitch being sisters to Mrs. Surfus. The funeral was largely attended and was held at Cedar Chapel in Butler township, Thursday April 2, the interment being in the cemetery there. Rev. Zartman, of Ft. Wayne, conducted the services. Thus passed from earth another of those pioneers to whom northern Indiana owes so much.

In Memory of Mrs. Lida Furnish.

In memory of one who in our hearts enshrined.
Shall ever live the inspiration to a noble life,
Until like her we yield our spirits up.
And pass beyond these scenes of toil and strife.

To speak in loving tones of the absent friend is a privilege the heart holds dear, and the flow of words like the flow of tears, relieves the human soul sur-charged with grief which else would brood in melancholy.

The Woman's H. and F. missionary society of Spencerville Indiana would thus express in fitting words and add our loving tribute to the memory of our friend and sister, Mrs. Lida Furnish, whom God in his providence has taken out of this life and from our sisterhood in which she has been an active zealous and efficient worker for years, therefor be it,

RESOLVED: That in this dispensation we recognize the hand and meekly bow to the will of Him, who doeth all things well.

RESOLVED: That although the society has lost the glad cheer and inspiration which her presence never failed to give, our memory of her will serve to rouse our flagging energies and stimulate us to renewed endeavor in the interests of the cause she loved so well in the hope that by emulating her virtues we may be sharers in her reward.

RESOLVED: That we extend our most kindly sympathy to the bereaved ones of the family and home out of which she has been called. Trusting that He who tempers the wind to to the shorn lambs will be to them, a God, a Father and a Friend.

Obituary.

William Weygandt was born in Stark county Ohio, August 23, 1833; and died at his home in Butler township, March 30, 1891. He was married at Bolivar, O., Oct. 22, 1857 to Miss Albertine Draime, at the age of 24. He removed to Decatur, Ill., in April 1865, and in the fall of the same year he removed to DeKalb county, Ind. He united with the M. P. church in 1875, and lived a consistent christian life since. He died in the triumph of the living faith, saying to his beloved companion as the spark of life went out, "I am going home, Jesus is very near." He was a devoted husband and kind father and had the respect of all. He was laid to rest at Cedar Chapel April 1, the funeral services being conducted by Rev. W. L. Meese.

WHAT IS SAPOLIO?

It is a solid handsome cake of scouring soap which has no equal for all cleaning purposes except in the laundry. To use it is to value it...

What will SAPOLIO do? Why it will clean paint, make oil-cloths bright, and give the floors, tables and shelves a new appearance. It will take the grease off the dishes and off the pots and pans. You can scour the knives and forks with it, and make the tin things shine brightly. The wash-basin, the bath-tub, even the greasy kitchen sink will be as clean as a new pin if you use SAPOLIO. One cake will prove all we say. Be a clever housekeeper and try it.

Indiana Indians.

Those who attended the great democratic barbecue at Peru in the fall of 1884, will remember the delegation of democratic Miami Indians, who were in the vast procession. The following clipping in regard to them, is from a recent letter from Peru, Miami county, to the Indianapolis Sentinel:

"At the convention which renominated Martin for congress—what is a usual occurrence in Miami county politics was a novelty to strangers—an Indian delegate. There are over three hundred Indians still residing in this county—a remnant of the Miami tribe. They remained on the Mississinewa river, the finest bottom land in the county. They own about twenty sections yet, many having sold out and gone to rejoin the the tribe in the northeast corner of Indian territory. One of the richest farmers in the county is Chief Godfrey, who lives on 200 acres at the fork of the Mississinewa and the Wabash. It is all bottom land, and the drouth has not affected his corn. Beside this homestead he owns several other large farms, which he rents out to the "common whites," and his sons have also been provided for. A fine gravel road runs through this Indian country on the river bank. Chief Godfrey's house being only two miles from Peru he lives more like a gentleman farmer than a granger. He can be seen every morning and evening driving to Peru for the morning and evening papers. He dresses in style wearing a fine silk hat and patent leather shoes. A few years ago these Indians received a large sum of money from this government, about $800 per capita. Chief Godfrey was appointed guardian for the minors, and to-day thousands of dollars are entrusted to his care. The care of this money and the supervision of his farm keep him busy. He lives in a large brick house with all modern conviences, a wind pump forcing water into the house. His set of farming implements is complete from the sulky plow to the traction engine and steam thrasher. Chief Godfrey's Indian nature reasserts itself every fall when he takes a two months' hunt for bear and deer in the wild west. On his farm he has deer and a cage of bears, besides a number of coons, foxes, and other wild animals with a number of strange fowls, making a minature 'zoo. All these animals were caught by the chief on his big hunts.

Mrs. Chief Godfrey is a piece of the late Gen. John A. Logan. Her father, she claims, was a brother of the famous volunteer general. Her parents separated when he was quite young. Her father was last heard of in Tennesee during the war. She was reared by an aunt, a sister of Logan, who now lives in Fulton county, twelve miles from Rochester. Her grandfather, Gen. Logan's father, she says was ignorant and could not read. All of Gen. Logan's relatives were illiterate, which led to his ignoring them all.

There are no pure bloods in these Miami Indians, and their Indian traditions and beliefs have been lost except to a few of the old men who still adhere to ancient customs. They are nearly all baptists and have a church of their own with two Indian baptist ministers. They are now full citizens and they are assessed and vote the democratic ticket. Occasionally they have a "medicine dance" and an ox roast. They are all fond of hunting and fishing and most of them are well-to-do. The few that lost their farm through mortgages like the white men have gone to Indian Territory where land is held in common, each Indian cultivating as much as he can.

There is due these Indians $120,000 by the government, which Senator Voorhees and Representative Martin will get appropriated during this congress. It has been claimed that if the Indian was civilized and better housed up he would increase, but the civilization of the Miami Indians does not confirm this theory. They are well fed, housed and civilized, yet with all the white blood in their veins there are only two or three families of six children. The civilized Indian does not increase more than the blanket Indian of the plains. No artificial means will prevent nature from carrying out the scheme of disintegration which has been working for untold years with this race.

War Prices in Dixie.

In the Memoirs of Jeff. Davis, are many items of interest as showing what their condition was.

"Sugar was $20 per pound; new bacon, $8; and chickens, $12 per pair. Soon we look for a money panic, when a few hundred millions of paper money is funded, and as many more collected by the tax collectors. Congress struck the speculators a hard blow. One man, eager to invest his money, gave $100,000 for a house and lot, and now he pays $5,000 tax on it; the interest is $6,000 more; total $11,000."

Of General Lee's surrender the following paragraph may be quoted, Vol. II., page 625:

"General Lee had succumbed to the inevitable. Some persons, with probably a desire to pay a weak tribute to Lee's kind heart, or to rob Grant of his claims to magnanimity, in the matter of the surrender, have said that General Lee had only surrendered to stop the effusion of blood. This is not true. He had no weaknesses where his plain duty was concerned. He surrendered to overwhelming force and insurmountable difficulties. In Grant's treatment of his prisoners, let him have all the credit that can attach to him."

THE TARIFF ON WOOL.

HOW M'KINLEY'S WOOL DUTIES WORK.

Higher Duties on Carpet Wool and Higher Prices for Carpets—What the Manufacturers Say—Why Fine Ohio Wools Are Lower—Manufacturers Becoming Free-Traders.

Mr. Arthur T. Lyman, of the Lowell Manufacturing Co., Boston, points out that the McKinley duty on carpet wool has caused an increase of 10 per cent. in the price of wool carpets "This advance," he says, "was owing purely to the McKinley wool duties, and no advance would have taken place if the bill had not been passed. If the duty on wool had been removed, the price of carpets would have been reduced."

In a private letter Mr. Lyman says: "As to the prices of carpets, we know the effect of the McKinley duties perfectly, because we practically fix the price of carpets for the trade, and we felt that we could hardly hold our old prices if the McKinley bill did not pass. It is an immense annoyance, but for the moment it helped us, because we had bought a big stock of wool before it passed." Mr. Lyman also calls attention to the fact that practically all the carpet wool used in this country is imported, our sheep growers not finding it profitable to produce carpet wool worth from 10 to 15 cents a pound, while they can grow better goods suitable for clothing and worth from 18 to 34 cents.

"At one of the hearings in Washington on the wool duties," says Mr. Lyman, "Col. Shepard, of Texas, is reported to have said that he knew very well that the shepherd kings of Ohio wished to have Texas and the Territories raise carpet wool, so that they should not interfere with Ohio fine wool, but that for himself, he would guarrantee not to raise carpet wools, knowing, of course, that they would not pay.

McKinley raised the duty on carpet wools, "and that," said he, "has necessitated an increase of the duty on carpets themselves." Accordingly carpet duties were raised from equivalent ad valorum duties of 40 to 60 per cent. to duties reaching from 50 to 85 per cent. But even the old duties, as Mr. Lyman points out, practically excluded carpets; yet this exclusion, he says, has not made them as cheap as in Europe, "in spite of the excessive competition at home which has made the business unprofitable."

The only thing that stands in the way of making carpets much cheaper is the senseless duty on carpet wools. These duties are 32 per cent. on the cheaper wools and 50 per cent. on the higher grades.

As we do not raise carpet wool, the only reason why the Ohio political shepherds wanted a higher duty on it was to prevent the American people from making their clothing out of it; and, as shown above, to force Texas and the Territories to raise it and thus withdraw them from competition with Ohio in clothing wools. In this way it was hoped by the Ohio clique that the higher duties on clothing wools and on carpet wools would have the effect of raising the price of the Ohio product. Such, however, has not been the result. On the contrary, the clothing wools of Ohio and Michigan are lower in price than usual, and the tendency among the manufacturers is to use more largely the high-priced Australian wools, despite the increased McKinley duties.

Why is this? The American Wool Reporter supplies the very simple answer. It says: "Manufacturers have found that by buying Australian wool even at 42 or 42½c per pound, and mixing it with territory, Texas or California they can attain better results and at a cheaper cost than by buying Ohio xx wool even at 33 or 33½c. This also accounts for the fact that territory wools have been so unusually well cleaned up this year. Manufacturers have neglected domestic fleeces, and if the present state of things continues it will not be long before dealers in Ohio wools in Eastern markets will be few and far between. With the increased duty on woolen goods, manufacturers can make a finer grade of goods without coming in competition with those of foreign manufacture, and it is quite likely, as things look now, that Australian wool will be more and more in demand as the time goes on. The manufacturer prefers Australian wool even at the advanced cost. Why? Because it is put up better; it is cleaner; it shrinks less; there is less waste and there are fewer tags in it than in domestic fleece. It does not contain so many tarred ends, so many pounds of strings, and so much burry stuff as Ohio and Michigan fleeces."

The Reporter warns the Ohio and Michigan growers that they must improve the condition of their wool and not depend solely upon the tariff to insure higher prices. "A high tariff alone," it says, "will never bring domestic fleeces into favor and increase the demand therefor. The domestic growers are realizing this through experience. If domestic wool, which comes in competition with foreign, is to sell, there must be an improvement in the present methods of producing and preparing it for market."

A correspondent of the same journal, who is evidently a manufacturer, explains the matter more in detail. He says:

"In order to produce goods at the lowest cost, it is necessary to obtain a maximum of production, as the greater the number of yards turned off the lower the cost of production per yard. It is the aim, therefore, of the average manufacturer to make as nearly as possible one line of goods, and his purchases of wools are with the view of getting the quality, or 'leading sort,' required to make such goods. If Michigan or Ohio wools are purchased, and a strictly clear, fine sort is required, not more than half and frequently a smaller percentage of such sort is obtained from a fleece, and the undesirable qualities accumulate from month to month, until, alarmed at the quantity, the manufacturer makes other grades of goods to consume this accumulation, and dispose of them at a loss."

It is well known that the oppressive wool tariff is rapidly making free-traders of our most energetic and progressive manufacturers. Mr. Lyman, already quoted, says: "Probably more than 50,000,000 of the people of this country would be better off with free trade with all the world, such as is enjoyed with such immense advantage to all between the States of the Union."

A Costly Industry.

An industry which yields a profit on the money invested in it is a good thing to have in a community; but the desire to have industries established frequently becomes a craze. Beet sugar factories may be good things to have, but what an enormous cost to establish them under the present bounty system. The pioneer beet sugar factory in this country is the one at Grand Island, Neb. This factory can handle 350 tons of beets a day. Allowing 12 per cent. as the raw sugar product from beets, the daily yield at this factory would be 42 tons. As the State of Nebraska pays a bounty of 2 cents a pound, and the United States Government an equal bounty, the Grand Island establishment will collect from the public a tax of 4 cents a pound on all the raw sugar it turns out, at the same time that refined sugar is selling at 4½ cents a pound. In other words, besides getting the current market price for G sugar, the factory will net a bounty equal to more than the price of its raw material. The bounty to be paid to this establishment by the State of Nebraska and the United States Government will amount to $3,763 a day.

Of course industries can be established in this way at public expense. But does it pay? Is it a proper or wise use of the taxing power to employ it for the enrichment of a purely private enterprise? The people may pay too much for their whistle.

THE FOREIGN MARKET.

Why Our Manufacturers Sell So Little Abroad—Lack of Enterprise—Why Foreigners Beat Us.

While our manufacturers are in the habit of leaning upon the Government to protect them in the secure possession of the home market, it is evident that they exert themselves very little to obtain a market in foreign countries. The present interest in the subject of reciprocity with South America and the West Indies calls out frequent communications from American merchants doing business there, which show that our manufacturers are very remiss in pushing their trade in those markets and in studying the wants of the people there.

A correspondent writes from Kingston, Jamaica, as follows:

"Kingston merchants told me that as yet American manufacturers do not cater to the tastes of the islanders. For instance, a dealer showed me some Austrian shoes which were selling well. A few of American make which he had in stock had stayed there month in and month out. The Austrian shoes had very pointed toes, the sole being shaped like a flat-iron, but they were what the natives liked. The shoes from the States were much handsomer, better made, and superior in every way. But they were not the right shape, and were much higher in price. Cheapness is the great desideratum. Everything must be cheap and look well, no matter if it does not wear any time at all. The negroes would rather have a shoe with a paper sole that would not last torought the first rainstorm and pay a dollar for it than pay four for one they could not wear out in months."

Another writer tells, in the New York trade journal Hardware how British manufacturers accommodate themselves to the wants of the people for whom they make goods. "For all parts of the world," he says, "they manufacture goods with reference to the local demand, laying British preferences entirely aside. It would be difficult to buy a mackintosh in England similar to the great mass of those sent over for the market of the United States; every Chola woman in Eastern Peru wears a peculiar shawl knit in Manchester in exact imitation of the old cotton shawls which the Indians had for ages previously made with their own hands; and the trapiches, or sugar mills, for the Amazon Valley are designed after those formerly constructed by the natives out of the hardwoods of their forests."

Protection has operated to make our manufacturers dependent upon the home market and to make them ignore the foreign market. It has tended to make them lose confidence in themselves and to distrust their ability to meet the "pauper-made goods" of Europe in successful competition in the markets of South America and other countries. They need to regain the spirit of enterprise and conquer a foothold for themselves in foreign markets. They have the advantage of the cheapest and best labor in the world. There is thus no excuse for shutting down factories when the home market has been supplied, and standing idle till consumption overtakes production.

Bismarck on McKinleyism.

Somebody started the report, about the time when Congress adjourned, that McKinley was going to Europe this summer; and it was even stated that a visit to Bismarck was to be a part of his plan. It was evidently supposed that the two great tariff makers of America and Germany would find a bond of sympathy between them which would make such a visit highly agreeable to both, especially as the two are now retired to the rural shades of private life.

But whether McKinley would now enjoy a visit to Bismarck is very doubtful, as the latter has been expressing his opinions very freely concerning McKinleyism. To a correspondent of the New York World Bismarck said the other day: "I think that in passing the McKinley bill the Republicans made a mistake, politically as well as economically, which can never be repaired. The excesses which they have committed must result in favor of the Democrats. I myself am a protectionist. My opinion has always been that national labor must be protected. The adversaries of protection think that protection can only be for those who are not producers, but merely consumers.

"In passing the McKinley bill the industrial protectionists have gone too far. They went so far beyond the mark as to affect agricultural interests strongly and force them over to the opposite side. Such excesses affect the national consumers far more than the foreign importers. It is the task of the state to see that consumers obtain their right. The McKinley bill has hit some industrial branches of foreign nations hard, but on the whole it has not done so much injury as was at first feared."

Ostriches in California.

The first pair of ostriches ever brought to this country for breeding purposes was landed at New Orleans in 1883. Others followed, and an ostrich farm was started as an experiment in Louisian, but the climate proving uncongenial to the birds the stock was removed to southern California. Here several experiments were tried, and it was found that the climate of San Diego County was the best adapted to the raising of ostriches. Here the industry has flourished to such an extent that real-estate agents now include ostrich eggs in telling of the various "fruits" favored by the wonderful climate of San Diego County.

There are now in all about 125 birds in Southern California, yielding an annual crop of feathers to the value of $10,000 or more. Quite a demand has sprung up for "native" ostrich feathers. The secret societies of the Pacific coast, such as the Native Sons of the Golden State, the higher orders of the Masonic and Odd Fellows organizations, and other societies, pride themselves on wearing "native" ostrich plumes. Fans and other articles of ornamentation made from native ostrich tips, are quite a fad among the ladies of the Four Hundred of the Golden State. Nor is the demand limited to the ladies of the Pacific coast, for Mrs. Vanderbilt set the fad in New York by ordering a cloak made from California ostrich feathers.

The 125 ostriches in California may not be looked upon as constituting an industry of national importance; but they are not overlooked by the tariff makers. There is a duty of 10 per cent. on crude ostrich feathers, and 50 per cent. on feathers manufactured wholly or partly.

A Dead Give-Away.

Another high protectionist organ has given away the protectionists' case. This is the rabid Boston Journal, to which a correspondent sent the following question: "If the protective tariff on steel rails has, as Mr. Morrill, Mr. McKinley, and others say, caused a cheapening of the price of that commodity, why do they advocate a tariff on wheat and other farm products while professing to be the farmers' friend?" In answer to this question the Journal replies: "We do not know any protectionist authority who has ever claimed that it is the prime purpose of protection to cheapen products."

So, after all, the object of protection is not to cheapen commodities! Let us then have no more lying on that point!

WANT A HAT TRUST.

An Effort to Combine All the Wool Hat Manufacturers — McKinley's Duties on Hats.

A scheme has been on foot to combine all the wool hat makers in the country into a gigantic trust. Officers were elected, and for a time everything seemed to go well, but more recently there has been a hitch somewhere, and it is even announced that the trust has fallen through.

In the meantime let the people observe what McKinley did to make a hat trust possible. The McKinley duties on wool hats show a sharp increase upon the old rates. The duties in both the old law and in the present law are so-called compound duties—that is, there is a specific duty of so much per pound and an ad valorem duty in addition. Thus on hats valued at 30 cents a pound or less the old duty was 10 cents a pound and 25 per cent. ad valorem, the compound duty being equal to an ad valorem duty of 68 per cent. The corresponding McKinley duty is 16½ cents per pound and 30 per cent., the two duties here being equivalent to an ad valorem duty of 85 per cent.

Hats of the next class are those valued at more than 30 and not more than 40 cents a pound. The old duty on this grade was equivalent to 65 per cent. and the McKinley duty 90. The next grade of hats under the old law was that valued at between 40 and 60 cents a pound. The McKinley law makes this class stop at 50 cents and adds a class covering those between 50 and 60 cents per pound. Thus under the old law hats in the class between 40 and 50 bore an equivalent ad valorem duty of 71 per cent., and under the McKinley law the equivalent ad valorem is 101 per cent. On hats worth between 50 and 60 cents the equivalent in the old law was 68 per cent.; in the McKinley law it is 112 per cent.

The next class in both laws extends from 60 to 80 cents a pound—the ad valorem equivalent being 72 per cent., and the McKinley ad valorem 100 per cent. The last class in both laws covers hats valued at above 80 cents a pound. The old tariff levied a duty here which was equal to 69 per cent.; and McKinley made only a slight advance in this highest class of hats, his equivalent ad valorem being 71 per cent. Having gotten above the range of the poorer class of buyers, he saw no good reason for increasing the duty very much.

The equivalent ad valorem duties here given are obtained by combining the pound duty and the ad valorem rate and calculating them upon the value of hats imported. Almost no wool hats have been imported for some years. Even in 1882 it was stated before the Tariff Commission that only $600 worth was imported. At the same time a hat manufacturer stated that the manufacturers did not favor a high duty on hats, and that they were even willing to see hats come in free if they could have their raw materials free. He said that the manufacturers had "no trouble with the wool hats imported into the country at all."

Yet at this late day McKinley builds higher the tariff wall against foreign hats and prepares the way for a trust.

Muscular Rheumatism.

Muscular rheumatism is more simple and common than any other sort (if it can be properly called rheumatism), and can be treated successfully at home. Any good liniment can be used with rubbing as vigorous as can be borne by the patient, but I prefer oil of wintergreen externally and internally. Externally, rub it in well and then wrap up the part affected with flannel. Internally, take every two hours from two to five drops of it in a little water until the pain lessens.

In all cases of rheumatism, cooling laxative medicines should be used. They are better than active cathartics. I would recommend laxative mineral waters or salts, either Epsom, Glauber, or Rochelle, preferably Glauber.

Better than all remedies, let me advise prevention. Keep dry and warm and well protected as much as possible, but in case of severe exposure to cold and wet, as soon as possible take a bath in hot water with thorough rubbing. Put salt in the water so that it is almost weak brine, and rub down afterward with alcohol.

Drink two cups of good hot tea and go to bed between woolen blankets, or put on a good warm dressing-gown and toast yourself before the fire. You may consider this troublesome, but let me assure you that you should ward off an attack of rheumatism, especially as the second attack comes more readily than the first. Once you have rheumatism and you are predisposed to it for life.—New York World.

Bacteria in Brown Sugar.

The Philadelphia Inquirer has a scare article about the bacteria in some of the cheap and improperly refined grades of brown sugar. "Thousands of disgusting little insects," it says, "creep over one another in almost every pound of the low-grade sugars. Samples taken at random from stores by a curious analyst of this city have shown that some qualities contain as many as 250,000 of these repulsive-looking little creatures. They are plainly visible under a microscope, and in some cases under an ordinary magnifying glass and even to the naked eye. In the human stomach they are said to be capable of doing great damage."

Afraid of Coyotes.

A San Francisco paper says a young man from the East was hired to plow a field near Madera. One day he found himself surrounded by seven hungry coyotes. He left his team and broke in a swift run for the house and quit work right there. The team was found all right by the owner, a woman, who told the tenderfoot to go back home to his mother, while she finished the plowing.

SOME time ago a trade paper stated that a twenty-five cent stocking was still kept on the market, despite the McKinley tariff law, but that the quality had been lowered. The same thing is now noted in the case of cigars. The trade journal called Tobacco says the retail cigar dealers refused to pay the higher prices made necessary by the McKinley law, and now the manufacturers have met the difficulty by reducing the quantity of leaves put into cigars. In this way old prices are maintained by cheapening the quality of cigars.

THE President of the Sugar Trust has recently testified that the cost of refining sugar is three-fourths of a cent per pound. This being the entire cost of refining, it was a gross absurdity in the McKinleyites to give the trust a protective duty of a half cent per pound to protect it from foreign competition.

WHY is it that when a man is flat on his back his friends all urge him to "face the world?"

After the whipping he was released on condition that he leave the county and never return.

—Thomas Kennedy, of Martinsville, has invented and patented a mail sack that does away with the strap and staples. The manner of fastening the sack is much simpler than any device known, and the government officials have asked Mr. Kennedy for a model of it that they may consider the advisability of substituting it for the sack now in use. Mr. Kennedy has been postal clerk for several years on the Big Four railway, between Martinsville and Fairland.

—A year ago on the 19th of last October, the east-bound express on the Wabash Railroad was thrown from the track and badly wrecked at Kellers, Wabash County, a switch having been thrown by a lad named Willie Marquis, who was put off the train and thus sought revenge. The engineer and fireman were badly hurt, but their injuries were not considered dangerous. The engineer recovered, but the fireman, Charles Dickson, of Andrews, whose spine was hurt, grew worse, and, after lingering over a year, died. Young Marquis was tried for train-wrecking in March, 1890, and sentenced to one year in the Wabash County jail. He was released only last week, his term having expired.

—Mr. Charles Smith, an extensive wool-grower of Hamilton County, Ohio, has bought nine farms near Sparksville, Carr Township, in the western part of Jackson County, aggregating over seven hundred acres of hill land, which he designates as the New Oklahoma sheep ranch. He has contracted for the erection of a large two-story frame dwelling and a large barn. He has 7,500 high-grade wool sheep, which he will bring to this State. His brother, John Smith, also a rich sheep-grower, will buy and stock a large ranch in the same vicinity. This is the beginning of sheep husbandry on a large scale in Jackson County, the hilly portions of which are worth but little for raising grain. These men are Republicans, have faith in the American protective tariff, and are assured of a ready market for their clip of wool, as the Seymour woolen-mills use the wool from 100,000 sheep annually.

—Frank Pearce, farmer near New Castle, swindled out of a $350 horse by Bailey & Parr, Greenfield. They gave him a note secured by morgage on real estate to which they had no title.

—The One-hundred and twenty-third Indiana Volunteer Infantry will hold their first reunion at Rushville on Tuesday, Aug. 25. All comrades are requested to send name, company and post-office address of themselves and all surviving comrades of whom they know to William S. Kaler, Andersonville.

—George Arnold, living near Danville, had an exciting experience with a mad-dog. He was viciously attacked, and after a terrible struggle with the rabid dog, succeeded in choking it and escaping with but slight scratches.

—The other night thieves, apparently professionals, raided Oaktown, twelve miles north of Vincennes. They entered every store in the place, except two. They were evidently after money, as they took nothing but money and jewelry. At the drug and jewelry store of Peifer & Reed they cracked the safe and secured money and jewelry to the amount of $500.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

NERVINE TONIC

—AND—

Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar.
It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the Great South American Medicine Company, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by the native inhabitants of South America, who rely almost wholly upon its great medicinal powers to cure every form of disease by which they are overtaken.

This new and valuable South American medicine possesses powers and qualities hitherto unknown to the medical profession. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and diseases of the general Nervous System. It also cures all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the Great Nervine Tonic qualities which it possesses and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body and as a great renewer of a broken down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the Lungs than any ten consumption remedies ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic almost constantly for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir, are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied, and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This recent production of the South American Continent has been found, by analysis, to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its magic power to cure all forms of nervous derangements.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., Aug. 20, '86.

To the Great South American Medicine Co.:

DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If every one knew the value of this remedy as I do, you would not be able to supply the demand.

J. A. HARDEE,
Ex-Treas. Montgomery Co.

Mr. Solomon Bond, a member of the Society of Friends, of Darlington, Ind., says: "I have used twelve bottles of The Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and I consider that every bottle did for me one hundred dollars worth of good, because I have not had a good night's sleep for twenty years on account of irritation, pain, horrible dreams, and general nervous prostration, which has been caused by chronic indigestion and dyspepsia of the stomach and by a broken down condition of my nervous system. But now I can lie down and sleep all night as sweetly as a baby, and I feel like a sound man. I do not think there has ever been a medicine introduced into this country which will at all compare with this Nervine Tonic as a cure for the stomach."

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., May 19, 1886.

My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with Chorea or St. Vitus's Dance. She was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to handle her like an infant. Doctor and neighbors gave her up. I commenced giving her the South American Nervine Tonic; the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of the nervousness, and rapidly improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the South American Nervine the grandest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to every one.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., June 22, 1887.

My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus's Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus's Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stom- ☞ No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the Stomach, because the experience and testimony of thousands go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to The Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted Stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

Mrs. M. Russell, Sugar Creek Valley, Ind., writes: "I have used several bottles of The South American Nervine Tonic, and will say I consider it the best medicine in the world. I believe it saved the lives of two of my children. They were down and nothing appeared to do them any good until I procured this remedy. It was very surprising how rapidly they both improved on its use. I recommend the medicine to all my neighbors.

Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I can not express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen.

Ed. J. Brown, Druggist, of Edina, Mo., writes: "My health had been very poor for years, was coughing severely. I only weighed 110 pounds when I commenced using South American Nervine. I have used two bottles and now weigh 130 pounds, and am much stronger and better than have been for five years. Am sure would not have lived through the Winter had I not secured this remedy. My customers see what it has done for me and buy it eagerly. It gives great satisfaction."

Too large—the old-fashioned pill. Too reckless in its way of doing business, too. It cleans you out, but it uses you up, and your outraged system rises up against it. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets have a better way. They do just what is needed—no more. Nothing can be more thorough—nothing is as mild and gentle. They're the smallest, cheapest, the easiest to take. One tiny, sugar-coated granule's a gentle laxative—three to four are cathartic. Sick Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels are promptly relieved and permanently cured.

"German Syrup"

The majority of well-read physicians now believe that Consumption is a germ disease. In other words, instead of being in the constitution itself it is caused by innumerable small creatures living in the lungs having no business there and eating them away as caterpillars do the leaves of trees.

A Germ Disease. The phlegm that is coughed up is those parts of the lungs which have been gnawed off and destroyed. These little bacilli, as the germs are called, are too small to be seen with the naked eye, but they are very much alive just the same, and enter the body in our food, in the air we breathe, and through the pores of the skin. Thence they get into the blood and finally arrive at the lungs where they fasten and increase with frightful rapidity. Then German Syrup comes in, loosens them, kills them, expells them, heals the places they leave, and so nourish and soothe that, in a short time consumptives become germ-proof and well.

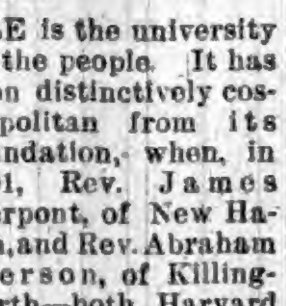
ABOUT YALE COLLEGE.

ONE OF AMERICA'S LEADING UNIVERSITIES.

History of Its Founding and Founders—Early Struggles for Existence—The College Now Has a Substantial Annual Income—Student Life, Etc.

YALE is the university of the people. It has been distinctively cosmopolitan from its foundation, when, in 1701, Rev. James Pierpont, of New Haven, and Rev. Abraham Pierson, of Killingworth—both Harvard graduates—called a meeting of ministers, at Branford, to consider the establishment of a Connecticut college. Tradition relates that on this occasion, each of these earnest men brought a number of his choicest volumes and gave them "for the foundation of a college in this colony." The Colonial Legislature, in October, 1701, granted a charter for "a collegiate school."

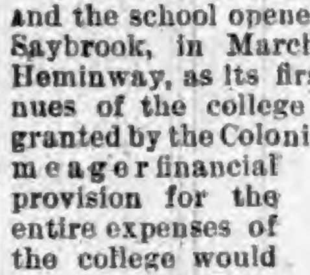
Rev. Pierson was chosen as "Rector," and the school opened in the town of Old Saybrook, in March, 1702, with Jacob Heminway, as its first pupil. The revenues of the college were £80 a year, granted by the Colonial Legislature. This meager financial provision for the entire expenses of the college would not permit Rev. Pierson to resign his pastoral charge at Killingworth, and devote his whole time to teaching. He therefore divided his attention between, his ministerial and educational labors. Under these conditions the school was nominally located at Hollingworth.



GOVERNOR YALE.

Upon Rev. Pierson's death, in 1707, Rev. Samuel Andrew, of Milford, was elected rector. He was, however, rector in name only, as the duties of that office were performed by two young teachers, at Saybrook. This arrangement lasted for some seven years, during which the school made little or no progress.

A fresh impetus of interest in the college was given by the donation of a library, of some one thousand volumes, in 1715. They were the gifts of several gentlemen of England, among the most notable of whom were Sir Isaac Newton, Richard Steele, and Elihu Yale, for whom the school was afterward named.



TIMOTHY DWIGHT.

A grant by the Legislature of £500 for the erection of a college building brought the matter of a permanent location to a crisis. The towns in the contest for the site were New Haven, Hartford and Saybrook. The contest was bitter, but New Haven seemed to be the victor, and commencement was held there Sept. 11, 1717, and a building "raised" October 8. Hartford did not entirely abandon the struggle until two years later, when her rival school was adjourned to New Haven.

In 1718 the famous Cotton Mather wrote an urgent appeal to Elihu Yale, of London, who had become very wealthy out of trade in the Indies, to give the school that liberal assistance which would make his name synonymous with that of the school.

Governor Yale responded with a shipment of merchandise, which sold in Boston for £562 12s sterling. At the next commencement the name of "Yale College" was formally given the school by the trustees.

Rector Andrew was succeeded in March, 1719, by Rev. Timothy Cutler, who resigned his pastorate of the Congregational Church at Stratford, Conn., and devoted his entire time to his new duties, at New Haven, until 1722, when he was suddenly and peremptorily "excused from all further services" because of a determination to join the Episcopal Church. He secured quite a grant from the Colonial Assembly, raised by a tax on rum.

Rev. Elisha Williams, of Wethersfield, was the next rector. He was an able one, and his administration brought considerable addition to the resources of the college. Impaired health caused him to resign in 1739, and Rev. Thomas Clapp was elected to a long and stormy presidency, which terminated in September, 1766. He secured a new charter, with enlarged powers, from the Legislature in 1745, and also a grant of £1,660, which the State raised from an authorized lottery. With this fund the "South Middle College" was built. In 1761 Rector Clapp raised a fund partly sufficient to pay for the chapel and library building, erected that year. The building is now "The Athenæum."

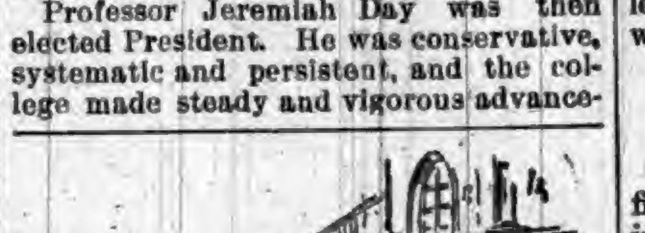
His extreme religious views and certain arbitrary measures caused severe criticism. The Legislature refused to pass the usual annual grant and proposed sending a committee of investigation to the college. He met this proposition, which was urged and defended by two of the most celebrated lawyers of that day, by a speech before the Legislature that won his case against strong prejudice. The issues involved were very similar to those in the subsequent Dartmouth College case. He died four months after his resignation, in 1766.

Rev. James Lockwood was next elected rector, but declined to serve. This put the duties of that office upon the Rev. Naphtali Daggett, Professor of Theology, as he was the only permanent member of the faculty. He was unpopular as a President, and declined in 1777 to longer act in that capacity. He was succeeded by Rev. Ezra Stiles, for years a tutor in the college. These were revolutionary days, and for a time the practical worth of the college was almost suspended. The law gave the members of a college community exemption from military service, and the year of 1783 found 270 pupils in attendance, or 138 more than in 1777. In 1792 the dining-hall—later used as a chemical laboratory—was erected, and in 1793 the present South College was built. The other most important act of President Stiles' administration was the securing of a grant of $40,620 from the Legislature, in return for which the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, and the six senior Senators were constituted ex officio members of the corporation. President Stiles died May 12, 1795, and Rev. Timothy Dwight, a former tutor in the college, was immediately elected to succeed him.

President Dwight's administration was the most prosperous that the college had enjoyed. He raised it from sectional to national importance and patronage. He was a grandson of Jonathan Edwards, the famous divine, and possessed many of his great ancestor's characteristics and much of his eloquence.

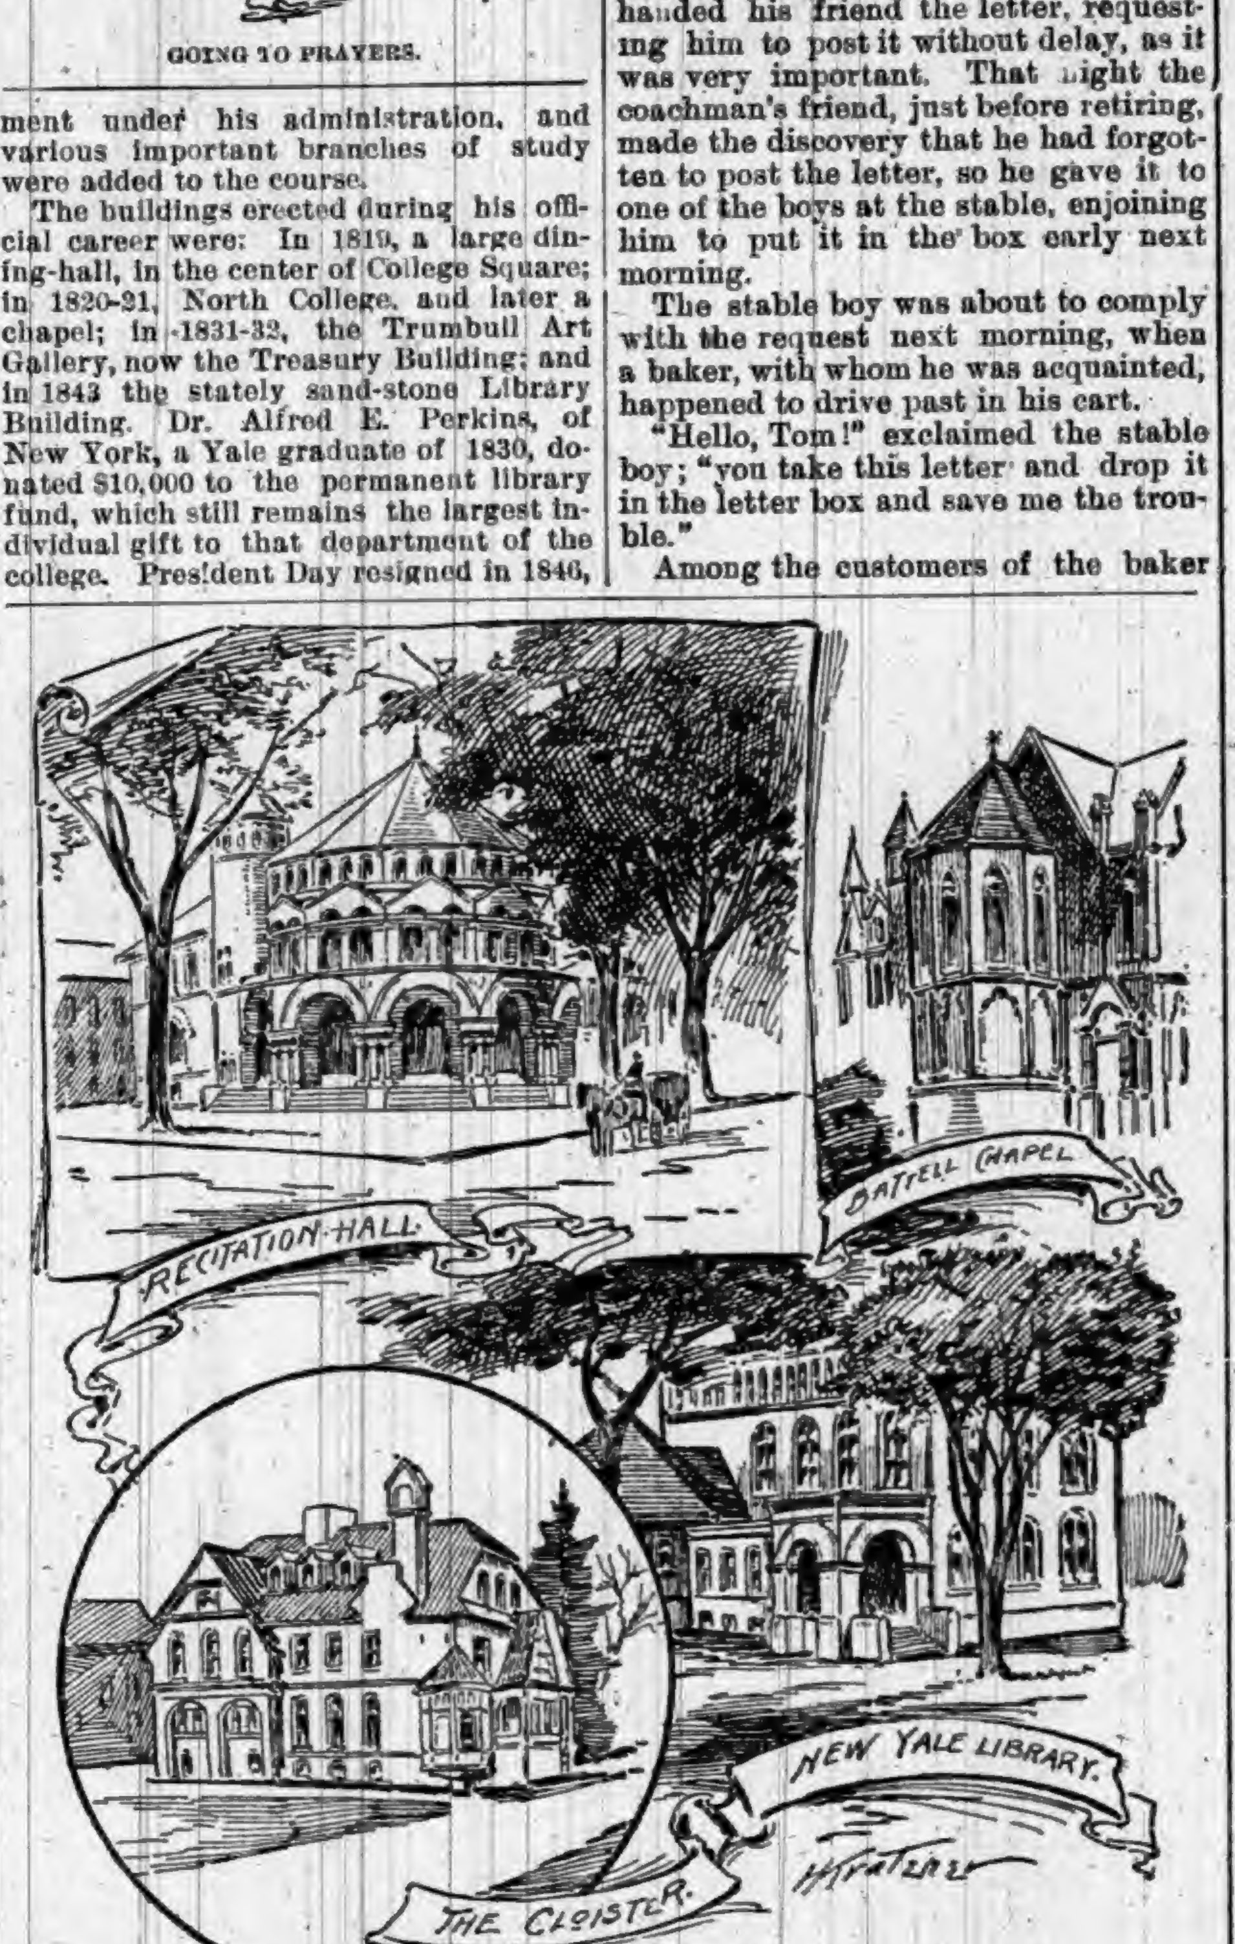
For this reason he filled the divinity chair as well as the Presidency. He added many new departments to the work of the college, notably those of law and medicine. The increase of students resulting from these added attractions necessitated new buildings, and in 1802 the present North Middle College and Lyceum were erected, and also a new residence for the President. President Dwight died in January, 1817.

Professor Jeremiah Day was then elected President. He was conservative, systematic and persistent, and the college made steady and vigorous advancement under his administration, and various important branches of study were added to the course.



GOING TO PRAYERS.

The buildings erected during his official career were: In 1819, a large dining-hall, in the center of College Square; in 1820-21, North College, and later a chapel; in 1831-32, the Trumbull Art Gallery, now the Treasury Building; and in 1843 the stately sand-stone Library Building. Dr. Alfred E. Perkins, of New York, a Yale graduate of 1830, donated $10,000 to the permanent library fund, which still remains the largest individual gift to that department of the college. President Day resigned in 1846, and was succeeded by Prof. Theodore Dwight Woolsey.



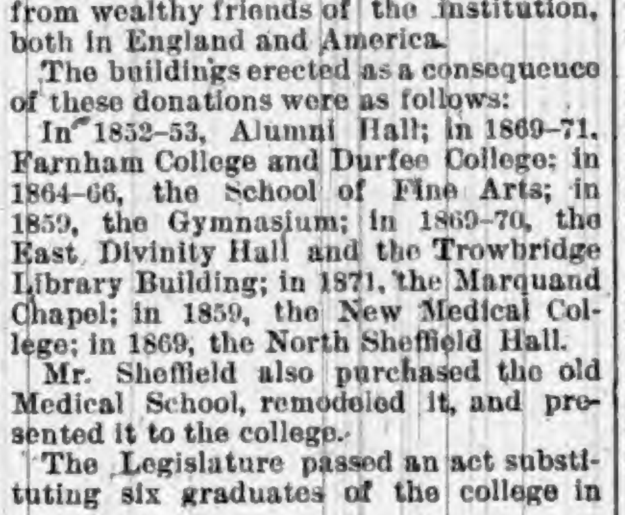
President Woolsey, during the twenty-five years of his administration, made his wonderful executive powers felt in every department of the college. The progress of the college in those years was phenomenal and unprecedented, and its forward strides brought to its resources numerous gifts and bequests from wealthy friends of the institution, both in England and America.

The buildings erected as a consequence of these donations were as follows:

In 1852-53, Alumni Hall; in 1869-71, Farnham College and Durfee College; in 1864-66, the School of Fine Arts; in 1859, the Gymnasium; in 1869-70, the East Divinity Hall and the Trowbridge Library Building; in 1871, the Marquand Chapel; in 1859, the New Medical College; in 1869, the North Sheffield Hall.

Mr. Sheffield also purchased the old Medical School, remodeled it, and presented it to the college.

The Legislature passed an act substituting six graduates of the college in the place of the six senior State Senators as members of the Board of Managers.



COMING FROM PRAYERS.

Professor Noah Porter was elected President on the resignation of Professor Woolsey, in 1870. The rich gifts which had begun to pour in upon the college under President Woolsey continued in increased volume in his successor's administration. Many of the individual gifts ranged high in the thousands, and several were over $100,000 each. To attempt a list of even the most munificent gifts to the college is outside the limits of this sketch. A marked feature of President Porter's work was the large increase in the number of elective studies.

The architectural additions of the Porter Presidency were: 1874-76, the Battell Chapel; 1882-83, the Sloane Laboratory; 1885-86, Lawrence College and Dwight Hall, also the Peabody Museum of Natural History. During these years the Observatory, the West Divinity Hall, and the Bacon Memorial Library were also erected. In 1886, Professor Timothy Dwight, grandson of the former President, was elected to that position, which he now holds. The name of the institution has been changed, to conform with the growth and scope of the school, from "college" to "university."

The principal buildings completed since President Porter came into office are the magnificent new Chittenden Library, the Osborn Hall, for lectures and recitations, the Kent Laboratory, and the Gymnasium.

A suggestion of the extent of the patronage of the university may be had from the fact that its income for the year ending July 31, 1889, from its theological, scientific, law, medicine and art departments was $366,-649.61, while its expenses for a like period were $2,185.53 less than that amount. The number of names in the college directory, for 1890, was 1,800.

In scholarship Yale is excelled by no American college or university. It also leads in athletic sports. America may well be proud of her Yale.

FORREST CRISSEY

A Fast Mail.

Colonel Yerger, of Austin, had just finished writing a letter. It was very important that it should go off by the next mail, so he rang the bell, and upon the colored servant, Matilda, appearing, he handed her the letter, saying:

"Take this letter to the letter box on the corner as fast as you can. It is very important."

Matilda, the colored girl, went out with the letter, and meeting the coachman, handed it to him, saying:

"Jess you take dis heah letter to de letter box."

The coachman started out with the letter. He happened to see a friend passing, and it occurred to him that he might save himself the trouble, so he handed his friend the letter, requesting him to post it without delay, as it was very important. That night the coachman's friend, just before retiring, made the discovery that he had forgotten to post the letter, so he gave it to one of the boys at the stable, enjoining him to put it in the box early next morning.

The stable boy was about to comply with the request next morning, when a baker, with whom he was acquainted, happened to drive past in his cart.

"Hello, Tom!" exclaimed the stable boy; "you take this letter and drop it in the letter box and save me the trouble."

Among the customers of the baker boy was Colonel Yerger himself. Just as the baker boy drove up to the Yerger mansion, Matilda, to whom the letter had been originally given, was just going out of the gate on her way to market. The baker boy handed her the letter with the request to shove it in the letter box. But just at that moment Mrs. Yerger happened to open the door and saw the boy hand her servant a letter.

"I will not have such goings on as this in this house," exclaimed Mrs. Yerger, as she seized the letter from Matilda's hand, and, running into the house, exclaimed in an excited voice to Colonel Yerger:

"It's not safe to have that Matilda about the house any longer. Here she is getting letters on the sly."

She handed the letter to Colonel Yerger, who recoiled with astonishment when he received the identical letter he had written the night before. Uttering an exclamation too profane to print in a family paper, Colonel Yerger violently forced himself into his coat, remarking:

"Now I will post the letter myself, and then I will know it is done."—Texas Siftings.

Just Like Human Beings.

"Just like human beings."

The remark was made by an old engineer, and referred to the difference between locomotives. There had been some talk of the road, and some wild stories had been told of the bravery of the man who stands beside the throttle. There had been other talk, too, hedging on lurid adventures on the road, dark nights, men on the track, sharp curves, falling bridges, and so forth. The man went on:

"I have no exciting stories to tell; rather I would speak of the eccentricities of the engine. As I said, an engine has its peculiarities, just the same as human beings. No two engines are alike. To know an engine one has to be right on her all the time. It is true that they are all made the same, but there are small mechanical differences that cause them to run very differently the one from the other. It is hard to explain the idea I have in mind, but I guess you grasp my thought. For instance, some engines will run along all right for a month or so, and then suddenly, apparently for no cause, they will become cranky and begin to act badly. They will start and stop with a jerk, sway violently from side to side, and altogether behave in a strange and mysterious fashion. As I said, there is no explaining it, but any old engineer will vouch for the truth of my story."—Free Press.

Learning Social Diplomacy.

One of the secretaries of the Chinese Embassy in Washington has shown himself apt in the art of compliment. He was introduced to a lady who, among other questions, asked him: "What virtue do you most highly prize in your woman?" "The virtue of domesticity," was the reply. "Then you do not like your women to move in society much?" she questioned. "Not at all. Our law even recognizes it as a cause for divorce when a woman—pardon me, madam—is inquisitive and talkative." "Then I should be in danger of being divorced if I lived in China?" smilingly asked the lady. "The very day that my country would have the luck to possess a womanly being like you," replied the gallant son of the heavenly realm, "every cause of divorce would be removed from the world."

Tea Inebriety.

People have come too much to think that intemperance applies only to those who are intemperate about the use of alcoholic liquors. I think it's time we began to include as inebriates those who are intemperate about all strong drinks, especially tea. It is a great deal more trite than true that the fragrant Bohea is "the cup that cheers, but does not inebriate." Right here in Boston I know a young woman who never thinks that she can play her part at a social "function" without first taking her exhilarating cup of strong tea. When warned of the habit she was forming and of the injury to health in thus yielding to artificial exhilaration she replied: "I know, but what can I do? It makes me appear bright, and one hasn't a right to go among one's friends and be dull."—Boston Traveler.

GEN. ALBERT PIKE, the poet, is dead. He was a man of wonderful learning, and wrote much both in prose and poetry. He was at the head of the highest grade of Masons in the United States. He served in the Mexican war, and for a short time served the confederacy.

THE Record is informed that we do deny that the tariff transfers industries to this country. One of the evils of the tariff, is the choking out of many industries because we cannot get the raw material needed, except at a highly taxed price. Take the tax off of raw material and our workmen will then have more to do. That would suit us.

REPUBLICAN papers are now engaged in saying, "The policy of Mr. Cleveland's administration was to hoard money in the treasury. * * The policy of Harrison's administration has been to pay out money," etc. Well, we should say so. The first two years of Harrison wasted the big surplus Cleveland left and two hundred millions were added to the already too large list of appropriations.

THE craze of the Italian government over the New Orleans riot, is the most ridiculous piece of that usually ridiculous business, "diplomacy," that has happened lately. They have no cause for a quarrel, and if they had, they have not the power to enforce it. It is all nonsense to talk of their great navy, and the danger of their destroying our seacoast towns. They could not do it, and are not such fools as to try. But they have no cause for complaint. The men murdered at New Orleans, were criminals who should have been punished by law, not by a mob. The mob will probably be punished by the state The United States cannot punish them. We have no very high opinion of Blaine, but he has already given the Italians more than they can digest.

THE Record asks the COURIER to say whether the tariff is a tax. We say it is. Merchants say that Brussels carpets are higher on account of the McKinley bill and they are obliged to sell at an advance, in order to avoid loss. These are facts. He asks if we know of a carpet making firm that has failed. We do not. We never said carpet makers were in hard luck We knew better. They are making money, would make money if there were no tariff. That is where the fraud comes in. They were making big profits, and then asked government to "protect" them by a high tariff, and government was just fool enough to do it. This was a plain steal. The government has no right to "protect" any private industry at the expense of the people. Then the Record asks how a yard of carpet can pay a duty of 44 cents a square yard, and be sold at 40 cents. It can't be done of course. If an article pays a duty, the duty is added to first cost, and a profit is then charged on that and on first cost also, and the consumer pays the whole. The carpet the Record speaks of didn't pay a duty of 44 cents It was not that kind of goods. If it did pay a duty of 44 cents, will the Record explain how it could be sold for 40? The Record can't. He is simply trying to deceive some one, but the chances are he will find no one as ignorant as himself. If the tariff is not a tax, why does the Record claim that sugar will be cheaper now that the tax is partly taken off? If it is not a tax, why not put it back on tea and coffee? If its effect is not to keep up prices, why do parties go to congress and ask that it be taken off of such things as they are compelled to buy abroad, and put onto such articles, as they wish to make and to sell at a high price as possible? Yes, the tariff is a tax, of which the people pay about eight hundred millions a year, One fourth of this government gets, and three fourths go to swell the profits of men, who would make a reasonable profit without a tariff. But the people pay it all, and republican editors say it is not a burden or a tax, but is just what the people ought to have.

City Politics.

Since our last, C. A. Picker has informed us he will not be a candidate for marshal, as he thinks a man with a good trade, as he has, bricklaying, can do better than be marshal. This leaves the field to Mr. Pfefferl, Mr. Reesch and Mr. J. W. Jones. Also, Mr. Gugerli informs us he will not be a candidate for councilman from the second ward, for a most excellent reason—he lives in the third, and he don't care for an office anyway—prefers to make neat fitting suits for customers. Again we ask our taxpayers to attend the caucus, and put up a good ticket. Let no one stay at home. Let the people of Auburn make Auburn's ticket and administer a merited rebuke to outside parties who have no interest in our city government except to get a marshal who will let him run our streets drunk, in safety, and who does nothing but lie about and misrepresent Auburn and its interests and try to bring our city into disrepute abroad. Let Auburn attend to her own business, and let others attend to theirs.

Licensed to Marry.

The following is a list of the marriage licenses issued for the month of March. Henry Miller and Louisa Steffen; Frank Dills and Mary L. Walter; Edward Wilcox and Martha M. Daniels; John M. Wiseman and Elizabeth A. Treesh; Albertus A. Widner and Katie Lehr; Charles Green and Cora Farnsworth; F. M. Fox and Cynthia C. Stratton; David Yarde and Mary Brechbill; Merit M. Baird and Lydia Berry; John W. Bhur s and Maggie Thomas; Henry Liold and Sarah L McCellan; Walter Goodwin and Elizabeth Watson; Marvin Leas and Lizzie J. Henney; James M Stafford and Florence F. Friece; Theodore E. Eberly and Alice S. Shanks; Silas S. Hall and Frances E. Oberlin; Benjamin F Johff and Maud Baker; H. A. Miller and Clarissa C. Wolf; Howard Maggart and Alice Gard; John Davis and Annie Humbarger; William J. Watson and Bertha Grimm; Charles H. Small and Alice Ward.

Burned Down.

Not often that a building is destroyed by fire in Auburn since we have gotten our efficient fire department in shape. But last Friday night, our luck changed. By some chance not understood, the dwelling of Samuel Watson, in Gas Addition took fire, and was totally destroyed with all its contents. Mr. Watson barely escaped, by jumping through a window. The alarm was rung, but the fire had already got beyond control, the half frozen mud in the roads, kept the horses down to a walk, and when they were part way, they saw no good could be done, and so stopped. In fact, they found there was no water over there. A cistern should be put down in that section at a convenient place. The loss falls heavy on Mr. Watson, who is a hard working man, a teamster, and our people have been chipping in to help him get started again.

Huntington Conference.

Women are admitted hereafter. The vote stood 113 to 42. We see that Mr. Lamport is on a number of important committees. He goes next year to Kendallville; A. S. Wooten comes to Auburn; W. M. Van Slyke goes to Berry St., Ft. Wayne; A. L Lamport to Garrett; Mr. Wones to Trinity church, Ft. Wayne; J. J. Fred, Spencerville; I. C. Ashcraft to Leo; A. S Preston, Albion; F. M Ston, Butler; J. A. Graham, Butler Circuit; M. R. Pierce, Corunna; A V. Kuepper, Hamilton; Waterloo, J M DeWeese, A. E. Mahin, P. E. C. O. Merica, professor in Iowa Wesleyan University, remains a member of the Goshen district. T. F. Frech goes to Huntertown.

EIGHT new cardinals are to be created by the pope to fill vacancies. It will be done early in April.

The Sword Drill at Garrett.

As announced last week, the young ladies went over to Garrett, and gave a repetition of their splendid entertainment. And as the COURIER had assured the people, that it was a fine treat, given by most worthy young ladies for a praiseworthy purpose, the people turned out in crowds, and filled the lovely new Opera House full. The performers were all, at last able to be present, and the entertainment was at least as good as the one here. The stage is not quite as large as ours, but they succeeded in giving the various drills nicely, and were heartily cheered at all points. Several new features had been added, especially a recitation by Mabel Hartman, which was equal in excellence to the rest of the evening's program. The singing was also, improved if possible, and Mrs. Garwood and Mrs Yesbera, were rapturously greeted On being called back, the former gave the witty little song, "Beware of her she's fooling thee," and the latter sang, "Comin' thro' the rye," both to the great delight of the audience Mr. McKay received many compliments for the training of the young ladies in the sword drill, and the young ladies themselves have reason to feel proud of their success and popularity. They cleared about $60. They are guaranteed $50 clear, to go to Albion, but we have not learned whether they will go or not. It is pretty tiresome work. We should not forget to give proper credit to J. L. Davis, for the assistance he gave by his good words among the friends at Garrett. Most of the actors and their assistants went over on the afternoon train to the number of twenty six, and when the special came up that evening, 74 tickets were sold for that, proving that our people wanted to see this beautiful spectacle again.

Odontunder.

Wonders never cease, is the old adage. And now comes a process of extracting teeth in a perfectly painless manner. without the use of chloroform, ether, or gas and in order to allow anyone in Auburn or vicinity to test this method Dr. C L. Franks, of the Odontunder Dental Parlors, 24 Washington Ave. Detroit, Mich., will be in Auburn Thursday, Friday and Saturday April 9, 10 and 11, at the Swinford House Read the following truthful statement from these gentlemen who are thoroughly reliable. Owing to the dangers and the bad results from the use of chloroform and other anæsthetics in years past, we have after much time and labor developed a process perfectly harmless even to persons of the most delicate nervous system or even in cases of heart disease and lung trouble. This process is applied directly to the gums and the patients retain all their senses, having their teeth extracted without pain or unpleasant after results We invite one and all (whether in need of dental work or not) to call and see our demonstrations and be convinced of the fact that we do all we claim to do with Odontunder. Examination of teeth and advice given free of charge. Remember the dates and call as early as possible.

At Rest.

William Shutt departed this life at his home west of Spencerville, April 2, 1891, at the age of 60 years and 11 days. He was born in Starke county, Ohio, March 21st, 1831 He came to DeKalb county in April, 1848 Feb. 13, 1862, he was married to Elizabeth Frances Houk, and to them were born five children He united with the Evangelical Lutheran church, March 11, 1866, and has been a faithful member since. In 1872 he was chosen one of the trustees, and when, later, the new church was erected, he was a member of the building committee. He had always been active in good work, a business man of ability and integrity, and everywhere respected. The funeral, was April 5, at the Spencerville church, where he had so long been a prominent member. The services were by the pastor, Rev. J. S. Nelson, and the great church was scarcely able to hold the vast congregation that met to pay a last tribute of respect to their departed neighbor and friend. The mourning family have the deepest sympathy in their bereavement.

Court.

Judge Powers was able to come down Monday, but not well enough to remain. Judge Best continued court. A case of assault from Butler, Taber vs Bratton, was decided for defendant. Kelley vs Hook was a case for damages for stealing watermelons last fall. The jury decided against Kelley, claiming he had settled with part of the boys and that would clear all. Lockwood vs Wyatt resulted for Wyatt. Grogg vs Blany, a case for mechanic's lien went against Blany. Liquor case against Teutsch, is going on as we close.

Great Stock Man.

A reliable stock dealer of Missouri, Mr A. M. Fisher, writes, and says that one dollar bottle of Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup completely cured him of a very annoying cough and pains in the chest, bordering on lung fever He says: "I think it is the best cough syrup in the world and can recommend it to all that have occasion to use a medicine for coughs and colds, and I shall always keep a bottle in the house.

Resp. Yours,
A. M. FISHER.

Registering the Dogs.

Although the time to May 1, is short, we find many are registering their dogs, at the office of the trustee. Mr. Reed of this township is here, at Brown & Culbertson's for that purpose, every Saturday afternoon, and W. H. Fair, of Butler, also gives notice. We presume the other trustees are ready also. It is thought many will not register, but will leave the matter for the assessor as heretofore.

Rev. Joseph Cook's great lecture, "Ultimate America," at Angola, Monday evening, April 13, at College Hall. Admission 50 cents. He is one of the world's leading platform orators and one of its deepest thinkers. We have no doubt many of our people would like to hear him

We made the acquaintance this week of Mr. August Diehl, the gentlemanly clerk at the Physicians' drugstore, and find him a wideawake business man, and thorough druggist. He has arranged everything in neat order in the store and will make their business more popular than ever.

The "Hoosiers," formerly the "Arions" got home this week, having been away a month or two on the road, with Bennett the "Kansas Cyclone" They report good meetings and generally succeeding in bringing down the house with their splendid singing. We do not know whether they go again or not.

Says the Indianapolis News: "Sneers against the talent, or lack of talent, among "Hoosiers," are no longer in order since, within the last few months, two distinguished colleges, Swartmore in the east and Stanford in the west have come to Indiana for Presidents. The President of the United States is an Indiana man and the President of the largest organized body of women in the world is an Indiana woman.

As the Foster Furniture and Carpet Company, at Fort Wayne, Ind., will pay freight to Auburn, on any goods you purchase of them, provided your purchase amounts to $25 or more, it follows that your goods will cost you no more than if you lived next door to their immense warerooms. This firm do the largest business in the lines of goods they handle, of any in the state of Indiana. In quality of goods, in the beauty of the designs, in the assortment shown, and in the lowness of their prices they excel even the largest stores in the largest cities. They have nearly one acre of floor space crowded with the finest line of furniture, carpet and baby carriages you have ever seen. If you have a bill of goods to purchase they will save you your fare anumber of times over.

Prof. A. F. Myers, who is holding a musical convention here, gave a song service and lecture, at the M. E. church, Sunday evening. His lecture was of the short, plain, matter-of-fact and practical sort, that all could understand and appreciate. No attempt made to attract the attention of the audience with a high grade of oratory, but his arguments were confined to the common, indisputable facts of everyday observation. Of the singing, we must say it was just grand. He had the whole congregation to sing, and the melody that arose was simply enchanting and the reverberations from the gallery thrilled the very soul. We heartily join the following exhortation:

Oh come all ye mortals, and learn to sing,
Join the chorus, swell it loud and long;
Make these solid walls with music ring.
While we voice the soul's enchantment in the melody of song.

Certainly there is nothing that gives more of a foretaste of what we imagine the bright realms beyond to be, than the soul giving expressions of love and praise in joyful strains of the heaven-born art. The Professor is a master of his profession and those attending the convention are profiting by the time spent under his direction.

In this enlightened age, if you stumble against a man on the sidewalk, about the first thing you say is, hello! Of course, he tries to say the same thing, but in the hurry and bustle of the moment he does not finish the imagined sentence, and only remarks: "Hello! are you drunk?"

Last Friday evening came a furious though not lasting snowstorm, and next morning, things looked wintry for the 4th of April. On Monday morning, another new snow covered the ground over an inch deep on sidewalks though not so deep on the ground.

The big iron stand pipe of the water works at Defiance, burst last week, and tore things up in great shape. A house was washed off, and nearly into the river, and a flying piece of the iron pipe cut off a tree. The pipe was full to within six inches of the top, but was five eights of an inch thick at the bottom. The pressure must have been terrific. Loss about $20,000

MARRIED: At the Residence of the bride's parents by Rev W. O Butler April 4, 1891, Miss Ona E. Brand, of Waterloo, to Mr. Millard F. Smith, of Elkhart, Ind. Miss Ona was the first of the J. U. G society girls of Waterloo to step off into the state of matrimony. They left on No. 3 for Elkhart where they will at once establish their home on High street.

We were greatly pleased to meet a former pupil on Monday of this week, in the person of Rev. W. S. Tracy, the new minister in charge of the Evangelical church at Waterloo. From a bright lad, as when we last saw him, to full manhood we could scarcely recognize him But we welcome him for all the friends in Waterloo, with the hope that he may be successful in his new field.

Charley Picker very sensibly concludes he can make it pay better to follow his trade, than to be town marshal. So he declines to run for that office. Mr. Picker is one of the best bricklayers in the state, and stands ready to do anyone who needs his services, a first class job on the shortest notice. Those who are going to build should give him a call. They will make no mistake.

The Fidelity Building and Savings Bank Union, of Indianapolis, has established a local board at this place, and a large amount of shares has been subscribed by our citizens. The officers are H N. Coffinberry, president; J. B. Casebeer, vice-president; Geo. T. Weeks, secretary; Marion Wells, treasurer; A. C. Wilson, Sol. Shearer and J. L Keeran, appraisers. The company seems to be an excellent one and they certainly have a good home board. These building and loan companies can do a great deal of good in building up a town and securing homes to deserving people in moderate circumstances.

Mrs. A. Plum, of Butler, called up to see the COURIER folks last Wednesday. She was accompanied by her sister, Mrs Geo. Ball, of Pleasant Lake, who was to start next day to join her husband, at St. Petersburg, Florida. They will make that place their home, as they find it is better for their health. There had been a reunion here the same day, including besides the two ladies named, Mrs. Ray and Mrs Robert Simoson, of this place, Mrs. Levi Till of Waterloo, Lee Weldon, of Pleasant Lake, and the father, Mr. Thomas Weldon. The last named goes with Mrs. Ball as far as Evansville, Ind. where he will remain during the summer. The family meeting here was rather a sad one, as they are now to be so widely separated.

It is said, a man's peculiar style of penmanship is just as mysteriously distinguishable as the individuality of his face, and can be recognized fully as easy. While in conversation with a schoolmaster of many years experience, a few days since, the reporter was brought face to face with the theory that as long as a man has steady nerves he cannot change his handwriting, no matter with what he might make the letters, or in what position the instrument was held, the individuality remains the same The aged wielder of the scepter of instruction apparently understood the subject and his illustrations proved that the theory was not based on idle fancies or store-box quantaries, but was drawn from years of practical and profitable experiment, and that he knew what he was talking about. The point in this lesson is, that what is learned for the uses of after life, must be between the age of eight and twenty-one years, and it is believed that many of our young boys and girls, who incline to think their education finished as soon as they have reached the intermediate departments of our graded schools, would do well to apply this lesson in its most rigid sense.

The St. Joe News, in its report of the Odd Fellows' meeting there, puts Sol. Barney down as "N. G" We expect to hear Sol. calling out the well known masonic yell, of "Mort! Mort!!" and seeking the scalp of the same. Our experience with Sol., is, that he is "G," without the "N," and a big G at that. And yet we are told it is "All quiet along the St Joe to-night." The picture at the head, however, is even more libelous. There stands the poor goat, smelling of J. D. Leighty's feet and looking as if he felt sorry for himself, while Jake has an old-fashioned G Washington hatchet, which he shakes threateningly at Frank Schoe's who is sitting "man-fashion" on the goat, and looking the picture of despair, Near at hand is Rev. S. S. Stanton, while ranged in the background, stand Frank Barney, Dr. Sheffer, Co. Supt Merica, J R Culbertson and Will Curie, all looking more or less like little Buttercup in Pinafore, and most of them have the pinafore on "as befits the occasion." Yes, we expect to see a big libel suit grow out of the News' article, and if so, we speak for a job in the line of "expert testimony." A second look, (it is hard to take a second,) shows that Mort intended the man on the goat, to be Charlie Jenkins, If he is right, then we say "Alas, poor Charlie! We wouldn't 'a thought it of you." And then the position Mort gives him! Ah, well, it proves the poet's words:

"There is a divinity shapes all our ENDS, Rough hew them as we will."

Our friend George Walker, of Smithfield, was in town last week. He is one of our intelligent and prosperous farmers, and we might add, he takes it as all right, that the state should adopt a tax rate that will pay off the debt. That is what business men would do we believe.

Trustee Reed, of this township, Trustee Sherlock, of Fairfield, and Trustee Wilson, of Stafford, have procured the cheap dog tax outfit furnished by the COURIER, as it is hardly worth while to spend too much on the new law, which seems to be in the nature of an experiment.

Cal. Husselman got a type writer not long ago, and at once began to make it go His first letter to his brother-in-law, Frank Britton, called out the mild criticism "Your machine writes plain enough, but it don't know how to spell so very well." Cal. is a good speller, but he had not got the machine properly "hypnotized."

Hon. W. W. Robbins, of Miami county, was in the city yesterday, visiting his old home. He is a brother to Albert and Joseph Robbins. John, another brother resides in Kansas. Mr. Robbins has represented his county during two terms in the legislature, the two best assemblies the state ever had. He is now traveling for a wholesale house.

The old M. E. church has been sold. Michael Kline gets the lecture room addition for $100 and will move it up to his lots and make a dwelling. Hollister & Benedict get the main building for $300 and will move it to the low land east of Cedar street, and fix it over for a repair shop. The bell, seats, etc. are now left and will be sold, so that nearly $500 will be realized on the old property.

The board of commissioners started in Monday to take an inventory of the property at the poor farm, Tuesday they had to stop, however, to go to New Era and let the contracts advertised in the COURIER. They contemplate making some needed repairs at the poor farm. It is also likely they will do something for public comfort in the way of better closets at the court house. This is greatly needed.

A letter from John Provines at Spencerville, Friday, brought the sad news of the death of Wm. Shutt at 2 p. m. the day before At the time we made the announcement of his death before, he had been lying very low for some time, hence the ease with which we fell into the error. He was one of the most prominent and respected citizens in that section He was buried Sunday, but the roads were in such a terrible state, no one could go from here. His obituary, will be found elsewhere.

The Press tells its readers that "Indiana is one of the seven states that does not provide for temperance instruction in its public schools." Is it possible the Press is ignorant of the fact, that such instruction has been given for more than twenty years? It has been given in his own town all this time. The editor should pay as much attention to moral questions, as he does to furnishing the pupils with high priced text books, and fighting the low price text book law. Can any body wonder, that the COURIER calls republican editors ignorant, after such an exhibition as this?

We have waited patiently to let every republican editor in this section, have a whack at Burford, the Indianapolis printer who gets the work away from home printers. We hated to break in on their enjoyment. But we now want to tell them a secret Burford is the very man who printed those darling British flags, which republicans smuggled into as many democratic hands as they could in '88 and which they still fondly believe helped to elect Benjaminmum, which translated, means Ben, the Little. Yes, Burford did it with his little printing press, and Auburn republicans helped to distribute them. And now to go back on Burford! How cruel!

Our people will remember Sol. Mottinger's case against the Lake Shore road a few years ago, for killing his cow. It was then decided against him, and that the railroad was entitled to $5 damages for injury done the engine. It was appealed and the supreme court says the first decision is right. Funny things, these laws.

The Gandy & Nickey Co's. teams have been kept in the barn for about three weeks on account of the unusually bad roads, and the great band mill has been kept at work on material shipped in on the railroads, from Ohio, and other places. This institution consumes an immense quantity of timber and a very liberal amount of money is circulated over this community from that source.

The Century has this month, an article about the treatment of rebel prisoners at Camp Morton, Indianapolis during the war. It has stirred up quite a controversy. While no one believes prisoners up north were as badly treated as those in the south, it must not be forgotten, that war is war, and it is not to be expected that any prisoners of war are as well provided for as even our ordinary criminals in the penitentiary.

Saturday afternoon witnessed a lively scene at the Junction. As the B. & O. train from the east met the Wabash going to Detroit, 189 Polanders with their nondescript baggage and bundles, rushed off the B. & O. cars and struck for the Wabash. Each train had special cars for them, and the way they grabbed and lugged the big, dirty looking bundles, was a sight to behold. They all got on their train, however, and in a few hours, were we suppose welcomed by their friends in Detroit.

Dr. C. L. Franks, of Detroit, who is at the Swineford this week, has a boon to suffering humanity, in the matter of painless tooth extraction. He says he will extract teeth without pain and he does it. The writer is not speaking from idle fancy, but from the fact that he went to the dental rooms at the hotel named and tested the merits of Odontunder, which resulted in satisfying all curiosity as to the truth of the assertions made by the doctor Give Odontunder a trial and you will be satisfied with the results.

RECORD OF THE WEEK.

PHINEAS T. BARNUM, THE GREAT SHOWMAN, DEAD.

A Groom Accidentally Shot on His Wedding Night—Strikers Armed with Dynamite—Edmunds Resigns—Parnell's Marriage.

Strikers Armed with Dynamite.

A report is abroad at Mount Pleasant, Pa., that the strikers have in their possession large quantities of dynamite, and a reputable physician of Mount Pleasant has just reported to headquarters that he was informed by a local labor leader that the strikers would use dynamite, if it became necessary. It is believed that the strikers are able to take desperate measures to carry their point, and a great deal of apprehension is felt in military circles. The militia officers concede that they would have no show against the strikers if the latter resorted to the use of the explosive, and they admit the damage that could be done could not be estimated. Inspector of Rifle Practice Litchfield has reported that a local dealer in dynamite stated that he had sold over 100 pounds of the stuff before he realized that it might be used for nefarious purposes. He then shut down on the sale of it to persons with whom he was not intimately acquainted.

How's This.

London special: The lady to whom Parnell is said to have been privately married since the O'Shea divorce suit, is the eldest daughter of Mrs. O'Shea. The extreme privacy with which the ceremony was performed is attributed to the fact the young lady is a ward in chancery, although she is 21 years of age, and the marriage could not be lawfully solemnized without the assent of the court. By his action Parnell lays himself open to prosecution. Several Parnellite members of the House of Commons affect to believe, although they deny any knowledge of the facts, that Parnell never had unlawful commerce with Mrs. O'Shea; that his secret visits to the home of the O'Sheas were made for the purpose of meeting the daughter, whom he married with the consent of her mother, but unknown to her father.

A Horrible Tragedy.

A distressing tragedy occurred at East Rahway, N. J. Anton Henry was married at the residence of the bride's parents, and there was a throng of friends present who had a merry time. In the midst of the festivities the bride and groom started for their carriage to take the train for their honeymoon trip. The guests crowded to the door with rice and old shoes to bid the couple "God speed." Henry Metz, a friend of the groom, took a revolver from his pocket, which he thought was loaded only with blank cartridges, and meant to fire a salute. He is believed to have been somewhat the worse for wine. He discharged the weapon and Henry fell dead to the sidewalk. Metz had fired too low. The bride is frantic with grief. Metz was arrested.

Barnum Dead.

Phineas T. Barnum, the great showman, died at his home in Bridgeport, Conn. He was over 80 years old. It was provided by the articles of agreement between Barnum and Bailey that "in case of the death of either, the show should go on as usual." Bailey accordingly announces the show to continue with its policy entirely unchanged. The capital of $3,500,000 will remain intact and Mr. Bailey will continue as manager.

A Strange Case.

Frank Clark, a prominent business man of Detroit, died while arising from his bed. His wife saw him fall, but for some reason was unable to move and lay paralyzed for two days, when a neighbor forced an entrance into the house. The whole affair is shrouded in mystery. The doctors cannot account for the woman's condition, and the husband had evidently not been the victim of foul play.

Will Be Completed July 1st.

The Indiana Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument Commission received a report from the construction company that work on the shaft had been resumed, and that this part of the monument will be completed July 1st. The casting of the crowning piece will require another year.

It Was Not a Murder.

Later developments in the supposed fiendish murder of Alexander Snyder, an old citizen at Goshen, Ind., show that death was caused by rats. The man fell on the floor in a stupor, and the rats attacked him, tearing off the flesh and mutilating his face shockingly.

Edmunds Resigns.

Senator George F. Edmunds, of Vermont, who has been in the Senate of the United States since April, 1866, and nearly all that time has been one of the Republican leaders, has resigned, his resignation to take effect the 1st day of November, next.

Chicago Election.

Complete returns from the city election at Chicago gives Cregier (Dem.) 46,566; Hampstead Washburn (Rep.) 46,133, a plurality for Cregier of 433.

Contributed to the Mafia.

Italians employed at Wilkesbarre, Pa., were discharged for contributing to the funds of the Mafia society. Each man contributed weekly.

Burned to Death.

At an amateur performance at Tuscaloosa, Ga., little Irene Hays was fatally burned, the flimsy material of her dress catching fire.

The New Two-Dollar Note.

A new plate is being prepared at the bureau of printing and engraving for a new $2 note to take the place of the note now in circulation and that has been counterfeited. A vignette of the late Secretary Windom will take the place of the Hancock vignette, which appears on the present series.

Wreck on the Pennsylvania.

A wreck occurred on the Pennsylvania Railroad at Wilmore, Pa. Three locomotives and five cars were wrecked. Seven of the trainmen were injured, but not fatally.

Gen. Sherman's Body.

St. Louis special: The remains of Gen. W. T. Sherman are to be removed and the detachment of United States troops that have been detailed to do guard duty at the grave will watch over the remains in their new temporary resting place. Before his death, Gen. Sherman gave directions as to his last resting place, and it is in order that his wishes may be complied with that the remains will be temporarily transferred from the Sherman lot in Calvary to the receiving vault of the cemetery. It was the wish of the General that his remains should not be interred in an ordinary grave in the earth, but that they be placed in an apartment under ground which should be built of stone and concrete and covered with a heavy marble slab. The sepulchre will be built large enough to receive the remains of the General and his wife and two children that now rest beside him in Calvary.

RESULT OF CITY ELECTIONS

Throughout the Buckeye State.

CINCINNATI—The entire Republican city ticket has been elected as follows: Mayor, John B. Mosby; City Auditor, Dan W. Brown; Corporation Counsel, Theodore Horstman; City Treasurer, Henry Ziegler; Justice of the Peace, Edward Tyrrell; Police Court Judge, Ellis B. Gregg; Judge Superior Court, Rufus B. Smith. The ticket was elected by majorities ranging from 100 to 5,000, Mosby having the smallest majority on the ticket, a little over 100. Out of thirty members of the Board of Legislation, the Republicans have elected twenty-one, leaving nine for the Democrats.

CLEVELAND.—Hon. William G. Rose, Republican candidate for Mayor of Cleveland, was elected by a majority of about 3,000. The entire Republican ticket with the exception of the candidate for City Treasurer was also elected. Major W. W. Armstrong, ex-postmaster, was the successful candidate for treasurer.

COLUMBUS.—The Democrats have elected their city ticket by majorities ranging from five to 1,200, with one exception, a member of the Board of Public Works. The Republican majority in the city last fall was about 500.

Returns from various cities of Northwestern Ohio indicate that the Democrats have carried the cities of Findlay, Napoleon, Defiance, Wapakoneta, Lima, and Upper Sandusky, while the Republicans have been successful in Toledo, Fostoria, Bowling Green, North Baltimore, and Bluffton.

THE ITALIAN SITUATION.

Italy was Merely Protesting Against Delay.

A special from Rome quotes the Marquis Di Rudini as saying that he had no intention of pushing any demands, and was content with having taken one positive step as a protest against what he was led to believe, at the time, was a neglect on the part of the United States Government to protect the lives of Italian citizens in America under the provisions of the treaty. He expressed himself as aware that to do anything more at this juncture would be a grave error on his part, as he has perfect confidence in the sincerity and justice of the United States Government. Finally he said: "I shall now simply wait for further details of the character of the slain men, of the action of the Louisiana authorities, and of the intentions of the United States Government; but whatever these may be, I am sure a settlement thoroughly satisfactory to both parties will be found, and that the friendship which binds the two nations will remain unalterable and secure."

It is now also intimated that the recall of Baron Fava is virtually nothing more than a leave of absence.

Italians employed in a quarry at Lefevre Falls, N. Y., emphasized their indignation by hoisting the American flag and riddling it with bullets. All of them were discharged. Much excitement prevails.

Eleven Persons Burned to Death.

Eleven lives were lost in a fire at Rochester, Pa. The fire broke out in a large frame building on New York street, which was used as a residence and several stores. Four members of an Italian family, who lived over one of the stores, lost their lives; one daughter, aged 27, saved herself by jumping. The names of the others are not yet known. The building was owned by John F. Smith. The stores were occupied by George Edwards, tea and coffee; Mrs. Hall, millinery, and E. J. Keen, shoe shop.

Maria Tickio, who escaped by jumping from the second story, although not seriously injured, is prostrated. She talks incoherently, and seems to remember but little of the frightful struggles of her kinsmen. She says that when she awoke the fire was burning below and their rooms were filled with smoke. She slept in the back room, her mother and the children in the middle room and her father and his brother, Vittoria Tickio and Josef Raema, both visitors, occupied the front room. Maria tried to arouse her people, but they were already asphyxiated. She stayed until the fire burned her and she was compelled to jump for her life from a window.

O'Malley Surrenders.

D. C. O'Malley has surrendered before the Criminal Court at New Orleans. He was indicted for perjury, and accessory before the fact in an attempt to bribe a juror. He was accompanied by Colonel Adams, his attorney, and James Barry, a prominent local politician. O'Malley was released on $3,000 bond, which was signed by Barry. After his release, O'Mally walked the streets alone as if he had never been in danger from the fury of a mob. He declines to talk.

The feeling against Detective O'Malley is intense, and threats against him have been made by many since his arrival in town. The news that he had surrendered to the officers of the law spread rapidly, and a call for a meeting was issued. The meeting was held in a saloon on Common street, and at it the question of hanging O'Malley was taken up, and some favored stringing him up to the nearest lamp-post. Sober judgment prevailed, however, and after a spirited discussion it was resolved to allow the law to take its course, and if the outcome of the trial was not what the people expected then summary vengeance would be meted out.

A Woman Living in a Tree.

St. Louis special: A strange woman, who lives in the hollow of a tree, has been discovered in the swamps about a mile and a half from Madison, Ill. She is described as a blonde, about 35 years old, with some traces of beauty still visible in her face. The discovery of her whereabouts was made by some employes of the Merchant Terminal Company, who, approaching an old dead tree, were surprised to see the woman come forth, look at them in a scared way and start to walk hastily away. When spoken to she stopped, maintained a dogged silence and then walked off. She seemed to be familiar with the ground and soon distanced her pursuers. The authorities of Madison County were notified and have commenced an investigation. The woman will be taken in hand and an effort made to establish her identity. There have been several disappearances this winter from St. Louis and vicinity that have not been accounted for, and this strange woman may be one of the missing parties.

Will Ascertain Their Nationality.

The department of justice has been charged to ascertain the nationality, character and life of each one of the Italians executed by the New Orleans people, and the facts developed, it is thought, will materially modify the international view that has been taken of that affair. The matter of indemnity must, of course, remain in abeyance until congress assembles.

Want to Follow the United States.

The governments of England, France, and Germany have instructed their agents in Brazil to apply to the Government at Rio De Janeiro for such commercial advantages as have already been granted to the United States through the exertions of Secretary Blaine.

Confessed His Crime.

One of the tramps arrested at Goshen, Ind., charged with the murder of Alexander Snyder, has confessed. He says he knew Snyder's wife in New York and she told him that the old man kept a large amount of money about the house. Acting upon this information he and a partner came West with the intention of getting hold of the cash. They awakened the old man, and, to quiet him, gave him a blow over the head, but did not intend to kill him. They failed to get the money and were returning East when arrested.

A Terrible Explosion.

Advices from Montevideo state that a terrible explosion occurred at the Government Powder Mills at Buceo, near Montevideo. There were about 4,000 pounds of powder and 550 pounds of dynamite in the mills at the time, and every house within a radius of twenty blocks were completely wrecked, and the workmen in the mill were prostrated by the shock. The explosion was heard for miles. It originated in the store room where four men were working. They were blown to atoms.

Went to the Bottom.

The tug Tempest, owned by the Cleveland Saw-mill and Lumber Company, went to the bottom of Lake Erie, near the entrance to the Cleveland harbor. Howard Loomis, engineer; William Hughes, fireman, and Harry Hershey, raftsman, were in the engine room, and went down with the tug. Capt. John Murray and a raftsman escaped. The tug was towing a raft of logs from the lake shore west of the city, and as she turned to enter the river was caught in a trough of the sea and overturned. She went to the bottom like a stone.

A Thrilling Speech.

When Chas. Clifford, the pugilist who killed Stockman David Greever, at Kansas City, was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary, he made a thrilling speech in court. "The fatal shot was fired" he said "in defense of the honor of his wife and the purity of his child. In following Greever in his flight, he acted on the instincts of the prize ring." He became angry on the stand, he said, because he saw two men laughing at the tears of his wife. A petition for Clifford's pardon was immediately put in circulation. Eleven of the jurymen who convicted him signed it.

Indictments Against Jury Bribers.

The grand jury at New Orleans found three indictments in blank, two against Seligman and Barsen for bribery and three against O'Mally for conspiracy to bribe. Seligman is in Cincinnati, O., Barsen is in New Orleans and O'Mally's whereabouts are a mystery, though it is understood he is on Christiana Lake surrounded by a heavy guard which he has had since the killing of the prisoners.

McCarthy Faction Win.

The election to fill the seat in parliament for the northern division of Sligo, made vacant by the death of the late member, Mr. Peter McDonald, resulted in the selection of Mr. Boynard Collery, of Sligo, the McCarthyite candidate, who received a majority of 400 over his opponent, Valentine B. Dillon, jr., of Dublin, the candidate of the Parnellites.

Railroad Miners May Be Called Out.

Pittsburgh special: It was decided by the American Federation of Labor and United Mine Workers to support the coke region strikers financially and inaugurate the eight-hour movement in the coke region from now on. Great interest is being centered on next week's conference between the miners' representatives and the coal operators, for on this decision will depend whether or not thousands of railroad miners will quit work.

America and Germany on Pork.

Berlin special: Negotiations have been resumed between Mr. William Walter Phelps, the United States Minister, and Chancellor Von Caprivi on the question of the withdrawal of the prohibition against American pork products, and there are more hopeful prospects of an early and successful issue than recent reports have led the public to believe.

Good for the Hunters.

Assistant Secretary Spaulding has decided that certain guns imported into Michigan by men who are in the habit of going north in the fall of the year to engage in hunting and trapping as an occupation, are exempt from duty under the provisions of the free list for tools of trade.

Fighting in Simla.

Simla special: Sharp fighting with the rebellious natives continues. The Miranzais rising is extending. The 29th regiment lost nine men killed and four wounded.

Beebe Burned.

Beebe, a small town thirty miles north of Little Rock, Ark., was almost swept away by flames. The loss is $55,000; partially insured. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Germany Withdraws the Embargo.

The German Government has resolved to withdraw the embargo on American pork. The official announcement of this decision will, however, be delayed.

Barnum Dying.

P. T. Barnum is seriously ill at his home in Bridgeport, Conn. He cannot recover.

FIERCE AND ANGRY MOB

PENNSYLVANIA STRIKERS ARE UNDER GUARD.

At Present Awed by Troops, They Wait Only for Their Departure to Precipitate Trouble—The Dead Strikers Peacefully Buried at Scottdale.

The situation in the Pennsylvania coke regions remains practically unchanged. The feeling prevails that as long as the militia remains there will be no more lawlessness. The soldiers can not stay always, however, and it is feared that unless the strike is settled before they are called home the depredations will be renewed just as soon as their backs are turned. The feeling among the strikers is intensely bitter, but they are careful to commit no overt act and content themselves with scowling at the militia and murmuring in unintelligible tongues.

For thirty consecutive hours a stream of thousands of people viewed the bodies of the men who were shot at Morewood. They were stretched out side by side on a long platform, around which the crowd surged in its eagerness to get a glimpse of the dead men. They are all young men with the exception of Cressango Binero, the Italian, and Valentine Zindle. The faces of the dead were cleanly shaved, and on the breast of each was placed a symbol of the Roman Catholic Church, while around the wrists of a few were entwined the beads upon which they had been accustomed to repeat their prayers.

The scene in the morgue was one that is not often witnessed. Of the thousands who viewed the remains scarcely a man came in whose countenance was not drawn and scowling as he gazed on the work of the rifles, and hundreds of women vented their anger and anguish in terms that could not be mistaken. They were miners, cokers and their wives. The latter are more revengeful, if anything, than their liege lords, and are considered more dangerous antagonists. It is well known among the citizens that the lives of Captain Loar and his deputies would be in jeopardy should the militia be withdrawn. The foreigners are excited to a degree bordering on frenzy, and, although they are keeping all demonstrations within the pale of the law, there is no doubt that they are determined to wreak vengeance eventually upon the people who are responsible for the death of their countrymen.

At Scottdale, where the dead were to be interred, great apprehension was felt that another riot would ensue at the funeral, but nothing of the kind occurred. Strong forces of militia patrolled the streets, attended the services, and accompanied the procession.

The coke company at Mount Pleasant is not making any effort at present to get men to fill the places of the strikers. They are keeping the mines in good condition. Although the men have been out of work for a month, they still seem to have considerable money, and from outward appearances are not suffering for anything. They all seem to be keeping sober. In fact, not one of them has been seen on the street in an intoxicated condition. "From the bankers it is learned that the foreign element, which constitutes 75 or 80 per cent. of the workers of the region now striking, has more or less funds.

There is no longer any doubt that the strike will be continued indefinitely and with a bitterness never before experienced in a strike. It is not beyond probability that if the strikers find they are debarred from reaching non-union men at the coke works, secret methods of inducing them to stop will be made.

An intelligent Hun, in speaking of their future, said: "We will hold a meeting, and then we will decide what to do. There is only one thing certain, and that is that the company can not get any foreigners to come here to take our places, as we have notified all the Italians and Huns in the country of our trouble."

A Scottdale special says: A bloody battle between the troops and the strikers is expected soon. Private Kellar was detailed to act as interpreter to General Wiley. General Wiley directed him to mingle with the strikers and learn their intentions. He reported: "There is going to be trouble very soon. The strikers are all indignant because the soldiers have been sent here, but they do not seem to fear them. In one house I saw five guns and a number of revolvers, and in the other house I saw three guns and several revolvers. Five out of every ten of them have served in the armies of the old country, and they know what soldiers are. They say that the soldiers who have been brought here are simply workingmen like themselves, and will not interfere with them. I picked up one of their papers to-day, and in one portion I found an article which stated that there was not a regular among the soldiers who had been brought to the regions, and that they need not be afraid of the militia men, who were novices, and did not know any more about warfare than the strikers themselves. I heard them ridiculing the Tenth Regiment. All of these Hungarians have money and they are in a dangerous mood over the killing of the men at Morewood, which they all claim was entirely unjustifiable."

Kellar's warning was heard and heeded. When daylight fell again upon the faces of the benighted thousands who inhabit this region, the sentinels of the State had men posted at every point where an outbreak was feared. The troops are supplied with ball cartridges, and the officers in command of the various guards have explicit orders to fire, if need be, on any mob which shall attempt to molest them, or any of the property which they are guarding.

Personal Gossip.

ANY railroads left out over night are likely to pass into the hands of Mr. Jay Gould.

ROBERT BROWNING is responsible for the statement that he was nearly 50 before he made any money out of his writings.

THE richest professional mendicant in the country is "Blind Johnny," of Philadelphia. He is 60 years of age and is worth $20,000.

AN old elm in the Academy yard at Exeter, N. H., set out by Daniel Webster when a student there, and known to all old students and townspeople as the Webster elm, was cut down recently.

WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON, son of the great anti-slavery agitator, is very wealthy, having amassed money from the wool business. He is literary in his tastes, takes an active part in politics and is a Democrat.

MUNKACZY has been forced to forego his holiday and return to his studio because the famous ceiling which he painted for the museum at Vienna was found on being placed in position to be too small by three or four feet.

ACCORDING to Lord Beaconfield's letters, which are now being published by Mr. Froude, there was once a proposal on the part of the Greeks to make the late Lord Derby king of that country, but he declined the honor with thanks.

COUNT VON MOLTKE is an enthusiastic musician, and in former years played the violoncello remarkably well. He delights in quiet musical evenings at home, where Dr. Joachim is a frequent guest, among other famous artists. The Field Marshal lies on the sofa while his visitors play, and alternately smokes and takes snuff from a favorite old box.

VICTORY FOR REBELS.

CHILIAN INSURGENTS FIGHT LIKE FIENDS.

Blood Flows in Torrents—Iquique and Tarapaca Practically Destroyed and Most of the Inhabitants Slaughtered.

A special from Santiago says: During the last ten days President Balmaceda's Government has suffered most terrible blows. The insurrectionists are gaining ground every day, and the fact seems to be very generally known, despite the vigorous efforts of the War Department to suppress all news of a nature likely to increase enthusiasm among the friends of the revolutionists or to dampen the ardor of Balmaceda's followers. The revolutionists have now complete control of the northern provinces—a great source of strength to them and a great injury to the Government.

The first battle of last week was fought on the pampa of Dolores. The government forces numbered 3,000 and the revolutionists had 5,000 men. The revolutionists were defeated, but it is impossible to get any details of the engagement. A large number of soldiers have been sent into the northern provinces to drive out the revolutionists. At Talcahuano and at Concepcion the government has 5,000 soldiers. These troops were to make a descent on the northern provinces, but the plans of the officers have been changed somewhat by the desertion of the First Regiment of Infantry, which has to a man gone over to the revolutionists.

Blood flowed in torrents at Iquique and Tarapaca. The revolutionists began a second bombardment of Iquique. The attack was so sudden that the people had no time to prepare for the murderous fire which was opened on the town. While the Government forces were well trained their work did little good, as all their efforts were more than offset by the concerted action of the land and naval forces of the revolutionists. The encampments of Government forces were completely destroyed. In the city almost every house which was left standing after the first bombardment several weeks ago was destroyed utterly. Late in the afternoon a pitched battle occurred between the land forces, in which some two hundred were killed. When night drew on hostilities were suspended, but on the following day the fighting was resumed with greater vigor than ever. Three pitched battles were fought during the day. Late in the afternoon the fighting ceased, for there were few government soldiers left who were able to fight. Colonel Robles escaped with the fragments of his army to the mountains, pursued by the rebels. The government forces were terribly beaten and at night there was left in Iquique a mass of ruins and piles of dead bodies. The town was totally destroyed and fully twelve hundred people were killed. Just before the bombardment began the consuls of all governments represented at Iquique protested against the brutality of the revolutionists in commencing a bombardment without giving at least the women and children an opportunity of escaping to a place of safety.

But by far the bloodiest and most merciless battle occurred at Tarapaca. The revolutionists attacked the city and the government forces by sea and by land. The firing began early in the morning and continued for several hours, destroying 200 people. When the firing began the inhabitants made a wild rush for the heights back of the town, but they were stopped by the relentless fire from the land forces. Balmaceda's troops fought like tigers, and were met by the rebels with equal ferocity. The scenes were frightful. Men fought hand-to-hand conflicts by themselves. They pursued the defenseless ones into the houses, where many were brutally cut down on both sides. Consecrated ground was not exempt from the ravages of the rebels, for some severe fighting occurred in the churches, where hundreds of women and children were praying for the safety of their husbands and brothers. Soon after the bombardment began several large buildings were discovered to be on fire. Hundreds of people who had taken refuge in their homes were driven from them by the flames, only to be shot down when they sought new places of refuge. The cries and heartrending scenes between mothers and their children seemed to have no effect on the soldiers except to stimulate them to new outrages, to more devilish actions. The sight of young mothers trying to protect their little ones added to their thirst for blood. It is said that personal rancor entered largely into the battle. Many old feuds were settled forever at the bombardment of Tarapaca. The town is a total wreck. Every prominent building has been leveled to the ground. The number of dead and wounded cannot, of course, be accurately calculated, but it greatly exceeds 2,000. Many bodies are being taken from burning buildings, and it is believed that many women and children perished in the flames.

At Gana another battle has been fought. Colonel Huarez, the commander of the government troops, was badly wounded and his troops defeated. About two hundred and fifty were killed in this battle.

The last has not been heard from Iquique by any means. The English Consul there says that he proposes to have something to say about the wholesale destruction of property owned by British subjects. He says that inasmuch as President Balmaceda refuses to recognize the revolutionists as belligerents, but persists in treating them one and all as rebels and traitors, he thereby makes his government responsible for all damage done to the property of British subjects. The consul has made a formal demand for a full reparation, and he says that he will press the claim at once. Valparaiso is now completely fortified, and the harbor is patrolled by several powerful torpedo boats. The forts are supplied with Armstrong guns of the latest pattern, and every approach to the city is commanded by a raking cross fire. The government is determined to save Valparaiso, but the heavy, well-equipped navy of the revolutionists will likely visit the harbor soon, and then there will probably occur a conflict of no mean degree.

Josh Billings' Philosophy.

When a man measures out glory for himself, he alwus heaps the half bushel.

A bile ain't a very sore thing after all, espeshily when it iz on sum other phellow.

Pretty much all the philosophy in this world iz kontained in the following bracket—[grin and bear it].

If i had 4 fust rate dogs i would name the best one "Doubtful," and the other 3 "Useless."

Rumor iz like a swarm of bees, the more yu fite them the less yu git rid ov them.

Virtew may konsist in never sinning, but the glory ov virtew konsists in repentance.

Fashion makes phools ov sum, sinners ov others, and slaves ov all.

I never bet, not so much bekause i am afrade i shall loze az bekause i am afrade i shall win.

I don't kno which haz done the most damage in this world, lazyness or malice, but i guess lazyness.

The man whose whole strength lays in his money is a weak man. I would rather be able tew milk a cow sucksessfully, on the wrong side, than to be such a man.

Clay, Webster and Calhoun.

Clay, Webster and Calhoun, says a writer in the Louisville Courier-Journal, stood together for six long years in opposition to the administration of Gen. Jackson. The public supposed that they were warm personal friends. I do not believe that such was the fact. They were jealous of each other, and why? Because they were all aspirants for the Presidency. When Mr. Calhoun separated from the tripartite alliance, at the extra session of Congress in 1837, Mr. Clay smothered his resentment until February, 1838. Then it was that he arose in the Senate—Mr. Calhoun having just finished a speech in behalf of the Sub-Treasury bill—and poured out his indignation with an eloquence which delighted his Whig friends. He charged Mr. Calhoun with all sorts of political inconsistencies. It was evidently a well-matured oration. At the close Mr. Calhoun took the floor, but it was only to say that he would reply at his leisure to the Senator from Kentucky. In the course of fifteen or twenty days the reply came, and it was a masterly production. He repelled the onset that Mr. Clay had made on his political character with transcendant ability—not forgetting to dissect, with cutting sarcasm, the public record of Mr. Clay. When he finished, a succession of brief and rapid rejoinders took place between them. It only remains for me to add that the partisans of each champion were well satisfied with the day's work.

Great excitement was produced during this session by the presentation of petitions praying Congress to abolish slavery and the slave trade in the District of Columbia.

John Quincy Adams figured largely on the question. He denied that he was an Abolitionist, but he denounced in violent terms the resolution which was adopted in regard to the abolition petitions. That resolution was in these words:

> Resolved, That all petitions, memorials and papers touching the abolition of slavery, or the buying, selling or transferring of slaves in any District or Territory of the United States be laid upon the table without being debated, printed, read or referred, and that no further action whatever shall be had thereon.

The intent of this resolution was to allay all excitement on the subject of slavery. It had precisely the opposite effect. Mr. Adams declared and continued to declare that it was a denial of the right of petition secured to all citizens by the constitution of the United States. This was the cry of the Abolitionists and anti-slavery men all over the North, and greatly swelled their ranks. When I look back to those times, I am now satisfied that it would have been a wiser policy to refer these petitions to the Committee on the District of Columbia. This course would have deprived the Abolitionists of a very important part of their thunder.

How Animals Help Each Other.

Darwin in his "Descent of Man" has many kind things to say about animals. Social animals, he tells us, perform many little services for each other. Horses nibble and cows lick each other. Monkeys pick from each other thorns and burrs and parasites. Wolves and some other beasts of prey hunt in packs, and aid each other in attacking their victims. Pelicans fish in concert. The Hamadryas baboons turn over stones to find insects, etc.; and, when they come to a large one, as many as can stand round turn it over together and share the booty. Social animals mutually defend each other. Brehm encountered in Abyssinia a troop of baboons which were crossing a valley; they were attacked by the dogs, but the old males immediately hurried down from the rocks, and, with mouths widely opened, roared so fearfully that the dogs precipitately retreated. They were again encouraged to the attack; but by this time all the baboons had reascended the heights, excepting a young one about six months old, which, loudly calling for aid, climbed on a block of rock and was surrounded. One of the largest males, a true hero, came down again from the mountain, slowly went to the young one, coaxed him, and triumphantly led him away, the dogs being too much astonished to make an attack. On another occasion an eagle seized a young monkey, which, by clinging to a branch, was not at once carried off. It cried loudly for assistance; upon which the other members of the troop, with much uproar, rushed to the rescue, surrounded the eagle, and pulled out so many feathers that he no longer thought of his prey, but only how to escape.

To go into statistics, it is estimated that during the year the average man has said: "How are yer?" 3,743 times; "Is this hot enough for you?" and "Is this cold enough for you?" each 471 times; "Pleasant day," 10,748 times; "Looks like rain," 12,325½ times; other metereological remarks, not classified, 786,421,107,365,792,001 times.

The dwelling, with few exceptions, consists of a single story, usually containing two rooms, one on each side. One is used as a bakery and kitchen, and also as a sleeping-room; at one corner is the fire-place, a strange structure, six or eight feet square, made of solid flat slabs of stone, generally plastered over. Wood is placed in these ovens, and, when it is consumed and only charcoal remains, a sliding iron trap-door prevents the heat from escaping, warming the walls. In one section of the structure there is an open fire-place used for cooking. Beds are placed along the walls, in number according to the size of the family. These are a kind of sliding box, so that they can be made of different widths, according to the requirements; they are filled with hay or straw, furnished with home-made blankets or sheepskins, and sometimes with eider-down covers and pillows. In the morning the box is drawn in, and, when covered with a board, answers for a sofa, upon which people rest during the day. The whole family, including servants, males and females, sleep in this room. On the other side is the guest-room, which is also used as a sleeping apartment. One or two bedsteads, the beds filled with the down of the eider-duck, the blankets made of the same material, form the chief part of the furniture.—Land of the Midnight Sun.

Dangers of Idiomatic French.

The mistakes of tyros in the use of foreign idioms will never cease to be amusing. The following actually occurred in the cabin of an ocean steamer. A young American gentleman engaged in serious conversation with a French lady, thinking to pay her a compliment because of the wisdom she was displaying, exclaimed: "Madame, vouz etes une sage femme." Instead of smiling an acknowledgment as was her custom on such occasions, Madame marched away in high dudgeon. No wonder. The unfortunate young man had called her a midwife. Had he said femme sage, Madame would probably have understood him correctly, though even then sage thus applied to a woman more often means virtuous than wise.—Epoch.

Nearly Frantic.

Has it ever been your misfortune to be brought into frequent contact with a person excessively nervous. If so, you must be aware that trivial causes, unnoticed by the vigorous, drive a nervous invalid to the verge of distraction. It is as unnecessary to particularize these as it is impossible to guard against them. The root of the evil is usually imperfect digestion and assimilation. To assist these functions, and through their renewed, complete discharge to reenforce weak nerves, in conjunction with other portions of the physical organism, is within the power of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, systematically and continuously used. There is no disappointment here, no matter what or how grievous the failure of other so-called tonics. No sedative or opiate—avoid both!—can compare with this invigorating nerve tranquilizer. Constipation, biliousness, malaria, rheumatism, kidney troubles are cured by it.

Unloading Freight by Electricity.

Electricity is now being much used for the unloading of lumber and other freight from vessels in conjunction with a whip hoisting-drum. The power used is an electric motor, which is connected by a belt with the shaft which operates the drums. Each drum is operated by a lever and can be stopped in an instant. When the lumber is drawn from the vessel a large hook from the wharf derrick is attached and the sticks are transferred to any part of the yard. The entire pulling, twisting, and transferring are done by electric power.

Chased by Wolves in Nebraska.

Miss Mary Neville of Leeport, Neb., was returning in a wagon from a visit to her brother in Cheyenne County, when her horse gave a vicious plunge and snort and was away like the wind, pursued by seven hungry wolves, which succeeded in getting up close enough to snap their gleaming white teeth on the rear of the cart seat. The perilous chase was kept up for a distance of five miles, until the frightened lady arrived within a few rods of her home.

Very Important

The importance of taking a good Spring Medicine cannot be overestimated. The changing weather affects the human system in such a way that it is now in great need of, and especially susceptible to, the benefit to be derived from a reliable preparation like Hood's Sarsaparilla. To make your blood pure, give you a good appetite, and make you strong, take

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the spring of 1890 I experienced that tired, dull feeling. Dyspepsia seized me, and each morning I had vomiting spells. I was much discouraged. My physician suggested Hood's Sarsaparilla, which I took, and am happy to say it made me a new man, and I never was better than now." The joy of people cured of Dyspepsia by Hood's Sarsaparilla is often beyond expression. To be relieved from the tortures of indigestion, heartburn, nausea, and other distressing symptoms, is sufficient cause for the grateful letters we receive. If you suffer from any trouble of dyspeptic nature, from sick headache, or that all gone, tired feeling, take

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"I have for the last two or three years, during the spring months, taken Hood's Sarsaparilla to purify my blood, and I find it invaluable as a spring medicine. It seems as if I could not do without it. I would recommend it to all." MRS. DORA BENZSHEK, Negaunee, Mich.

SAVED AT LAST.

AUBURN, IND., Oct. 3, 1890.

Dr. J. W. Bergen:

Dear Sir:—By this time, I presume, you will want to know how I am getting along with Bergen's Asthma Cure.

Well, you have heard of persons obtaining a new life. Now I really feel that way myself. When I began taking Bergen's Asthma Cure, I was just coming out of a long siege of it, and was reduced to 115 pounds; weak, short of breath, chills, fever, and badly demoralized generally, coughing from half an hour to an hour every night.

Since commencing, from the third night, I have not lost ten minutes' sleep all night, cough gone, gained seventeen pounds, chills gone, fever gone, shortness of breath and difficulty of breathing gone, consequently I feel a thousand per cent. better. I thank God every day that I ever saw your advertisement, and that I was induced to write to you.

This is peculiarly encouraging in my case, as I had suffered so long and was so discouraged about my case, having tried everything. I am telling the good news every day.

Push on the good work; you are on the right track.

Yours Very Gratefully,
R. McDOUGALL.

The testimonials to these FACTS are NUMEROUS and STRONG, similar to the following:

From the Hon. Harvey D. Colvin, Ex-Mayor of Chicago:

CHICAGO, July 24, 1890.

S. H. KLINCK—DEAR SIR: I am pleased to say that I consider your remedy the best medicine in existence, for the human afflictions you claim to cure. I suffered from catarrh with bronchitis for many years. During that time I employed physicians and faithfully tried many so-called remedies advertised to cure this disease, without any material benefit, when a friend induced me to try your remedy, claiming others had been cured by it. The first bottle gave me the most pleasing results. I have continued its use and I can not say too much for it. It found me too near the grave for comfort and restored me to health again. It adorns my toilet stand and by using it occasionally I am kept well.

I would not be without it if it cost $25 per bottle. I earnestly recommend it to all my afflicted friends.

LADIES' WHIST.

List! Four ladies playing whist.
"Is it my lead?" asks the first;
"Well, of all hands, I've the worst!"
"Dear me! if I only knew
What you had," chirps number two.
"Now I can't say, on the whole,
That this play accords with Pole,
But it is the best I have."
Number three says, mild and suave,
While above this small uproar
Comes the chorus from all four,
"What's the trump?"

"This I think's the leading spade,
O-oh! I thought the jack was played."
"Well, that makes two points for you.
One for us, did you say, Sue?"
"How can that be? Did you trump?"
"Have you heard about the bump Nellie's boy had on his head?"
"Isn't that a lovely spread?"
"Did I take that trick? Dear me!"
Here strike in the other three,
"What's the trump?"

"Mrs. Gray, is that your ace?"
"Oh, say, have you seen the lace
Selling now at Brown & Dart's?"
"I forgot that she trumps hearts."
"And the most exquisite shade—
Gracious! haven't you a spade?"
"Is it my play? What was led?"
"Do you know you can get the thread
Only four cents—John Smith's best"—
Just here chime in all the rest,
"What's the trump?"

"How much better we all play
Than we did." "Well, I should say!"
"Once I couldn't keep my mind
On the game, but now I find
It as easy as can be."
"Is it your deal? Let me see—
No, the cards belong to you."
"I remember now that Sue
Led the king, and that the nine—
Did you say the lead was mine?
What's the trump?"

CHUB.

A Romance of West Virginia.

BY DAVID LOWRY.

CHAPTER I.

THE FIGHT AT THE CORNERS.

"Touch him! Put a finger on him if you dare! I'll put a bullet through the first man who makes a move."

The crowd fell back before Chub's flashing eyes.

Every man there knew she would shoot as quick as she would look or speak.

Chub Dawson held her head erect, defiant: her bosom heaved with emotion. Her hands clutched her rifle with a tense grasp that afforded an outlet for the passion that blazed out in the defiant threat that caused those nearest her to recoil in dread.

"You are a lot of cowards. A great set of big, hulking loafers, to set on one man. If he had a fair show—as he will have—he'd whip the best man your crowd can pick to set up against him. I want you to leave him. Git, now. If there's any shootin' done now, I'll take a hand in it myself."

"Sho! now, Chub, you'd oughtn't to."

"Steve Treddle, the best thing you can do is to cut sticks. Who made you spokesman for the Corners?"

The crowd laughed, faintly, to be sure, but the contempt in Chub's voice echoed the sentiments of more than one there.

Besides, the crowd was ready now to laugh at anything.

They had witnessed enough blood-letting for one day, and Chub's appearance on the scene, unexpected as it was, proved timely in more ways than one.

The crowd looked at each other sheepishly, and slunk off. Soon there was only Chub and Dan Bash left.

"You had to fight, I suppose," said Chub, as she looked, first at the ground, then at Dan's face.

Dan's eye was marked. There was a red gash on one cheek, too, and his clothes were covered with dust—dust that had been lying on the road.

"I couldn't help it."

Dan did not apologize—did not explain. He simply told the truth.

"I suppose I can tell how it happened. You quarreled with Ned Monk."

"No. He quarreled with me."

"Couldn't you get away from him?"

"Why should I try to avoid any man?"

Dan looked at Chub in a way that brought the blood to her cheeks, and knowing it Chub grew, or pretended to grow, very angry again.

"Yes, it is a nice way for men to maul and pound each other—to bite and kick, and—and—and scratch—and—and—gouge, and——"

Chub paused for lack of words to express her disgust.

"I tell you it was no more my fault than it is yours. He crowded me twice. I was here on business. I didn't come of my own choice. I had to talk to the school directors—had to wait here to see two of them, and the crowd was here, shooting at a mark. I was sitting right where you are standing, when first Ned Monk tramped on my foot. I pushed him off, and when he didn't apologize I saw he was half drunk. Then he was beaten—they all beat him shooting—and he wanted to fight, and picked on me. When he said he could whip me, what ought I to have done? Run?"

"No," said Chub in a low tone, with flaming cheeks.

"I didn't! I stood up; they all gathered around, and, before he suspected it, I had him on his back. I knocked him down three times in succession; and then his brother Bill came at me. I knocked him down, too; I had them down, when one of the gang hit me with a stone on the cheek-bone, here."

Dan pointed to his eye.

"That knocked me down—then three of them were on me at one time. That was what made me pull the gun, and shoot Ned Monk. If I had shot him through the heart, I would have served him right, the coward!"

"Yes, you would!" said Chub, admiringly. "Well, I didn't know the ins and outs of it. I believe you, though. I'd sooner take your word, Dan Bash, than the whole crowd's!"

"I'm obliged to you, Miss Dawson."

"Don't 'Miss' me—my name's just Chub."

"Well, Chub, then; I owe you my life."

"Nonsense. Nothing of the kind. I just happened to come over in time—that's all. I thought our Ben was here—and——"

Chub paused. She could not, would not tell a lie, and the truth was she had heard the shouts of the combatants as she stood on her father's back porch.

There was no one in the house but herself.

To pick up the rifle she was familiar with, and had used for more than a year, and run over the low hill between her father's house and the tavern and smithy occupied less than two minutes.

She burst upon the crowd like an avenging angel.

Her hair, worn in loose curls, was flying over her shoulders, her bonnet had fallen back on her neck, and her face was set with scorn and passion as she aimed her gun at the crowd and commanded them to desist.

Half a dozen had gathered about Dan Bash; they meant murder, but Dan managed to get his back against the smithy, and was striking out right and left when Chub Dawson interposed in the very nick of time.

"You'd maybe best go to our house till pa comes home, Mr. Bash."

Dan Bash meditated.

It was good advice. The chances were that if he met any of the crowd controlled by the Monks they would resume the quarrel, and he would either suffer at their hands or be compelled to kill some of them to save his own life.

But Dan's sober second thought governed him.

"No, I am obliged to you for the offer, but I'll not let anything prevent me from attending to the business that brought me here. I'll go back the way I came."

"You know best," said Chub, stiffly. Then she looked at him covertly, turned and hastened home, while Dan Bash looked after her.

"She don't think how much I've saved her. What a splendid woman she is!" Dan added to himself as he sat down again and sighed.

The landlord, who had remained in his house all this time, looking on, came out now.

Then his wife, an old woman, much older than the landlord (it was said he married her for her property), stood in the doorway, looking at Dan Bash.

"I told you you'd find it rough traveling on the mountains," said the landlord with a cough.

"Yes—and more than me finds it rough," replied Dan, dryly.

"The boys think you are too—too——"

"I know what you would say," interposed Dan. "Too fine. Well, I wear a clean shirt. I keep my face clean—and I mind my own business, Mr. Potts."

"Yes, yes—you do, indeed. Same time, the boys 'round the crik think you're kind o' upsot."

"Well, I think an American citizen is entitled to his opinion. I have mine."

"I'm not agreein' with the boys, Mr. Bash. Oh, no! Not at all!"

"Mr. Potts!" Bash spoke sharply. His voice expressed contempt. Mrs. Potts, listening in the doorway, thought he was "awful high-strung." "Mr. Potts, I don't care the price of a pine cone for the opinion of such of the 'boys' as you mean. Respectable people I respect—I don't waste time on any others. I've better things, more important things to occupy my mind, and you are at liberty to say this to the 'boys' when you see them again."

"I—I—I'd ought to told you, Mr. Bash, but them two directors you say you want to see—why, I heard this morning as how they'd changed their mind 'bout comin' over to the Corners."

"What's that, Mr. Potts?"

"Why, they're goin' to 'Squire Meeks' to a plowin' match—some new-fangled plow, I reckon. So, you'll not meet 'em here to-day."

"Thank you," said Dan Bash, as he started to his feet. "I'll try to see them before night."

As he walked down the road rapidly, the landlord shook his head slowly.

"There'll be trouble grow out o' this day's work, Susan. Mind my words. There'll be trouble grow out of it. That young man's powerful set in his way—powerful headstrong."

Meantime Dan Bash walked rapidly along the road. He was resolved to make up for lost time. It was all important to see the directors. He had much at stake. His pride was involved now. He could not, would not turn back; come what might he would remain in the district until he was compelled to leave it.

A little more than a mile from the Corners the road dipped suddenly in a ravine—a cleft between the mountain tops. There was a very large spring in the ravine, and man and beast welcomed the sparkling clear water that challenged them there. Dan Bash had slaked his thirst often on the roadside there, and even now he promised himself a good drink when he reached the spring.

Just beside the spring, concealed by the thick bushes near it, sat the Monk brothers and a crony who was under their control.

Bob Squatty was not a bad man. He was, unfortunately, easily influenced, and when he had a glass of liquor under his vest was as irresponsible as a lunatic.

The Monk brothers were talking in low tones to Bob as they were resting in the shade.

"Squatty," said Ned Monk, "whatever happens, you must be as silent as the grave."

"Or maybe you'll go to an early grave," said Bill Monk, meaningly.

"Exactly," echoed Ned.

"Oh, I'll be mum," said Squatty. "I never told on you yet, did I?"

"No, you never did, Squatty," said Bill.

"Bill," said Ned, looking at his brother, "do you know, I believe Squatty would rather have his tongue cut out or his eyes burned out than give you and me away?"

Squatty shivered and tried to laugh. "Oh, here, now, you fellows know I'm with you. What's the use talkin'?"

"None whatever," said Ned Monk.

He arose, stepped out on the road, crossed it, looked over to the Corners, and came back.

"Squatty—mind! Mum's the word. We may want you to help dig a grave round here soon."

Squatty shivered again.

He knew they were there for murder. Who could it be but Bash? Well—he would help—he must help, Squatty said to himself, but his cowardly soul seemed to shrink into even smaller dimensions as he shivered the third time.

"Squatty" said Ned Monk, as he brought his hand heavily down on his listener's knee, "we're goin' to settle Dan Bash. He's comin' down the road. He'll be here dreckly. If you don't help—we'll kill you! There ain't no chance to go back on this deal, Squatty."

Poor Bob Squatty's teeth chattered now, but he was in for it. He would have his throat cut if he didn't obey—so he concluded he would render all the assistance in his power, so as to make a clean, sure job of it.

CHAPTER II.

LYING IN WAIT.

But the Monks were not to have it all their own way.

As rapidly as Dan Bash strode along, there were feet as swift as his.

A pair of light feet that cut across a hillside, within view of the traveled road; a pair of hands that pushed aside bushes and overhanging branches of trees quickly.

It was Belle Dawson, otherwise known throughout the district as "Chub" Dawson.

Instead of going home again, as Bash and Mr. Potts surmised, Chub paused when she disappeared around the hill, pondered, and suddenly made her way by a short cut across to a point where she could observe the road.

Once there, she shielded her eyes and looked steadily.

What did she see?

A man. Yes, plainly a man. He stood in the middle of the road. Chub could see him turn and look back. Then she observed a second man. He, too, stood in the middle of the road, and, like his comrade, looked back.

"The cowards!" Chub muttered. "It's the Monks."

Chub mused.

"If I go back home and find my father, by the time we can get around they'll get the advantage of him."

Then another thought darted into Chub's brain. She caught her breath.

"Maybe they mean to murder him."

It was an easy matter. Anybody could conceal themselves among the bushes, pounce on the wayfarer, overpower, kill him and conceal his body among the heavy undergrowth.

Chub looked again.

There was nobody in view.

The assassins had concealed themselves.

Chub darted onward, forgetting that her rifle was hanging loosely in one hand until it caught on a twig. Then she suddenly stopped, examined it carefully, grasped it tightly, and ran on again.

There was a life at stake now. She could not walk. Over the boulders, over logs, over the clear spots and rough places she knew so well, Chub sped.

"I hope I'll be in time—I hope I'll be in time," she said to herself as she hurried toward the spring in the ravine.

Meantime Dan Bash walked faster and faster toward his fate.

He was resolved now to decide the question whether he would remain in the district, at fair wages for teaching the school on the mountains, or "grub around roots" for such wages as the farmers could afford to pay him.

He had excellent reasons, satisfactory to himself, for carrying out his original plan. There would have been less reason to remain in the district if he had not encountered the ill-will of the young men who assumed the right to control the school and all public affairs, by the exercise of mere brute strength.

The Monks and their associates jeered at reason. Common sense, and fair play, and justice were things they never took account of.

As Dan Bash walked on, swinging at a free, independent gait, he remembered the murderous looks Ned and Bill Monk gave him when Chub Dawson interposed in time to save him from being maimed or murdered by the gang.

He realized fully the nature of the contest he had entered upon, but he had not invited it. The quarrel was forced upon him.

But he had a good deal to learn.

He did not know the depth of the meanness to which the Monks would stoop to get the better of an antagonist. He had yet to learn that the Monks and their assistants deemed all means fair that promised them advantage. They never fought on equal terms, or single-handed. There was always somebody in reserve—something that could be counted on with almost "dead certainty," to employ Ned Monk's own words.

The reader has seen how the brothers pressed poor Squatty into their service.

"I hear him coming, now," said Ned Monk to his companions. "Now, Bill—I'll aim at him first. I'll try to make sure, just when he comes level with us on the road. If I don't bring him down, you shoot, then we'll both jump on him, and Squatty here will help the best he knows how."

The little group of assassins held their breath until Dan Bash came within fifty yards of their place of concealment.

Something caused Bash to halt.

Was it a forewarning?

He glanced up and down the road, stooped suddenly, and picked up a stone and a heavy stick. Then he walked on.

As he neared the spot where the trio were concealed, Ned Monk held his rifle firmly in his hand in front of him, ready to bring it up to his shoulder.

Dan Bash walked on resolutely, all unconscious of the danger threatening him.

As Ned Monk observed him nearing him he drew up his gun. His finger was on the trigger, when a crack of a rifle startled the group. A bullet cut a twig just over Ned Monk's head.

Dan Bash halted. He thought the shot was aimed at him.

Dan Bash walked on, grasping the stand in one hand, concealing it from view, and resolved, in case he was assaulted, to wield his stick to the best advantage.

He was opposite the spring when suddenly Bill Monk and Squatty rushed out on him.

The assassins had changed their plans. They were resolved to carry out the original scheme.

They would kill him, and then take care of the person who had shot at Ned Monk.

Bill Monk had a knife open in his right hand; Squatty had a club. Both were approaching him—the one with upraised knife, the other with upraised club—when a shot was heard; Bill Monk's arm dropped, and the next moment Chub Dawson sprang between Ned Monk and his brother Bill.

At the same instant Dan Bash brought his stick down so hard on Squatty's arm that that individual howled with pain.

He thought his arm was broken.

"Murderers!"

Chub Dawson at that moment was the embodiment of vengeance.

Her eyes blazed with passion as she turned, first to Ned, then to Bill Monk.

"You Monks, as sure as you stand there, I'll bore a hole in both of you. You think you are not watched. Well, you had best move on now, or you'll have more than Chub Dawson to deal with. Take my advice. Move! Make yourselves scarce as quick as your feet will let you, because you may came to grief if you don't."

Ned Monk half drew his rifle. He had half a mind to fight the woman, and the man she had defended a second time that day.

"Come, Ned. We'll only make trouble fightin' Chub," said Bill Monk, hastily.

He thought her father was following. Her language warranted some such inference. As for Squatty, he was already edging away as rapidly from the range of Chub's rifle as he could move without running.

"Curse her! She's wounded my arm," said Bill Monk.

"The next shot will be nearer your heart. Make another move—dare to touch Dan Bash, and one of you dies, if I die the same minute."

"We'll remember you, Chub," said Ned Monk, as he hastily walked after his brother Bill.

"Do," said Chub. Then, elevating her voice: "You don't want a lock of my hair, I guess, the way you are moving."

The last thing the cowardly trio heard as they walked on down the dusty road was Chub Dawson's ringing laugh.

Irish Dividends.

The silver mines of Nevada have not been all profit to their shareholders, nor made many of them, comparatively speaking, millionaires. Outside of Consolidated Virginia and California the Comstock mines represent an actual loss of $36,000,000 in assessments in twenty-five years. Sierra Nevada is the banner stock for assessments, having depleted the cash assets of its stockholders by $6,250,000, and returned dividends in scarcely a sixth of that sum. Of other stocks Union has drawn $2,310,000 in assessments and never paid a dividend, while Justice has belied its name by taking $3,500,000 from its stockholders and not returning them a cent.—Portland Oregonian.

FROM San Francisco comes the news that a Chinaman, Wong Ching Wah, has constructed a telephone which is superior to any in existence, and which, moreover, avoids, so it is asserted, any infringement of the Bell patent. Details are not forthcoming at present.

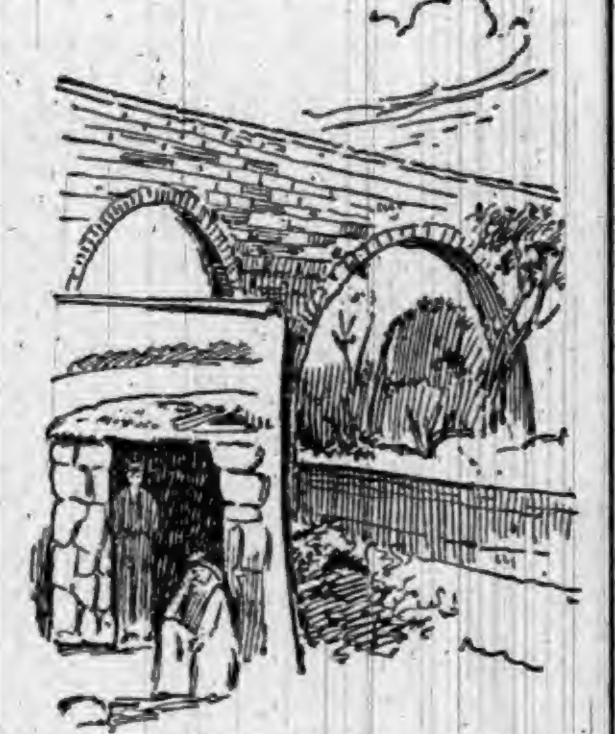
THE CITY OF JERICHO.

It Is at the Present Time the Most Squalid Place in Palestine.

Jericho is between thirteen and fourteen miles northwest of Jerusalem, and it is to-day the most squalid town in Palestine. There were, in former times, three Jerichos. The Jericho of Joshua, it is believed, was located near the lovely Fountain of Elisha—called "Ain es-Sultan" by the Arabs—the place where Elisha healed the waters with salt. This was the Jericho of the Jews, whose history is so full of romance. The Jericho of the Romans—that is, of Herod's or of Christ's day—was more than a mile away, as the old aqueduct beyond Ain es-Sultan and the Roman ruins thereabout indicate. The ruins of the Jericho of the time of the crusades probably lie beneath the modern village, only a short distance from the Fountain of Elisha. The present Jericho is opposite the opening of the Valley of Achor, in which Achan, "the troubler of Israel," was stoned, and through which runs what is supposed by some to be the Brook Cherith, where Elisha was fed by the ravens. A fine stone bridge, thirty-five feet high, with pointed arches, crosses the Cherith here. Standing upon it, one can see several ruined aqueducts, showing how much attention must have been given to the irrigation of the entire plain. Some of these aqueducts have two tiers of arches, and are handsome even in their ruin.



A JERICHO HOME—BRIDGE OVER THE CHERITH.

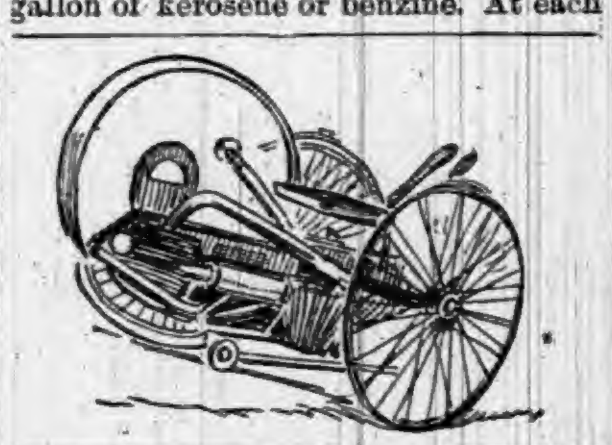
CYCLING BY KEROSENE.

A Gallon of Oil Will Carry Machine and Rider Forty Miles.

Very few of the many motors that have been designed for the propulsion of tricycles and other light vehicles have withstood the tests of practical use. Interest in this means of locomotion has not died out by any means, and there is a want that is still unfilled.

An English inventor, Mr. Edward Butler, of Greenwich, has recently produced a petroleum-motor tricycle, which looks like a step toward the solution of the problem. A pretty good idea of the general appearance of this machine is given in the cut herewith, which comes from the Scientific American's column.

This machine is designed to run forty miles at a speed of three to ten miles per hour upon a consumption of one gallon of kerosene or benzine. At each side of the driving-wheel is a motor cylinder, the pistons of which operate the rear wheel of the tricycle by means of a crank shaft and a specially devised epicyclic gear, which communicates the motion of the shaft to the wheel in the ratio of 6 to 1.

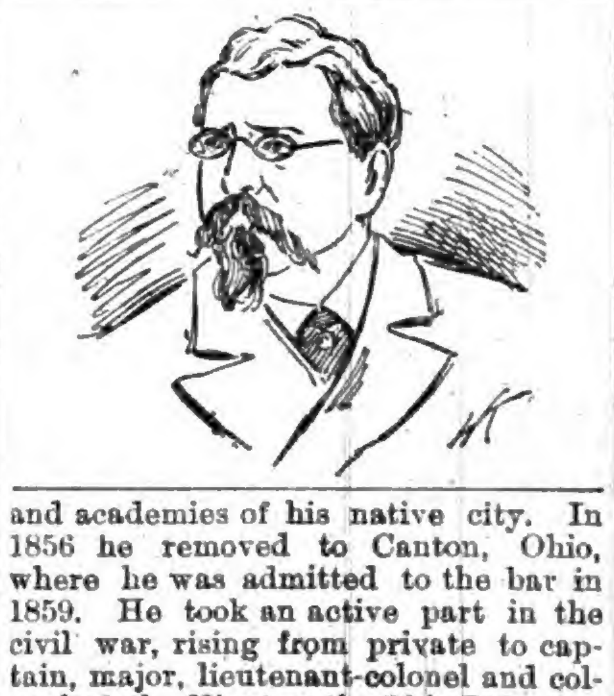


The motors are driven by the explosion of a mixture of air and oil-spray in the cylinders, the ignition being effected by a current of electricity supplied by a small single-fluid battery under the seat. The machine is stopped, not by stopping the engine, but by raising the driving-wheel from the ground by a foot-lever, which throws the weight of this portion of the machine upon small castor-wheels. In starting the driving-wheel is merely lowered to the ground again, the engine being already in motion. The whole framing of this machine is made of oval steel tubing, and the entire apparatus weighs 289 pounds.

Hon. Charles F. Manderson.

At the Republican senatorial caucus held recently, Senator Manderson, of Nebraska, was made President pro tempore of the Senate.

Charles F. Manderson was born in Philadelphia, Pa., February 9, 1837. He received his education in the schools and academies of his native city. In 1856 he removed to Canton, Ohio, where he was admitted to the bar in 1859. He took an active part in the civil war, rising from private to captain, major, lieutenant-colonel and colonel of the Nineteenth Ohio Infantry. He removed to Omaha, Neb., in 1869, where he held a number of city offices before being elected to the United States Senate in 1883. He was reelected in 1889.



Spare Moments.

EXAGGERATION, as to rhetoric, is "using a vast force to lift a feather;" as to morals and character, it is using falsehood to lift one's self out of the confidence of his fellow-men.

HE who indulges his sense in any excesses renders himself obnoxious to his own reason; and to gratify the brute in him, displeases the man, and sets his two natures at variance.

BE a pattern to others, and then all will go well; for as a whole city is infected by the licentious passions and vices of great men, so is it likewise reformed by their moderation.

The greatest improvement in Corsets during the past twenty years is the use of Coraline in the place of horn or whalebone. It is used in all of Dr. Warner's Corsets and in no others.

The advantages of Coraline over horn or whalebone are that it does not become set like whalebone, and it is more flexible and more durable.

Dr. Warner's Coraline Corsets are made in twenty-four different styles, fitting every variety of figures—thin, medium, stout, long waists and short waists.

Birthday Party.

A splendid surprise party was given at the residence of John Berg, on West 11th street, Monday evening, April 6, in memory of his Forty-fifth anniversary. Those present on this occasion, were:

Mr. and Mrs. Hostetter, Mrs. Ellenwood and son, John Tresh and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Brand and daughter, Misses Cora and Emma Webb, Mrs. Ashley, Mrs. Hagman, Peter Young and daughter, Miss Showalter, Miss Jennie Miller, Herman Kessler, Jules [illegible] and wife, Mrs. McIntyre, F. A. Hoff and wife, John Cool and wife, Mrs. Thomas, Mr. Caruth, Mrs. Wm. Scheir, John Slussman and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Chetter, and perhaps others, whose names we did not get. Mr. B., was made the recipient of a handsome and easy chair. A good time was had and all went from the scene of pleasure with the hope that host might live to enjoy many more occasions like this.

The election of Senator Palmer was celebrated at Springfield, Ill., in the greatest gathering since Grover Cleveland's election.

A Pleasant Surprise.

On Monday, March 30, by some of the friends of Samuel Brown, who resides four miles east of town. They took some sort of grab scheme to decoy him from home, and then his neighbors assembled at his house to the number of 46, and then sent for him to come home. They all spent a few hours very pleasantly in a social way, and then came the dinner, which was an excellent one, and to which all paid strict attention till its size had materially diminished. Jacob Grimm, however, was the acknowledged champion and had to be wheeled away on a wheel barrow, (figuratively speaking.) Then Mr. Brown was presented a fine easy chair, and to Mrs. Brown a nice dress pattern, for which both thanked their friends heartily. In spite of bad weather, all was merry as a marriage, and all returned home with light hearts and happy faces, though the roads were heavy. These neighborly gatherings always leave a bright place on life's pathway and a pleasant memory for the years to come.

ALAS!

How wretched is the man who has fallen a victim to Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, or diseased Liver, with all the horrible attendants. Look upon the picture. Poor man, being tired of dragging out a miserable existence, he is the picture of despondency; altogether, he is rather a forlorn specimen. Do we pity him? Of course; but at the same time feel assured that in a measure he is to blame for the bad state into which he has fallen. A sure, safe, speedy and easy cure can be found in Simmons Liver Regulator—Nature's own remedy. No mercury or deleterious drugs, not unpleasant to the taste, and always reliable—just such a remedy as you can pin your faith to without a shadow of disappointment. Read the testimonial, don't take our word for it:

"I have been subject to severe spells of Congestion of the Liver, and have been in the habit of taking from 15 to 20 grains of calomel, which generally laid me up for three or four days. Lately I have been taking Simmons Liver Regulator which gave me relief, without any interruption to business." J. HUGG, Middleport, Ohio.

CORRESPONDENCE

WATERLOO.

Dr. Chamberlain is improving slowly.

Mrs. Chetter visited Waterloo last week.

La grippe has lost its hold in this vicinity.

Mrs. John Maxson has a brother here visiting.

Dan Shepherd, of Van Wert, Ohio, is in town.

F. Deventer went to Ft. Wayne last Tuesday.

E. Williamson visited Ft. Wayne last Tuesday.

Rev. W O. Butler was in Waterloo last Tuesday.

Isaac Speer has been quite sick since last Saturday.

Mrs. Mary Dickinson is visiting in Auburn this week.

L. E. Hine, of Toledo, was in town last week Thursday.

Miss Hattie Dickinson is at home spending her vacation.

N. H. Weaver has a lay off for a few days. Cause, ill health.

Rev. S. P. Klotz is recovering from a severe attack of the grip.

Rev. L. A. Rhetts returned from conference last Monday evening.

Miss Ona Brand was married the latter part of last week to Mr. Smith.

Rev. J. M. DeWeese, was assigned pastor of the M. E. church at this place.

Rev. Mr Klotz is putting in a drain on the east front of his residence property.

Don't forget Miss Alice Palmer's free lecture at the M. E. church next Tuesday night.

Mrs. Fred Napper and baby, of Butler, are visiting Mrs Napper's parents, Fred Deventer and wife.

Fresh fish, in abundance, supply the Waterloo market. Thus far the customers are as abundant as the fish.

Samuel Edee has opened his house for a hotel. Travelers and boarders can be entertained for a dollar a day.

The young ladies who tried walking down the track to Auburn last Sunday did n't get that far, but say they will try it again.

Rev. M. M. Marshall, of the Presbyterian church, will be married Thursday, the 9th. He will move his family to Waterloo next week.

S. R Rickel's youngest son aged about 7 years. died last Saturday, of Bright's disease. He was buried in the Waterloo cemetery on Monday.

Next week, commencing, on Tuesday, at 9:30 a. m. the much talked of debate on baptism between the Rev. Messrs. Dillon and Stewart will take place.

Rev. Mr. Mygrant has been assigned to Hicksville, as pastor of the Evangelical church there. He will go to his new field of labor some time this week.

Mrs Wildason, aged 74 years, who resided just south of town for a great many years, was buried last Sunday. She was a sufferer for a long time.

Remember the meetings of the Woman's Missionary Society in the U B church, April 15th and 16th Mrs Esther B. Save will deliver the annual address on Wednesday night.

Richard Locke has received from De Pauw University the prize of a free course in the Boston theological school, and a salary of one thousand dollars per year for preaching in one of the pulpits in that city.

BUTLER.

The past week has been a very dull one in town owing to the continued bad roads.

Another daughter has come to stay with Thomas Fralich, who now lives at Garrett.

Work has been commenced upon the new Tomlinson block, on the east side of Broadway.

There was no preaching in the M. E. church last Sunday, the first since its completion.

The Lake Shore local freights now run through from Toledo to Elkhart, and our early train has been taken off, much to our inconvenience.

Cory Blair is building a new dwelling on the south side, to be occupied by Franklin Bills, who exchanges his farm for this town property.

A Mr. Wilcox was married about a month ago to a Miss Daniels, of this place. He took suddenly ill early last week and was buried on Friday—a sad honeymoon, indeed.

Mrs. Patrick Gleason, daughter of Geo. McNabb, died of consumption at her residence on East Green street last week. Her funeral took place from the Disciple church, Rev. Diffenbaugh, of the Lutheran church officiating. She was in her twenty fourth year and leaves a little daughter and her husband to mourn her early death.

The sick list has not materially diminished. Mother Headly is around again, Mother Revet is no worse, E. P. Masters is out again, Ezra Hopkins is better, Mrs. Hopkins is seriously ill, C. H. Thurstin is quite sick, besides a number of others whose names do not occur to us. The strange part of the matter is that about all the sickness in town is confined to grown or old people.

CONCORD.

The Nichols & Sons have returned to their home in Michigan.

Will and Dora Shilling are visiting friends in Edgerton, Ohio.

The Social will be held at Mrs. D. W. Baker's Wednesday afternoon and evening.

Abe Culbertson says if that man will come back he will inform him that corn spent him 50 cents per bushel.

John Koontz and family will shortly leaves for central Missouri, where they expect to make their future home.

Wm. Shutt was buried last Sabbath, he leaves a wife, five daughters and a large circle of friends mourn his loss.

F. Buchanan has a new mode of loading hay. In binding down the pole, too much muscle breaking it in two and coming down like any other frog. He desires no infringement on his patent.

In some way a misunderstanding has arisen in regard to having the old settlers' name put on the window glass. That would be impossible on account of the great cost. They will be framed instead.

The third of May has been decided on for dedication day. The church is a neat tasty brick structure nestled in the southwest corner of G. W. Draggoo's maple grove about 80 rods west of the old church which was dedicated September 5, 1853. The leading feature is the pioneer window which is a beauty with the emblem a golden sheaf of wheat. We hope the old pioneers will all be able to be present on that occasion so they can adjust their glasses on their noses and there, printed in beautiful bold type and nicely framed, read their names. With sad regret we mention the names of those who have died, but their names are here, Mrs. Daniel Rhodes, Mrs. A. M Furnish, S. W. Ralston, W H Dills and Wm Shutt. (Names of all contributors to the old settlers list will be in the COURIER April 16 or 23rd.—Editor.)

Some body had a good supper of chicken and crackers one evening last week in Mr. Shatergood's sugar camp but could not eat all the soup.

NEW ERA.

MR EDITOR:—It has been a long time since any items have appeared in your paper from this place. Since the opportunity is offered me, I will write a few happenings of the neighborhood,

Jacob Fansler lost a valuable horse yesterday.

The ground was covered with snow this morning, April 6th.

Sunday School was organized at Cedar Chapel yesterday with the usual corps of officers.

Mr. Hough, the station agent, of this place, made a trip to Michigan last week, returning to-day.

The surprise party at D. D Rineholt's, was a success. About 8 o'clock the party came to the house and gained admittance, completely surprising Mrs. Rineholt, the occasion being her 39th birthday. She had not thought of her birthday being so close at hand. Many nice presents were brought; among them being an elegant caster, silver teaspoons and tablespoons and knives and forks. The guests came with their baskets filled with the best gifts of God's earth. After an hour of pleasant, social visit an excellent lap supper was served. Among the guests were Mrs. McAnally, of Waterloo, and her daughter-in-law, from Auburn Junction; Mrs. Thomas and Miss Ettinger, of Waterloo, S. M. Knott and family, of Butler township, B. Hixon and family, Daniel Terry and family, Mrs. Etta Houser and son, Martin Hoffman and family, John Hiltz and daughter and son, G. Jackson, and others After supper the presentation remarks were made by I. Z Smith, Mrs Hixon replied in behalf of her sister, who had not recovered from the surprise sufficiently to respond. After this the guests returned to their respective homes rejoicing.

SUMMIT

Mrs. Thomas Lacy is sick with the grip.

Mr. John Fetters went to Auburn last Monday on business.

Mr. David Ling, of Hudson, was on our streets last Friday.

Mrs. Bert Conrad visited friends in Auburn one day last week.

Mrs. Blanche Boyer visited her parents, D G. Conrad and wife last Sunday.

Mrs. Oat Rhule and Mrs. S. Truit were the guests of Mrs. E. Hoffman last Friday.

Miss Theresa Shiffli, who has been at home visiting, the past few weeks went back to Angola last Monday.

Mr. Robert Snowberger and family and Henry Lawson and family were the guests of Henry Snowberger and wife last Sunday.

Ol Grambling starts to Virginia the 9th, where he expects to work this summer at the carpenter trade. We all wish him good luck.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

The American Museum of Natural History in the central Park, New York City, occupies a noble pile of buildings, the recent additions to which are just approaching completion. It is an institution in which every American ought to take pride. The most complete description of its treasures, and the educational work it is doing, is given, with abundant pictorial illustrations, by Mary Titcomb, in the April number of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly. Another seasonable article is Carrie Stevens Walter's account of a visit to Senator Stanford's Palo Alto stock farm. "Some Western Texas Types" are sympathetically drawn by Belle Hunt Shortridge, the poetess of the Lone Star State. J. E. Rossie describes historic Lafayette Park, in Washington, D. C., and Colonel Nicolas Pike contributes a thrilling paper upon the dreaded Octopus, or Devil-fish. Other elaborately illustrated articles are "Olives"; "In the Mountain Paths of Savoy"; "Dicken's Bleak House"; "Some Memorials of Edgar Poe"; "Sherman and Porter," etc. There are short stories by Cecil Charles, David Ker, William Wallace Cook, Bulkeley Booth, and others; and poems by Douglas Sladen, Adelia Beard, and William F. Burbank.

A Present for Every Bride.

For twenty-three years The Household has been a welcome visitor in hundreds of thousands of American homes, and has been, during these years, the companion and help of the American housewife. In order that the brides of the country may have the benefit of the visits of this, the oldest household publication in the country, the publishers offer to send The Household to all brides of six months or less, who will, themselves, or their friends, send ten two-cent stamps with printed notice of their marriage in the same letter. This is a very tempting offer, and they call it their "wedding present," which they offer to every bride in the United States on the above terms, The Household has just made three very striking offers to the three subscribers who shall obtain the three largest lists of new subscribers between March first and August first. These presents are nothing less than a $700 horse and Goddard buggy, a Miller upright piano, in either mahogany, oak walnut or ebonized case, and a Columbia bicycle for either lady or gentleman's use. The March number of The Household contains illustrations and descriptions of these elegant presents, and can be found at the news stands, or will be sent by the publishers, on receipt of ten cents by The Household Company, 50 Bromfield St., Boston.

Sudden Deaths.

Heart disease is by far the most frequent cause of sudden death, which in three out of four cases is unsuspected. The symptoms are not generally understood. These are: a habit of lying on the right side, short breath, pain or distress in side, back or shoulder, irregular pulse, asthma, weak and hungry spells, wind in stomach, swelling of ankles or dropsy, oppression, dry cough and smothering. Dr. Miles' illustrated book on heart disease, free at F. E. Davenport's who sells and guarantees Dr. Miles' unequaled New Heart Cure, and his Restorative Nervine, which cures nervousness, headache, sleeplessness, effects of drinking, etc. It contains no opiates. 6

The discovery that the Indians can pitch a base ball marvelously well suggests the pleasant thought that they might also be used as baseball umpires. The war of extermination would go on just the same, but it would seem more polite.

Startling Facts.

The American people are rapidly becoming a race of nervous wrecks, and the following suggests the best remedy: Alphonso Hempfling, of Butler, Pa., swears that when his son was speechless from St. Vitus dance Dr. Miles' great Restorative Nervine cured him. Mrs. J. R. Miller, of Valparaiso, and J. D. Taylor, of Logansport, Ind., each gained 20 pounds from taking it. Mrs H. A. Gardner, of Vistula, Ind., was cured of 40 to 50 convulsions a day, and much headache, dizziness, backache and nervous prostration by one bottle. Trial bottles, and fine book of marvelous cures, free at F. E. Davenport's who recommends and guarantees this unequaled remedy. 6

Custer county, Mont., is the largest county in the United States. It contains 36,000 square miles. Indiana contains only half that much.

The First Step.

Perhaps you are run down, can't eat, can't sleep, can't think, can't do anything to your satisfaction, and you wonder what ails you. You should heed the warning, you are taking the first step into Nervous Prostration. You need a Nerve Tonic and in Electric Bitters you will find the exact remedy for restoring your nervous system to its normal, healthy condition. Surprising results follow the use of this great Nerve Tonic and Alterative. Your appetite returns, good digestion is restored, and the Liver and Kidneys resume healthy action. Try a bottle. Price 50c. at Robbins & McCord's Drugstore. 6

Servants' gossip, of course, but when it is about your neighbors sometimes you will think that it is undeniably interesting.

A Little Girl's Experience in a Lighthouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trescott are keepers of Gov. Lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter, four years old Last April she was taken down with measles, followed with a dreadful cough and turning into a fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere handful of bones. Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and a half bottles, was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you may get a trial bottle free at Robbins & McCord's drugstore. 6

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

1847.

Nothing in history surpasses or even equals the marvelous growth of the great northwest. Scarcely had the ear become familiar with the name of its territories and geographers had but succeeded in defining their limits upon their maps, when, like Minerva, they sprang into life in full panoply to challenge our admiration as firmly constituted, prosperous, independent commonwealths.' In truth this is a great and grand country. Its history is a romance surpassing in its facts, the wildest creations of fiction.

It is difficult to realize the changes which within the life time of many now living in Auburn and in DeKalb county have made the hamlet a thriving town with natural gas fuel and electric lamp light and have reclaimed forest and swamp and made of them arable and fertile fields.

We are so used to incidents of startling nature that we live in this extraordinary age unmindful of their momentous character.

There are with us those who have seen Indian bark canoes upon the St. Joe river, and have hunted deer in the woods of the county. They can tell you of the bark troughs used by the Indian to catch the sap of the sugar maple, of the discovery of bee trees with their luscious hoard of honey, and of domesticated swarms hived in a section of a hollow old sycamore. They are familiar with methods and processes now practically unknown. Fluke could tell of hides left for months to soak in tan vats. Waggoner could relate the story of hand-forged shoes and nails, for cattle as well as horses. Elder Ward is familiar with the pioneer religious movements, when school house, barn and private house were utilized for meetings. Our friend Cather's memory is rich in racy stories of his itinerancy in the early day, and there are very many who could yet swing the cradle, or the flail or wield the hoe in the cornfield.

It is of recent occurrence when Mrs. Pierce entertained an audience in the old Methodist church with the story of settler's hopes and hardship, and Mrs. Houghton could prove that with all the privations of those years, they found very much to give the clouds a silver lining.

With startling rapidity these pioneers of a yet recent though past age, are leaving us and oblivion follows fast upon their departing footsteps.

We miss from our streets the long grown familiar forms of 'Squire Ralston, of George Brandt, of Wm. H. Dills, of Mrs. Brinkerhoff, of Mrs. Dr. Ford, of recent date, and memory will recall to readers, the ideal images of very many whose faces they will see no more in time.

These thought inspire us to follow as best we can some further, on the dim trail left us by those to whose enterprise and courage we owe so much of our present comfort and prosperity.

In recounting the incentives to western emigration, the ruling motive of the permanent migrant was the well-grounded hope of improving his condition. Land was cheap, fertile and abundant, terms of payment were favorable and prospects of a rising value were certain. To a great degree the wealth of DeKalb county farmers has originated in this way. With few exceptions they came here to the woods with little but healthful bodies and resolute minds and the result has amply justified their early action.

With the arrival of the van of the great army of settlers which spread in great waves far and wide westward, and all these years has been sweeping away even to where rolls the distant Columbia and rise the snow capped peaks of the Rocky mountains, speculation has mingled with enterprise and ever the platting of village, town and city sites has been a game of fortune.

Short-lived prosperity has attended those of permature origin or devoid of local or surrounding advantages. Centerville exists only in name and Auburn in a later period of existence came perilously near losing the county seat and at yet another had its flood tide which offered much that now flourishes as the town of Garrett.

As years went by, the ranks of pioneers had been thinned and those who remain at this late day may well rest and enjoy the fruits of their early labors.

The character of the people whose patient industry in all this region was the basis of present enlightened society has been eloquently and truthfully portrayed by a distinguished orator in the following language: "We have seen in every newly settled region, the hardy and enterprising youth in the older settled, finding society comparitively filled up, his portion of the old family farm too small to satisfy his wants or his desires, his opportunities to practice a profession or work at a trade too circumscribed, bidding his friends farewell, seeking the paternal blessing and often with little else, set forth to take up his share of the rich heritage which the God of nature has spread before him in this western world.

He left the land of his fathers, the scenes of his early days, with tender regret glistening in his eye, though hope mantles on his cheek. He did not as he departed, shake off the dust of the venerated sod from his feet; but in some distant settlement perpetuates the remembrance of his childhood home. He piously bestowed the name of the spot where he was born, on the place to which he had wandered; and while he was laboring with the difficulties, struggling with the privations, languishing perhaps under the diseases incident to the new settlement and the freshly opened soil, he remembered the neighborhood whence he came, the roof that sheltered his infancy, the spring or the well-curb where he was wont to bathe his heated forehead after toil, the school house, the rural meeting house, perhaps the graves of his father and of his mother.

Gentlemen:— WHEELING, Feb. 10, 1891.
Early last fall I contracted a severe cold, which settled on my lungs. I coughed dreadfully and lost flesh rapidly until advised to try Sangole, which I did with the most gratifying result.
After taking three bottles my cough ceased and I found that I had gained six pounds in weight. I most heartily recommend it to sufferers of loss of flesh from any cause. Respectfully,

Girls who use SAPOLIO are QUICKLY MARRIED.

SAPOLIO is one of the best known city luxuries and each time a cake is used an hour is saved. On floors, tables and painted work it acts like a charm. For scouring pots, pans and metals it has no equal. If your store-keeper does not keep it you should insist upon his doing so, as it always gives satisfaction and its immense sale all over the United States makes it an almost necessary article to any well supplied store. Everything shines after its use, and even the children delight in using it in their attempts to help around the house.

They Each Gave a Dollar.

The following named citizens, chiefly old settlers, and residents of the south or central part of the county, each gave $1 toward the building of the new church at Concord. The names of those known to be old settlers have been printed in large, plain type, at this office, framed by M. B. Willis, and will be hung up in the church for all time to come. Surprise Party.

A highly enjoyable surprise party was held last Saturday evening at the residence of John C. Staley, No. 37 West Seventh St., participated in by quite a large number of our citizens and some from other points. The occasion was the sixty-third birthday of Mr. Staley, and his friends and relatives took this means of impressing upon him the fact that his declining years are not allowed to lapse and therefore his allotted time among us to shorten unnoticed by them. The surprise was planned and executed by his daughters and was in every way a success; neither he nor his wife having any inkling of what was "up" until returning home from an evening call upon one of their neighbors, (which, by the way was a part of the program,) they were ushered into the midst of their housefull of guests. Those in attendance from abroad were Samuel Firestone and wife and John Smith and wife, of Butler, Mrs. Holcombe, of Hillsdale, Mich., and Mrs. Camp, son and daughter, Wick and Goldie, of Angola. Not only Mr. Staley, but his wife also, received many fine presents which will, no doubt, often refresh their memories and recall pleasant recollections of the occasion on which they were presented to them.

Paid in March.

Italy Would Be Bankrupt in Case of War—Badly Scalded—A Detective Murdered—Will Nominate Gresham—Dropped Dead.

TOTAL BANKRUPTCY

Will Fall Upon the Italian Government in Case of War.

Rome special: Senator Saracio, an expert in Italian finances, whose utterances always command much attention, writes to the Gazatta del Pholo, declaring his opinion that the Government's scheme for the abolition of the deficit is an illusory one. He alleges that Sig. Nicotora, Minister of the Interior, has made insincere statements of the public finances, and that the extent of the deficit, which must be faced, has been terribly under rated. The article has had a dampening effect upon the spirits of the small but noisy party who have advocated war with America, as the state of finances, even according to the most favorably interpretation placed upon the figures by the Government, seems to imply total bankruptcy as a necessary result of such a war.

Affairs in Ireland.

A Dublin cable says: It is stated in well-informed quarters that Messrs. Sexton and Healy are having a serious quarrel in regard to the editorial management of the National Press, the newspaper organ of the McCarthyites. Mr. Sexton, it is said, objects to Mr. Healy's praising himself in letters unsigned or bearing fictitious signatures; and there are other matters in dispute between the two men. Mr. Dixon, M. P. for St. Stevens' Green, is endeavoring to affect a reconciliation.

The Parnellites are taunting the McCarthyites with shirking the invitation of American League executives to submit the leadership dispute to arbitration. The Freeman's Journal reiterates the willingness, even the anxiety of the Parnellites to comply and declares that Mr. Parnell's enemies are afraid to trust to an impartial abjudiction of the case.

James H. Arnett Assassinated.

James H. Arnett, a well-known citizen of Vienna, Ill., who had been tried and acquitted three times for murder, was assassinated one mile west of that city, on the highway. The shot was fired from a cabin near the roadside. Burb Stanley and his son Edward have been arrested, charged with the crime. They live near where the tragedy was enacted, and as they had made repeated threats against Arnett, suspicion was directed toward them. There were no witnesses to the tragedy.

Badly Scalded by an Explosion.

A hot water tank in the yard of the Empire oil works on Newton Creek, New York, collapsed and severely injured Pat Barry and Frank Bowen, who were at work repairing it. The two men were horribly scalded before they were rescued. They were taken to St. Charles hospital, where it was found that Barry was mortally injured and that Browne's chances for recovery were very slight. Both men are married.

A New World's Fair President.

Chicago special: Wm. T. Baker, of the Board of Trade firm of Wm. T. Baker & Co., was unanimously elected President of the World's Columbian Exposition to succeed Lyman J. Gage. Mr. Jas. W. Scott, publisher of the Herald, who had previously been tendered the nomination, renewed his statement to the committee on nominations that he would be compelled to decline the office, even if elected.

Almost Entirely Under Water.

The country opposite New Orleans, which is much unsettled, is almost entirely under water, varying in depth from one to ten feet, as the result of the Ames Crevasse, which is over a thousand feet wide and still running. The river has fallen but slightly. Three deaths by drowning have resulted from the crevasse, two recently by the upsetting of a skiff.

Another Riot at Trotter.

Frick's coke works at Trotter, Pa., were raided the other day. A mob of strikers threw bricks and stones through the doors and windows of the company's houses, demolishing everything possible. The first attack was made the night before, but the mob was frightened away by the guards. One woman was seriously injured.

Gold Excitement.

Kansas City special: Excitement over the gold find in the Cherokee strip is growing daily. A buggy box full of dirt taken from the stream below the vein, which was brought in and washed out, produced from $3 to $5 every pan.

Dropped Dead.

Dr. Jonathan B. Chapin, of Battle Creek, Mich., dropped dead. He was 86 years old, and had lived at Battle Creek for over half a century. He was one of Michigan's pioneers and well known throughout the State.

Two Young Ladies Instantly Killed.

Emma, aged 20, the daughter of Jacob Peterson, and Coera, the daughter of Dr. A. L. Murray, of Delaware County, Ind., were instantly killed by a horse running away and throwing them against a picket fence.

No Catholic Funerals on Sunday.

Archbishop Ryan has issued an order that in the future Catholics will not be permitted to bury any of their relatives or friends on Sundays.

Will Nominate Gresham.

S. W. Chase, Chairman of the People's party, says that party will nominate Judge Gresham for President in 1892 and will elect him.

A Detective Murdered.

The body of Wes Harrison, a detective, was found in an out house in the western part of Anniston, Ala. He had been engaged in ferreting out a number of robbers who have been at work in that city, and it is thought some of these, fearing exposure, murdered him and carried his body to the place where it was found.

Wreck on Fire.

A Great Northern freight train was wrecked two miles south of Rothsay, Minn. Twelve cars with their contents were burned; also a bridge sixty feet long. Loss $40,000.

Victory for the Liberals.

A special from Halifax, N. S., says: The liberals won a sweeping victory in Prince Edward's Island. Four members resigned their seats in the Legislature to become candidates for the Dominion House of Commons, viz: The Hon. Donald Ferguson, Provincial Secretary; the Hon. Patrick Blake, Speaker of the House; John McLean and John Yeo, leaders of the opposition. The first three were supporters of the government. The elections to fill the vacancies resulted in the return of four opposition candidates. This defeats the government, and compels it either to resign or dissolve parliament and make a general appeal to the country.

UNCIVILIZED.

The Most Barbarous Practices Resorted to at Iquique.

Panama special: A correspondent writes from Iquique: "What is occurring in this unfortunate port is something unheard of, and it leads one to believe that no civilized beings now live there. Passengers state that the vagabonds are robbing, plundering, murdering, violating women, and committing all classes of atrocities, while incendiaries also, are engaged in their nefarious and villainous operations of destruction and pillage." On March 6, the Pima Diario says, "the Government of Chili is determined to establish an army of 20,000 strong at Tarapaca, and in it the corps will be massed, which are now scattered, and which consist of 300 men at Antofogasta, 5,000 at Atacama and 3,500 at Coquimbo. The determination to mass this army was reached subsequent to the fall of Iquique."

The distress along the south coast, due to the revolution, is appalling, as will be observed from the different reports. The steamship, Perou, brought to limit, March 12, 400 refugees of the different nationalities. They had no place to lodge, they had been allowed to remain in the wharves of the Muelle Darsena Company.

A reporter who visited the French steamer Perou says: "The bombardment of Iquique by a revolutionary squadron on February 19 led to the destruction by fire of seven of the principal blocks. The Perou landed 400 refugees in Callao, a greater number escaped from Iquique with only the clothes they had on when the bombardment commenced. Gen. Urrutia, who commands the Iquique had been selling flour at 22 cents per pound."

BETWEEN EARTH AND SKY.

William Bates, the Murderer, Suspended From a Shade Tree.

Kenton (Ohio) special: William Bates, who murdered Policeman Harper, was taken from the jail by a mob of about fifty strong and hanged to a maple tree near by. The mob gained entrance to the jail by breaking down the door, which awakened the sheriff, who rushed down stairs with a revolver. A dozen men met him at the foot of the stairs and thrust four revolvers in his face demanding the jail keys, saying they wanted to get Bates to hang him. The sheriff refused to get the keys, not having them with him. They found the keys in an adjoining room and opened the jail doors, got Bates and gave him only time to put on his pants and a pair of slippers. They took him out and hanged him to a maple tree on Wayne street, near North street, about fifty yards from the jail. The mob was well organized; all wore black masks except one which was white, apparently the leader. No noise was made. All spoke in whispers. The work was quickly and systematically done. Not more than twenty minutes elapsed from the time the door was broken open until Bates was dangling between earth and sky.

Gibson's Crime.

Chicago special: The federal grand jury has practically finished the labors in the case of ex-Mayor Gibson, of the whisky trust. Monday's decision was of the most important and interesting one yet held. A few fag ends of testimony were drawn to complete the chain of circumstantial evidence and then Thomas Dewar, the government ganger, was called to tell the story of the plot to burn up the Shufeldt brewery. Then John Bonfield was called and the bottle of phosphorus and infernal machine were produced and placed before him. As an expert on the subject Bonfield explained to the jury the combustible nature of the innocent looking liquid. A drop or two was placed on a sheet of paper and at once burst into flames. Then Mr. Bonfield explained the construction of the infernal machine and how it would demolish the building in a moment. This was the end of the testimony, besides an exhibit of the correspondence between Gibson and Dewar. It is thought a true bill will doubtless be returned on the arrival of Judge Bunn from Milwaukee to act as District Judge in Judge Blodgett's absence.

Carried Away By a Bear.

The other afternoon little 5-year-old Eddie Lipps, one of the children of a farmer living four miles from Hart, Mich., went with the two older brothers into the sugar bush, half a mile east of the house, where the boys were gathering sap. Eddie strayed away and was lost for two hours before it became known, when the two elder boys reached the house. A general alarm was given, and fully 300 men, forming a line eight feet apart, swept the woods for several miles about the place where the boy was last seen. No trace of the child was found, but bear tracks were seen a little way from the camp, and it is believed the bear took the child.

Buried Under a Wall.

By the fall of a wall along the west side of Race street at the northwest corner of Fifth and Race streets, Cincinnati, O., where fifteen masons were laying the foundation of a great building, the lives of all were endangered. By good fortune thirteen of them extricated themselves without injury of a serious nature, but Paul Gleen, the 18-year-old son of the contractor, was taken out a corpse; William Gibson, stonemason, aged 50, was entirely buried. He was dead when his body was found. The cellar is one of the deepest in the city and the street wall was not properly supported.

After Election Judges.

Chicago special: A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Dennis Sheehan, Democratic judge of election in the Twentieth precinct of the Nineteenth Ward. He is charged with breaking open a ballot box after the polls closed election day. James W. Nye, of the Republican Committee, said that forty or fifty more warrants will be issued as soon as they have gathered their evidence. The Post says that Carter Harrison reconsidered his determination to leave Chicago and quit politics forever, and that he publicly proclaims he will spend $10,000 to ferret out the alleged election frauds.

Strong Language.

A letter written by Anna E. Dickinson on March 25, while she was in the asylum at Danville, Pa., is furnished to the press. The letter is addressed to her brother, Rev. John Dickinson, at Los Angeles. She says: "This thing has not been done in a day. She (her sister Susan) must have had helpers. One and all, I want them found. If they are dupes, I want the full measure of justice given them that will teach them the rights of other people, through somewhat of an equivalent of the sufferings they have entailed. If knaves, I want hell's floor—in the world—wiped with them."

Don't Like to Be Called a Monkey.

Advices from Italy represents the Rudini Cabinet as deeply hurt by American comment on the Italian difficulty, and that there is a revulsion of feeling in favor of aggressive measures. It is said that King Humbert has received from the editor of an Italian newspaper in America a package of American newspapers containing pictures ridiculing his majesty and belittling the dignity of Italy. One picture in particular, representing the King as a monkey, gave great offense. Italian blood is again boiling, and something startling is anticipated within a few days.

A Bold Leap.

Lebanon (Mo.) special: Wm. Skaggs, a United States prisoner on route to the prison at Columbus, Ohio, jumped through a car window on the "Cannon Ball" train and escaped. The train was running at a speed of thirty-five miles an hour. Skaggs was shackled to other prisoners, but managed to remove his foot from his boot, and then pulled the shackle over the boot leg. This freed him from the other prisoners, and throwing his boot out of the window, he followed after it and apparently landed unhurt.

Barely Escape Cremation.

Miller Bro.'s stable and undertaking establishment in the village of Cheviot, six miles from Cincinnati, was totally destroyed by fire. Two dwelling houses adjoining the stable, occupied by the Miller and Gaines families were also burned. Loss, $10,000, partly covered by insurance. Two men, who slept in the coffin room on the second floor of the stable, barely escaped cremation by jumping from the window to the ground.

Bad Train Wreck.

Pittsburgh special: The west-bound passenger train ran into a landslide at Vanport, Pa., twenty-five miles west of here, derailing the locomotive, baggage, and mail cars. Four trainmen and a number of passengers were injured. George Liebtage, the engineer, and W. E. Brown, fireman, are said to have been so badly scalded that they will die. The others are believed to have been only slightly hurt.

The Work of Red Skins.

Great excitement was caused at Black Foot, Idaho, by the discovery that the Indians killed two unknown white emigrants, who camped at a water tank a mile below that place. There were no witnesses. An uprising is feared. Business is suspended and the citizens are up in arms. Not an Indian could be found in the city an hour after the affair. The Governor has been telegraphed to.

The Indian Department.

The President has had a long conference with the Civil Service Commissioners. They declined to state the object of the conference, but it is believed that the President is considering the idea of making an important extension of the classified service and that he consulted the Commissioners as to the best mode of accomplishing this purpose. It is stated as an absolute certainty that the Indian department will soon be placed under Civil Service regulations.

A Noted Horse Thief In the Toils.

For twenty-five years Silas G. Slaughter, now 60 years old, has been a noted horse thief in West Virginia. He applied for a pension last week in Calhoun County, and by this means he was identified and captured. He stole a horse valued at $500 four years ago, deserted his wife and moved to the neighborhood of Parkersburg, changing his name to Walker, married a wealthy widow and was living at ease until his arrest.

The Chinese and Canada.

It is reported at Ottawa that the United States has applied to the Dominion Government requesting that some regulations be put in force to prevent the Chinese going from Canada into the United States. The Dominion Government is said to have replied that after the Chinese paid the Canadian poll tax they were free to go where they pleased.

A Farmer Robbed.

Harvey Wilson, a prominent farmer near Alliance, Ohio, a day or two ago, sold a large amount of stock, receiving therefore about $700 in money. He kept the money under his head in his bed, and the other evening it was stolen. The thief is supposed to be in the employ of Mr. Wilson, as he disappeared immediately after the money was taken.

Contract Alien Labor.

Special Agent Lester is in Chicago and engaged in preparing a report for Secretary Foster. He has just returned from Omaha, where he has been making investigations. He says the contract alien labor law has been grossly violated there and promises a sensation in a few days.

Fourteen Persons Poisoned.

Fourteen persons were poisoned in Chattanooga, Tenn., by eating cream puffs bought of a confectioner. None of the cases are likely to prove fatal. Arsenic is believed to in some way have become mixed with the ingredients.

Death of Father Gordon.

The body of Rev. Father Gordon, a Catholic priest, of Newport, Ky., was found in an excavation near a sink hole in Cincinnati. It is supposed that the priest fell into the hole while walking in the darkness and his death was the result of suffocation.

Huston's Resignation Accepted.

The President has accepted the resignation of Mr. J. N. Huston, as Treasurer of the United States.

Enos H. Nebecker, of Indiana, has been appointed his successor.

A Big Card and Paper Company.

The Western Card and Paper Company, with a capital stock of $1,000,000 is being started at Chicago. It will be the first of the kind west of Albany.

Perished in the Flames.

The residence of S. O. Cooper at Hastings, Neb., was burned, and his sister, Miss Tuck, perished in the flames.

General Spinola Dead.

Gen. Spinola, congressman from New York, died at his residence in Washington.

THE TAX ON WOOL.

WHY WOOL SHOULD BE FREE.

Ex-Consul Schoenhof on the Wool Duties—An Expert Opinion of McKinleyism—How Wools Differ—What Free Wool Would Do.

When President Harrison came into office, our Consul at Tunstall, England, was Mr. Jacob Schoenhof, of New York. This gentleman was formerly a manufacturer, and he had devoted much time and study to ascertaining the labor cost of producing goods in this country and in Europe. Having special knowledge on this subject he was appointed by Mr. Cleveland to the consulship at Tunstall, and was specially charged by Secretary Bayard to make an extensive investigation of the labor cost of production of manufactured articles in England and on the continent.

Before Mr. Cleveland's term expired several reports of great value by Mr. Schoenhof had been published by the State Department. His work, however, was not yet complete when President Harrison removed him from office. He has recently begun to publish a series of letters which will serve as a sort of continuation of his reports to the Government. He will go into the cost of production of all the leading lines of goods in this country and Europe, and this series of letters is sure to prove an important contribution to the tariff question.

In one of these letters Mr. Schoenhof gives considerable attention to the wool tariff. Of all the manufacturers, he says, the woolen manufacturers would have benefited by the Mills bill. It freed raw wool and gave a protection of 40 per cent. Now, it is well known that the entire labor cost in a pound of manufactured woolens, such as are made in this country, does in very few instances reach as high as 40 per cent. on the cost of a foreign-made article, with which it has to compete. The foreign article not alone covers the cost of the wool, of labor, and of the incidental expenses of manufacture, but also the interest of capital and the profits of the manufacturers and dealers handling the goods. The duty of 40 per cent., therefore, covers not alone the cost of capital and management, but of the freed wool itself consumed in the manufacturing process.

Free wool would have vitalized the range of wool manufacture, now in a state of permanent infancy, in constant need of syrups and props. The only ones benefited by the wool and war tariff, the shoddy manufacturers, quite naturally have been standing in the breach in defense of the palladium of protection against the enemies of the holy faith. It is not to be wondered at that they put their hands deep into their pockets for the creation of a fund which was to buy an election and a tariff to their liking. But, strange to say, many of those were contributors who could only be benefited by tariff reform, as taken up by the Democratic party, downwardly, and injured only by reforming upwardly, as represented by the Republican party. The present tariff, the McKinley act, is the outcome of their well-considered, deliberate demands. They insisted on obtaining, and they have obtained, a measure which proceeds in a diametrically opposite direction from what their interests actually command.

They certainly ought to have known that the industries of this country are based on an entirely different foundation from that of any other country. If so, the certainly ought to have asked for something quite different than that which they claimed with so much insistence. But if they lost sight of this in the scramble for higher tariff rates it need not be surprising that the legislators who are responsible for the measure did not care to examine deeply into the rates demanded or inquire into the relative industrial positions of the United States and the countries of Europe, against which the late tariff act is chiefly intended to operate, the only customers of our farmers worth speaking of.

The legislators responsible for the act did what they were expected to do. They simply delivered the goods for value received in 1888, with a tentative hint to future campaign contributions.

Our own wools show conclusively that almost every State in the Union produces a different grade of wool. For instance: The wools raised in the far West in the new Territories and States are considered very inferior to the wools raised in the States east of the Mississippi. The pasturage consists of wild grasses, which during the dry season become parched, leaving the dry, sandy soil underneath as a fine dust or sand, which permeates the fleece, adding much to its shrinkage, and changing not only its appearance but the strength of staple, more especially where the soil is alkaline. Such wools lack in lustre and spring, and goods made from them show a dead, cottony appearance. They could not possibly be used as an offset in the manufacture of fabrics, which we import, amounting in 1890 to $50,000,000, and adding duties, $35,000,000, represents $85,000,000 American value laid down at the ports, exclusive of freight and other charges.

For the replacing of this vast amount our own wool supply would be entirely insufficient. We raise the corresponding wools in very limited quantities (and, what is more to the point, in receding quantities) in the older States only. Texas and California wools have good felting properties. For combing purposes they are unserviceable. Of combing wools only a limited amount is raised in the States lying east of the Mississippi. But most of the goods used for outer wear are now made of combed and not of carded wool.

The same differences we find in English wools. The Southdown wool is different from the north country wool; the Scotch wool different from the English wools; the Welsh wool different from the English and Scotch. Even in Scotland certain wools are grown in certain parts, so that tweeds can only be made from certain Scotch wools. Irish wool is different again. Welsh, Irish, and Scotch wools shrink but very little when manufactured into flannels, knit goods, etc., in the washing, German and American wools very much more so. Australian, Cape, and Plate wools differ again. But these differences can be made very valuable by adapting the varying qualities to the respective fabrics to which they give their special character.

Want a Foreign Market.

A committee representing the Boston Boot and Shoe Club and the New England Shoe and Leather Association waited on the President and Secretary Blaine recently, and presented a series of resolutions by their associations indorsing the administration's reciprocity policy, and urging its extension to their own industry. The boot and shoe manufacturers are evidently finding out that the home market is not big enough after all.

Our tanning and leather industries have had free raw material for nearly twenty years, and their development has been constant ever since. Our exports of leather and manufactures thereof have increased very rapidly, reaching $12,275,000 last year. If the leather industries have profited so greatly with free raw materials, why could not the woolen industry?

Miraculous Medicine.

The American Economist is not satisfied with Bismarck's recent talk on protection and on our McKinleyism. It says: "While Bismarck announced himself a protectionist, he does not seem to comprehend one of the fundamental principles of protection, at least as far as this country is concerned: that while it protects labor, it at the same time cheapens products, and thus also benefits consumers, especially the farmers."

Of course! Then McKinley puts higher duties on manufactures to make them cheaper, and thus benefit the farmers; and to make the thing "fair and equitable," he raised the duty on nearly all farm products to a very high point in order to make them much cheaper, and thus to benefit the manufacturers! Protection is a most remarkable thing; give Jones a dose and it cures Smith!

EXPORTS AND IMPORTS.

A Damaging Admission—Exports Pay for Imports—Balance of Trade and the Farmers' Market.

The American Economist, the mouthpiece of the American Protective Tariff League, makes a fatal admission when it says: "Probably no economic law is more rigid than that a nation's imports must, in the long run, be paid for by its exports."

Very true; but the Economist has for months been wrestling in agony to prove just the contrary. It has taken up the principle held by all opponents of protection, that we cannot sell abroad unless we will buy there—in other words, that exports pay for imports; and it has tried by various examples to prove that this is false. It could show that we sell to England about $200,000,000 a year more than we buy there. But it is well known that our excess of exports to England pay for our excess of imports from South America and other parts of the world.

At present our total exports and imports are not far from being equal, some years our exports being larger and other years imports being in excess. Most of the years since the war, however, we have sent out more than we brought in from abroad—a fact which gives the protectionists exceeding great joy. When exports are greater than imports, the balance, they say, comes back to us in gold and silver.

Thus this Economist said some time ago: "Since 1875 the balance of trade has been in our favor for every year except 1888 and 1889, and we have received back in fourteen years $1,581,926,871 of what we lost under free trade." But the Economist could very easily verify this statement. The Treasury Department publishes the figures of exports and imports of gold and silver. If we have been receiving back gold and silver from Europe, the Treasury reports ought to show the fact.

What do they show?

That we have "received back" $205,000,000 since 1875, all told, and that in the same time we have sent abroad $277,000,000, all in gold and silver. During the very time when the Economist fancies that we have been receiving back gold and silver in payment for goods, we have sent away $72,000,000 more than we brought in.

The explanation of this is simple enough: The $1,581,000,000 merchandise and $72,000,000 in gold and silver, a total of $1,653,000,000, which we have sent abroad since 1875 over and above what came in, was sent in payment of interest on foreign investments in the United States, in taking up Government, State, and railroad bonds, in premiums on insurance policies, and in paying freights to foreign vessels. But the Economist makes another admission. It says that "our imports of 800 or 900 millions annually are now largely paid for by agricultural exports." From which it naturally follows that the more we import the greater will be the demand for our farm products to pay for those imports. Our farmers, therefore, have the highest possible interest in increasing our importations of foreign goods. Even if they should not need many of those imported goods themselves, the importation of them enlarges the foreign demand for wheat, flour, corn, beef, pork and other commodities produced by our farmers.

Mexico's McKinleyism.

While we are the highest tariff nation among the first-class nations of the world, Mexico's tariff is much higher even than our new McKinley tariff. On dutiable imports Mexico collects an average tax of nearly 85 per cent.; that is, a tax of $22,477,000 upon imports amounting to $26,518,000.

The values of the leading imports last year, with the duties collected, were as follows:

	Values.	Duties.
Cottons	$7,534,088	$7,447,394
Woolens	1,613,186	1,986,020
Silk mixtures	394,889	410,411
Glass and china	607,727	686,884
Linens and hemp	674,029	671,590
Silks	394,691	378,614
Food products	4,808,706	3,780,270
Iron and steel	1,510,129	1,259,480
Small wares	658,853	505,497
Wood and manufactures	478,684	368,523
Skins and leather goods	414,108	290,211
Paper and manufacturing	1,352,143	1,181,250
Medicine and drugs	1,697,830	997,449
Miscellaneous	2,193,969	1,675,382

Mexico's average duties on articles bought in this country was 40 per cent., but hereafter this average will doubtless be higher, as last year that country made a considerable increase of duty on some of our farm products in retaliation for our tariff madness.

American Farm Implements in Australia.

The protection organs furiously deny that our manufacturers of farm implements and machinery sell more cheaply to foreigners than to our own farmers. What do these organs say to the following statement, which is quoted in the New York Engineering and Mining Journal:

"Mr. Walter Alden has returned to St. Louis, Mo., after spending six years in Australia, and is reported to have stated the following: 'It is no use for an American to go out to Australia to do anything in a commercial way unless he represents some large corporation, such as some great agricultural implement manufacturing company, mining machinery, or the like. All American agricultural implements are away ahead of the English articles in Australia. They are sold, however, for a less price than here in America, especially in the free trade colony of New South Wales, and they cost less in Victoria, a protective colony, than they do where manufactured or sold in this country.'"

What do our farmers think of protection to manufacturers who are able to sell abroad at lower prices than at home?

Mexico at the Fair.

Mexico has accepted President Harrison's invitation to take part in the World's Fair at Chicago. That will be an odd spectacle—two countries exhibiting the wares which they would like to sell to each other, if it were not for their high tariff walls. Mexico collects an average duty of 40 per cent. on what we sell to her people. The principal thing in Mexico that we want is silver and lead ore, but we shut it out by a duty equivalent to 64 per cent. Mexican mustangs worth $10 are prohibited with a duty of $30 a head. What a merry fair we shall have!

The St. Louis Grocer, a high-tariff trade journal, remarks: "Contracts for futures in canned salmon, tomatoes, peas, and corn are now made at as low prices as a year ago. The claim of a big rise in prices on account of the new tariff law vanishes into thin air." In reply to which the New York Merchants' Review says: "When that claim was made it wasn't supposed that the canners were going to gouge the farmers out of enough to pay for the increased tin-plate duty when purchasing vegetables. As regards salmon futures, opening prices ought to be lower than a year ago, considering the low price of spot goods."

OUR TRADE WITH ARGENTINE.

Europe Gets the Lion's Share—Reciprocity and Retaliation—Hides and Wool.

The insignificance of our trade with the Argentine Republic is brought out by that country's trade reports for last year. These reports show that European countries get the lion's share of the trade of Argentine.

Argentine imports of all sorts were 149 millions, of which over 61 millions were from the United Kingdom, 20 millions from France, 12 millions from Germany, 11 millions from Belgium, and $9,307,315 from the United States, this country standing fifth in rank as respects imports. But the exports from the Argentine Republic were in the aggregate over 105 millions, of which nearly 27 millions were to France, 21 millions to Great Britain, 12 millions to Belgium, over 11 millions to Germany, 10 millions to Brazil, 7 millions to Uruguay, and $6,066,063 to the United States, this country ranking seventh as respects the exports.

Our principal imports from Argentine are hides and wool. According to the so-called reciprocity feature of the McKinley law, the President will have to impose a duty of one and one-half cents per pound on hides from all countries which do not give us reciprocity. By this method of taking vengeance on the Argentine Republic, by taxing our own people, our imports of hides from that country will be largely reduced, unless Mr. Blaine succeeds in securing a reciprocity treaty with that country. This, however, is extremely improbable, since the treasury of that unfortunate land is very much crippled by bad financial measures of the past four years, and the demand for revenue will hardly permit of a reduction of duties in our favor. If the President has the courage to obey the "reciprocity" clause of the McKinley law, impose a duty on Argentine hides, and stir up our leather and boot and shoe manufacturers, who made such a stern protest when McKinley proposed a year ago to tax hides, our imports to Buenos Ayres will be still further reduced. Another factor to reduce that trade is the senseless duty on carpet wools, of which we import about one and one half million dollars' worth a year.

Our effort to keep out Argentine imports by taxation is entirely foolish, since the importation of goods from that country must increase the demand there for our goods. We do not import hides and carpet wool from Argentine with the benevolent intention of benefiting that country; it is to benefit ourselves. It would be as ridiculous, therefore, for us to try to punish that country by refusing to buy from it as it was for certain "patriotic" French women to try to wreak vengeance on the Germans by resolving that they would never dance with them again.

A Misogynous Car Conductor.

A passenger on a Broadway car who had been overlooked by the conductor called the conductor back and proffered his fare. As the conductor went out on the rear platform, he remarked to a passenger who had noticed the occurrence:

"You never see a woman do that."

When questioned further he said, jingling his pocketful of silver:

"No, sir-ee; they are the ones who hang on to their nickels. This would be a heap sight easier business if it weren't for the women. They are up to all sorts of dodges, and some of them will scheme and scheme to win a fare."

"What are the favorite methods?" the conductor was asked.

"Oh, the commonest is the bluff act. If we don't ask for their fares as soon as they get seated, there are lots of women who will vow that they have paid. Sometimes they beat us, but oftenest they pay under protest.

"Another regulation scheme is worked in a crowded car. Three or four women, entering together and belonging to the same party, will scatter all over the car. Each one refers to the other for the fare, and, while the perplexed conductor is chasing from one to the other, like as not several more will enter or some one will want to get off, and then the conductor will be lucky if he doesn't miss both lots.

"Yes, they're a bad crowd," he continued, under his breath, as he suspiciously sized up two demure-looking maidens who were leaving the car.—New York Times.

Eggs for Wagers.

River men have already begun to make predictions regarding the opening of navigation, and many have backed their prophesies with something of a tangible form, says the Albany Express. Strange as it may seem, in nearly all the bets made by river men on the time of breaking up of the ice, or the opening of navigation, eggs are the stakes. Whether the reason is that the wagers are paid about Easter time is not known, but certain it is that when all bets are settled, some river men have eggs by the barrel, enough in some cases to last their families for months.

Most of the Hudson River "sea dogs" think that navigation will be open about the last of March, but Captain Corey, of the bridge tug Julia Brainard, laid a wager of 100 eggs that there would not be a passenger boat running on the river until after March 20. The captain said that the betting of eggs among river men was nothing new, but had been a practice for years.

It is said by a California paper that the prune crop of that State this year will reach 25,000,000 or 30,000,000 pounds. Eleven cents a pound is considered the average wholesale price of these prunes in New York, making the California crop worth at least $2,750,000. The McKinley duty on prunes is 2 cents a pound, making the protection guaranteed the California prune growers $500,000 for this year. A fat sum on so insignificant a product.

Belgium is the most compact little beehive of industry in Europe. Without any of what we call "protection to home industries," her commerce has increased tenfold in a half-century. It is said that Belgium will probably make still lower the duties which interfere with the cheap manufacture of articles for export to the United States and South America.

A committee appointed by the Omaha Board of Trade has reported that tin in paying quantities does not exist in the Black Hills. And it was especially to protect these Black Hills tin mines that McKinley placed a duty of 4 cents a pound on tin coming into this country after July, 1893, for the use of our new tariff tin-plate mines.

The Calumet and Hecla copper mine in Michigan has paid the stockholders $500,000, since the 1st of January, on a capital of $2,500,000, of which only $1,200,000 is paid up capital. It has paid a total of $35,350,000 in dividends. And yet we go on "protecting" copper.

SWEPT AWAY BY FLAME

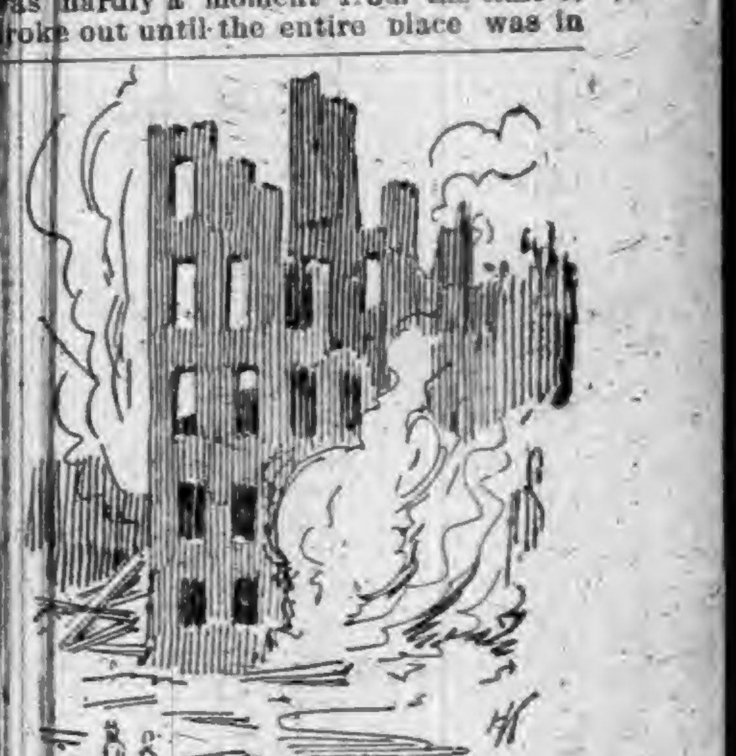
CHICAGO PROPERTY WORTH A MILLION BURNED.

Many Buildings Consumed—Every Structure for 200 Feet in Ruins—The Dime Museum Wrecked—Two Persons Are Fatally Injured and Six Others Hurt.

Once more has Chicago received a costly visit from the fire king. Not since the little Chicago fire which swept everything from Twelfth and Clark streets north to Van Buren in 1874 has the latest call ever been eclipsed in its damaging work. The other afternoon fire started under the stage in Kohl & Middleton's West Side Dime Museum on Madison street, and before it was taken in control by the fire department it had destroyed the immense furniture establishment of John M. Smyth, Kohl & Middleton's Museum, and five other five-story business blocks, and damaged several of the adjacent structures. A low estimate to place on the loss is $1,250,000.

Aside from its terrible effects, says a Chicago dispatch, the fire was a grand sight to behold. Fierce and furious were the flames, eating all before them. The sky, at first blackened by the huge volumes of smoke that poured forth from the seething flames, soon took on a rose-ate hue as the tongues of fire darted through the black mass. Great firebrands sailed through the air, and falling started blazes which threatened with destruction the surrounding edifices.

It appeared as though the western part of the city was doomed. The high wind carried the firebrands here, there, and everywhere. People ran about demoralized. Thousands of persons were in peril of their lives. Kohl & Middleton's museum was jammed with amusement seekers, who in an instant had their pleasure turned into greatest terror. So fast did the fire burn that it was hardly a moment from the time it broke out until the entire place was in flames. A stampede followed. In the fierce fight for life eight women were knocked down and trampled under foot. Several men jumped from windows, and one of these, Alexander Grant, a painter employed on the place, leaped from the third story and struck a sign in his descent. He fell to the ground senseless, his skull fractured, and one leg broken. When all those who were able to get out had left the building Officers Welbaskey and Pat Sheedy entered the burning building and went as far as the flames would permit. They pulled out several women who had fainted from fright or been crushed in the stampede.



THE REMAINS OF SMYTH'S BIG ESTABLISHMENT.

Across the street in the Haymarket Theater a similar panic was averted only by the coolness of George Fair, the treasurer. When it became apparent that the theater was in danger Mr. Fair called the ushers into his private office, and instructing them to stand at the fire-escape and to by no means permit crowding, he quietly went around from one gallery to another and told the spectators that there was a fire across the street, but that there was no immediate danger. They were then led to the fire-escapes and made their way easily.

As in the case of the great fire, this last conflagration was started by a lamp explosion. While the audience in the museum theater was watching with interest a juggler balancing a lighted lamp on a wand, at the same time walking a tight-rope, the juggler slipped, the lamp fell, there was an explosion, and a flame darted up the scenery of the stage. The stage curtains took fire, and before the panic-stricken men and women could make their exit the entire stage was a mass of flames.

John M. Smyth is the heaviest loser. The Kohl & Middleton edifice, as well as the building occupied by himself, was his property. His loss on buildings is $400,000, and on stock $600,000. He carried an insurance of $175,000 on the buildings. Kohl & Middleton lose their entire equipment, valued at $20,000.

The five-story buildings 147-149 West Madison street were owned by James Casey and were destroyed. They were valued at $210,000. Alfred Peats occupied the entire building with a large stock of wall paper. His loss is $55,000.

The next building, occupied by Louis Laberge, was six stories, entirely destroyed, and owned by Col. Thompson. Loss on building $40,000, stock and fixtures $15,000.

Joseph Stein's shoe store was at 153 Madison street. His loss on stock is $20,000.

Other losers are: Adam Gerhardt, barber shop at 155 West Madison street, $3,000; Baer Bro.'s hat store and Eureka laundry at 157, $13,000; M. J. Irrmin, cigars, $6,000; Neely Bros., boots and shoes, $10,000; L. Kaempfer, jewelry, loss unknown; Lawyer Payne Fittz, $5,000.

Two persons were fatally injured and six others seriously hurt.

Historical.

The colony of Hong Kong was first ceded to Great Britain in 1841, and the cession was confirmed by the treaty of Nanking in 1842.

The first Colonial Congress met Oct. 7, 1765, at New York. Timothy Ruggles of Massachusetts was Chairman and John Cotton Clerk of the convention.

The peculiar reach toward Lake Erie in the State Line of Pennsylvania, known as the Triangle (from its being originally the State of New York extension) was a special purchase, Sept. 4, 1788, from the Government, of a slice of the Northwest Territory, containing 202,187 acres, at a State cost of $157,640.

Gloves were, in 1418, often set with precious stones, and sufficiently valuable to be left as legacies. The jeweled gloves of St. Martial were said to have rebuked an act of sacrilege. The gloves of Bishop Gravesend, worked with gold and enamel, were priced at £5, a great sum in 1310. But the sturdier Bishop Button wore thick yellow gloves at 10d a pair.

In 1658 the fashion of wearing large stirrup-hose or stockings, two yards wide at the top, with points through several eyelet holes, by which they were made fast to the petticoat's breeches, was brought into England from France, according to Randle Holme. "Long and short kersey stockings are reckoned among the exports in the Book of Rates, 12th Charles II., and in it there are entries of stockings of leather, of silk, of woolen, and of worsted for men and children."

SAVED AT LAST.

AUBURN, IND., Oct. 3, 1890.

Dr. J. W. Bergen:

Dear Sir:—By this time, I presume, you will want to know how I am getting along with Bergen's Asthma Cure.

Well, you have heard of persons obtaining a new life. Now I really feel that way myself. When I began taking Bergen's Asthma Cure, I was just coming out of a long siege of it, and was reduced to 115 pounds; weak, short of breath, chills, fever, and badly demoralized generally, coughing from half an hour to an hour every night.

Since commencing, from the third night, I have not lost ten minutes' sleep all night, cough gone, gained seventeen pounds, chills gone, fever gone, shortness of breath and difficulty of breathing gone, consequently I feel a thousand per cent. better. I thank God every day that I ever saw your advertisement, and that I was induced to write to you.

This is peculiarly encouraging in my case, as I had suffered so long and was so discouraged about my case, having tried everything. I am telling the good news every day.

Push on the good work; you are on the right track.

Yours Very Gratefully,
R. McDOUGALL.

REMEMBER

KLINCK

IS THE NAME OF THAT

Wonderful Remedy

That Cures Catarrh, Hay-Fever, Cold in the Head, Sore Throat, Canker, and Bronchitis.

The testimonials to these FACTS are NUMEROUS and STRONG, similar to the following:

From the Hon. Harvey D. Colvin, Ex-Mayor of Chicago:

CHICAGO, July 24, 1890.

S. H. KLINCK—DEAR SIR: I am pleased to say that I consider your remedy the best medicine in existence, for the human afflictions you claim to cure. I suffered from catarrh with bronchitis for many years. During that time I employed physicians and faithfully tried many so-called remedies advertised to cure this disease, without any material benefit, when a friend induced me to try your remedy, claiming others had been cured by it. The first bottle gave me the most pleasing results. I have continued its use and I can not say too much for it. It found me too near the grave for comfort and restored me to health again. It adorns my toilet stand and by using it occasionally I am kept well.

I would not be without it if it cost $25 per bottle. I earnestly recommend it to all my afflicted friends.

TWO DOROTHYS.

BY MARGARET JOHNSON.

A LITTLE maid with downcast eyes,
And folded hands and serious face,
Who walked sedately down the street,
Her dainty dress all smooth and neat,
Each curl and ribbon in its place;

A dove-like maid with brow demure,
Beneath her bonnet's shady brim,
Who quiet sits within the pew,
And gravely reads the service through,
And joins in every hymn;

The sweetest maid that could be found
From Cuba to the Bay of Fundy;
A flower, the loveliest that springs,
A saint, an angel without wings—
That's Dorothy on Sunday.

A little maid, in breathless haste,
With glowing cheeks and tangled hair,
Who races up and down the street,
And with her skipping, tripping feet
Is here, and there, and everywhere;

A saucy maid, with cap askew
Upon her rumpled yellow curls,
With twinkling feet and chattering tongue,
And breezy skirts above her swung
In swift, ecstatic whirls;

The merriest maid that ever shocked
The servile slaves of Mrs. Grundy;
A bird, a spark of dawning light,
A romp, a rogue, a witch, a sprite—
That's Dorothy on Monday.

CHUB.

A Romance of West Virginia.

BY DAVID LOWRY.

CHAPTER III.

AN AVOWAL OF LOVE—ROUGH AND READY DIRECTORS.

Dan Bash stood looking at Chub. He did not know what to say. Words seemed too weak at such a moment.

Finally, he collected his wits.

"Miss Dawson!"

"I'm plain, Belle Dawson here."

"Well, Belle, then. I owe my life to you—twice to-day you have saved my life."

"I reckon I've saved it once, anyhow. Them miserable skunks would have killed you. And oh! Mr. Bash——"

"Permit me. My name is Dan—I'm plain Dan Bash here."

He smiled.

She smiled also.

She could not help it. She had used the same language.

"Well, I was going to say, if you want to die a natural death, go away at once. Go—and go now. Do!"

"Why should I go now? Because these Monks and that poor creature with them hate me? Is that it?"

"It ain't that. It's because——"

Chub checked herself. Would she tell him what she witnessed before she fired that first shot, or not? It might only alarm him, without doing any good. Perhaps she had best tell her father all about it, and leave him to decide what course to pursue.

"Well, you have not given me the reason, Belle."

"I will soon. It's a good reason."

"But unless I know what it is——"

"I may as well tell. I thought them mean critters would just as like as not try to kill you. I didn't go home. I just put across the hill, a near cut, and I saw Ned Monk draw a bead—well, he hadn't time to draw a bead on you, till I shot so close to his head he was skert."

"So it was you who fired that first shot?"

"Yes, 'twas me."

Chub was laughing now.

"You'd laugh if you'd seen them jump. The hull passel on 'em jumped. Then they waited awhile, and thought as they were there to kill you they might as well take the risk."

"Miss Dawson—Belle—Chub," said Dan Bash quickly, as he caught her hand, "you are one in a thousand—one woman in millions!"

"Nonsense, don't you begin to say foolish things to me, now."

"They are not foolish, Belle—Chub. I have been attached to you from the moment I first saw you."

"I reckon it's about time for me to go home now."

"No. You must hear me, Chub—you must. I can't let you go now—I won't let you go—until I speak what is in my mind. If you think you could ever care for me, don't prevent me from speaking."

"Who's preventing you? Seems to me"—here Chub laughed, and Dan Bash thought he had never heard a sweeter or more silvery laugh—"you're doing all the talking. Now, I'm a square out girl, as everybody knows."

He gazed at her admiringly. She was a square out girl. Her blue eyes met his honestly. There was a conscious pride in her manner, in her tone, in the way she held her head up as she looked at him.

"I'm a square out girl, Dan Bash. If you want to come to our house, and father don't object, the door is open to you. My father is a man who has been out in the world some. I never do anything unless dad agrees—and dad generally asks me about things he ain't just quite sure of. That's the way we do up here in the mountains. I don't suppose we're as fine as the folks you've lived among—but we're straight out—all except that gang of Monks—and we make them come up to the mark, too, once in a while. Yes, we do."

Dan Bash took off his hat, and bowed to her as courteously as though she were a queen.

"I wish I could say for the people you refer to that they had the thousandth part of the honesty—the hundredth part of the good qualities you and your father display."

"Well, this is not the place to be stopping if you want to catch them directors. That's what you want, I reckon."

"I'll go now."

Dan Bash turned, waved his hand, and walked on.

The Monks and Squatty had turned up a path on the mountain-side; there was now no danger of molestation from that source for the remainder of the day.

But Chub stood, long after he had left her, watching him hasten along the road, which was in plain view.

When he had walked half a mile, Chub turned and retraced her steps over the mountain side in the opposite direction.

Dan Bash pushed on quickly to 'Squire Meeks', where he found the two directors who controlled the school district.

They were both noted men.

One was the best jumper in the county. He had jumped farther and higher than any man who had stood before him. He could—had, more than once—jumped off the ground, clouted one man's ears with one foot, and the next instant clouted another's. To kick a man's hat off was as easy as breathing to Si Sloan.

The other man was the best wrestler in the county. Hi Perkins had laid every man on his back that had the temerity to meet him. He did not care how his opponent wrestled. Whether it was one style or another style, it was all one to Hi. He would take his chances, and whether he learned the other man's tricks or not made little difference. He employed a few tricks of his own as soon as it was possible to do so with safety, and hence it was that Hi Perkins floored all comers in such short order that he was a terror to all in the county. He was not a bad hand at boxing, either. He could whip almost any man in the county with his bare fists; but, with feet and fists at his command, no man could be found in that part of the State to try conclusions with Hi Perkins.

When Dan Bash appeared on the ground the crowd were laughing at some witticism made by a jolly looking man with tremendous shoulders, a neck that seemed strong enough to sustain any blow a fist could give it, and arms and legs that indicated extraordinary strength.

When Dan entered the crowd, a good many there who had never seen him stared at him curiously. He felt somewhat abashed at first, but he addressed the man nearest him politely, and in a low tone said:

"Will you please inform me which is Mr. Sloan?"

"I'm Sloan. Si Sloan's my name. Want me?"

"And will you be kind enough to tell me which is Mr. Perkins?"

"Hyer, Perkins, ye're wanted!"

Perkins approached Bash. The crowd stood gaping at the three, wondering what the young man was there for.

"I'd like to speak to you apart," said Dan Bash.

Now, this was something Sloan and Perkins either did not or would not understand.

"Spit it right out here," said Sloan. "We're all neighbors here."

"Got no secrets—'specially with strangers," said Perkins.

"This is not a secret business affair, and yet I don't see that it concerns everybody. It concerns the directors of the school and myself."

"Oh! you are a teacher," said Sloan, contemplating Bash coldly.

"Applyin' for the place," said Perkins.

"Precisely. I am prepared to submit my recommendations."

"Well, Perkins, I don't know as we want any recommendations, do we?"

"I reckon not, Si."

The crowd tittered, and Bash's face flamed with mortification and anger.

But he retained his self-possession. His tongue was at his command.

"Will you tell me, then, what are the qualifications you expect in a teacher."

Sloan looked him over slowly, then drawled, "I scarcely think you'll fill the bill, young man."

"Is it age you are looking for?"

"No, it ain't age nuther," said Sloan.

The crowd tittered again.

Bash turned around quickly.

"You are very ill-mannered—especially you there winking at your neighbors," said Bash calmly.

The young man singled out straightened himself up suddenly, and advanced threateningly.

"You hold your horses, Bill Peters," said Perkins, dryly. "It ain't your put in yet."

Then Si Sloan said very deliberately, "You don't seem to be jist the sort of feller we're on the look out for for our school."

"You ain't got the backbone—the grit and grip, I reckon," said Perkins.

"But how do you know—why make up your mind without giving me a trial?" said Bash, tartly. "I think it an altogether unwarrantable assumption to say that I lack courage. You do not know me—never beheld me until now."

"Well—you wanted to know the qualifications," said Si Sloan.

"Tell him what they are, Si," said Perkins, sneeringly.

"I didn't mean you hadn't a mind to—it's the ability. Many a man would stand up to another an' get knocked down right along—'tain't that. It's the man as can knock the other fellow down, and hold him level."

"Oh!" said Bash, "you mean a good fighter?"

"No, nor I don't mean a fightin' man. A man that can fight, an' knows how to, but don't until he's druv to it."

"I see."

"And Perkins and I see you don't somehow look that way. You are tall enough—but you look light."

"I begin to understand, gentlemen," said Bash.

"Another thing—we don't set up for gentlemen. We're all plain folks here."

"I like plain folks," said Bash.

"Now he's cotton'n up to 'em," said the man Bash had spoken to—Bill Peters—winking at his fellows.

"Peters," said the jolly-looking giant, "I'll give you a lesson if you meddle with him any more. He has a right to look for a job—what is it to you, you cub?"

Bash looked at the man gratefully.

"I'm obliged to you, sir."

Then Bash decided on the instant what he must do to secure the school and maintain his manhood, or rather demonstrate his manhood to the directors and those present.

"I gather from your remarks that I must be able to hold my own, say in any exercise, with any one. What must I do? I'm willing to make a trial, here and now."

The crowd pricked up their ears. This promised to be vastly more interesting than the plowing match.

"You are most too free, young man," said Si Sloan. "May-be you'll wish you hadn't. There are some mighty likely chaps right here, so there be."

"Then I'll not be ashamed if they best me."

"If you hold your own, why the school's yours," said Perkins.

"You heard him," said Bash, gravely. "Is it running or lifting or climbing, or——"

"No; we'll begin with a ras'le; just a ras'le, Perkins," said Si Sloan.

"No, Si; he'd best begin with jumpin'," said Perkins, solemnly.

Bash could scarcely preserve his countenance. The idea of jumping and wrestling his way into a school seemed so absurd.

"Well, then, git ready to jump," said Si Sloan, in a commanding tone. "How will you jump? Run and jump, standin' jump, high, or backward?"

"Anyway. Whichever way you say," said Bash.

"Then why don't you strip?"

"I don't need to at present," said Bash. "I may."

The crowd formed a huge ring. Expectation was on every face as Si Sloan marked off a base-line and eyed the ground he had selected.

"Be you ready now, stranger? See here, what might your name be?"

"Bash—there are several here who know my name."

"Then, Mr. Bash, you toe the scratch."

CHAPTER IV.

DAN BASH MAKES THEIR EYES STICK OUT.

As Dan Bash toed the scratch on the soft field he felt his blood tingle.

He was in his element once more. Time was when he was the acknowledged superior of all the runners, leapers, and oarsmen on the list of the athletes intrusted with the representation of a great college. He had not been the captain of as active foot-ball players as ever were seen—a wrestler, climber, boxer, swordsman, or marksman—for nothing.

His eye was as quick, his muscles as hard, his knowledge of the tricks in all methods of wrestling as thorough as shrewdness and much practice could make it.

The crowd looked on as Dan's eye rested on a clod a little distance from him. Before they were prepared for it he sprang lightly in the air, and lit firmly, evenly upon his feet.

"A pooty good jump—nothing aixtra—nothing at all aixtra," said Si Sloan. "Bill Peters."

The man who winked stepped up confidently.

"Peters, jest kick the dust on his tracks, will you, to show him he ain't aixtra—no great shakes?"

Peters drew a long breath, swung his arms like flails, and leaped.

Si Sloan and Hi Perkins solemnly measured his jump.

"'Bout two inches mor'n Bash's."

Dan Bash turned around.

"Anybody else going to jump with me?"

"No," said Si Sloan, dryly. "I guess Peters'll hold you level."

Bash stood with both feet square on the line, then rose clear in the air and came down squarely, beautifully on his feet. Both were in line. The heels were together.

Si Sloan hastened forward, followed by Hi Perkins. They stooped over the marks made by Bash's heels.

Bash looked on indifferently.

"About a foot furder than Peters," said Sloan.

Bash turned to the jolly-looking man, whose face was beaming on him.

"Will you please measure the distance for me?"

"Certainly," said the jolly giant.

"I think I beat Peters more than a foot."

"You've beat him sixteen inches," said the jolly man, who produced a rule, then stooped and measured the ground carefully.

Si said something in a low tone to Perkins.

Perkins shook his head and said something about wrestling that Bash plainly overheard.

"Time enough, Si, then."

"I suppose you don't want to try again, Peters?" said the big man.

But Peters was resolved to make another trial.

He stood upon the line—swung, heaved, worked his toes over the line, then, filled with wind, spread himself in the air, lit on the ground and staggered about to keep from falling.

The big man measured the jump.

He went back to where Peters' toes made a dent in the earth, and after deducting the difference, said:

"Bash has beaten him thirteen inches."

"Anybody else that wants to jump against me?" Bash asked smilingly.

"Yes—I'll jump."

A tall, spare man—a man at least six feet two inches in his stockings (Bash was barely five feet ten inches, and did not look his height) stood on the line.

He, too, worked his arms wildly, drew a tremendous breath, and jumped.

Bash stood on the line a second later. The next second he had made a clean jump, heels together again, and stood still and perfectly straight.

Perkins clapped his hands.

So did the jolly giant, who measured the ground.

"Bash beats Jim Dodds six inches—you can all see."

All did see plainly, and admiration was expressed on many faces.

Others looked sullen.

"You think you can jump," said Si Sloan, sharply.

"I leave it for the crowd to think," said Bash, pleasantly.

"I'll take the conceit out of you. More'n that—if you want the school you've got to do a durn sight better'n that."

Si Sloan toed the scratch next.

He did not puff and blow as the others had done, but he swung his arms like flails, just as they did. When he lit he stood up straight, but it was only for a moment. Then he was compelled to swing his arms to preserve his balance.

Dan Bash stepped on the line, gathered himself together instantly, and at once leaped through the air, lighting once more heels in line together, and stood where he lit upright.

Then he stepped aside.

Si Perkins and the big man stooped over the marks.

They held their heads so low the crowd couldn't see the impressions made by Sloan and Bash.

At last Perkins stood up.

"Si's got it by about an inch, boys."

"Must I beat you, Mr. Sloan, before you give me the school?"

Bash looked around on the crowd.

Nobody spoke.

Nobody smiled.

It was too serious a matter.

"Well—then I will jump again, if you say so."

"I do say it," said Si Sloan, tartly.

Bash stood squarely on the line again. Once more he gathered himself up, and when he leaped the crowd gaped. He rose like a bird. He lit firmly again, both heels together.

"Great Jehosaphat!" exclaimed the big man, as he brought out his rule and measured the difference between Bash's jump and Si Sloan's.

"Here, Perkins, you come—then there won't be any mistake. Tell them what it is, too."

"Ten inches more'n Si Sloan's," said Perkins, solemnly.

How to Count Bank Bills.

"There are two kinds of bank bills," said a man who has handled a good many of them. "There are the national bank bills and the Government notes. The former have vignettes on each end, the latter on the left-hand end only. The Treasury Department made a mistake in putting the vignette on the left end of the Government notes for this reason: Take a bundle of these bills in a bank; the bank clerk in counting such a bundle places his left hand on the left end of the bundle and counts the right end with his right thumb and finger. The vignette is the most difficult thing to counterfeit, and for that very reason is counterfeited most. In counting such bills as I have been speaking about, this vignette is not seen by the bank clerk, and he is more liable to count a spurious note than if he saw the vignette almost at a glance. I think if the Treasury Department had thought of this, the vignette would have been put on the right end of the bill."

This was told to the cashier of a Dearborn street bank. He smiled when he heard it.

"In the first place," he said, "bank clerks do not count bills in the way you mention. If they do they violate orders. The instructions are that they shall handle the bills so that each one will come entirely within the range of the eye. I presume there are violations of this rule in every bank. Even so, an expert has other means of detecting a bad bill than looking at the vignette. However, I am of the opinion that the vignette would be an additional safeguard if it were on the right end of the note."

A RICH lady of Atchison, Kan., made her will recently, and in it she says that all her fortune is to be given her husband at the end of five years if he can prove that he has visited her grave ten times during that period.

HOW THE MILLENNIUM CAME.

A Balky Horse Causes Deacon Tracey to Let Go a Few Pent-Up Oaths.

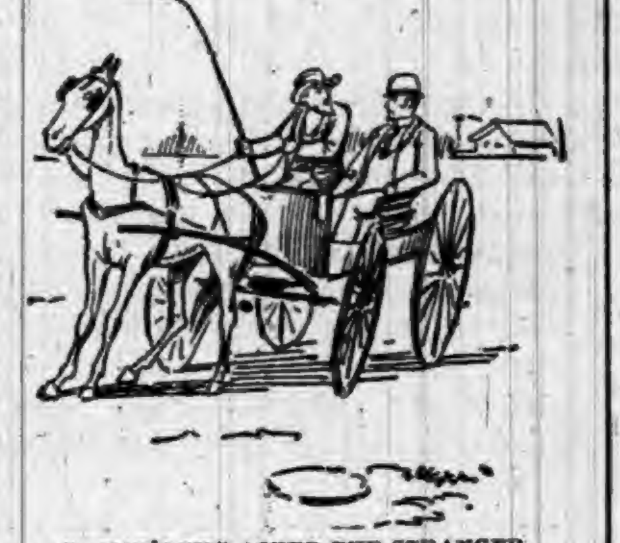
Just out of Bennington, Vt., lived Deacon Tracey, and one day a brother of his died and willed him a horse. The animal came to him from a distance of seventy-five miles, and whether it was a change of scene or a streak of natural cussedness in him no one could say, but he "took fits." He would balk on the slightest excuse and often with no excuse at all, and the Deacon would have to hold himself in and fool around until the beast got ready to go on. He would have got rid of him, but nobody wanted the horse, and in hopes that he might have a change of heart the deacon continued to drive him in and out of town.

One day he got notice that a clergyman of his faith was coming to spend a short vacation with him, and drove in to meet the train. Instead of the clergyman, who was not very well known to him, he picked up a Boston drummer who was out on a vacation and who wanted to go to the next farm beyond the Deacon's. Neither had time for any questions before the horse balked.

"What's up?" asked the stranger as the rig came to a stop.

"He's balked," answered the Deacon.

"Well?"



"WHAT'S UP" ASKED THE STRANGER.

"Wall, I can't do nuthin' with him. We've got to wait for him to get ready."

"That's a —— of a note!" growled the drummer.

"W-what?" gasped the Deacon.

"Why, —— him, the way is to get out and cut —— out of his hide," said the drummer.

"Say! say!" called the Deacon, as he chewed on his tobacco with fifty times the usual rapidity of motion, "you are swearing!"

"Well, such a cussed, infernal beast ought to be sworn at. Get up and give him ——!"

"Lands! but there you go again! Say, has the millennium come?"

"I guess she has."

"And we can all swear?"

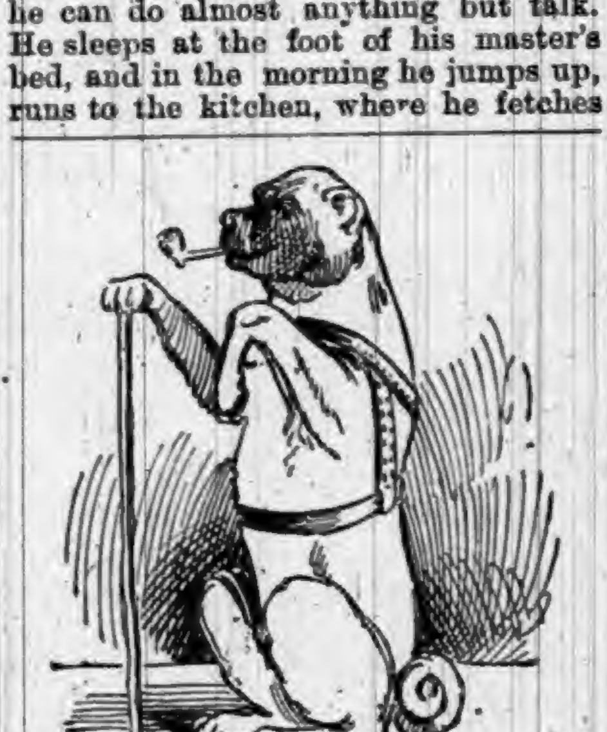
"That's what ails Hanner."

"Good! I've been holding in for two years on this —— —— beast, thinking it was wicked. If you, a minister of the gospel, can use profanity, it can't be wicked in me, and now you hang on to the seat and I'll wallop —— out of him so that he will remember it all his —— —— life!"

AN INTELLIGENT PUG DOG.

One of the Few That Are of Really Any Use.

A really intelligent pug dog is indeed a rarity, but a pug owned in Chicago by E. R. Walsh, of the Union News Company, is a remarkable canine. He answers to the name of Toby and he can do almost anything but talk. He sleeps at the foot of his master's bed, and in the morning he jumps up, runs to the kitchen, where he fetches sufficient kindling to start the fire, and then arouses the servant girl by scratching at the door of her room. Later on he arouses the family and goes out after the morning paper, which he brings in and lays at his master's plate. If a message is to be sent to Mr. Walsh it is tied to Toby's collar and he is told to go to the office. It is in the Union Depot on the West Side, and he never fails to get there with the note. He can tell time, and barks at the hours regularly. He can puff at a pipe or a cigar, but cannot be induced to touch a cigarette. Mr. Walsh has been offered as high as $4,500 for Toby, but he would not part with him at any price.



TOBY WALSH.

A Spectacled Horse.

The discoveries and triumphs of science are being passed along from man to animal with true nineteenth century humanity. Surgical operations for broken bones, drugs for indispositions, dental exploits—all are employed for the benefit of our domestic animals, and now a writer in an English publication tells of how he assisted his horse's near-sightedness: He had his eyes examined by an oculist, who certified that the horse had a No. 7 eye and required concave glasses. These were obtained and fitted on the horse's head. At first the horse was a little surprised, but soon showed signs of the keenest pleasure, and he now stands all the morning looking over the half-door of his stable, with his spectacles on, gazing around him with an air of sedate enjoyment. When driven his manner is altogether changed from his former timidity, but if pastured without his spectacles on, he hangs about the gate, whinnying in a minor key; if the spectacles are replaced, he kicks up his heels and scampers about with delight.

PROF. HEILPRIN, in the recent report of his observations as to the four loftiest peaks of Mexico, determines their height to be: Peak of Orizaba, 18,205 feet; Popocatepetl, 17,523; Ixtaccihuatl, 16,960, Nevada de Toluca, 14,954. According to his observations, therefore, the Peak of Orizaba is restored to the first place among Mexican mountains.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, postoffice as second-class matter.

THURSDAY............APRIL 16, 1891.

GOVERNOR of North Carolina Daniel G. Fowle, died last week.

MEXICO never had the office of vice-president. Now, they seem inclined to have it.

TIN in abundance found near Riverside, Cal., recently. Put there by McKinley, we suppose republican papers will say.

PROF. J. M. COULTER, of De Pauw University, has been elected president of the state universityat Bloomington in place of Jordan, resigned.

THE democrats at the late city election in Chicago, cast about 18,000 more votes than their opponents. But with two candidates in the field, and a divided vote, they were beaten.

THE republican majority in the U. S. senate depends on ten small states, with a total population of 2,218,720, while the ten small democratic states have 11,437,005. That beats gerrymandering.

THE Press asks why democrats have treated soldiers so shabbily. We don't think they have. Never heard they had. Don't believe the Press ever heard of it. We think him as ignorant on this, as on the school law.

MEXICO charges about 56 per cent. tariff duties on an average, about equal to the McKinley average. We suppose republicans will claim that this will make goods we send into Mexico cheaper to the Mexicans than to us and that we Americans pay the duty.

THE Butler Record quotes the Indianapolis Journal to the effect that "the democratic gerrymander of the state is unconstitutional." How about the republican gerrymander of 1873? We challenge the Record to show another apportionment as unfair as that one.

INDIANA supreme court has decided that it is a legal way to have election judges decide by lot in case each candidate has the same number of votes. And should the election judges refuse to cast lots, they may be compelled to do so, as it is a part of their duties, enjoined on them by law.

THOUGH democrats have not succeeded in getting the tariff reduced by law directly, yet the principle is steadily marching on. Reciprocity will give us free raw materials in a few instances at least, and changes in public opinion here and abroad, are opening up markets for us, just what democrats are asking for.

CHICAGO election not settled yet. Are re-counting.

CHICAGO had a million dollar fire Sunday evening. That beats ours.

IF SUGAR becomes cheaper by taking off the tariff, then why not try it on clothing and other needed articles.

THE Record makes fun of the plea democrats make for cheaper necessaries, and then brags of cheap sugar.

THE New York Saturday Globe, is to be changed from a weekly to a monthly, and it will be a democratic magazine, or review. The first number will appear in June.

IT IS fun to hear prepublicans brag on Blaine's bold foreign policy, when the little Sandwich Islands, are threatening him with their enmity if he don't give them reciprocity.

A FEW democratic editors, a very few, don't like Cleveland. They could succeed in impressing their views on others a trifle better if they would explain what is wrong about Grover.

REPUBLICAN papers are now saying "The last legislature cost the state $1327 a day." They ought to add: "The last republican legislature cost the state $2,000 a day, and did nothing for the people." The last two legislatures, both democratic, did more for the people than all the republican legislatures since that party was organized.

RECIPROCITY with Brazil is hailed with crazy delight by republican papers. It is free trade with that one nation. Would they be as tickled to have "reciprocity" with France, Germany, Great Britain, etc., etc.? That would be general free trade, and very much more than democrats have asked. But they would accept even that, we suppose if their leaders told them it was the proper caper.

IF ALL our sugar were made in this country, it would now cost us more than before. For we would by paying a bounty of 2 cents on each pound, and be relieved of paying a duty that averages less than 2 cents. The way we gain now, is by buying most of it abroad. But we pay eight millions in bounties to southern planters, though not a cent on northern corn, wheat or oats.

THE Dispatch in boasting of the cheap sugar business, has copied two rather opposite articles on the subject. One claims credit for republicans for taking off the duty so as to make sugar cheaper and the other carries the idea that the tariff is not a tax, and therefore would make no difference, and that "under certain circumstance the tariff is not a tax." What the republican party has needed most, in the last ten years or so is a set of editors capable of producing arguments or at least facts, for themselves, so as not to blow hot and then cold in the same paper, and on the same subject, by coping without thought or question, everything they find in supposed infallible republican dailies.

TO THE PUBLIC.

On account of my ability to sell better goods at lower prices, and as my stock is so much larger, newer and nicer in every detail than other houses carrying clothing in Auburn have, they have seen proper,—as they see their trade coming here,—to make, through the columns of the Auburn Times, a contemptible attack on this house. I wish it distinctly understood that I have come to Auburn to stay, and cast my lot with the fortunes of this city, and propose to do an honorable and clean business. I am not afraid of decent opposition,—glad there is some, for by this means I can convince the people of Auburn and surroundings that my place is headquarters for reliable clothing, that I am enabled and do sell my goods at lower prices than they have heretofore paid for similar grade goods. I invite comparison, and being a beginner in your midst, I want everyone to come, whether they want to purchase or not, and verify every statement I have made.

In conclusion I beg to assure the public that I am prepared at all times to serve them to their entire satisfaction.

THE BOSTON CLOTHING STORE,
LEO EHRLICH, Pro,
One Price and the Truth.
AUBURN, IND.

THE Record of April 3, asks, "If the tariff is a tax, how will the COURIER explain the fact that imported linen thread on which the duty was increased 5 cents, now costs less than before?" We say, if linen thread comes cheaper, it is from other causes. Surely the editor of the Record, don't believe that adding 5 cents to the cost, made the thread cheaper. Will the Record admit this?

REPUBLICAN papers are trying to gull farmers by sending out tables to show how much better prices corn, wheat, etc., bring in manufacturing states. They must think farmers are very simple to believe the mere matter of manufacturing does this. Manufacturing states like New Hampshire, buy their produce at a distance. That makes it cost more on account of freight, middlemen, etc. We make this explanation, believing these papers have never heard of these conditions. Farmers know all about it.

THE Butler Record in favoring the high tax on tin, and at the same time claiming it will be cheaper and be made in this country falls into the usual error, which we suppose is the result of ignorance, and not of a desire to deceive. He says, "England imports tin from other countries, and we can do the same." Not much. The McKinley tariff makes it cost us twice as much as if it were imported free, as it is into England. That is where we get left on all this. Such necessaries as tin, should be free, then, until our own mines are put in order. we could have tin as cheap as other nations, and would make our own. Then tin would be much cheaper than it is now. The whole effect of a tariff is a tax, about one-fourth of which goes to the government and three fourths into private pockets. But the people pay four-fourths.

How to Conduct the Election.

1. The town council must arrange the precincts and their boundaries and publish the same once, thirty days before the election.

2. The town clerk appoints, to assist him as election commissioners, a democrat and a republican, designated by the committeemen of each party, thirty days before the election. They get the ballots printed.

3. The town council appoints an inspector and two judges of election for each precinct, one from each party, designated by the committeemen, at least one week before the election. They must be freeholders and householders for one year, or householders two years.

4. The marshal appoints an election sheriff (or marshal) for each precinct, one from each party, five days before the election. These are also selected for him by the committeemen.

5. The board of election appoints two poll clerks for each precinct one from each party, selected by the committeemen, at least four days before the election.

6. Candidates must receive a certificate of their nomination, signed by the president and secretary of the nominating caucus. This secures them a place on the ballot when it is printed.

7. The tickets have the same emblems for the several parties, as last year, and are to be made in the same farm. (The amendment to the election law has not yet gone into effect.)

8. Polls must be open at 6 a. m. in all towns having 1000 or more inhabitants.

9. A voter must have resided in the precinct thirty days.

10. Vote as on Nov. 4, 1890. If you want to vote straight, stamp the SQUARE by your party's name at the head, the square by the rooster on the democratic ticket, the square by the eagle on the republican ticket, etc., but not stamp the emblem itself. But if you want, to vote a mixed ticket, it is not necessary to stamp the square at the head, but stamp the square by EACH NAME you wish to vote for all through the tickets. Take ballots of no one but the poll clerks. Go into the booth, mark it as you wish to vote, fold it up with the poll clerk's initials outside and the printed names inside. Give the ballot to the inspector and go out. If you spoil a ballot, return it to the inspector and he will destroy it, and the poll clerk will give you another. Do not make any marks on the ballot except those made by the stamp in voting. Do not let anyone see how you have voted, or you may lose your vote. If you do not know how to vote, ask the poll clerk such questions as will secure you the information, but do not let him know how you intend to vote. Before and after voting keep fifty feet away from the polls.

11. Names of candidates must be published in the last two issues before the election, of two leading papers of each party.

12. Twelve cards in large type, of instructions to voters, to be at each precinct, and three sample ballots, the latter being on colored paper, and marked "Sample Ballot" while the ballot to be voted is white.

City Campaign.

Republican caucus met at Ensley's Hall Saturday evening H. R. Culbertson chairman, and C. B. Weaver sec'y. A. J. Burk was nominated for marshal, Robert McDougall for clerk, Marion Willis for treasurer, Albert Robbins for trustee in the second ward, and W. H. Keeran trustee fifth ward.

The prohibitionists met Monday evening at the office of John W. Baxter, with Alex. Kinmont president, and Wm. A. Rose secretary. Geo. Quince was nominated for marshal, J. W. Baxter for clerk, Wm. A. Rose treasurer, James Griswold for trustee in second ward and Wm. Vollmar for fifth.

The republicans have made Charlie Weaver chairman of their committee for Auburn. He has selected and reported to Clerk Grund, C. E. Emanuel for election commissioner, while the democrats have selected Michael Boland. These two with the city clerk, will arrange the details of the election.

Council Meeting.

The board had an adjourned meeting Monday evening, at the close of the fireman's regular meeting. All were present except Mr. Heberling, who was out of the city on business. After allowing some bills and postponing others, they talked up election matters, especially concerning the duties the board has to perform. D. Y. Husselman chairman of the recent democratic caucus, and W. B. Brown the secretary of same, presented the certificate of nomination of the democratic candidates. Alex. Kinmont as president presented the same certificate for the candidates on the prohibition ticket. These were given to town clerk, Grund, to be filed among other papers. Republicans reported not ready, but would have theirs in before Saturday, the 18th. Hartman, attorney for board, read an ordinance to keep boys from using bean shooters, slings and other similar things that endanger life and property. It was passed and the boys will do well to obey it, or they may have trouble. Mr. Hartman also submitted the new plat of lots between the Avenue and the Wabash road down to the Junction. The lots are now at right angles to the railroad, instead of north and south as heretofore. This is "Ensley's 4th Addition." The new plat was accepted. Michael Kline asked to have unruly boys compelled to stop throwing rubbish into the big ditch near his property. The board will have notices put up at that point by the marshal and if the annoyance is not stopped, the marshal is empowered to arrest them, and have them punished. The board will meet in regular session next Monday, when they will appoint election inspectors, and do such other things as the election law requires.

A Shameless Sheet.

It is charitable to suppose the Clipper editor was as drunk as usual when he made the lewd and insulting remarks about a score or so of Auburn's most worthy and respectable young ladies. But it was an insult, nevertheless, which our people should be quick to resent. It was not only insulting, but cowardly. A scoundrel of courage would speak boldly what was so plainly uppermost in his lewd thoughts. A coward would, as in this case exhaust his slim stock of courage in smutty allusions. After the late indecent attack on the worthy ladies of the M. E. church, and now this no less vile one aimed at the young ladies of the Presbyterian church, we feel like asking the people of Auburn, what good reason they can give for patronizing a sheet that insults our women, lies about our town, meddles in our business, and which has made this county a stench in the nostrils of newspaper circles of Northern Indiana. The vile sheet should be sent back to its no less vile managers, with the words "Refused for its indecency" written plainly across it. Some of our people are sending it back, and when they hear from Auburn this week, they will likely know that there are still left here a few of the determined spirits that have made Auburn what it is in spite of all obstacles and in spite of the dirty sheet that disgraces the good people of Garrett and insults the good people of Auburn. No Auburn man of spirit will patronize the foul thing.

Court.

The case of Grogg & Kandel vs. Blany, Mechanic's lien, gave G. & K. $36.23. We reported last week that defendant gained the suit in Taber vs. Bratton, from Butler. It should have read "plaintiff", Taber getting $100 damages. Peter and Emaline Shull were divorced. She keeps the child, gets $200 alimony, $25 for lawyer's fees and $400 for maintenance of child. Mattie was divorced from David Long, and Fanny Dull from John Dull. Goodwin vs. Teutsch for damages for selling liquor to minor, went in favor of defendant. Shearer vs. Nickey-Gandy Co., gave $30 to plaintiff. Robt. McCurdy vs. Jennings goes to next term. Spencer vs. B. & O., damages, dismissed. Werrbaugh vs. Myers, appeal from J. P. court. She gets $38.48. The case of Tomlinson vs Treman, note, occupied two or three days, was given to jury Tuesday evening, and yesterday morning they brought in a verdict giving Tomlinson $75. The case of Durst vs Bundy, is now going on. George Henderson, the new court reporter, is at his post, and is evidently a competent man for the place.

The Western Reversible Road Machine.

TO THE SEVERAL TOWNS AND TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES OF DEKALB AND ADJOINING COUNTIES:—

We call your attention to the fact that we have accepted the agency of the celebrated Western Reversible Road Machine for the four counties of DeKalb, Steuben, LaGrange and Noble. This is without a doubt the leading machine of the world and is the only machine made that can be successfully used on the road without the use of a plow—is the lightest drop machine made, doing the same amount of work; and we give you a guarantee of twenty-one points of superiority over any other road machine made. In fact it is the champion of the world, and we invite competition. Do not fail to come and see the machine before you buy. Remember it is reversible and can be used from either side, and the scraper or moldboard can be set at any angle you desire.

A New Invention.

As time moves on new inventions, new discoveries, new scenes and ideas are constantly being brought to our notice. The old, time-worn theories of doing every kind of work through the convenience and power of muscle in the brawny arm, have become things of the past. Their days of utility now rest in a measure with the memories of bygone days. The human family, proper, have mounted a loftier plane, and take a better, a broader and more humane-like view of what labor ought to be engendered in a life of usefulness. In this great world of labor, science has gained a powerful supremacy over the deluding ideas and practices of former days, when good muscle and strong constitutions were considered the proper prerequisites to success in life. To-day a man can get machinery to do almost every kind of work he has to do. Mowers have taken the place of sickles; self-binders are doing what cradles and reapers once did, and every other station in life has benefited materially by the discoveries and inventions of this century. Have the patient, hard-working women who stand bent over the steaming washtub and heated stove, burdened with the cares of domestic life, been neglected or forgotten in the wild rush for worldly advancement? We say emphatically NO! Invention has favored the ladies, and made their once arduous labors easy and simple, yet perfectly effectual, with as good or better results than were obtained in other days. The ONE work of women that has destroyed health and made life miserable is the old-fashioned way of washing. Fortunately things are different now. The washing machine has made that task easy, light and pleasant. However, the end is not yet, in matters of improvement on washers. W. L. Meese has for a few years been engaged in the sale of the Favorite and Rocker washers—two excellent machines; one being an improvement over the other, but both giving good satisfaction. Owing to certain conditions, this gentleman's inventive genius ran out toward the constuction of the machine he calls the Swing Washer. This is undoubtedly the simplest, most perfect and best adapted to every use for which a washing machine is intended, now on the market. Mr. Meese is the sole manufacturer and inventor, and is now ready to supply the trade with an article far superior to any he has heretofore handled. He has left a number of the new washers with those who had used the Favorite or Rocker patents, and the new one is pronounced the best. That our people may be satisfied as to the veracity of this statement, we will add hereunto a testimonial from one of the most prominent families in our town:

AUBURN IND., March 31, 1891.

W. L. MEESE, DEAR SIR:—We are well pleased with the Auburn Swing Washer we bought of you. We have tried several washers; among them, the Rocker and the Favorite, and none of them does the work as good or as easy as the Swing, and we do not hesitate to say, after giving the Swing a thorough test, after washing bed quilts, towels, shirts and skirts, that it is the best practical washer in the market to day. ☞ This testimonial is unsolicited. Resp'y,

MR. and MRS. D. D. MOODY.

This is a new enterprise and should receive hearty support of the town. It should be also mentioned that in the invention and manufacture of the new machine, Mr. Meese has had the active assistance of his son Orrin, who is not only a skillful mechanic, but has an inventive turn of mind. He is proving a valuable aid in developing the invention.

We Need a New Depot.

As the town continues to grow and its population increases, larger and better buildings are necessary in many parts of the city to meet the demands. Among the new buildings needed here, is a better, and a more convenient depot at the Lake Shore. The building now used, has long since failed in the purpose for which it was erected. The patronage bestowed on that road by our people, would justify the Company in putting up a decent building for the accommodation of the public. As it is, a grain elevator, freight house, baggage room, office and waiting room, are all crowded under one roof that is not more than large enough to cover a good office, and ladies and gents' separate waiting rooms. Ladies and gentlemen are compelled to wait for trains in the same room. The habits of a great number of men are so odious that ladies are disgusted and made to feel uncomfortable by the careless and inconvenient arrangement of the depot. It is imperative that Auburn gets a new depot, and we believe the Lake Shore Company will not so far forget itself as to neglect its part in the upbuilding of the town.

The itinerant was granted the privilege of viewing the interior of Smith & Madden's Marble Works. Many rare and beautiful things were presented to his gaze, especially in the line of imitations in nature, so perfect, that but for the knowledge that the work was stone, one could not believe that such things were formed with the "mallet and chisel." It is surprising to note what a variety of beautiful designs can be cut in the solid stone. This firm is a popular one, and the monuments they place on the market, will compare with the work of any firm coming within the range of competition. As soon as the weather becomes settled, a number of fine stones will be set in position in various places. Good goods and living prices seem to be their motto.

Mrs. Funk has just received a new and complete line of spring millinery which she invites the ladies of Auburn and vicinity to call and inspect, south side square. 12tf

Uncle Jimmy Latson and his good wife were married April 7, 1842, so that they had been married 49 years last Tuesday. Next year he and G. W. Reed can celebrate, one in April and the other in June.

Say, friend, how is that house you had painted a year or so ago? Is it faded, blistered, cracked or chalked off? If so, go to Beuret and get a paint that will stand the test of sunshine, heat and rain, with good results.

We have made arrangements for late news. On our second page will be found each week, telegraphic reports up to the day before going to press. Envious rivals will excuse us while we blow a few blasts on our bugle.

Miss Millie Sechler, of Newville, was in town yesterday. They came in with a team and found it a long, tedious trip. She was at S. S. Shutt's a day or two before, and reports him able to be out a part of the time. Glad to hear it.

Mr. and Mrs. Lamport and the children left yesterday for their new home in Kendallville. Their stay of five years here is a new era in the practice of the M. E. church and proves their popularity. Abundance of good wishes follow them.

For nearly half a century Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been the most popular cough remedy in the world. The constantly increasing demand for this remedy proves it to be the very best specific for colds, coughs, and all diseases of the throat and lungs.

Say farmers, if you want some of the best machinery manufactured, you should go to Ed. Weeks, south of the jail. He handles the Champion reapers and mowers, also some of the best grades of small implements. Give him a call and examine his terms. 19tf

John DeWitt, who lives west of town, was in Saturday, getting a load of wood here for parties he is supplying. He reports grass and wheat looking well. He had fair crops last year, in spite of the bad season, raising about 1,000 bushels of corn, and 400 of wheat.

The C. L. S. C. will meet next Saturday afternoon with Mrs. McIntyre. Program, Walks and Talks, Mrs. Plum; Classics French Course in English, Mrs. Mrs. Clifton; British America, Mrs. McKay: Studies in Astronomy, Miss Davis; Reading, Mrs. Henry; Music, Mrs. Moss.

Capt. Jerry Likens and wife reached here last Wednesday to make a visit with the old neighbors and friends. Their home is at Bassett, Nebraska, where Mr. L. is serving his second term as county treasurer. He went there seven years ago, and like most DeKalb boys he early took a front seat. That's right.

No more green apples and colic to be had on the lot north of Farmers Bank. C. C. Shaffer had that big apple tree removed yesterday. The doctors may lose by it, Mr. S. himself, may sell fewer coffins, and H. J. Shafer fewer lots at Woodlawn, but Chris. got tired of seeing the knurly thing standing there. And so "another old landmark is gone."

The Auburn Foundry and Machine Works, have for some time been engaged in the manufacture of the Acme Road Scraper. They have sold a number of them and satisfaction resulted from their use. This machine is a new device and has answered the full purpose for which it was invented; it being one of the best on the market. Now, however, Mr. Brandon has invented an improvement on the old machine, that promises to add greater perfectness to its construction. His improvement is in the line of a lever eccentric to regulate the direction of the rear trucks more effectively and easily than before. The part named will add greatly to the simplicity and value of this famous machine.

Were you ever at sea in a storm—a storm near a coast, when you expected the next wave would dash the good ship to pieces? If you ever passed the experience you will remember the relief felt when you realized you were near a life-saving station with its corps of heroes, and you will be glad to know more of the life of those "brave watchers by the sea"; and even a confirmed stay-at-home will be interested in the handsomely illustrated article on "Our Life-Saving Service" in the May number of Demorest's Family Magazine. From the same comprehensive source you may also gain some very interesting information about the Isthmus States,—Central America (finely illustrated); "Signs of Character in the Face: How to Read Them" (also illustrated) will enable you to judge more correctly of human nature; and the excellent paper on "Delsarte and the Delsartean Philosophy," with a portrait of the philosopher, will answer that oft repeated question, "Who is Delsarte, and what is his philosophy?" Then there are bright stories, and information on all live topics, and almost no end of illustrations (over 200), and a splendid article for "Our Girls," and the other departments, as usual, are brimming over with good things; and, altogether, this is an exceptionally good number of that always good family magazine, published at $2 a year, by W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York.

WINE OF CARDUI, a Tonic for Women.

Make no mistake, J. G. Clapp for photographs. 14-17

Dr. Fruth's next visit to Auburn will be Wednesday April 29.

A house to rent. Inquire of James McClellan, East Seventh street.

Mrs. Albert Robbins has been dangerously sick, but is now better.

Miss Lydia Hogue has been confined to the house for a week with the grip.

Cushing perfection dyes, full line just received at Robbins & McCord's. 16-18

Mabel Hartman will give private or class lessons in elocution and physical culture.

Miss Edna Davis and Miss Josie Klotz visited friends in Garrett several days this week.

We sell baby carriages on weekly payments and we sell them cheap. Robbins & McCord. 16-18

The nickel social of the M. E. church will meet in the basement on next Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

We can convince you in two minutes that we can save you money in a baby carriage. Robbins & McCord. 16-18

Joseph McKay and his son George are now engaged in wall papering and ceiling decoration. Both are tasty and careful workmen.

Miss Ada Myers, the new milliner, next to Rainier's, North Main, sells at bottom prices. Call and see the lovely goods and styles.

Stock breeders should remember that the COURIER office has quite a number cuts for horses, cattle, sheep, etc. Call and see if we can suit you.

The roads have been muddy and business has been dull, but Kessler Bros.' famous New Bill Head rolls up just as fragrant fume, fumare, fumes as ever.

W. J. Wallace and wife have an addition to their family, a fine little boy, an arrival of last Tuesday, April 7. We overlooked a mention of it last week.

Under the recent contracts for carrying the mails on star routes, we see that Milton Myers gets the contract for carrying a daily mail from New Era to Collingwood for $100.

Mrs. Funk has moved her millinery store, and is now located two doors west of Zeigler's meat market, and respectfully solicits a share of your patronage. Nice goods and low prices. 16tf

Geo. W. Reed says we made a mistake in reporting his marriage day last week. It should have been 49 years ago the 5th of April. That leaves him still two days ahead of Uncle Jimmy Latson.

W. H. Swander reports a field of oats sown Monday. He is the first we hear of. Charlie Jenkins, in Concord, is a close second. Middle of April and but little farm work done, will make work drag a little.

Eleven tramps took up a comfortable lodging in Trentman's factory last Thursday evening, and were going to stay all night in the warm engine room. Mr. Trentman objected, and Marshal Pfefferl and an assistant brought the gang up town, and shut them up till morning.

Have you tried South American Nervine—the gem of the century? The great cure for indigestion, dyspepsia and nervousness. Warranted the most wonderful stomach and nerve cure ever known. Trial bottles 15 cents. Sold by Robbins & McCord, druggists, Auburn.

Miss Alice Palmer, of Indianapolis, will speak in the interests of the W. C. T. U. at the Lutheran church Friday evening at 8 o'clock. She is state organizer and is spoken of as an eloquent and interesting speaker. All are earnestly requested to come out and hear her that evening.

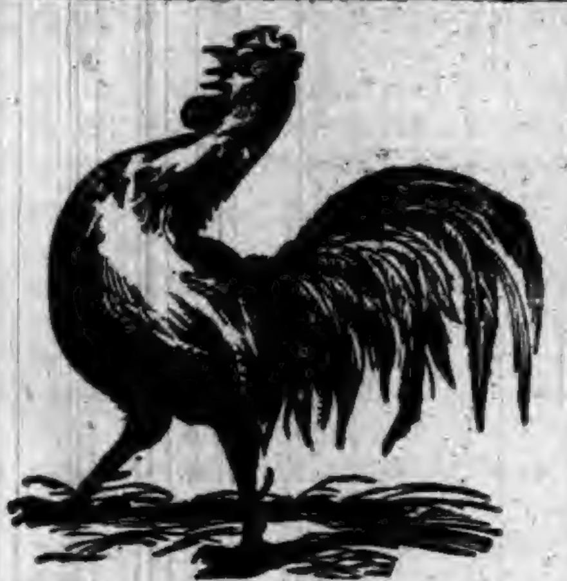
The Press speaks of the "McKinley Bill making it possible to establish manufacturing establishments all over the country, etc." Does he think anyone as ignorant as to believe there were no manufacturing establishments before now, or that the high taxing bill helped to start them? The editor would make a model "theoretical juryman."

Rev. J. N. Wilson, last week packed up his household goods and moved to Fayette, Ohio. We regret greatly to see him go, for he is an energetic, wide-awake and progressive man, one who will be missed in society, in business circles, in the churches, and especially with the G. A. R. people, with whom he has been an active and useful member. But we wish him and his, the brightest possible future.

The Church Furniture Co. shipped the grand pieces of furniture made for A. B. Nickey, to Ft. Wayne, last week. This is acknowledged by competent judges to be some of the finest work ever sent out by this firm. Joseph Staudacher went down on Wednesday to set them in position at Mr. N's. magnificent residence. While this work is a credit to the firm, it also manifests in glowing terms Mr. Staudacher's ability in the line of artistic carving, and will ever stand as a monument of his skill as an artist.

While in conversation with William Knepper, a few days since, it was learned that the gentleman is a veteran at his profession—that of a carpenter. He is past sixty years of age, and is responding to the demands of his trade as earnestly as many of the middle-aged craftsmen. Being a mechanic of more than ordinary ability and experience, he can point to the many buildings in the northeastern part of Indiana, which have been put up under his direction, as emblems of his artistic skill as a wielder of the mitre box and square. His son George has also mastered the trade, and goes about contracting and building with that natural ease and self-possession, so becoming to a master of any profession.

We can't see that the Dispatch made any point in the line of disproving the article in the COURIER about so many soldiers being democrats. It proves nothing to say only four voted as democrats, in the Forty-fourth. We know a good regiment in which only one voted that way in the field. We know others who refrained from voting at all, while at home, believing that the questions at stake, could only be settled by war. But they still believed the principles of the democratic party were the wisest and best, and when anything was possible to be accomplished by the ballot, they voted as they believed right. As to the article which called out the criticism, we believe it is correct, and ask our critics to disprove it. It was furnished by an ex-soldier who is a life long democrat and he states he obtained it from government reports, as will be seen. Our own knowledge is to the effect that democrats and republicans went into the service, and no one thought of saying so silly a thing as that only one party put down the rebellion, till some time later, when someone thought such an assertion would have political effect. Surely no one who can remember those days will make the statement that only republicans "put down the rebellion."



Oh, what a graceful form has he,
This noble barnyard beau!
And how it fills my soul with glee
To hear his soft, sweet crow,
And yet how sad to think that this
Great creature, strong of leg,
Can never, never know the bliss
Of laying one small egg.

Our City Ticket.

The democratic city ticket put in nomination last Thursday evening is a good one, and the men chosen are each capable, honest and energetic. They will continue good work in the council and city government. Mr. Lanning, the candidate for trustee in the second ward has been in the place, now two years, and before that had served several terms as clerk, so that he is familiar with every detail of the work to be done. J. E. Ensley, in the fifth ward, is a new man, but is capable, honest, and a thorough business man. He will be a good officer. The candidate for marshal, Mr. Pfefferl, has been serving in that capacity since Mr. Headley's retirement last fall, and has given excellent satisfaction. He is familiar, not only with the duties of the marshal's office, but also fully understands the duties connected with the care of the city horses, and the fire apparatus, and in all this, he is so situated that he can do the work in such a way as to save the expense of an extra hand. This is a great point. The board are anxious to save money for the taxpayers and the taxpayers should show their willingness to assist the board in this, by helping to elect a marshal who is willing to save something for the town. We believe they will do this. Then, too, Mr. Pfefferl has made a good record in the way of keeping order on the streets. It was this, in part, that secured his nomination, and we believe it will give him a big vote at the polls. It ought to. Mr. Grand for clerk and Mr. Jones for secretary, have both had abundant experience and both have given satisfaction, and both deserve to be re-elected by increased majorities. No democrat, as far as we can see, has any reason to go back on any man on the ticket, and we have no intimation that anyone will do so. Let us roll up a good majority for them.

Rollen Knisely at the Junction, has a sale of personal property on Saturday, April 18, beginning at 1 p. m. There will be good horses, harness, wagons, butcher tools, household goods and many other things.

There was quite a blaze Monday morning, on West Seventh street, but that had no effect on the tailoring establishment of Peter Young. He puts up clothes just the same as if no blaze had disturbed the deep slumbers of early morn. Call and see him.

Dr. H. D. Chamberlain and Dr. Golding, of Colorado Springs, were here Monday. The two were classmates at the Toronto Veterinary College. The latter while here purchased a fine buggy at the Eckhart Carriage Works. He was well pleased with his bargain.

The streets leading to the Jackson station are in a frightful condition, as all heavy teaming to that point must approach on one street. We ought, either the council or the citizens, or both, take some steps, looking to its improvement. A foundation of small stones, or broken stone, covered with gravel would help it.

The Auburn Foundry & Machine Works has put up a cable belt from the main shop to the bridge department. This does away with the use of an extra engine, as the bearing is attached to the large engine at the foundry. This will save the firm an expense of about $1,200 per year. A good idea. Economy is wealth.

A. Lewis has his new building completed, and stocked with the best grades of lumber to be found anywhere in this part of the country. He is ready to supply the trade in anything in the line of building material, and he defies competition in low prices. Those wishing to build will do well to see him before purchasing elsewhere. Business is business, and if you can save a dollar, it is your duty as well as your privilege to do so.

The Hicksville Independent copies the Press' stale falsehood, about Indiana being one of seven states that provides for no temperance instruction in the public schools. It is no wonder our state gets a bad name, when such ignorance is shown by its editors. But it is no less a fact that Indiana has provided this instruction lo, these many years, and she has the best school system in the world. The rest of the Press' article is also false.

Auburn's Blaze.

The call of "fire" and ringing bells roused our people from their beds at 2 o'clock Monday morning, when it was found that the bakery of Thomas Brothers, on West Seventh street was on fire. It is a wooden building and joins Frank Hoff's grocery, which is also of wood, and both very old, the Hoff building extending back across the entire block to Eighth street. There was little that could be done, till the engine got there, as the fire was spreading over the light shingle roof of the bakery and into the thin board sides of both buildings. The engine was soon at work, however, and a stream poured in on the front at once checked the flames there, but they kept spreading back and eating into the Hoff building where scores of men were removing the goods. The second line of hose was in the meantime, carried through the Hollister alley, and when that began to operate on the middle and south part of the Hoff building, the fire was soon under control. The sides of both buildings remained but the roofs, ceilings and interior walls, the shelving etc., were destroyed. The goods in the bakery, such as canned fruit, confectionery, flour etc., were a total loss. A good deal of Hoff's stock had been taken out though of course much of it was injured as is always the case. The two buildings are not worth repairing, at least they will not be repaired, but will be at once taken out and both will both be replaced with brick buildings. Mr. Hoff has part of the brick here already, and the rest will be delivered as soon as the roads are good enough. Mr. Leasure who owns the bakery building, will also build a brick. His insurance was $200 on building, while the Thomas Brothers had $500 on stock. Hoff had $400 on building, $200 on shelving etc., and $1000 on stock. So it will be seen that the insurance will nearly cover losses. The fire originated in the bakery. Night watch Henry Baker had called the Thomas boys up about one o'clock as usual, and they had fixed up the dough for the morning's baking, and then built a good fire in the stove to make the room warm. It is supposed the fire caught from the stove though it may have been from a lamp they left burning. The night watch saw the smoke coming out about two o'clock, and on examining found the place on fire. He at once fired three shots from his big revolver, and this brought help. Then the bells rang, and the fire department came up on a run as soon as the team could be hitched on. There was a little delay in getting up steam as the engine had run but a short distance. But when work began it was earnest, vigorous and well directed. The fire company covered itself with glory, and and we believe no one of the hundreds who watched them, will say that they ever saw better work done. No one got rattled, but each worked as if he alone was to do the job. And it was quickly done. Without our splendid apparatus and company the entire set of buildings south would have been destroyed, and those on fire would have suffered much more. All honor to the "Hoosier Fire Company." They are daisies, every one of them. They didn't look so very pretty, when they came out of the fight, but everybody felt proud of them—mud, dirt, soot and all. Three cheers for Auburn's fire lads.

NOTES.

The only gainers by the fire will be the city and the bees. The city will have the advantage of new and better buildings and the bees had a picnic eating up the melted candy in the bakery.

Frank Hoff desires to thank everybody who helped remove his goods and save his property. But for the "Hoosier" firemen he can't say enough. "Give 'em my thanks", he said to the COURIER, "and you can't make it too strong". We think his own grateful words, so feelingly spoken, are the best words we can say, the strongest evidence that he appreciates what the boys did in that hot fight with the fire fiend that was ravenously devouring the savings of his years of hard labor. Fire and smoke and falling roofs, mud and darkness, all seemed to nerve the boys to greater exertions. As the fire sufferers suggest, we give them "three cheers."

Now let us make a few changes at the fire buildings. Fix things to make it easier to control and hitch up the four big horses. The tap of the bell makes them wild to spring out to their hard duty, and it takes several men to care for them. A few changes and it will be easier and sooner done.

Hoff's stock will be taken to the Draggoo room south of the court house lately occupied by Wilson's shoe store, and be opened up there till after the new building is completed when the store will be again at the old stand.

The loss of business falls heavily on the Thomas boys, as they had fairly got started into a good trade when they have to stop. While all the parties in the fire will lose it should be remarked that none are discouraged but will go to work to make up the loss.

I have a fine lot of fruit trees and plants now ready for delivery, consisting of the leading varieties of apple, pear, cherry, plum and peach trees. A big lot of Number 1, Concord and other grapes, blackberry, raspberry, currant and gooseberry plants, twenty varieties of strawberry plants, house grown, which I am going to sell at reasonable prices, and if required will give time until after harvest to pay for them. These trees are from the most reliable New York nurseries and are first-class in every respect and true to name. I am too busy with my planting and giving attention to my plants to deliver, so I will make it an object in price if those wishing to plant anything in my line will come to my residence one mile south of Auburn, and get it. Come and I assure you that you will go away satisfied. Those who come first will get first choice. C. P. HOUSER.

A PHILOSOPHER says that no woman shows that she is truly independent and self-reliant until she enters a restaurant alone, pays for what she eats, and goes out with a look of proud disdain on her face, and jumps aboard of a street car without asking the driver to stop.

MRS. BRILL, of Rhode Island, widow, wanted to prove her love for Charles Jerome, aged 22. She therefore put $15,000 into his hands to keep for a week, and he was last heard of among the windmills of Holland. They won't blow him back until he has squandered all the money.

MR. EDISON, in a speech to the employes of the Ogden Iron Mines at Dover, N. J., on Tuesday, said: "Boys, wait until next winter, and we shall have no snow to bother us upon this hill. During the coming year I shall invent electric and sunlight reflectors that will melt the snow as fast as it falls.

A YOUNG woman of Athens detects the presence instantly of any feline that enters the room where she is. She need not see nor hear the animal when it enters, but has intimation of its disagreeable presence by strange sensations that she invariably experiences when she is brought into contact with a cat, and she entertains an unconquerable repugnance to these animals.

A WHISTLING well is on the property of R. L. Smith, of Winona, Kansas. It is a bored well, 135 feet deep. As the owner observed that a current of air occasionally came from the tube, he inserted a brass whistle in the opening. The whistle can be heard a quarter of a mile, and is a barometer, because it constantly whistles from six to twenty-four hours in advance of a storm. The louder it blows, the more severe the storm.

A THIEF stole some valuable coins from a Concord (Cal.) man recently. There was a Morocco silver piece of the year 1213, Japanese gold piece 1816, silver piece 1718, silver piece 1737, Spanish silver piece 1760, trade dollar, Hanover silver dollar, Irish half-penny, Peruvian silver dollar, copper piece 1796, fifty-dollar Confederate bill, Swiss coins, 2½ silver groschen, five and ten-cent greenbacks, and other foreign coins.

MISS ELLA EWING, of Scotland County, Mo., is eighteen years old, eight feet high, and she weighs 245 pounds without carrying an ounce of surplus flesh. When she was born Ella tipped the beam at seven and one-half pounds. She is said to be the belle of Scotland County, and a New York reporter, who saw her recently as she passed through the metropolis on her way to Europe, testifies that she is "exceedingly pretty." Her feet are eighteen inches long.

MR. JAY GOULD's library at Lindhurst, Irvington-Hudson, is said to contain interesting books on art, travel, history, and natural history, but is not the library of a book-lover. There are twenty-two books printed by Aldus, fourteen Elzevirs, and only one of them is noteworthy—the Elzevir "Decameron" of 1665, bound in a contemporary prayer-book binding. Mr. Gould's library does not contain his own scare and valuable "History of Delaware County."

A STRANGE accompaniment of a recent snow storm at Deerfield, Me., was the appearance of multitudes of little black bugs that spotted the surface of the snow as if shaken from a pepper-box. They were from one-sixteenth to one-eighth of an inch long, with two feelers and six legs. "They skipped about like fleas and seemed to enjoy burrowing in the soft snow." They were first observed an hour after the storm ended and disappeared during the night.

THE general opinion that China and Japan are a long way behind the other nations in point of civilization and progressive measures is due to lack of knowledge upon the subject. It is true that in many things they are behind some of the other nations, but in others they are far in advance. For instance, the Japanese Government adopted the postal savings bank system several years ago, and it is now working successfully. In this country this matter is just being discussed. There are other matters equally progressive which have been acted upon by these countries, which have as yet only been talked of here.

SERIOUS and extensive floods have occurred in parts of Lower Bengal through which crops were destroyed, live stock drowned, and homes washed away. It will be some months before new crops can be grown, and the distress of the poorer classes is painful. Committees of missionaries and native pastors have been appointed to distribute the means of relief furnished by the people of Calcutta and other places. Many of the floods were caused by the bursting of weak places in the river embankments and through the obstruction to the natural flow of the water caused by the railway grades having been built without sufficient waterway through them.

A RECENT microscopical study by Herr Schultz of the skin of toads and salamanders has yielded some interesting results. There are two kinds of glands, mucous and poison glands. The former are numerous over the whole body, while the latter are on the body and limbs, and there are groups in the ear region behind the eye, and in the salamander at the angle of the jaw. The poison glands are, of course, protective, and the corrosive juice is discharged differently in toads and salamanders on stimulating electrically. In the latter it is spurted out in a fine jet, sometimes more than a foot in length; whereas in the toad after long action of the current, it exudes sparingly in drops. There is no reason for supposing that the mucous glands become poisonous.

THE use of forks was introduced into France, with many other refined methods of living, by Catherine de Medici, and from France was introduced into England, where Ben Jonson ridiculed their use as a beggarly fashion, imported from Italy "to the saving of napkins." The first person who is recorded to have used a fork was a daughter of a Greek emperor who married a Doge of Venice, and whose luxurious way of living was the scandal of that City of the Sea. "She ate her food," says the Venetian chronicler, "with a golden fork, and yet in spite of all this luxury she died of a loathsome disease." The knives and forks did not come into common use among the nobility in England till the seventeenth century; and as late as the eighteenth century gentlemen, in traveling, carried their knives and forks in a case, as inns did not furnish such luxuries.

WHAT Maine men don't know about lobsters is not worth telling. Here is their latest information on the subject as given by the Lewiston Journal: "Who of our readers ever heard of a lobster getting mad and shooting off one of his claws? If we may rely upon the veracity of the old lobster man, this popular crustacean, like the members of the human family, is capable of 'biting his own nose off to spite his face.' He says that when a lobster gets excited in any way he sometimes shoots off one of his big claws. It comes out clean as a whistle and leaves a hole clean cut and with no jagged edges. In the course of a few days a new claw will grow, and his lobstership can keep up that interesting operation as long as he chooses. The lobster is the only creature that scientists have been able to discover having the power to do such a thing. But, according to the old fisherman, the funniest part of it is if the lobster loses his claw by any other force than his own it will not grow again. If you pull the claw off the lobster will go round the rest of his life minus one claw."

A Terrible Mistake.

A young gentleman had an engagement with the daughter of a prosperous citizen to attend the theater, says the Louisville Post. The young lady suggested that they use the family carriage, and the gallant was too polite to decline. On the morning of the engagement the young lady asked her father to please stop in Mr. Bowersox's office and inquire where he wanted the carriage to call for him. The kindly old gentleman did so. He stepped in the office, and, calling to the young man, said:

"I want to see you about that carriage."

"Wait a moment," said the youth, evidently agitated. He laid down his pen, and, coming from behind the desk, led his visitor into a far corner, and continued: "I can't settle that right now, as I am deucedly hard up. I'll fix it by the middle of the month, dead sure."

"What do you mean?" said the old gentleman.

"Why, ain't you the collector for the Gouge'em Transfer Company?"

"No, I'm not. I'm Miss Bondholder's father, and want to know where my carriage is to be sent for you to-night."

He went to the theater in the carriage, but he did not enjoy it much.

—A dastardly attempt was made by a young "tough" named Byers to assassinate Rev. Dobson, a Methodist minister at Reed's Station, about thirteen miles north of Mitchell. The minister in his sermon repremanded some of the congregation for misconduct. Byers left the house, but returned in a short time, and walking up to the pulpit drew a dangerous-looking knife and made an attempt to stab the minister, but by the prompt interference of others he was prevented from doing any harm.

—James Perry, the largest land-owner in Bartholomew County, has, some two miles north of Columbus, on the Louisville division of the Pennsylvania lines, a large fish-pond, covering twelve acres or more. In this pond are a large number of German carp from one to three years old. For several days he has been greatly annoyed by a strange bird of the fishing variety of unusual large size. He had fired many times at it, but was unable to kill or drive it away. This news reached some expert shots from Columbus who visited the pond and succeeded, on the fortieth shot, in killing it. The bird proved to be a loon, and weighed ten pounds. It will be mounted.

—John McEdmundson is a farmer living south of Spiceland. The other day he, with his son, was absent from the house, leaving his wife and his sister at home. During the afternoon a couple of men entered the house, one flourishing a revolver and the other a bag of stones. They demanded money, but being told there was no money in the house, one of them struck the lady of the house with the bag of stones, making a serious wound on her head, and knocking her down. They then attacked the other lady, offering her violence, but she escaped and began ringing the farm bell, when the villains ran away. There is no clew as to their identity, but are supposed to be tramps.

HUMOR.

His Sight Was Failing.

Husband—My eyesight is failing rapidly.

Wife—I think it is improving.

"I hope so, but I can't see now so well as I could two months ago."

"Oh, yes, you can. There's a marked improvement in your eyesight."

"But I know better."

"You only think so."

"Oh, no, I know."

"How do you know?"

She ceased her argument.—Texas Siftings.

Mathematical.

Mr. Cynicus—I wonder, Miss Caustique, what proportional part of her life a woman of fifty years has occupied seeing that her bonnet was on straight.

Miss Caustique — Mathematicians have calculated that a man of seventy has spent three years in swearing while looking for a lost collar button.

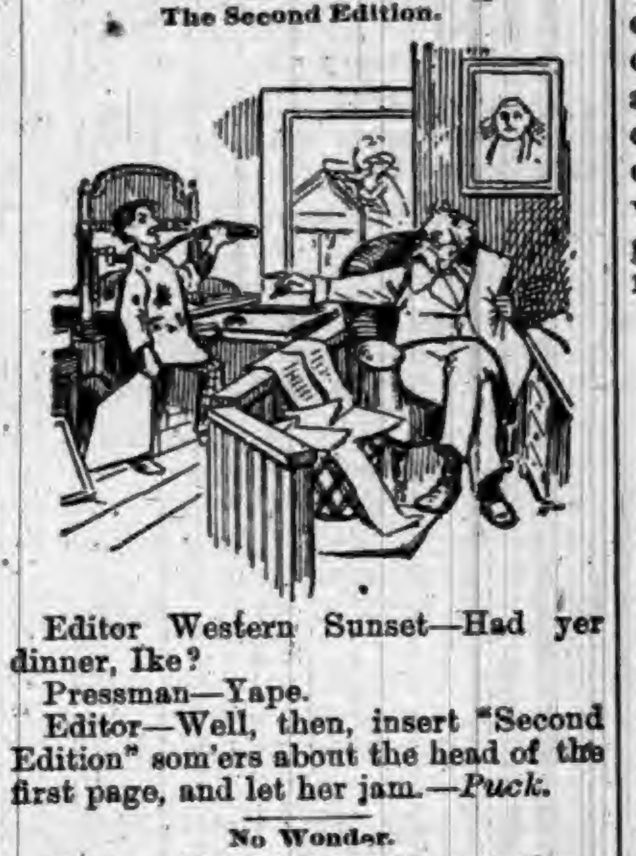
Prejudiced Against It Already.

Willie—Well, I've seen all I want to of this Delsarte business.

Johnny—What is the Delsarte business?

"I don't know, but there's a lady in there calling on mamma who says she teaches it. It takes her five minutes to sit down."

The Second Edition.



Editor Western Sunset—Had yer dinner, Ike?

Pressman—Yape.

Editor—Well, then, insert "Second Edition" som'ers about the head of the first page, and let her jam.—Puck.

No Wonder.

Doctor—Your husband's appetite—

Wife—Oh, he has no appetite to speak of.

Doctor—Why, I saw him at a restaurant a few days ago, and I declare! he ate ravenously. Gracious! he ordered dinner enough for three.

Wife—Yes, but as I say, he's sensitive about it and doesn't like it spoken of.

What They Did with It.

"What did they do with Joseph's coat of many colors?" asked the Sunday school teacher.

"Cut it down and made it over for Benjamin," hazarded a pensive little boy at the end of the seat.

That Settled It.

Young Hankinson (taking his seat in the chair)—Don't shave that mole, please. It's tender.

Barker (after a careful examination of the rest of the face)—All right, sir. Next!

A Neat Compliment.

Mr. Gimps (reproachfully)—Oh, you would not do anything as bad as that, would you?

Miss Simps—Oh, yes, I would. I am not so good as I look.

Mr. Gimps (hastily)—Oh, yes you are; a great deal better in fact.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Cheap Anæsthetic.

Husband—Getting that tooth pulled hurt pretty badly, didn't it?

Wife—No. I just thought of all the mean things you had ever said to me, and it made me so mad I forgot all about the tooth.—Street & Smith's Good News.

Will Get Acquainted.

Farmer Haystack (on his first trip to New York in forty years)—I 'low I shall feel kind o' shaky when I get to New York, Billy, cause, ye see, I don't know nobody thar'.

In Boston Circles.

Richard (at the ball, resenting an affront)—You are an impudent blackguard, sir!

Dora (repeating the affair to her chum next day)—He said something quite awful, dreadfully cutting, you know.

Cora—What was it, dear? I am impatient to hear it. I am all ears.

Dora—I cannot recall the exact words, but it was something like brazen African sentinel, only Dick used the impolite term for it.

A WESTERN justice of the peace, who was more noted for severity than knowledge of law, was very much annoyed one day by an attorney who was in the habit of parading his legal lore and making the justice appear at a disadvantage. At last the justice was enraged, and he shouted: "Be quiet, sir, or I will commit you." The lawyer seized the book of forms, which was the sole reliance of the justice in making out his committals, and as he walked out of court he shouted derisively to the justice: "Now, I defy you to commit me."

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

NERVINE TONIC

—AND—

Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar.
It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the Great South American Medicine Company, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by the native inhabitants of South America, who rely almost wholly upon its great medicinal powers to cure every form of disease by which they are overtaken.

This new and valuable South American medicine possesses powers and qualities hitherto unknown to the medical profession. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and diseases of the general Nervous System. It also cures all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the Great Nervine Tonic qualities which it possesses and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body and as a great renewer of a broken down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the Lungs than any ten consumption remedies ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic almost constantly for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir, are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied, and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This recent production of the South American Continent has been found, by analysis, to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its magic power to cure all forms of nervous derangements.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., Aug. 20, '86.

To the Great South American Medicine Co.:

DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If every-one knew the value of this remedy as I do, you would not be able to supply the demand.

J. A. HARDEE,
Ex-Treas. Montgomery Co.

Mr. Solomon Bond, a member of the Society of Friends, of Darlington, Ind., says: "I have used twelve bottles of The Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and I consider that every bottle did for me one hundred dollars worth of good, because I have not had a good night's sleep for twenty years on account of irritation, pain, horrible dreams, and general nervous prostration, which has been caused by chronic indigestion and dyspepsia of the stomach and by a broken down condition of my nervous system. But now I can lie down and sleep all night as sweetly as a baby, and I feel like a sound man. I do not think there has ever been a medicine introduced into this country which will at all compare with this Nervine Tonic as a cure for the stomach."

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., May 19, 1886.

My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with Chorea or St. Vitus's Dance. She was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to handle her like an infant. Doctor and neighbors gave her up. I commenced giving her the South American Nervine Tonic; the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of the nervousness, and rapidly improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the South American Nervine the grandest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to every-one.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., June 22, 1887.

My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus's Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus's Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the Stomach, because the experience and testimony of thousands go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to The Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted Stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

Mrs. M. Russell, Sugar Creek Valley, Ind., writes: "I have used several bottles of The South American Nervine Tonic, and will say I consider it the best medicine in the world. I believe it saved the lives of two of my children. They were down and nothing appeared to do them any good until I procured this remedy. It was very surprising how rapidly they both improved on its use. I recommend the medicine to all my neighbors.

Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I can not express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen.

Ed. J. Brown, Druggist, of Edina, Mo., writes: "My health had been very poor for years, was coughing severely. I only weighed 110 pounds when I commenced using South American Nervine. I have used two bottles and now weigh 130 pounds, and am much stronger and better than have been for five years. Am sure would not have lived through the Winter had I not secured this remedy. My customers see what it has done for me and buy it eagerly. It gives great satisfaction."

Phenomena of Death.

A physician of this city has made the phenomena of death a special study; by careful observation and lengthy consultation with his brother doctors, he has acquired a fund of interesting facts and suppositions regarding the fatal moment which all humanity sooner or later have to experience.

"One of the things of which I am convinced," said the doctor "is that death is painless. I mean that the moment of dissolution approaches as unconsciously as sleep—the soul leaves the world as painlessly as it enters it. Whatever be the cause of death, whether by lingering malady or sudden violence, dissolution comes either through syncope or asphyxia. In the latter case, when resulting from disease, the struggle is long, protracted and accompanied by all the visible marks of agony which the imagination associates with the closing scene of life—the pinched and pallid features, the cold, clammy skin, the upturned eye and the heavy, laborious, rattling respiration. Death does not strike all the organs of the body at the same time; some may be said to survive others, and the lungs are the last to give up the performance of their function. As death approaches the latter become gradually more and more oppressed; the air cells are loaded with an increased quantity of the fluid which naturally lubricates the surfaces; the atmosphere can then no longer come in contact with the minute blood vessels spread over the air cells without first permeating this viscous fluid—hence the rattle. Nor is the contact sufficiently perfect to change the black venous into the red arterial blood; an unprepared fluid consequently issues from the lungs into the heart, and is thence transmitted to every other organ of the body. The brain receives it and its energies appear to be lulled thereby into sleep—generally tranquil sleep—filled with dreams which impel the dying to murmur out the names of friends and the occupations and recollections of past life.—Philadelphia Press.

A CRISIS is reported in China. There will always be a cry-sis when she loses her chewing gum.—Peoria Beacon.

A YOUNG lady cal's her beau "honeysuckle," because he is always hanging over the front railings.

Chained to the Rock.

Prometheus was chained to the rock while vultures gnawed his entrails. So are many people chained to the rock of prejudice while all manner of violent medicines inflict injury upon the sensitive lining of the stomach and intestines. They are apparently immovable in the belief that to experience benefit they must keep dosing with drastic medicines. Unless the action of these is powerful and excessive, they are not satisfied. They would distrust a remedy of gentle action, however effective. It is not by such purblind extremists as these that the acknowledged merits of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are recognized. That benign regulator of the stomach, the bowels and the kidneys appeals to the rational—not only appeals but is awarded a just valuation. Constipation, liver complaint, dyspepsia and kidney troubles yield to its action. So also do malaria and rheumatism.

Had Been There.

A boy discovered a horse-shoe lying on Woodward avenue near Elizabeth the other day, and after standing over it for awhile he went into a store and got a pail of water and took it out and poured it over the shoe and then picked it up. Several people noticed his action and laughed over it, and one pedestrian queried:

"Did you think there was a fire under it, my boy?"

"You can't tell about these things, you know," was the reply. "I've picked three of them up in blacksmith shops and let go of 'em again as hard as I could, and I don't propose to take any more chances."—Free Press.

Shoot the Spy

A cough or cold is a spy which has stealthily come inside the lines of health and is there to discover some vulnerable point in the fortification of the constitution which is guarding your well-being. That point discovered the spy reports it to the enemy on the outside. The enemy is the changeable winter climate. If the cold gets in, look out for an attack at the weak point. To avoid this, shoot the spy, kill the cold, using SCOTT'S EMULSION of pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda as the weapon. It is an expert cold slayer, and fortifies the system against Consumption, Scrofula, General Debility, and all Anæmic and Wasting Diseases (specially in Children). Especially helpful for children to prevent their taking cold. Veazey, Commander-in-chief, accompanied by all the members of his staff and officers of the national encampment, and hundreds of other distinguished G. A. R. men, were in attendance.

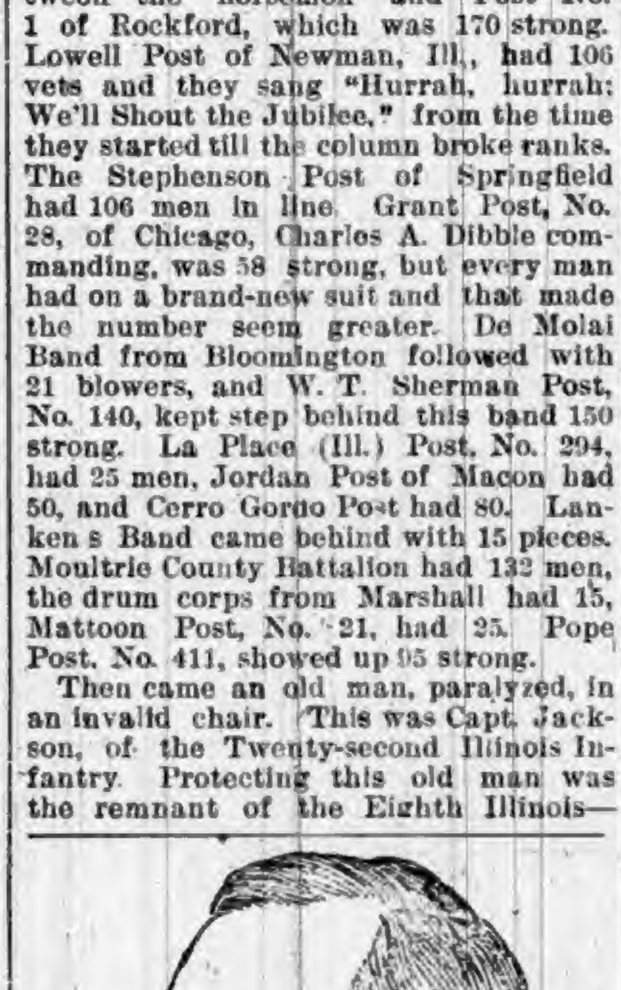
B. F. STEPHENSON, ORGANIZER OF THE G. A. R.

The line of march formed and the head of the column moved under the direction of Grand Marshal Steele, First Adjutant of Post No. 1, G. A. R. Steele was followed by Goodman's Band of twenty-one pieces. Then came Dunham Post, the successor of old Post No. 1, with 355 veterans. Then came a carriage with the Governor and Commander Veazey, and after it other carriages containing important people, members of local committees, in all 440. Another bedecked vehicle held seven of the officers of the Woman's Relief Corps, Department of Illinois; following was State Commander Distin and his staff, mounted on the best horses in town. The department headquarters and a band from Decatur were sandwiched between the horsemen and Post No. 1 of Rockford, which was 170 strong. Lowell Post of Newman, Ill., had 106 vets and they sang "Hurrah, hurrah: We'll Shout the Jubilee," from the time they started till the column broke ranks. The Stephenson Post of Springfield had 106 men in line. Grant Post, No. 28, of Chicago, Charles A. Dibble commanding, was 58 strong, but every man had on a brand-new suit and that made the number seem greater. De Molai Band from Bloomington followed with 21 blowers, and W. T. Sherman Post, No. 140, kept step behind this band 150 strong. La Place (Ill.) Post, No. 294, had 25 men, Jordan Post of Macon had 50, and Cerro Gordo Post had 80. Lanken's Band came behind with 15 pieces. Moultrie County Battalion had 132 men, the drum corps from Marshall had 15, Mattoon Post, No. 21, had 25. Pope Post, No. 411, showed up 95 strong.

Then came an old man, paralyzed, in an invalid chair. This was Capt. Jackson, of the Twenty-second Illinois Infantry. Protecting this old man was the remnant of the Eighth Illinois—twenty-nine survivors. Surely there was a war!



GEN. W. G. VEAZEY, COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

These men were cheered by the multitude, and in response they lifted their hats and bowed and passed on with a quick step, but not so briskly as they did years ago when they marched through these very streets to go to war. They were in command of George S. Durfee, of Company A of the old Eighth. Following these were the Sons of Veterans, 100 in number, commanded by Col. Stedden, of Springfield. They were followed by the Zouaves of Decatur, twenty-five boys. E. H. Martin's corps of star cyclers, forty strong, came after, their wheels wrapped in the national colors. The above constituted the men in the line of march.

The grand anniversary camp-fire was kindled in the mammoth tent constructed for the purpose, and, although capable of accommodating an audience of 10,000 people, standing room was unobtainable. Other rousing camp-fires and love feasts were held the following evening, and every comrade who refused to sing a song or tell a story was promptly court-martialed and forced to submit to such penalties as the "boys" saw fit to inflict.

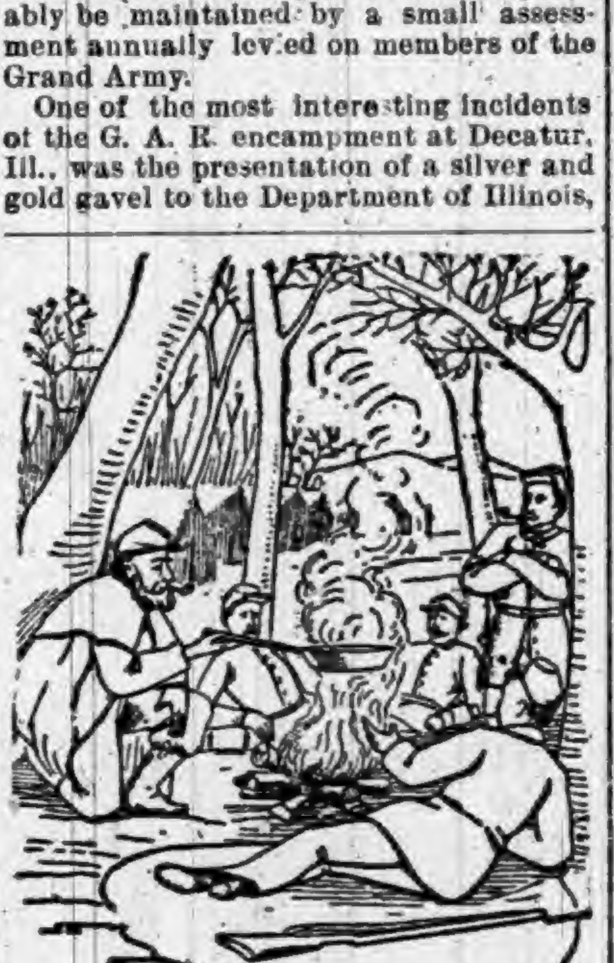
The Grand Army has now attained such proportions, is so widely extended, and has on its muster rolls so many eminent men in American military history that a brief sketch of its organization and present condition is of general interest. The first post of the Grand Army was organized in Decatur April 6, 1866. The men to whose ability, loyalty and perseverance the order is indebted for its existence and magnificent organization were Benjamin Franklin Stephenson and Rev. W. G. Rutledge, both of Illinois. Comrade Stephenson was born in Wayne County, Illinois, in 1822, and spent his early youth and manhood in Sangamon County. He entered the army in 1861 and served till 1864, when he met Comrade Rutledge, who was serving as Chaplain in Sherman's expedition of that year. These two comrades conceived and discussed plans for the organization of a permanent society to preserve the friendship of war and provide mutual aid in time of peace.

After the close of the war Comrades Stephenson and Rutledge met by appointment at Springfield, Ill., in March, 1866, and prepared the ritual of the order, and after much discussion finally selected the "Grand Army of the Republic" as the name most appropriate and expressive for the order. It was then decided to print the ritual, and Captain John S. Phelps, at the suggestion of ex-Governor Oglesby, went to Decatur from Springfield to supervise the printing. While there Captain Phelps spoke of the proposed organization to several old soldiers and the result was that an application was made to Comrade Stephenson for a charter to form a post. On April 6, 1866, the charter was granted and the first post of what is now a mighty organization was instituted there with twelve charter members.

For several years the order did not thrive. Its aims and purposes were misunderstood; it was by many regarded as a purely political organization. But during the last ten or fifteen years this erroneous impression has been gradually removed, and the true aims and principles of the order are becoming better understood and appreciated. It is now becoming recognized as a great benevolent order, the principal purposes of which are to preserve the spirit of comradeship cemented on many a battlefield; to minister to the sick and disabled, bury the dead and assist the widow and orphan. In doing this it has expended many millions during the twenty-five years of its existence. The rrports of the adjutant-general for the last fiscal year show that $221,350 were expended during that period for the relief of comrades, ex-soldiers and their families, and nearly 29,000 veterans and their families, were thus relieved. The growth of the order has been marvelous. In less than twenty-five years it has outgrown every other fraternal order in this country except the Masons and Odd-Fellows. The Grand Army has now 7,000 posts scattered over the United States and Canada, with a membership of nearly half million, and about eight hundred thousand veterans of the Union army yet to recruit from.

During the last few years the order has devoted considerable attention to the erection and maintenance of homes for the aged and infirm, and the building of monuments to heroes of the war and memorial halls in various parts of the country. The most important undertaking of this nature is the plan for the erection of a magnificent memorial hall at Decatur, that will stand as a perpetual memento to the Grand Army, and which will be constructed so as to preserve the records of departments and posts, trophies, relics, curiosities, literature, pictures, and whatever may serve to illustrate the history of the Union army and its achievements. The hall is to be erected by voluntary contributions from members and posts, and will probably be maintained by a small assessment annually levied on members of the Grand Army.

One of the most interesting incidents of the G. A. R. encampment at Decatur, Ill., was the presentation of a silver and gold gavel to the Department of Illinois, G. A. R. by the Department of Illinois, Woman's Relief Corps.



A CAMP FIRE OF 1863.

The gavel, which has appropriate and artistic chasings and is richly jeweled, bears the inscription:

Department of Illinois, W. R. C., to
Department of Illinois, G. A. R.
1866. April 6. 1891.

The presentation was made by Mrs. Julia G. Sine, of Corps No. 1, Rockford, Ill., W. R. C.

A River that Flows Inland.

There is an interesting instance of water flowing inland from the sea. It is found on the island of Cephalonia, in the Ionian sea, west of Greece. The phenomenon occurs on the southwest side of the island near the small town and port of Argostoli. Two streams flow at a short distance from one another, straight from the sea, for a few yards, and then follow different courses. One turns at right angles and runs for some ways parallel with the shore and close to it. Then it turns again toward the sea, and running, of course, deeper and deeper, doubles completely under itself, thus forming a loop, and finally passes out of sight deep down in a landward direction. In its course it turns two flour mills, which will give an idea of the strength of the current. There is no tide in the sea here, and the flow of the salt water brook is perfectly steady and continuous. The other stream disappears in the ground in a similar way. This curious phenomenon has not attracted much attention because Argostoli is not on one of the regular tourist routes. No one knows what becomes of this water, but it probably flows to some subterranean reservoir, and it may have something to do with the earthquakes that occur in that neighborhood once in a long while, or, possibly, it feeds some distant volcano, for, as is well known, the most generally accepted theory of the cause of volcanic eruptions is, that they are due to steam generated from water, admitted through cracks in the earth's crust, or in some other way.—Goldthwaite's Geographical Magazine.

The Greatest of Copper Mines.

President Agassiz, of the Calumet and Hecla mining company, has made the statement that, in his opinion, the mine of which he is the chief officer can be continued in existence for a period of forty years at an annual production of about double its present output. At the end of that time it may be assumed that the supply of the ore upon which it depends will have been exhausted. Looked at from the present standpoint, it may seem that an output of double the present volume would be a fair and ample average of the probable production; but when one takes into account the enormous increase that has been made in the use of copper, and the probable extension of that increase, due not only to the growth in population, but the introduction of new electrical devices of all kinds, the estimate made by President Agassiz of what the future yield of his mine will be seems a low one. We are inclined to believe that unless great changes occur, the Calumet and Hecla mine in the year 1900 will be found producing three or four times as much copper as in the year 1890. This will, of course, cut down the possible life of the mine, assuming the correctness of President Agassiz' estimates, and thus, although large returns will be paid in the interval, we should say that in twenty-five years from this time there would be very little life left in this mining property. The Calumet and Hecla has paid $34,500,000 in dividends.—Boston Herald.

ONE reason why New Mexico is settled so slowly is that the great majority of land grants are held by native Mexicans, one Don sometimes owning an entire county.

Stockton, Cal., is the commercial center of the great double-linked valley of the San Joaquin. Not a stone as big as a fist obstructs the cultivator in all the great longitude and latitude of that rich and peerless plain of alluvial sediment. The soil is mostly adobe, surprisingly strong, fertile, black and unctuous; when wet, cloddy or slicy, and proof against harrows and cultivators; when dry, hard and impenetrable. In that country of very scanty rains plowing is, at all possible seasons for horse culture, mere lumpage and but half production. Horse cultivation is ill adapted to the work and unworthy of the far-famed repute of American agricultural machinery. Instead of only now and then, as with horse field-work, spiral steam blades would cut up, pulverize and seed the land the year around, with scarce a week's interruption. A steam plowing company has accordingly been formed to take advantage of these natural conditions of the soil. The locomotive plow would seem best suited to the San Joaquin valley. In England traction plows are an enforced necessity by ever-hurrying weather. In either system, thirty acres is a day's work, seeded, covered and rolled.

The Blissful Neapolitans.

"I have seen happiness," said a traveler. "In Naples there is a long sea wall, with a broad top. On one side is the bay, on the other the mountain You know the sun generally shines in Italy, and you have read how brightly, how gently, how deliciously it shines. Well, every day thousands of Neapolitans come down to this wall and stretch themselves on it, and lie there in a line several miles long from early in the morning until sunset. They scarcely move. They breath gently. They doze. They look at you with unspeakable content in their eyes if you pass within easy range of them. It takes only a little fruit, a little wine and the fewest rags to make life possible. Their wives do all the work. They enjoy. I envy them."

To Dispel Colds,

Headaches and Fevers, to cleanse the system effectually, yet gently, when costive or bilious, or when the blood is impure or sluggish, to permanently cure habitual constipation, to awaken the kidneys and liver to a healthy activity, without irritating or weakening them, use Syrup of Figs.

He was Right.

A young man of this city who prides himself on his musical talent, called upon a young lady, taking with him a banjo for which he had just paid a good price.

"It won't work," he remarked mournfully as he handed it to her. "Perhaps you can get some music out of it."

"It's n. g.," she said, as she twanged the strings. "It needs a flat and a sharp to make it go."

"They were both there when I bought it," he answered humbly.—Detroit Free Press.

GUS. A. DUBOIS, a well-known resident of St. Louis, says: "I have used several bottles of Prickly Ash Bitters for biliousness and malarial troubles, so prevalent in this climate, and heartily recommend it to all afflicted in a like manner. It is the best remedy I ever used."

Miss Carter's Queer Donation.

At the Wilmington, Mass., town meeting, Miss Sabra Carter, a wealthy and eccentric woman, made a proposition to donate to the town $10,000, the income to be devoted to the painting of houses which may need it from year to year, provided the applicant for paint does not own a dog and belongs to some temperance organization. A committee was appointed to consider the matter.

LOW RATE EXCURSION.

A low rate excursion is announced to the wonderful city of Middlesborough, Ky., on April 21, 1891, via the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad. This excursion will go via Cincinnati and Lexington and return via Louisville and Cincinnati. It will be a grand opportunity to visit one of the marvels of the new South—a city but a few years old, populous, with millions of capital and growing faster than ever. SHILOH'S CONSUMPTION CURE.

The success of this Great Cough Cure is without a parallel in the history of medicine. All druggists are authorized to sell it on a positive guarantee, a test that no other cure can successfully stand. That it may become known, the Proprietors, at an enormous expense, are placing a Sample Bottle Free into every home in the United States and Canada. If you have a Cough, Sore Throat, or Bronchitis, use it, for it will cure you. If your child has the Croup, or Whooping Cough, use it promptly, and relief is sure. If you dread that insidious disease Consumption, use it. Ask your Druggist for SHILOH'S CURE, Price 10 cts., 50 cts. and $1.00. If your Lungs are sore or Back lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster, Price 25 cts.

To cure costiveness the medicine must be more than a purgative; it must contain tonic, alterative and cathartic properties.

Tutt's Pills

possess these qualities, and speedily restore to the bowels their natural peristaltic motion, so essential to regularity.

It's sometimes said patent medicines are for the ignorant. The doctors foster this idea.

"The people," we're told, "are mostly ignorant when it comes to medical science."

Suppose they are! What a sick man needs is not knowledge, but a cure, and the medicine that cures is the medicine for the sick.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures the "do believes" and the "don't believes." There's no hesitance about it, no "if" nor "possibly."

It says—"I can cure you, only do as I direct."

Perhaps it fails occasionally. The makers hear of it when it does, because they never keep the money when the medicine fails to do good.

Suppose the doctors went on that principle. (We beg the doctors' pardon. It wouldn't do!)

Choking, sneezing and every other form of catarrh in the head, is radically cured by Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Fifty cents. By druggists.

Can't Always Tell.

A Toledo doctor kept trace of two young men of the same age, build and temperament, one of whom smoked and the other didn't. In the course of two years the smoker had gained six pounds the more, and hadn't been sick a day, while the other had been down twice, and had dosed with quinine half the time.

How to Tell a Dry Cigar.

A veteran smoker in picking a cigar at the Broad street station was observed to hold it to his ear like a sea-shell. Being asked why, he said: "That's how I tell if it's dry. "August Flower"

I had been troubled five months with Dyspepsia. The doctors told me it was chronic. I had a fullness after eating and a heavy load in the pit of my stomach. I suffered frequently from a Water Brash of clear matter. Sometimes a deathly Sickness at the Stomach would overtake me. Then again I would have the terrible pains of Wind Colic. At such times I would try to belch and could not. I was working then for Thomas McHenry, Druggist, Cor. Irwin and Western Ave., Allegheny City, Pa., in whose employ I had been for seven years. Finally I used August Flower, and after using just one bottle for two weeks, was entirely relieved of all the trouble. I can now eat things I dared not touch before. I would like to refer you to Mr. McHenry, for whom I worked, who knows all about my condition, and from whom I bought the medicine. I live with my wife and family at 39 James St., Allegheny City, Pa. PRICKLY ASH BITTERS

One of the most important organs of the human body is the LIVER. When it fails to properly perform its functions the entire system becomes deranged. The BRAIN, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS, all refuse to perform their work. DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, RHEUMATISM, KIDNEY DISEASE, etc., are the results, unless something is done to assist Nature in throwing off the impurities caused by the inaction of a TORPID LIVER. This assistance so necessary will be found in

Prickly Ash Bitters!

It acts directly on the LIVER, STOMACH and KIDNEYS, and by its mild and cathartic effect and general tonic qualities restores these organs to a sound, healthy condition, and cures all diseases arising from these causes. It PURIFIES THE BLOOD, tones up the system, and restores perfect health. If your druggist does not keep it ask him to order it for you. Democratic City Caucus.

The democratic city caucus met Thursday evening of last week April 9, 1891, as per call published in the COURIER. There was a full turnout, for we had repeatedly urged that every democratic voter ought to be present and have a chance to help make up the ticket. The meeting was called to order by D. Y. Husselman, one of the committeemen, who read the call. On motion, Mr. Husselman was made chairman of the meeting and W. B. Brown, secretary. A motion by Mr. Barns, prevailed, that we proceed to select for the coming year, one committeeman for each voting precincts as now established. Mr. Brickman moved to have these committeemen selected by motion; carried. In this way W. B. Brown was chosen for the north precinct, F. A. Borst for the center, and J. F. Aber for the south precinct. Boland moved that we now proceed to nominate candidates in the order given in the call published in the COURIER; carried. It was also decided to have a teller appointed to receive the ballots of voters and deposite them in the box prepared for this purpose. Mr. Boland was selected for teller. Two other tellers were appointed to count the votes. They were Dr. Nusbaum and Mr. Brickman. Names for marshal were announced first being first on the call. The names were Joseph Pfefferl, Charles Reesch, Samuel Fretz and John W. Jones. Motion by Barns, that the successful candidate must have a majority over all, was carried. The voting was done by using a home made ballot box, but of the usual form. The voters passed by in line, gave their folded ballots to Mr. Boland who deposited them in the box. When the box was opened, the votes were counted and it was found that Pfefferl had received 112; Jones 49; Reesch 34, and Fretz 11. Total 206. Mr. Pfefferl having received a majority over all, was declared the nominee for marshal. Geo. Grund was announced for clerk and Charles H. G. Jones for treasurer, and there being no opposition both were nominated by acclamation. Two names were announced for trustee in the second ward; Geo. Lanning, the present incumbent, and I. N. Cool. The vote resulted, Lanning 105; Cool 43, and Lanning was declared the nominee. For councilman in the fifth ward, there was but one name, as Mr. Husselman had refused to run, because he would be away on business too much of the time. So J. E. Ensley was chosen by acclamation. The meeting then adjourned.

W. B. BROWN, Sec. D. Y. HUSSELMAN, Pres.

THE Record should know that we do "deny that the tariff transfers the making of tin plate and the laying of eggs to the United States," if as the Record states the same tariff also makes these articles cheaper. If made cheaper, then who is benefited? Certainly not the men for whose benefit the duty is laid, and who were instrumental in securing that duty. But, the fallacy comes in in another place. How can the tin industry be "transferred" to the United States, unless we produce tin in this country, in which case, we could and would produce it without a tariff? And if we have to import tin from abroad and pay a higher duty on it, that obstructs the business instead of helping it. But we wish to call his attention to the real kernel of a part of this matter at least. Things in many cases become cheaper. He talks about a large number of papers, or a job of printing that runs up into thousands of impressions. It is such conditions as these coupled with new inventions, better division of labor, etc., that make prices on some things lower. It is not the tariff. The tariff on an imported article is that much added to the cost. And on things "protected," but not imported, it is nearly all added, and in this last case goes into the pockets of the "protected" man, and the government don't get a cent. But all the people help to pay the extra cost. But things would be much cheaper than they are, were there no tariff duty to be paid.

Richland S. S. Institute.

The fifty-third Sunday school institute of Richland township will be held at Sedan, Saturday, April 25, beginning at 9 a. m. There is a good program of work. Among the workers are: L. W. Treesh, J. W. Bateman, Wm. Dull, Rev. Mr. French, Miss Jessie Grate, F. G. Fried, H. Bangs, Rev. Pierce, James Griswold, of Auburn, F. W. Willis, of Waterloo, and M. C. Chaffee. There will be an essay by Marion DeLong, a poem by Miss Oma Blucher. The music will be in charge of J. I. Chaney. The officers are: Brooks Hine, president; Henry Fretz, vice-president; Edna Graham, secretary and W. H. Crane, treasurer. Mrs. Ella Grate, Mrs. Milton Chaney, Miss Oma Blucher and J. W. Bateman are the committee. They always have a big time and a good one.

A Sketch of Horace Greely.

In a little seven-by-nine room, in one of the upper stories of the old New York Tribune building, many years ago, I frequently saw a man with a very round bald head and a fringe of nearly white hair under his chin. He sat at a desk which was almost level with his shoulders. He was somewhat careless in his dress, and being very near sighted, he leaned down upon the desk, describing almost the segment of a circle in the lines as he wrote. This was Horace Greely, the founder and chief editor of the Tribune. April St. Nicholas.

Consumption Surely Cured.

TO THE EDITOR:—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above-named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their Express and P. O. address. Respectfully, T. A. SLOCUM, M. The Greates Strike.

Among the great strikes that of Dr. Miles in discovering his New Heart Cure has proven itself to be one of the most important. The demand for it has become astonishing. Already the treatment of heart disease is being revolutionized, and many unexpected cures effected. It soon relieves short breath, fluttering, pains in side, arm, shoulder, weak and hungry spells, oppression, swelling of ankles, smothering and dropsy. Dr. Miles' book on Heart and Nervous Diseases free. The unequaled New Heart Cure is sold and guaranteed by F. E. Davenport, also his Restorative Nervine for headache, fits, sprees, hot flashes, nervous chills, opium habit, etc 1

Let us at least find comfort in the thought that a few places on earth have been suffering worse weather than we. It has been raining in Summer county, Georgia, for 60 days.

A Safe Investment.

Is one which is guaranteed to bring you satisfactory results, or in case of failure a return of purchase price. On this safe plan you can buy from our advertised Druggist a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. It is guaranteed to bring relief in every case, when used for any affection of throat, lungs or chest, such as consumption, inflammation of lungs, bronchitis, asthma, whooping cough, croup, etc. It is pleasant and agreeable to taste, perfectly safe, and can always be depended upon. Trial bottles free at Robbins & McCord's. 1

The Northern Indiana editorial association will hold its annual meeting at South Bend probably about the 11th and 12th of June.

Will Be Given Away.

Our enterprising druggist F. E. Davenport who carries the finest stock of drugs, perfumeries, toilet articles, brushes, sponges, etc., is giving away a large number of trial bottles of Dr. Miles' celebrated Restorative Nervine. They guarantee it to cure headache, dizziness, nervous prostration, sleeplessness, the ill effects of spirits, tobacco, coffee, etc. Druggists say it is the greatest seller they ever knew, and is universally satisfactory. They also guarantee Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure in all cases of nervous or organic heart disease, palpitation, pain in side, smothering, etc. Fine book on "Nervous and Heart Diseases" free. 1

MERIT WINS. We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. Robbins & McCord, Druggists. 1

SHERIFF'S SALE.

By virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb circuit court, in a cause wherein Ætna Life Insurance Company is plaintiff, and Martin F. Thompson, Henry Harvey and Moses Lamley, are defendants requiring me to make the sum of Seven hundred forty-four dollars and eighty-six cents, with interest on said decreee and costs, I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on Saturday, April 18, 1891.

between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m., of said day, at the door of the court house in Auburn DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to wit:

The west half (½) of the east half (½) of the northeast quarter (¼) excepting one acre out of the southeast corner thereof, 20 rods east and west by 8 rods north and south, in section ten (10) township thirty-three (33), north of range twelve (12) east, situated in DeKalb county, state of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs. Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

A Husband's Mistake.

Husbands too often permit wives, and parents their children, to suffer from headache, dizziness, neuralgia, sleeplessness, fits, nervousness, when by the use of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine such serious results could easily be prevented. Druggists everywhere say it gives universal satisfaction, and has an immense sale. Woodworth & Co., of Ft. Wayne, Ind.; Snow & Co., of Syracuse, N. Y.; J. C. Wolf, Hillsdale, Mich.; and hundreds of others say "it is the greatest seller they ever knew." It contains no opiates. Trial bottles and fine book on nervous diseases, free at F. E. Davenport's. 2

It is a glorious thing to resist temptations, but it will be money in your pocket if you avoid them.

HAPPY HOOSIERS. Wm. Timmons, Postmaster of Idaville, Ind., writes: "Electric Bitters has done more for me than all other medicines combined, for that bad feeling arising from kidney and liver trouble." John Leslie, farmer and stockman, of same place, says: "Find Electric Bitters to be the best kidney and liver medicine, made me feel like a new man." J. W. Gardner, hardware merchant, same town, says: Electric Bitters is just the thing for a man who is all run down and don't care whether he lives or dies; he found new strength, good appetite and felt just like he had a new lease on life. Only 50c. a bottle, at Robbins & McCords drug store. 2

The Secret of Success.

Davenport the druggist, believes that the secret of success is perseverance. Therefore he persists in keeping the finest line of perfumeries, toilet articles, cosmetics, drugs and chemicals on the market. He especially invites all persons who have palpitation, short breath, weak or hungry spells, pain in side and shoulder, oppression, nightmare, dry cough, smothering, dropsy or heart disease to try Dr. Miles' unequaled New Heart Cure, before it is too late. It has the largest sale of any similar remedy. Fine book of testimonials free. Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is unsurpassed for sleeplessness, headache, fits, etc., and it contains no opiates. 2

Gas bills are, of course, written in long meter. Ask any one who has to pay them.

La Grippe Again.

During the epidemic of La Grippe last season Dr King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, proved to be the best remedy. Reports from the many who used it confirm this statement. They were not only quickly relieved, but the disease left no bad after results. We ask you to give this remedy a trial and we guarantee that you will be satisfied with the results, or the purchase price will be refunded. It has no equal in La Grippe, or any throat, chest or lung trouble. Trial bottles free at Robbins & McCord's drug store. Large bottles, 50c and $1.00. 2

WATERLOO.

Mr. Calkins, of Corunna, was here Saturday.

Capt. Edge has put up a new sign to his hotel.

Jimmie Duncan spent Sunday with the dear ones at home.

Saturday Dr. Bevier had a sale of household and other goods.

Mr. Sunderland on Washington street has commenced building an addition.

Monday Rev. Knopper, of Hamilton, was in town, the guest of Rev. J. M. DeWeese.

Monday A. Hite and family of Corunna, stopped here on their way to Ft. Wayne.

B. B. Long and wife, who have been for some months in California, have returned.

Sunday night E. Zerkle's store was broken into. He has missed thus far only tobacco.

Beck has moved the building recently purchased, back, and is making preparation to build.

Mrs. J. A. Dennison has returned from visiting her sister, wife of Rev. Eberly Montpelier, O.

J. B. Hoover, of Auburn, was here Monday. He fails to recover his strength since his long sickness.

Sam. Milliman who has been sick so long, was at Auburn Wednesday to be examined by the pension board.

Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. Isaac Speer gave a reception to the president and members of the missionary society and delegates from abroad.

Nearly every building that is burglarized loses cigars and tobacco, showing plainly that many persons use the weed who are not able to pay for it.

Miss Alice Palmer's lecture Tuesday afternoon and evening in the interest of the W. C. T. U. was enjoyed by those present, and no doubt the house would have been filled, but for the missionary meeting at the U. B. church and the debate at the Disciple church. She organized a W. C. T. U. with seven members. While the number is small, she states she has before organized a union with but three members.

The two days' meeting in the U. B. church last week of the Foreign Missionary Society was well attended, not withstanding there was so much of interest elsewhere to keep many away. Mrs. Sage, the returned missionary from Congo, Africa, lectured Wednesday evening and those present found her lecture full of interest. Thursday evening an entertainment consisting of music, recitations, etc., was given.

The three days' debate last week in the Disciple church, on baptism, between Rev. Dr. Dillon, of Dayton, O., and Elder Stewart, of Paulding, O., attracted much attention and many persons, ministers and others were here from all the neighboring towns, and a few from a distance. The church was well filled, sometimes beyond seating capacity. While most of those not especially interested in the subject consider Dr. Dillon had decidedly the best of the argument, others cast their verdict on the side of the debater who advocated their belief.

BUTLER.

Bad roads continue, but the nice warm spring weather almost makes us forget it.

The mild warm sunshine last Sunday filled our streets with people of all classes.

Mr. Skinner's only child, a sweet little boy of about three and one half years, died suddenly last week.

Mrs. John Madden has purchased the Anna Wait property on Depot street and will improve and beautify it.

Mrs. Rankin Boone, of Decatur, Ind., a former resident of this place was brought here for burial last week.

A son of Mr. Wilcox, proprietor of the Air Line house, died very suddenly last Sunday, of what was said to be brain fever.

Preparations for new dwellings are springing up on all side and a liberal number of new buildings will go up this summer.

The two parties have placed in nomination, tickets for the coming corporation election. Good men have been selected by both parties, except one.

A bad wreck on the Lake Shore near Cleveland, between fast trains No. 12 and 21, took place last Saturday. Both engineers and six mail clerks killed.

Samuel J. Seed has returned from California boiling over with praise of its soft warm climate and endless variety and quality of fruits. P. B. Nimmons and family have also returned.

The assessor is abroad in the county assessing all property at its cash value, but what that value is, becomes the mooted question. Wheat is worth $1. per bushel, interchangeable to-morrow, or to-day, one bushel, for one dollar.

The "Cash value" of a horse, a cow, a sheep, an acre of land, a horse or lot is exactly what could be realized for it today, or to-morrow in all cash down and no notes or delay of any kind only to count the money. This would put the land of this county below an average of $25. per acre, and all other personal property on a like footing. Let us have an appraisal at "Cash value."

UNION CHAPEL.

Miss Jennie Steward is quite ill.

Grant Owens and wife were on our streets Sunday.

Frank Cosper has been engaged working on the Hines mill.

Frank Pyles has been quite sick, but at present is some better.

Mrs. Mary Sebert is at the bedside of her sick brother, Herman Becker.

Lewis Esselburn was the guest of Charles Williams and family on Sunday.

We learn that Marion Cramer's wife is at Ann Arbor undergoing a surgical operation.

G. D. McGowan started for Chicago Monday. He went in the interest of the Champion Machine Co.

Miss Addie Steward, who has been staying in Auburn, is now at home attending the wants of her sick sister.

We learn that Eber Mathews, of Mt. Hope, met with quite an accident at Auburn. We have not learned particulars.

Sunday the liberals, of Union Chapel, had services, but there were few in attendance owing to the bad roads. One of their number desired us to state that they had services every two weeks, or alternately, the radicals occupying the church every other Sunday. How strange it is that people worshiping the same God and working in like manner to gain a home in Heaven, cannot worship together.

SPENCERVILLE.

John Flutter now drives the Ft Wayne hack.

Rev. J. J. Fred has recovered from his late illness.

Louis Berry walked home from Ft. Wayne, Saturday.

William Baltz has moved on John Engle's farm near St. Joe.

J. E. Steward has purchased the Bishop property near the tile mill.

Rev. E. W. Erick preached in the Lutheran church Sunday morning.

Dr. Gerry Emanuel returned to Grand Rapids, Mich., Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Laura Miller expects to return to her home at Salt Lake City this week.

Rev. E. W. Erick and wife, of Albion, were summoned to the bed side of their son last week.

B. Koontz, of Columbia City, will occupy the residence recently vacated by J. N. Steward.

Kell Hart is getting material on hand to build a house on the lot north of the residence of Mrs. E. Smith.

William Erick, who has been dangerously ill during the past week, is in a fair way to recovery, at present.

Mrs. J. W. Rummell, whose husband was recently killed at Colfax, Ill., is with the family of O. W. Rummell.

A number of our citizens attended the funeral of Dr. Murphy's child, killed by its mother, Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Esther Taylor has returned to her home in Kansas, having been here in attendance at her father's funeral.

CONCORD.

Frank B. Draggoo was at St. Joe last Sabbath.

Mrs. Wm. Draggoo, of St. Joe, visited her son Wayne Sabbath last.

Mrs. Lewis Howey, who has been seriously ill is reported slightly better.

Grant Keller was to see his brother Sherman at Garrett the last of the week.

Mrs. Mart Hedinger, of St. Joe, visited her aunt, Mrs Nancy Wyatt last Tuesday.

Miss Emma Testison, of Newville, visited her sister, Mrs Lavina Johnson last week.

John Timmerman and Frank E. Draggoo attended church at Fairview last Sunday.

Richard Ervin successor of Is. Wyatt, left last Monday for Ft. Wayne. Will return with his bride.

Mrs. T. H. Murray and daughter Goldie, of Spencerville, visited her daughter, Mrs. C. H. Brown last week.

Of recent date Tell Elson has come to the conclusion he is in a decline, as he now weighs over 200 pounds.

Mrs. Estelle Koontz paid her foster parents, of Lansing, Mich., a visit last week, before her departure for Missouri.

Last Sunday Jake Baker nicely represented the old pioneers by hitching up his oxen and freighting his family to some of the neighbors for a social.

The new bell came Thursday last, and on Saturday it was placed in the tower. It is now ready to peal out its notes on the air and call them in dedication day.

G. W. Wade, another old pioneer, departed this life April 19 at the age of 80 years. One daughter, Mrs. Henry Homer, of Clay county, Kansas, and one son, G. R. Wade, who resides here on the old homestead, survive him. He ate his dinner in apparently good health, but was suddenly taken ill and died about three o'clock the same afternoon. He had had a hard attack of grip and it is supposed it left him with some trouble of the heart, which hastened his death.

How to Play Ball.

The popular "Buck" Ewing, captain of the New Yorks, has written an article for the Boy's Department of the Ladies' Home Journal for June, on the "Ins and Outs of Base-ball," in which the famous catcher will tell how to play the game; how to form a nine; the hardest positions and how to fill them; how to throw a ball, etc. This is Ewing's first article and it is said to be the best which has ever been written for boys on the great national game.

Is it your fault or the boy's that Young Hopeful doesn't understand the meaning of the word he has encountered, or knows nothing about the man of whose actions he has been reading? The boy comes to you while you are deep in the market reports, and you are annoyed at the interruption. Does not part of your annoyance arise from the fact that you do not know yourself?

The whole trouble, both for the boy and yourself would be avoided if you had an Encyclopædia in the house—a good one, that is. The Pinkertons on Guard in the Coke Regions—Gas Explosion—A Bloody Engagement—Killed by an Electric Bolt.

The Pinkertons on Guard.

A special from Pittsburgh, dated the 23d inst., says: Four car loads of Pinkerton guards arrived in the coke regions to-day. All were heavily armed. Two car loads were from Philadelphia, and 125 men from Chicago, under command of Capt. Rose. It is thought these men will take the place of the militia, as Gov. Pattison will not allow the National Guard to be used to evict the strikers. Word from Mount Pleasant, says: Everything is reported quiet in the coke regions. Trouble may occur, however, when the evictions take place. The Sheriff has made all arrangements and a wholesale turning out of the strikers is expected. All the plants before reported as in operation are running with slightly increased forces. Last night unknown persons on the hills surrounded Morewood, fired several shots, but they could not be located.

A Bloody Engagement.

Lord Lansdowne, viceroy of India, who has his headquarters at Simla, received a dispatch from the forces in the field in Assam under the command of Gen. Lockhart. The dispatch, which is of great brevity, says that for some days a large body of Manipuris have been hovering about the British camp. On Sunday last the hillsmen closely invested the camp, and throughout the night kept up a straggling fusilade upon the British. The fire was, however, ill-directed and comparatively harmless. Yesterday morning Gen. Lockhart ordered a rapid advance in force. A short, sharp and decisive engagement ensued, which was followed by a complete defeat of the Manipuris, who lost 150 killed and many wounded. But one Englishman was killed and only four wounded. The native villages in the vicinity of the British camp were burned.

A Gas Explosion.

The first day's run at the Edgar Thomson Steel works, at Braddock, Pa., was marked by a frightful explosion of gas, resulting in the serious burning of six workmen. Their names are John Sales, Thomas Rantrauff, David Hoon, Otto Onendrake, William Farnsworth and August Anderson. The last two were boys, aged 14 and 16 years, respectively. The accident occurred in the bottom house near the converting department. One of the men raised the oven door and the gas shot forth in a perfect flame. It is thought the draft was imperfect. The condition of the men is serious but all will probably recover.

A Big Verdict.

In Judge Moore's court, at Cincinnati, the jury returned a verdict for $96,000 damages against the Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis Railway Company in favor of the Peters Cartridge Company. The action was based on the terrible accident at King's switch, where a tremendous explosion of powder wrecked the plaintiff's premises. The claim was that the railroad's employes unskillfully caused a collision of cars on a side track, thus causing the explosion.

Killed by an Electric Bolt.

Near Grantsburg, Crawford County, Indiana, during a heavy thunder storm, John Grant was struck by lightning and instantly killed. Grant was standing on a hill side, under a tree, and near a large rock. The electric bolt struck the rock, and it is supposed that it was the shock which killed the unfortunate man, as there were no mark or bruise on his body. The killing was witnessed by a number of farm hands from a distance.

Two Tramps Killed.

The Burlington fast train ran over and ground into fine pieces two men, evidently tramps, who were walking on the track. The accident occurred just at the edge of the city limits of St. Joseph, Mo. From letters found in their clothing, one is supposed to have been George Gaston and the other E. L. Marmaduke. The engineer was too near to stop when he discovered the men.

Suicides at Findlay.

Two men committed suicide at Findlay, Ohio. Fred Jackson, a negro, with a hatchet, cut thirteen holes in his head, fracturing the skull and died within an hour. Adolph Schuffelberger shot himself in the head, cut his throat from ear to ear with a razor and then threw himself into the river, where he was found dead. Both men were unmarried and without known relatives.

In Darkest England.

Gen. Booth, the Salvation Army man, upon appealing for funds, has found that the haul which he has made financially by promulgation of his darkest England scheme has materially reduced customary donations to the army itself. If his coffers continue in their present inefficient condition he will impose a second "self-denial week" upon his followers.

Going to Washington.

Prof. B. W. Evermann, of the Indiana State Normal school, is going to Washington to be assistant chief of the division of exploration of lake and river basins in the United States Fish Commission.

Jealous of His Wife.

Ed Green, a traveling salesman known throughout Ohio, now connected with a Columbus hat house, fatally cut his wife at his home at Zanesville, Ohio. Jealousy was the cause.

Emin Pasha Will Answer Stanley.

Emin Pasha writes to his friends that he will soon publish an answer to Mr. H. Stanley's statement concerning him.

Republican League Clubs.

The convention of Republican League Clubs convened at Cincinnati. The public mass meeting at Music Hall was an immense affair, the big hall being packed to overflowing. Addresses were delivered by J. M. Thurston, of Minnesota, ex-Governor Foraker, of Ohio, and Major McKinley.

Chinamen Arrested.

Nineteen Chinese Free Masons were fined in the Police Court at Cleveland for disorderly conduct. They had been holding a continuous conclave and their noise became a nuisance.

Just Like Columbus.

The Secretary of the Navy has detailed Lieut. Little to take charge of the construction of the caravel which is to be built for the World's Fair, an exact fac simile of that in which Columbus sailed from Paris for the new world 400 years ago. This caravel is to be equipped exactly as it was in the time of Columbus, and manned by sailors in the costumes of that age. It will be completed in time to take part in the grand naval review at New York and Norfolk and will be towed to Chicago through St. Lawrence and Welland canal for the opening of the exhibition. Lieutenant Little also takes charge of the collection of maps, charts, globes, nautical and astronomical instruments, and a general collection showing the condition of the geographical science and the scenes of navigation at that time of discovery.

A Young Man Resents a Fancied Wrong by Killing His Enemies.

Cumberland Md., special: A bloody tragedy occurred at Oldtown, a small place thirteen miles from here, in which one man was instantly killed and two others mortally wounded. The murderer is Garrett Luteman, a prominent young man 23 years of age, and his victims A. W. W. Carter, and William Foley, both equally well known citizens. Luteman was employed by J. W. Carter, father of one of the victims, in his store as clerk. He and the two men have been having some trouble for several weeks resulting over money matters. The other morning he remarked to a friend that he was going to put an end to it. He walked up to William Foley, who was standing in front of Carter's store, and without a word drew a revolver and fired, the bullet lodging in Foley's heart, the latter fell over dead without a word. Luteman then walked inside the store where young Carter was engaged in waiting on a customer. Luteman fired at once at Carter, the ball penetrating his lung, fatally wounding him. Luteman's brother who was standing near by, sprang on him and wrested the revolver from him. The desperate man wrested himself free from his brother and sprang back of the counter, where he siezed another revolver and fired two shots into his own head, then picking up a razor before his horrified brother's eyes, who was rooted to the spot, could intervene, he cut his throat from ear to ear, completely severing the wind pipe. Luteman and Carter will die.

Unreciprocated Love.

Detroit special: M. E. VonSchoneing, traveling for a New York music house, stopped at the Russel House, this city, when he arrived here on his usual trip. Next day he had a caller in the person of Miss Abbie Kaiser, of Cleveland, the daughter of a music dealer of that city, who has been in love with VonSchoneing. Her love was not reciprocated by the New Yorker, and she came to demand back some letters she had written. While parleying with him on the subject she drew a revolver and fired four shots at him, one taking effect in his abdomen, and one going through his hand. Miss Kaiser then took a large dose of morphine. VonSchoneing's injuries are not considered dangerous. It is thought that Miss Kaiser will recover. VonSchoneing says she has been pressing her love on him persistently and followed him from Cleveland. Her father, Ernest Kaiser, keeps a large music store in the Arcade in that city.

A Doomed Man.

The New York Herald prints a story in which it declares that the terrors of the Mafia are at our very doors. It says that Francesco Aitta, of Third avenue, a feather-duster manufacturer, has been warned that he must die, and that he is in daily fear of assassination. Aitta testified in a Italian murder case a year or more ago and that gained the enmity of the Mafia. He was threatened at the time, but fled. He changed his name and personal appearance as much as possible, but was soon traced by the organization and now says he is awaiting his death. He has resolved to sell his life as dearly as possible and with that purpose in view has armed himself. He has made a regular fortress of his little shop and goes abroad as little as possible, but for all that he believes that he is doomed.

Washburne Wins.

The canvassing board finished its work of canvassing the returns of the city election in Chicago, and the result elects Hempstead Washburne (Rep) Mayor by a plurality of 369. The vote for Mayor is as follows: Hempstead Washburne, (Rep) 46,957; Dewitt C. Cregier; (Dem) 46,588; C. H. Harrison, (Ind Dem) 42,931; E. Washburn, (Ind Rep) 24,027; Thos. Morgan, (socialist) 2,376. H. Washburne's plurality, 369. The vote on the rest of the city ticket is as follows. For Treasurer, Peter Kiolbassa, (Dem) 50,000; Jacob Tiedeman, (Rep) 45,739; Kiolbassa's plurality 4,417. City Attorney, J J. Kern, (Dem) 50,547; B. F. Richolson, (Rep) 49,308; Kern's plurality 1,239. City Clerk, J. B. R. Van Cleave, (Rep) 56,699; James Strain, (Dem) 50,964; Van Cleave's plurality 5,735.

Crazy Young Indians.

A special from Pine Ridge, states that Boss Farmer Smoot arrived at the agency from Medicine Root, bringing intelligence that a band of Cheyenne River Indians are now camped on Wounded Knee, the Big Foot battle-ground. Amos Ross, a missionary, and Mrs. Keith, a school teacher, both half-bloods, were stopped, but finally allowed to proceed. They met Smoot, who was bound for the agency, and warned him to go in by a circuitous route if he wished to avoid trouble, which he did. The authorities regard the occurrence as the act of some crazy young bucks whose hearts are again bad. No special importance is attached to it, and the general opinion at the agency is that there will be no renewal of the troubles this spring.

A Collision at Sea.

London special: The Dutch steamship P. Callend, Captain De Veris, from New York April 10, for Amsterdam, collided in the English channel with the British steamer, Glamorgan, bound from Antwerp for Cardiff. The Glamorgan sank shortly after the collision occurred. At the time of the disaster an extremely heavy fog prevailed. The crew of the P. Callend succeeded in rescuing the ship's crew off the Glamorgan, who had fortunately been able to lower their boats and get away from their sinking vessel. The Callend arrived in Dover Roads with her bows badly stoved, but was unable to anchor because of serious injury inflicted upon her anchoring. She was also injured below the water line. Tugs were promptly sent to her assistance.

Reinhold's Ruin.

Lemon E. Reinhold, the Indianapolis attorney who was recently indicted for burglary, and released on bond, was again arrested on five more indictments, one being an additional count with others for burglary, one for being accessory before and after the fact of burglary, and three for conspiracy with Harry Horton, leader of the gang, to commit burglary. The arrest was made while Reinhold was en route to the cemetery to remove the remains of his wife, who recently committed suicide, from the vault to the grave. He could not give bond and went to jail.

Visited by a Tornado.

Jacksonville, Ill., was visited by a very severe storm which developed into a tornado a few miles east of there. The cloud gyrated, as is generally the case with cyclonic storms, at intervals touching the earth, but generally sailing high in the heavens, presenting a grand spectacle. Some damage was done to farms and fences. A load of hay, team, wagon and driver were picked up like a piece of paper and twisted into a shapeless mass. The driver was enveloped in the hay, but, strange to say, escaped with slight bruises.

Flour Mills Combine.

The second big flour milling combine in Minneapolis, and second largest milling concern in the world, is about to be formed. According to the Northwestern Miller, the Northwestern Consolidated Milling Company will be incorporated before May 1. This corporation will have a combined capacity of 10,500 barrels per day. The millers interested are enthusiastic. They say it will mean a saving of about ten cents on a barrel of flour, and two cents a bushel on the cost of wheat, which would represent a handsome profit.

Shrewd Bismarck.

Berlin special: Prince Bismarck has finally consented to stand a reballot in Gestemunde, but he also consents to become a candidate in the Lehe district, where he is certain of return, the electorate being almost purely Conservative. His motive is obvious. Returned for Gestemunde, as he doubtless will be, when opposed only by a Socialist candidate, he will refuse the mandate, accepting that of a consistency which will return him with one accordant voice.

Fearful Havoc of Lightning.

At Trenton, Mo., Wm. Hoffman, Wm. Ferguson and Fred Stinson sought shelter from a storm under a tree. Lightning struck the tree, instantly killing Hoffman, who was leaning against the tree. Ferguson had his hand on Hoffman's shoulders and was knocked senseless, falling face downward in a pool of water. Stinson was paralyzed below the knees but managed to pull Ferguson from the water and then crawled a mile to town for assistance. Ferguson is totally paralyzed.

Kills Her Child.

The wife of Dr. George Murphy, of Leo, Allen County, Ind., placed a revolver against the head of her sleeping 5-year-old daughter and sent a bullet through her head, killing her instantly. Mrs. Murphy, who is crazy, then turned on the other members of the household, but was overpowered and disarmed. She says her daughter will be better off now. About a year ago Mrs. Murphy attempted to take the lives of her children.

Yellow Fever.

Washington special: Surgeon General Hamilton, of the Marine hospital service, has received the following telegram from Dr. Hargis, at Pensacola, Florida: Ship Curlew, forty-seven days from Rio, arrived here on 17th, had eighteen cases of yellow fever on the passage, three resulting fatally. The last case and death occurred March 19. Ordered the ship to Chandleur quarantine station and she has left this harbor.

Badly Burned.

August Seiler, a baker employed at John Schwieter's East Columbia street bakery, Fort Wayne, is at the hospital suffering excruciating pain from severe burns on his head and face, his breast and both arms. While opening the furnace doors the flames darted out and wrapped him in deadly embrace. His clothes caught fire, and before the flames could be extinguished the unfortunate victim had been badly injured.

Five Weeks Without Food.

William Morrow died in the city prison at Massillon, Ohio, as a result of general debility, produced by protracted dissipation. For five weeks he did not eat a meal. Morrow was Junior Vice Commander of Hart Post, and was 53 years of age. He was placed in the lock-up by his soldier friends with the view of breaking his temporary fascination for intoxicants.

Washburne Is Mayor.

Hempstead Washburne has been officially declared Mayor of Chicago and has received his certificate of election from County Clerk Wulff. The Board of Election Commissioners listened to the words of ex-Judge Prendergast and heard him yield Mayor Creigier's right to contest the validity of the result already declared.

Railroad Strike.

Indianapolis special: The Indiana Midland railroad employes have struck and have stopped all trains except one mail car, which doubles the line daily, and not a wheel is being turned in other departments. The trouble is because of the non-payment of back wages, which is six months overdue.

Congressman Ford Dead.

Congressman-elect Mellville H. Ford was found unconscious in bed at his home in Grand Rapids, Mich., suffering from a stroke of apoplexy, and died soon afterwards. He had been ill with the la grippe for the last week. He was born at Saline, Mich., in 1849.

Strike in Chicago.

About 300 World's Fair site laborers at Jackson Park, Chicago, quit work upon the refusal of the contractors, McArthur Bros., to grant them an increase of wages. The trouble is expected to spread throughout the ranks of the force. So far there has been no violence.

Jealousy Causes Murder.

A special from Martinsville, Ind., says that John Knoy, was shot in the leg and fatally hurt by some unknown party. Jealousy owing to the attentions Knoy was paying to a young lady, is supposed to have caused the murderous deed.

Work of the Storm.

A terrific hail and wind storm fell upon the northern part of Marion, Ind., completely crushing the Crosby paper mill and damaging a number of other buildings. While many persons are injured, there are no fatalities.

Five Men Drowned.

Five men, four Americans and one Italian, were drowned in Laurel Creek, near Addison, Webster County, W. Va.

WATER-WAYS NEEDED.

IMPORTANCE OF RIVER AND CANAL TRANSPORTATION.

Stupendous Increase in Wealth that Might Be Brought About by Irrigation—The Immigration Laws Should Be More Stringent.

The subject "Transportation and Improvements of Waterways, Lake, Gulf, and Pacific Ports" was discussed at the Commercial Congress in Kansas City.

Mr. S. A. Thompson, Secretary of the Commercial Club of Duluth, advocated the improvement of waterways as affording the cheapest transportation. Col. T. C. Catchings, of Mississippi, argued that an increase in water traffic, however great, would not decrease railroad business, but would rather increase it

The Hon. J. M. Murphy, of Iowa, spoke on the Hennepin Canal. His life had one purpose and his heart one hope, and that was the construction of the Hennepin Canal. He explained in a long speech the benefits to accrue from the construction of the canal, and he had no doubt that the Government would construct it if Congress could be brought to a realizing sense of the canal's importance.

Col. A. C. Fish, of Denver, delivered an address upon irrigation. He said 900,000,000 of people were kept alive on food raised on irrigated land in Spain, China, Egypt, Russia, India, and the United States, yet the subject of irrigation, although carried on successfully for hundreds of years, was but little understood. In the trans-Mississippi country enough land was allowed to go to waste that was susceptible of cultivation to support whole nations of people. The work of irrigation has already been begun by the United States. Mr. Powell estimated that there were 1,000,000 square miles of arid lands in the Western country that could be made productive by irrigation. At the minimum price of public land, $1.25 per acre, this land had a value of $800,000,000. At $30 per acre, a moderate estimate of its value when irrigated, it would be worth $19,200,000,000.

Mr. Wickliffe said he would treat his subject, "Immigration and Settlement of Public Lands," from the text. "America for Americans." "We have been told," he said, "that this land is broad enough for all, but I submit that the countries of the other world have made it the dumping ground for their paupers and criminal classes, and I believe that I speak for the whole American people when I say that the time has come when all that must stop. There is enough room for all who want to come here to be one of us, but not a foot of ground for one of those paupers and criminals of the old world. I may feel deeply upon the subject, but I have lately come fresh from a most terrible object lesson, which too clearly indicates the need of a change of our immigration laws.

"I believe that this congress ought to declare that the National Congress should prohibit the landing of immigrants who are not willing to become good citizens. I think this law ought to be put into such shape that no man who has not within a given time filed his intention for citizenship, which is now altogether too short, and who has not within another given time taken out what is known as his second papers, ought to be shipped back to the country from which he came. Gentlemen, it took twenty-one years to make a voter out of each one of you; it does not take twenty-one seconds to make a voter out of a foreigner. Let no man step foot upon the soil of Columbia who cannot bring a true bill of moral cleanliness. I am, as you know, a State-rights Democrat, but I believe the power to make American citizens ought to be taken from the State courts and given to the General Government. Perhaps you do not realize the need of all this, but in looking up the nationality of those criminals whom the citizens of New Orleans executed not long since it was found that the naturalization papers of one of these, his certificate of good moral character, was certified to by two of his fellow-criminals. I believe that the scenes which we have witnessed during the last few weeks ought to be impossible. The raising of the glorious stars and stripes under that of a foreign flag, as was done in my own State, and the riddling of our flag by bullets in Pennsylvania, very clearly indicate the need of a change of policy as regards our immigration laws."

A resolution favoring free coinage was received with applause. A resolution relative to immigration was loudly applauded, and the resolution which hailed with delight the burial of all animosities between the North and South was greeted with great applause, and, upon motion of Major Warner, of Missouri, was given three hearty cheers.

The congress then adjourned to meet at the call of the Executive Committee.

SEPT. 25, 1513, from the mountain top of Panama, Balboa, was the first white man in the new world to look upon the water of the Pacific, little thinking that the sea before him covered one-half of the earth's surface. Francisco Pizarro, who afterward conquered Peru, hurrying to the mountain top is said to be the second to view the great sea.

ATAHUALPA, the captive Inca of Peru, for his release offered to fill the room with gold as high as he could reach and Francis Pizarro traced the length with his sword around the room. The dimensions of the room were 22 feet long, 16 wide, and 9 high. The gold was bars and plate taken from their sacred temples and representations of animals, images of the llama, and even women. The Peruvians were worshipers of the sun and their temple at Cusco, facing the east, was covered with plates of gold. Although Pizarro promised the Inca chief his freedom, circumstances were such that he could not well avoid the crime of which history accuses him, notwithstanding the chief offered as much more gold as already given for his liberty and life.

THE WEST AND SOUTH.

OPENING OF THE COMMERCIAL CONGRESS.

Letter from the President—He Declines an Invitation to Be Present, and Expresses His Views on a Home Market and Bimetallism.

The first Western States Commercial Convention convened at the Coates Opera House, in this city, says a Kansas City, Mo., dispatch, with delegations present from the following twenty-four Western and Southern States and Territories: California, Washington, Idaho, Colorado, New Mexico, Wyoming, Montana, Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Georgia, Texas, and Oklahoma. The delegations are composed mainly of business men appointed by the Governors of the various States, and are representative of the Western and Southern people.

The convention was called to order by State Senator Kelly, of Kansas. He introduced Rev. Dr. Hayes, who offered a prayer. The convention then proceeded to temporary organization. On motion of Governor Francis, of Missouri, Senator Kelly was chosen temporary chairman. In a long speech of acceptance he explained the object of the congress to be the consideration of various questions of peculiar interest to the West and South. Mr. Kelly laid all the blame of agricultural depression upon a too small circulating medium. As a relief he suggested the recoinage of silver; the raising of silver money to the standard of gold.

The Hon. John W. Springer, of Illinois, was elected Temporary Secretary. The Chairman then presented Gov. Francis, of Missouri, who welcomed the delegates on behalf of the State. He said that the congress marked a new era in agricultural, commercial and financial history. In the early history of the country such dissension and dissatisfaction as now exists resulted in revolution. The people of the West were now crying for relief, but the manner of relief was sought, not by arms, but by this deliberative congress. Different causes were assigned for the depression of Western interests. Let the cause be what it may, the effect was the same. There was deep-rooted dissatisfaction, and there was unanimous desire that the evil of depression be abolished, and that Western interests be stimulated. Heretofore Federal legislation has been in the interests of the East. Congress has been favorable to the creditor class, and the West was a heavy debtor. It was necessary now for the West to stand together, and there were many things that the West desired, the advocacy of which should be unanimous, earnest and continued. The West wanted freer trade with Mexico, Canada and South America and all the countries of the world. The West wanted the Mississippi connected with the great lakes. It wanted improved railways, so that one could step on a vestibule train at Kansas City and step off it at Buenos Ayres. It wanted a fuller volume of currency. These were things that would relieve the distressing condition of affairs, and these were things on which the West must act together.

L. D. Wight Thatcher welcomed the delegation on behalf of the State of Kansas. An adjournment was then taken until 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Upon reassembling letters of regret were read from those who had been given special invitations to attend the congress. Among the number was one from President Harrison, in which he regretted his inability to be present in response to the invitation extended him. He also said:

A public discussion of the conditions affecting agricultural and business prosperity cannot but be helpful, if it is conducted on broad lines and is hospitable to differences of opinion. The extraordinary development of production of agriculture which has taken place in a recent period in this country, by reason of the rapid enlargement of the area of tillage under the favoring land laws of the United States, very naturally has called attention to the value and, indeed, the necessity of larger markets. I am one of those who believe that a home market is necessarily the best market for the producers, as it measurably anticipates him, in proportion to its nearness, from the exactions of the transportation companies. If the farmer could deliver his surplus produce to the consumer out of his farm wagon, his independence and his profits would be larger and surer. It seems to me quite possible to attain a largely increased market for our staple farm products without impairing the home market by opening the manufacturing trades to a competition in which foreign producers paying a lower scale of wages would have the advantage. A police that would reduce the number of our people engaged in mechanical pursuits or diminish their ability to purchase food products by reducing wages can not be helpful to those now engaged in agriculture. The farmers insist that the prices of farm products have been too low—below the point of fair living and fair profits. I think so, too, but I venture to remind them that the plea they make involves the concession that things may be too cheap. A coat may be too cheap as well as corn. The farmer who claims a good living and profits for his work should concede the same to every other man and women who toils. I look with great confidence to the completion of reciprocal arrangements, especially with the Central and South American States, as furnishing new and large markets for meats, breadstuffs, and an important line of manufactured products.

Persistent and earnest efforts are also being made, and a considerable measure of success has already been attained, to secure the removal of restrictions which we have regarded as unjust upon the admission and use of our meats and live cattle in some of the European countries. I look with confidence to a successful termination of the pending negotiations, because I cannot but assume that when the absolutely satisfactory character of the sanitary inspections now provided by our law is made known to these foreign states, they will promptly relax their discriminating regulations. No effort and none of the powers vested in the Executive will be left unused to secure an end which is so desirable. Your deliberations will probably also embrace the consideration of the question of the volume and character of our currency. It will not be possible, and would not be appropriate for me in this letter to enter upon any elaborate discussion of these questions. One or two things I will say, and first, I believe that every person who thoughtfully considers the question will agree with me upon a proposition which is at the base of all consideration of the currency question: namely, that any dollar, paper or coin, that is issued by the United States, must be made and kept in its commercial uses as good as any other dollar. So long as any paper money issued or authorized by the United States Government is accepted in commercial use as the equivalent of the best coined dollar that we issue, and so long as every coined dollar, whether of silver or gold, is assured of an equal value in commercial use there need be no fear as to an excess of money. The more such money the better. But on the other hand, when any issue of paper or coined dollars is, in buying or selling, rated at less value than other papers of coined dollars, we have passed the limit of safe experiment in finance. If we have dollars of different values, only the poorest will circulate. The farmer and the laborer who are not in hourly touch with the ticker or the telegraph will require, above all other classes of our community, a dollar of full value. Fluctuations and depreciations are always at the first cost of these classes of our community. The banker and the speculator anticipate, discount, and often profit by such fluctuations. It is very easy under the impulse of excitement or the stress of money stringency to fall into the slough of a depreciated or irredeemable currency. It is a very painful and slow business to get out when once in. I have always believed, and do now more than ever believe in bimetalism and favor the fullest use of silver in connection with our currency that is compatible with the maintenance of the parity of the gold and silver dollar in their commercial uses. Nothing, in my judgment, would so much retard the restoration of the free use of silver by the commercial nations of the world as legislation adopted by us that would result in placing this country upon a basis of silver monometallism. The legislation adopted by the first session of the Fifty-first Congress, I was assured by leading advocates of free coinage, representatives of the silver States, would promptly and permanently bring silver to 129 per ounce and keep it there. That anticipation has not been realized, and for reasons not yet agreed upon, diminished the demand for silver in China and India.

CRUSHED LIKE RATS.

HORRIBLE FATE OF SIX RAILWAY MAIL CLERKS.

Telescoping Cars Give Them No Chance of Escape, but Crush Their Lives Out Instantly—The Wreck Resulted from Gross Carelessness.

Edward Brown, engineer, Toledo, Ohio.

Charles Topliff, engineer, Toledo, Ohio.

F. J. Nugent, postal clerk, Toledo, Ohio.

Charles Hammill, postal clerk, Elyria, Ohio.

F. F. Clemens, postal clerk, Cleveland, Ohio.

John J. Bowerfine, postal clerk, Elyria, Ohio.

James McKinley, postal clerk, Conneaut, Ohio.

C. H. McDowell, postal clerk, Elyria, Ohio.

—— Staley, fireman.

These men were instantly sent to eternity by the frightful carelessness of some one—of whom it is not known. At Kipton station, a little place on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern road, forty miles west of Cleveland, Ohio, the fast mail bound east collided with the Toledo express just as the latter train was about to pull on the siding to let the fast mail pass. The latter was running at full speed, and the force of the collision was so great that both engines, three mail cars and one baggage-car were completely wrecked. None of the passenger cars left the track, and none of the passengers received serious injuries.

It was the custom for these two trains to pass at Kipton, the Toledo express taking the side track for the fast mail, which usually went through Kipton without slackening its speed. The Toledo express was a few minutes late, and had just come to a stop at the switch when the fast mail came in sight. There is scarcely any curve at the station, but on one side of the track was a line of freight cars and on the other the station. These might have obstructed the vision of the engineer of the fast mail.

He applied the air-brakes when he saw that a collision was inevitable, but the speed of the train was not checked materially. The engine of the Toledo express was knocked squarely across the track, and that of the fast mail reared in the air, resting on top of the other. The fast mail consisted of three mail cars and two parlor cars, and the Toledo express of five coaches and two baggage cars. The first and second mail cars were telescoped and smashed to kindling wood, and the third crashed into the first two and rolled over on the station platform, breaking the windows of the building. The two baggage cars of the Toledo express were knocked from the track, but did not turn over.

The force of the collision was so great that of the sixty-four revolving-chairs in the two parlor-cars only four remained attached to the floors, all the others being broken and hurled about in confusion. The passengers were thrown to the floors and badly shaken.

The passengers of the two trains at once began the work of rescue, and with a corps of physicians from the town ministered to the few who were injured. All but one of the dead were beyond human assistance as soon as the collision occurred. The bodies were all horribly crushed and mutilated, arms and legs being torn off and the corpses were almost beyond recognition.

Charles Topliff, the engineer of the fast mail, remained bravely at his post, and was found dead with his hand on the throttle. His hands and face were so badly scalded that the blackened flesh dropped from the bones when his body was taken out. The poor postal clerks had not a chance to escape. They were caged like rats, and the telescoping of the car crushed the life out of them without a moment's warning.

When the passengers who were on the fast mail arrived at Cleveland they brought the first authentic account of the wreck, there being no correspondent or other facilities for getting the news from Kipton, which is a mere hamlet. These passengers say that the cars and locomotives were piled in a heap higher than the station.

It is difficult to locate the blame for the accident, as both of the engineers are dead. It is said, however, that the express was ordered to stop at Oberlin but went on to Kipton, which is six miles farther west, and had not sufficient time to make the side track.

MOBS RULE THE REGION.

Strikers in Pennsylvania Resume Violent Tactics and Defy the Officers.

Hardly had the soldiers left the Scottdale, Pa., region before the fears of the citizens were realized, and gangs of cokers again turned loose their lawless passions of hate and revenge. Throughout the region all the night the earth fairly trembled with a succession of shocks following the explosion of dynamite bombs. At Leisenring No. 3 of the Frick Works a crowd of strikers gathered on the hill, and at one time thirty bombs were exploded simultaneously, tearing great holes in the earth, breaking windows in many houses, and frightening people for many miles around by the terrific roar. No one was injured, however, and little actual damage was done, the strikers contenting themselves with this portentous warning to the workers below.

The water tank at the Kyle works was blown up, but the perpetrators were not discovered. One of the most daring and lawless acts of this lawless strike took place at Leith. In order to disperse the threatening mob, Deputies Smith and Rice arrested one of them, a young man named John Shaffer, and started to bring him to jail. His companions attacked the deputies, beat them with clubs and stones, and rescued Shaffer. Deputy Smith was severely injured. He received a number of ugly bruises on his body, and a deep gash in the head with a knife. It is also feared that Deputy Sanner, who was injured in the riot at Leisenring No. 2, will not recover.

Sheriff McCormick telegraphed the governor for military aid, and was told in reply that it was not the duty of the military to do police duty and the soldiers could not be ordered out until the civil power is exhausted. With the mob storming the office from which the message was sent, he made a second appeal, and Gov. Pattison then wired Capt. L. H. Frazier of company E, Tenth regiment, Uniontown, to place his company under arms and assist the sheriff in maintaining the peace. A telegram was also sent to Capt. Loar, at Mount Pleasant, to take his company to assist Sheriff McCormick.

Josh Billings' Philosophy.

How menny suspishus people one meets in this world. If their nozes waz stuffed with kotton wool they would smell some kind of a rat.

Most ov the animiles and insex (az well az the men) liv on each other; but the spider iz the meanest in the whole lot, for they set traps for their viktims, and don't even bait their traps.

What should we do if it wasn't for the churches? Thare iz plenty ov people who kant worship God, only in a church. If they were out in a field on a Sabbath day, they would at once become lawless, and fall to digging out wookchucks or hunting for bumble-bees' nests.

Give every one you meet, my boy, the time ov day, and haff the road; and if that don't make him civil, don't waste enny more fragrance on the cuss.

"German Syrup"

A Throat and Lung Specialty.

Those who have not used Boschee's German Syrup for some severe and chronic trouble of the Throat and Lungs can hardly appreciate what a truly wonderful medicine it is. The delicious sensations of healing, easing, clearing, strength-gathering and recovering are unknown joys. For German Syrup we do not ask easy cases. Sugar and water may smooth a throat or stop a tickling—for a while. This is as far as the ordinary cough medicine goes. Boschee's German Syrup is a discovery, a great Throat and Lung Specialty. Where for years there have been sensitiveness, pain, coughing, spitting, hemorrhage, voice failure, weakness, slipping down hill, where doctors and medicine and advice have been swallowed and followed to the gulf of despair, where there is the sickening conviction that all is over and the end is inevitable, there we place German Syrup. It cures. You are a live man yet if you take it.

Dr. J. W. Bergen:

Dear Sir:—By this time, I presume, you will want to know how I am getting along with Bergen's Asthma Cure.

Well, you have heard of persons obtaining a new life. Now I really feel that way myself. When I began taking Bergen's Asthma Cure, I was just coming out of a long siege of it, and was reduced to 115 pounds; weak, short of breath, chills, fever, and badly demoralized generally, coughing from half an hour to an hour every night.

Since commencing, from the third night, I have not lost ten minutes' sleep all night, cough gone, gained seventeen pounds, chills gone, fever gone, shortness of breath and difficulty of breathing gone, consequently I feel a thousand per cent. better. I thank God every day that I ever saw your advertisement, and that I was induced to write to you.

This is peculiarly encouraging in my case, as I had suffered so long and was so discouraged about my case, having tried everything. I am telling the good news every day.

Push on the good work; you are on the right track.

From the Hon. Harvey D. Colvin, Ex-Mayor of Chicago:

CHICAGO, July 24, 1890.

S. H. KLINCK—DEAR SIR: I am pleased to say that I consider your remedy the best medicine in existence, for the human afflictions you claim to cure. I suffered from catarrh with bronchitis for many years. During that time I employed physicians and faithfully tried many so-called remedies advertised to cure this disease, without any material benefit, when a friend induced me to try your remedy, claiming others had been cured by it. The first bottle gave me the most pleasing results. I have continued its use and I can not say too much for it. It found me too near the grave for comfort and restored me to health again. It adorns my toilet stand and by using it occasionally I am kept well.

I would not be without it if it cost $25 per bottle. I earnestly recommend it to all my afflicted friends.

CHUB.

A Romance of West Virginia.

BY DAVID LOWRY.

CHAPTER IV—Continued.

A hush fell over the crowd.

"Will you jump again, Mr. Sloan?"

Sloan turned on Bash angrily.

"How high can you jump?"

"Standing or running?"

"Standin'."

For answer Bash put his right hand up to his chin.

"I don't believe it."

"Put a stick up, a string, rail—anything," said Bash, coolly.

Perkins and Sloan held a rail about four feet off the ground.

Bash turned his back to it and jumped over it.

The big man clapped his hands.

They placed the rail as high as his chin.

He stood before it, then suddenly bounded high in the air over it.

The big man roared with laughter.

"Now, Mr. Sloan," said Bash, "you try it."

Sloan jumped three times, but failed to come within three inches of the height Bash jumped.

"How high can you kick?" demanded Sloan.

"At least seven feet."

Sloan had Perkins hold a stick against a tree just that distance from the ground, stood under it, sprang up and struck the stick with his right foot.

Bash had Perkins raise the stick half an inch, rose the same way, and kicked the stick high in the air.

Sloan tried again, half an inch higher, then an inch, until he put the stick up to eight feet six inches.

Then Dan Bash asked the big man to stand on a plow and hold the stick one foot higher.

Sloan and Perkins laughed.

Bash rose in the air suddenly, springing off his left foot, and his right sent the stick whirling.

"Put it three inches higher," as the crowd looked on dumfounded.

What sort of a man was this, anyhow?

"No, that'll do," said the jolly giant, laughing, "we don't want you to kick the light out of the moon."

Whereat there was a roar of laughter.

"How do you ras'le?" said Si Perkins suddenly.

"Any way—upper or lower holds—catch-as-catch-can—any way that you prefer."

"I used to ras'le a little."

"I like it—with any one who understands it."

"Well, strip then."

"Not if you don't want to tear my clothes."

They went at it, catch-as-catch-can. In five seconds—less time—the "boss ras'ler of the county" was on the flat of his back.

That made Si Sloan laugh, while Perkins was furious.

"Anythin' else you can't do?" asked the jolly giant, good-humoredly.

"I can spar."

"You mean box?"

"Yes; I love it."

"I pass," said the giant. Then there was another shout of laughter.

"Perkins will box with you."

"No, durned if I will," said Perkins, now laughing. "He might out-box me. I think Bill Peters might give him a trial."

There was another shout of laughter. Bill Peters' head was hanging low enough now.

"I reckon you'll have to give Bash the school," said the big man.

"Of course," said Sloan. "Any man that can do what he does—durned if I know how he does it—can take the school."

"Yes, he's got a right to it," said Perkins. "Stranger, how much do you weigh, jest as you are?"

"One hundred and seventy-nine pounds," said Bash, smilingly.

"Great Jehosaphat, Sloan! Just feel of his arms and legs."

Sloan felt; then he stood back.

"Mr. Bash, you're the biggest man of your size I ever seed. Shake."

Then Bash shook hands all around.

The last man to hold his hand was the big man, who shook his hand cordially.

"I would like to know your name, sir."

"My name? Lord! Everybody knows Hank Dawson!"

"Hank Dawson!"

"Yes; I'm the blacksmith at the Corners."

So this man whom he had taken a sudden liking to, and whose very smile inspired confidence, was Chub's father.

CHAPTER V.

CHUB DAWSON'S ENGAGEMENT.

"I would like to get better acquainted with you, Mr. Dawson," said Bash, as they stood a little apart, while many of the crowd looking at them marveled at the strength and suppleness of the newcomer in the mountain district.

"You're welcome to my house. Everybody is," said Hank Dawson.

"Then I am included among the crowd."

"Yes. Though we'll be more like friends, if you are as square as you look."

The blacksmith looked him all over.

"But you are the most deceivin' man I've met. Where did you learn it? Travel with a circus?"

Bash laughed.

"No? I'll swon I don't see where else you picked it up. Do you know, you've outjumped and outras'led the best men in the county—you have, Bash."

Dawson chuckled. It was fun for Dawson.

"There's one thing I can't do."

"What's that?"

"I can't lift half as much as you, nor hit as hard."

Dawson laughed.

"I don't know about that. If I wanted to wallop an apprentice I wouldn't hire you."

The crowd soon separated after that, and every man there told such stories of the prowess of the new teacher that their acquaintances promptly called them liars.

But there were many who had reason to believe the stories told. And when Dan Bash entered the school there was not a scholar there who questioned his right to rule them.

The school was very orderly and obedient for the first time since it had been opened.

The young men did not care to tackle a teacher who could kick nine feet nine inches high with one foot, nor did they care to wrestle with the man that laid Hi Perkins on his back.

The Monks did not go to school. They were bent upon driving Dan Bash out of the district.

They plainly foresaw his permanent residence, and success there meant loss of prestige to them sooner or later.

If he should become popular, their popularity with the roughest portion of the community would be a thing of the past.

They must get rid of Dan Bash somehow.

But how? That was what bothered the Monk brothers and the men who followed them.

At first they seriously thought of breaking up the school.

Bill Monk very soon discovered that plan wouldn't work. Bad as the county was, the people wouldn't like to be pointed out as the most reprehensible people in the State.

"It would not do to get all the decent people down on them," Bill Monk said, to which Ned Monk sorrowfully assented.

"Same time, Bill" said Ned, "won't do to have people talking about this chap so much. Tell you what—let's tell he's not so much to brag of, or a feller that can do so much, and knows so awful much as Dan Bash does, wouldn't be foolin' in his time teachin' school way up here."

"That's a blame good idea," said Bill Monk. "We'll work it for all it's worth. Blamed if I think he is straight. He's likely got powerful reasons for coming up here."

So that it seemed to the Monks quite clear now that, if they managed it right, they would "give Dan Bash a heap of bother before long."

Meantime Dan Bash was making friends every day.

There was a good deal of speculation concerning the young man whom nobody knew anything about, further than he chose to tell. And he said very little. He had reasons to keep his own counsel, he thought. At least he kept his affairs to himself.

If there was anybody more than another who knew who and what Dan Bash was, people said it was Hank Dawson.

The schoolteacher was a frequent visitor at the blacksmith's. It was pretty well known, too, why he went there. Chub Dawson's beauty and high spirit was as well known—as widely known—as her father's smithy and great strength, for Hank Dawson was a giant in strength. He had lifted one flour-barrel and set it on top of its fellow, and set a third on top of the second, something unheard of.

As the giant of the Corners sat beside his fire, smoking and listening to Dan Bash relating his pranks at college—which Dan did some time for Hank's diversion—he would laugh heartily.

"There ain't many young chaps like that," he would say to his only daughter, Chub, when Bash went away.

One evening, after Dan Bash bade them good-night, Chub leaned over her father's shoulders and stroked his hair softly, as she said:

"You seem to think a good deal of Dan Bash, dad."

"Well, a sort of way—yes. He's a mighty knowing chap."

"And he seems to be square out and out."

"Yes; he does."

"And he's lively company?"

"Powerful lively."

Hank Dawson's mouth was drawn down now. He was resolved his daughter should lead the talking.

"Dad!"

"Well?"

"Dan Bash has asked me."

"Hello! Hello!"

Hank Dawson knew very well what was in the air. He had good eyesight.

"You don't mind, dad."

"Yes I do. Ain't it my business?"

"Yes. Of course it is. And I told him it was. And he knows unless you like him it's no use his comin' 'round any more."

"Chub," said Hank Dawson, "you're the best girl from here to the forks of the road. He's a blamed handsome fellow. I don't know nothing about him more than just what he tells us; but I like him, and if he can satisfy you and me—why, then, that's all there's to be said. You'll set the day, and we'll marry you to him. I don't count on giving you up—I won't do that."

"No, dad. I told him I wouldn't leave you, for you've been father and mother to me. Besides, there's a way for all of us here. That's settled on."

"I knew it, Chub."

"Of course you did. I'd like to see the man who would take me away from you. You've got to have your pipe and sit by the fire, or it wouldn't be like home to me."

"That's just like you, Chub—just like you."

There were tears in Hank Dawson's eyes, but he wiped them away furtively and Chub did not see them.

So it was soon known to every one that Dan Bash was going to marry Chub Dawson, the blacksmith's daughter.

Mr. Potts stood on the porch telling it to all the travelers as the latest news; his wife, not content with assisting her husband at the tavern, went around among the neighbors relating all and much more than she knew concerning the preparations for the wedding.

Hank Dawson was going into the town to buy her a new silk dress—a blue silk dress, and a white bonnet and white veil. Chub was going with him, of course—"how could Hank pick things for a gal?"

It was true. For some reason Dan Bash had been very anxious to get the wedding over. Chub wanted more time—she was determined not to be married so soon—but Dan Bash was an ardent lover. He pressed her so that she consented to marry him in a month.

The engagement enraged the Monks. The marriage must be prevented at all hazards. With such an ally as Hank Dawson, the power of the Monks would soon be a thing of the past. Two such men as Bash and Dawson would rule the county—or so much of it as was useful to the Monks.

"They'll never marry," said Ned Monk.

"I won't say they mayn't marry," said Bill Monk, meaningly; "but if they do—I say if—they won't live together very long."

This speech was rounded with a terrible oath.

Squatty, who was present, looked at Bill Monk fearfully. He had a horror of the schoolmaster ever since he had heard that he could kick nearly ten feet high, and tumbled Hi Perkins on his back.

"It's mighty ticklish business."

The Monk brothers looked at Squatty contemptuously.

"You'll find it much more ticklish if this chap and Hank Dawson discover what they're bound to learn soon."

"You don't think—tain't sure they'll know."

"Ain't it?"

"No, of course not."

As the brothers laughed, Squatty shivered. He was afraid of his shadow at times. And they had compelled him to help them in all their villainous enterprises.

"What makes you two laugh?"

"You poor fool!" said Bill Monk, "don't you know there's detectives on the hunt? We haven't been buyin' horses, 'n guns, 'n powder—hats, 'n gloves, 'n all sorts of traps—without people knowin' it. We don't steal all we've got. It's natrel we'll be suspected, and when we are brot up for't we want to get a mighty cute lawyer. First time's nothin'. We can swear and lie through, unless we're fooled by our lawyer. But if this chap and Hank Dawson pull together, and Dawson finds out the lay of the land——"

"What do you mean by the lay of the land?" Squatty asked.

"Why, can't you see? Chub will tell her father—if he don't know it now—all that happened on the road, and before we reached the spring that day Bash fought us."

Bill Monk spoke seriously now.

"They're bound to side against us, just as we're bound to go agin Bash an' agin Dawson, too, if we can't get Bash out of the way somehow."

Ned Monk frowned as he spoke to Squatty.

"Say, when does the weddin' come off?" Squatty inquired suddenly.

"Two weeks from to-morrow—sure as fate. Chub and her dad has told everybody, and so has Dan Bash."

"Suppose something should prevent Bash from going to his own wedding?"

The Monks looked at Squatty curiously.

"It would be bad if he didn't go to his own wedding; it would be better if he couldn't go to anybody's wedding never again," said Ned Monk.

"Yes."

"Tell us what you would do to prevent it, Squatty."

Squatty looked around him nervously. Then he spoke in a lower tone. The Monks listened attentively. Then they slapped their poor tool on the shoulder.

"Bully for you, Squatty! That's a prime idea. We'll carry it out as sure as you are a sinner. And, Squatty, you'll get all the credit of the plan."

Then the Monk brothers laughed again.

Squatty shivered.

"You won't put it all on me," he whined.

"Pooh! We're all in for it, Squatty. It's everybody's business now. If one goes we'll all go, so you needn't be afraid. If they catch you you'll have plenty of company."

CHAPTER VI.

Chub and her father verified all the rumors by inviting their friends to the wedding.

Then they went to the nearest town to buy her wedding dress and such appointments as Dawson was determined his daughter should have.

"I've got plenty of money," he said to his friends. "I've earned it for Chub, and she's bound to have the best."

That was sufficient.

Everybody applauded Hank Dawson's decision. It was politic to do so. Hank was inviting a crowd to the wedding. There would be abundance to eat and drink—fiddlers for a hundred, fun for everybody. And everybody wanted to be "on hand" at Chub's wedding.

Chub's wedding was the talk of the country for miles around. It was an extraordinary event.

She was the prettiest girl in that region. She was the smartest and the most spirited. She was the best cook and the best shot. She could manage the most unruly horse, and men had stood in not a little awe of her.

She had hosts of admirers, and it was never known that any one had been so courageous as to ask her to marry him.

Above all, she would have more money than any girl in the entire district. Hank Dawson had ever so much money in bank, had inherited a fortune from a brother who died in a distant city, and was able to point to three fine farms within sight of his own home.

And all would go to Chub when Hank Dawson died.

Of course, now that the marriage was approaching, Dan Bash was congratulated daily. His good fortune was remarked.

To the surprise of all, Dan Bash took the compliments as a matter of course. He did not think he was bound to be grateful to Hank Dawson, and he plainly intimated as much when occasion seemed to demand the expression of his independence.

"I am to be envied for securing one of the best women in the world," he said more than once. "In my opinion, Belle Dawson is the equal of any woman in the State."

That was the manner in which he referred to the woman he was going to marry. He seemed to think he was the equal of any man or woman; he did not assume superiority, but it was quite a matter of course that the prettiest and richest and cleverest girl in the county should be willing to marry him.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

A Wonderful Possibility.

The chance for the most wonderful discovery of the century is the direct conversion of heat energy into electric energy. There is no doubt a relation between the two by which such a conversion can be made, and that is what is to be found by some such investigator as Dr. Hertz. Our present method of getting electricity is by the interposition of the steam engine, in which we can only get from 4 to 7 per cent. of the theoretical energy of coal in mechanical power. What a revolution such a discovery as here outlined would make! All present steam engines would at once disappear if we could only get electricity in such a way. The great Faraday made the electric light, the telegraph, and the telephone possible by his wonderful discoveries in pure science. To obtain the known heat energy directly from coal would be a marvel no greater than the marvels Faraday freely gave to the world. The Bells, Brushes, and Edisons cannot be expected to do any such work as Faraday, for they belong to an inferior type of men; they may apply what a Faraday wrought out, but they are incapable of conducting such investigations or thinking the smallest thought of a Faraday.

He Doesn't Like It.

Bill Nye, in his meanderings, has had occasion to enter a sleeping car in the early hours of morning, and he tells us softly that there is a difference between the fresh outside country air and the stifling and frequently used air of one of those cars into which a score of miscellaneous sleepers have all night exhaled their physical nastiness. He says:

"Did you ever, oh, dove-eyed reader, with the delicately chiseled Græco-Roman nose, and also delicately chiseled pocketbook, enter a sleeping car just as it was waking up? Didst ever ramble up and down a meadowy brook at early dawn, crushing the heather, and the sweet fern, and the bullfrog, for an hour, and then, flushed with success, unjoint your rod and, with the dew and the daisies clinging to your high boots, catch an early train and step quickly into the great Snore Works of a through car? Did you ever wring the rough, warm hand of Uncle Eben at the way station at 5 o'clock a. m., and with the memory of tansy and timothy and mignonette and fresh fried cakes and cherry blossoms, blunder hurriedly, while your eyes were a little moist from the parting, into the funky aisle of the sleeping catacombs, where you would think Gabriel could hardly get a bugle-ful of fresh air?"

THE city debts of some of the leading American cities are as follows: New York, $98,064,418; Philadelphia, $56,777,370; Brooklyn, $41,250,204; Boston, $31,227,320; Cincinnati, $24,913,689; St. Louis, $21,873,100. The debt of Chicago is $13,554,900, to which is to be added the World's Fair bonds of $5,000,000. Chicago has proportionately the smallest city debt of any large city in the country, and we are indebted for this fact to a limit fixed in the State Constitution, beyond which the debt cannot be increased, and not to any wisdom on the part of our city administrations.

HUMOR.

An Unkind Remark.

FOR some time Mrs. Ferguson and Mrs. Clamwhooper have not spoken. Mrs. Ferguson, who lives on Madison avenue, is known among her acquaintances to be very stingy. Not long since she visited a neighbor, Mrs. Clamwhooper, who is very sarcastic and reckless in her conversation. They were conversing about cockroaches and Croton bugs, which are very numerous in New York. Mrs. Ferguson said that she had great trouble keeping them out of her pantry.

"You should not try to keep them out of your pantry if you want to get rid of them," replied Mrs. Clamwhooper with a malicious laugh; "just let them get into your pantry and then they will all starve to death."

And now there is a glacial coolness between two prominent society ladies.—Texas Siftings.

Questions of the Hour.

Will the Kansas man's artificial egg harmonize with the ham? And is the artificial egg plant a growing industry?

Good for Fits.

For a fit of passion, walk out into the open air; you may speak your mind to the winds without hurting anyone or proclaiming yourself a simpleton.

For a fit of idleness, count the ticking of the clock; do this for one hour, and you will be glad to pull off your coat the next and work like a beaver.

For a fit of extravagance and folly, go to the almshouse, or speak to the inmates of a jail, and you will be convinced.

For a fit of ambition, go to the church-yard and read the grave-stones; they will tell you the end of ambition. The grave will soon be your bed-chamber, and the earth your pillow; corruption your father, and the worm your mother and sister.

For a fit of despondency, look on the good things God has given you in this world, and those he has promised to His followers in the next. He who goes into the garden to look for cobwebs and spiders no doubt will find them; while he who looks for a flower may return into his house with one blooming in his bosom.

For fits of doubt, perplexity, and fear, whether they respect the body or the mind, whether they are a load to the shoulders, the head, or the heart, the following cure may be relied on, for the writer had it from the great Physician: "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee."

Keep Your Gloves and Laces Fresh.

There is a simply made appliance for the toilet table that finds great favor with the few who know of it. It consists merely of a couple of boards, carefully lined, with a heavy weight to set upon them. Neckties, laces, and gloves are smoothed out after use, and placed between the boards so that, kept flat by the gentle pressure, they come out looking like new, and last much longer than if thrown aside in a drawer or box. To make this appliance you take an ordinary brick, and, having dried it thoroughly, you paste brown paper right over it, as it were, neatly in a piece of paper well saturated with paste. Over this you stick neatly a piece of brightly colored cretonne or Indian silk, or, if preferred, a piece of white leather or satin, to be afterward hand-painted, and then handles of strong ribbon are fixed. Two pieces of board of suitable size are covered with the same material as the brick, and lined with white silk or white muslin.

TO THE PUBLIC.

On account of my ability to sell better goods at lower prices, and as my stock is so much larger, newer and nicer in every detail than other houses carrying clothing in Auburn have, they have seen proper,—as they see their trade coming here,—to make, through the columns of the Auburn Times, a contemptible attack on this house. I wish it distinctly understood that I have come to Auburn to stay, and cast my lot with the fortunes of this city, and propose to do an honorable and clean business. I am not afraid of decent opposition,—glad there is come, for by this means I can convince the people of Auburn and surroundings that my place is headquarters for reliable clothing, that I am enabled and do sell my goods at lower prices than they have heretofore paid for similar grade goods. I invite comparison, and being a beginner in your midst, I want everyone to come, whether they want to purchase or not, and verify every statement I have made.

In conclusion I beg to assure the public that I am prepared at all times to serve them to their entire satisfaction.

All of which is respectfully submitted this 20th day of April, 1891,
ATTEST:
GEORGE GRUND, Town Clerk,
S. R. HEBERLING, Pres. Board.

Sets Him Right.

Emory Johnson, who resides near Hudson writes under date of April 17, about a matter that has caused some disturbance up there. He says:

EDITOR COURIER: The report is circulated that I have put Pearl Lewis in a Catholic Institution at Indianapolis. It is false. I turned her over to the State Board of Guardians where I got her.

EMORY JOHNSON.

Later, Mr. Johnson called at the COURIER office and explained the matter more fully. It appears while at Indianapolis to get a child at the Home of the Board of Guardians, that a fifteen-year-old girl, Pearl Lewis, asked if she could not get a place to work, as she was tired of the home. A short time afterward Mr. Johnson needed a girl and sent for her. She proved to be a good girl for some time, but finally became dissatisfied and was trying to get back to some relatives at Indianapolis, who were just the sort of people the "Guardians" were trying to keep her from. When they heard of this, their visiting agent, J. F. Wright, came and took the girl back to the Home, with Mr. Johnson's knowledge and consent. She went without trouble, and is now well cared for and contented. But some one has since started a story to the effect that Mr. Johnson had put her into a Catholic institution, and there was considerable excitement over it, greatly to the annoyance of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson. We have read a long letter from Mr. Wright, in which he fully clears Mr. Johnson, and shows that the girl is in good hands, and well cared for. We trust the above statement will put an end to a needless trouble, and relieve Mr. Johnson from undeserved reproach and annoyance.

City Campaign.

The Garrett Smut Sheet is still wearing its nose to a point by sticking it continually into Auburn's business. As we said last week, all they care about Auburn politics is to secure a marshal who will let Hank Little roll over our streets, slobbery drunk for weeks at a time. This must be stopped. Whoever becomes marshal of Auburn must stand pledged to do it. It is against the law to be drunk in the streets. Let every good citizen of Auburn work for this and we will soon be rid of the disgrace, as we have been nearly, for the past three months under Marshal Pfefferl.

Struck by Lightning.

In the sudden hail and thunder shower Tuesday evening the barn of G. C. Lahnum about 3½ miles east from town, was struck by lightning and destroyed. A colt was killed, and some hay and corn lost. A lot of oats and a few other things, together with his buggy and wagon were saved by hard work. J. F. Reed was out to Dan. Magginis' and on coming home noticed the barn being struck and hurried up and helped save what was saved.

Tickets at Butler.

The republicans of Butler met last Thursday evening and nominated L. J. Diehl for trustee in the second ward; Frank Stewart for clerk; George Geddes for treasurer; Isaac Hose for marshal.

The democrats on Friday evening nominated Herman Hirsch for trustee in second ward; Charles Bruce for clerk; Samuel G. Stone for treasurer; Wm. Mc Morgan for marshal.

Notice of Final Settlement of Estate.

Notice is hereby given to all persons interested in the estate of Andrew Bolender dec'sed, to appear in the DeKalb Circuit Court, held at Auburn, Indiana, on the 18th day of May, 1891, and show cause, if any, why my FINAL SETTLEMENT ACCOUNTS with the estate of said decedent should not be approved; and said heirs and all others interested are notified to then and there make proof of heirship or claim and receive their distributive share.

Witness my name this 21st day of April, 1891.

J. WALBORN,
Administrator.

To be or not to be—a City.

That is the question. For a year or more our people have been talking about this, some being for it and some against it. We can see several advantages in a city government and we do not think the expense need be greater. The matter was again started by Mr. Campbell of the Dispatch, this week, who drew up a petition and presented it to a number of business men, nearly all of whom signed it, though some wanted time to study over it. He then brought the petition before the board at Monday's meeting and they consented to have the words "for" and "against" changing from town government to a city government put on the ballots both in the papers and at the polls, provided no extra charge was made for space used. This both papers agreed to do. So voters can look over the ballots as published this week and next, and see how they read. Any one who wants a city government can show it by stamping the square containing the word "yes" at the left of the line that reads "For changing town to city government." If he opposes the measure, then he stamps the square below containing the word "no" which will be a vote "against a city government." It is merely to get an expression of the people. If a majority favors the city plan then the board can have a census taken if they think best. Then if we have 2,500 or over, they can take steps to have a city government if they think best. Let our people think it over.

The Western Reversible Road Machine.

TO THE SEVERAL TOWNS AND TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES OF DEKALB AND ADJOINING COUNTIES:—

We call your attention to the fact that we have accepted the agency of the celebrated Western Reversible Road Machine for the four counties of DeKalb, Steuben, LaGrange and Noble. This is without a doubt the leading machine of the world and is the only machine made that can be successfully used on the road without the use of a plow—is the lightest drop machine made, doing the same amount of work; and we give you a guarantee of twenty-one points of superiority over any other road machine made. In fact it is the champion of the world, and we invite competition. Do not fail to come and see the machine before you buy. Remember it is reversible and can be used from either side, and the scraper or moldboard can be set at any angle you desire.

The most wonderful blemish cure known. Sold by Robbins & McCord, Auburn, Indiana. tf

Young man, did you ever entertain the idea you might some day be recognized among the great, self-made men of our country? If you have not, awake at once from your lethargy, and if possible, induce your parents to buy $15 worth of goods of John Harris and get you a history of those men, who, by the muscles of their brawny arms and the genius of constructive brains, have made for themselves a glorious record in the world's history. 11tf

As the balmy days of spring draw nigh and the gay birds flit from tree to tree warbling a merry lay, all nature seems to take on a new lease of life. The bright sunshine, gentle rain, tender buds and spring flowers make humanity feel that life is still worth the living and business takes a new impetus. Buildings go up, grand structures are contemplated and money is freely spent in trying to better the condition of things. That is right. Build up the town, and while you are building don't forget that A. Lewis has one of the best equipped lumber yards in northeastern Indiana. His facilities for keeping lumber dry are first-class and his prices are consistent with the times. Don't forget this important fact when you come to town to buy lumber.

Try BLACK-DRAUGHT tea for Dyspepsia.

Workingmen cannot afford to lose time. Simmons Liver Regulator will keep you from it.

D. S. Henney, of Hudson, gave the Courier office a pleasant call on Thursday of last week.

See those elegant pictures at Morr's. They are the sweetest things out. A $30 purchase will get one. 10tf

Spring stirs up the bile. You lose your appetite, feel weak, too hot, and oh! so tired. Take Simmons Liver Regulator. 13-17

Look out for the silver check in the bread at Gibson's. The person holding one of these checks is entitled to three loaves free. 14tf

T. J. Cuppy and family are now fully settled among us again, and have been for a week or so. We welcome them back to the old home town.

E. C. Foltz and son are painting the Auburn Windmills. Mr. F. is a good workman of marked ability, and he and his son make a valuable team.

George Husselman is putting up a neat cottage in Gas Addition. Johnny Picker did the brick work for foundations. It will be a nice home for some one.

H. J. Mossey still keeps his stock of groceries, provisions, etc., up to the standard of competition and low prices. Farmers find him one of the men to deal with.

Among our recent new subscribers, we notice the name of Stephen Likens, of Mt. Hope. He is one of the experienced farmers out that way, and of course wants the Courier.

The many friends of Prof. C. A. Dugan, will be pleased to hear of his good fortune—a little daughter born April 11. We are always glad to hear of the prosperity of an Auburn boy.

"When my Ship Comes the Sea," the latest musical hit. Price seventy-five cents. Special price, for introduction, post-paid, forty cents. Address, Will L. Thompson & Co., 259 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

A. B. Richards reached home Sunday after an absence of two or three weeks in Michigan buying potatoes. He brought back a carload, which was engaged to parties in Ft. Wayne. He also brought about 200 lbs. of nice maple sugar.

A dry, hacking cough keeps the bronchial tubes in a state of constant irritation, which if not speedily removed, may lead to bronchitis. No prompter remedy can be had than Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which is both an anodyne and expectorant.

Perry Harkey of Butler township, will make business lively this summer with his butter and egg wagon. He has built an extensive cold storage room and will visit all the neighboring towns to get the butter and eggs to be had at the stores.

Mrs. Ehlers reached home last Thursday after spending the winter and spring in New Orleans. She said the contrast between this section, and the one she had left, was very much marked. There they had abundance of flowers and summer weather.

The value of a remedy should be estimated by its curative properties. According to this standard, Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best and most economical blood medicine in the market, because the most pure and concentrated. Price $1. Worth $5 a bottle.

Popular prices prevail throughout every department at the store of the Foster Furniture and Carpet Co. at Ft. Wayne, Ind. It is not their custom to sell one article cheap and another dear. Whatever they handle is sold at the same low rate of profit.

Don't forget the "McAnnally Sprayer" the invention of J. D. McAnally, Waterloo. It is a death dealer on all sorts of bugs, worms and insects generally. Don't lose your fruit by insects. His spraying mixture will kill them. He has studied fully all the latest inventions in the way of bug poisons as explained in the late government reports, and got the business down fine. Call on him.

J. P. Kandel went to Ft. Wayne last week to put up a big windmill for gardening purposes, for a party there, a relative to Joe. Girardot. It will be a complete and extensive affair. The Auburn Windmill Company also put up a nice wheel for I. B. Brandon last week. They have put down several in Ft. Wayne, to be used both for house purposes and for street washers in localities where the water works did not extend.

The Reading Room is here to stay, and the managers are putting forth every effort to make it interesting for those who come in to pass a few hours. On Friday evening an entertainment will be given at which the Hoosier Quartet have volunteered to sing. This quartet's ability is well known by our people, and no doubt all will appreciate an hour spent under their entertainment. Walter Hartman and Frank Davenport will also furnish some fine music.

SOME say the tariff is a tax; while OTHERS are inclined to think that continued MUDDY ROADS are detrimental to BUSINESS. But neither of these effect the quality and quantity of LUNCH at CORA SHUGERS', on West Seventh St., where You can get the highest grades of Tobacco, Cigars, Choice Candies, Tropical Fruits, Lemons, Oranges, and almost endless variety of SOFT DRINKS—such as, Hot Coffee, Sweet Milk, Birch and Pop Beers, Ginger Ale, Orange Cider, Etc. Call and see us. We will try to please YOU. 16tf

We say little, but our prices on baby carriages talk. Call and see us. Robbins & McCord. 16-18

Organ for Sale: A nice large one of the Story & Camp make, as good as new. Call at this office.

Mrs. M. B. Willis was able to walk out a little while Sunday evening, though still somewhat weak.

Mrs. Al. Zerwis has about the finest calla lily in town, its beautiful white blossoms being of unusual size.

The nickel social of the Presbyterian church will meet with Mrs. John Ray on next Friday afternoon. All are cordially invited.

Isaac Cobler, who has been residing at Lee, Michigan, for some time, has now moved to Colehour, in the south part of Chicago.

For biliousness and headache Simmons Liver Regulator is the best medicine in the world ever saw. H. H. Jones, Macon, Ga.

Do you intend to repair or repaint? Then Beuret, Auburn, will sell you the best paints at living prices. It will pay you to call on him.

Mrs. Rebecca Dickinson went last week for an extended visit with friends in Shelby county, Ohio. We trust she may have a pleasant visit.

Dr. M. W. Johnston had a friend and fellow student of the College of Dentistry, here to make him a visit last week, Dr. Kiser who is located at Bryan.

Just think of it! John Harris gives an Unabridged Webster's dictionary with every $30 purchase of goods. Don't forget the place at Auburn Junction. 11

Say have you ever seen those beautiful encyclopedias at Geo. Morr's. If you have not, call and see them, and inquire how you can get one as a present.

E. N. Myers, of Concord, was in town last week. He reports a good deal of sickness among horses down that way during the past year, he himself having lost some.

Mrs. Funk has just received a new and complete line of spring millinery which she invites the ladies of Auburn and vicinity to call and inspect, south side square. 12tf

J. Benninghoff and wife were in town last Thursday. They have moved to the David Maxwell farm a few miles south of Butler. We hope they will find their new home agreeable.

Wm. Swartz, who lives south of Waterloo, lost eight valuable hogs last week by the falling of a straw stack. A straw stack is sometimes as dangerous as the revolver that "isn't loaded."

Mrs. Collar is now fully started in business, in her rooms at the Auburn House, where she has fitted up rooms nicely to accomodate day boarders. We hope to see her well patronized.

Taxpaying time ended Monday evening, but the treasurer is going to fix it so all who get in this week can pay. He will also be at the several towns a day or each, to accommodate the people.

Our old-time friend and fellow teacher, J. H. Merica made us a call last Thursday. It was a pleasure to meet him again, especially as he still thinks the Courier the best of our local papers.

At the forenoon service of the Presbyterian church Sunday, Grandma Weaver was present, bright and hearty at ninety years of age, and in the evening came Grandma Campbell, aged eighty-three, also in good health. Both walked to and from the church.

Say farmers, if you want some of the best machinery manufactured, you should go to Ed. Weeks, south of the jail. He handles the Champion reapers and mowers, also some of the best grades of small implements. Give him a call and examine his terms. 19tf

Rev. Mr. Healy and Hon E. D. Hartman went to Decatur Tuesday, to attend the meeting of the Presbytery held there this week. Mr. Hartman goes as a delegate, and Mr. Healy to finish up the work necessary to his full installment as pastor in charge of the church here.

Charles McClellan and wife, residing in Washington were made glad last week by the birth of a son. The little stranger will be called Charles, also, making him Charles the Third. The friends up this way send an abundance of greetings and good wishes to the fortunate parents.

A letter from George A. Kraus, locates him at Dallas, Texas, to which city he went on leaving Pierre, South Dakota. He says he did not find business as good at Pierre, as he had expected, but that where he is now, he is doing better. Glad to hear it. He closes by saying, "Can't get along without the Courier."

John Ketel came in last Friday and ordered the Courier sent to his two boys in the west. One of them, Fred, is at Burlington, Ill., and John is at Amena, North Dakota. This is a good way to keep the boys in mind of the old home, and to get the news from the once familiar neighborhood.

See the corporation tickets we publish this week as provided for by law. They are of the style, size, etc., of the ballots to be used on election day, such but cannot be used in voting, of course. No ballot can be voted, except the one received of the poll clerks in the voting room and signed by them.

Treasurer Sawvel went over to Butler Tuesday to remain two days, then goes to Waterloo Thursday, and will likely be in Corunna Saturday. Next week on Monday we believe he goes to Garrett. These appointments are to give the people of those places a chance to pay their taxes if they have not done so already, and save them extra trouble or a trip to Auburn in case they have found it inconvenient to come here.

The Auburn Woolen Mills are now ready to start their machinery in full blast. They have removed the engine from beneath the main building to an engine room built on south side. With other improvements which they have made, the convenience of having the engine in a separate room will partly enhance their facilities for doing work. This institution is a good one and the town should be proud of it.

We publish this week and next, the local ballot, containing the names of the candidates to be voted for at our city election. Let every voter study it over and refresh his memory as to how the voting is to be done. It is the same as last year. See our instructions of last week, also in this issue. Stamp the square containing the word "dem." just at the left of the words "Democratic Ticket" at the head, and you will put in a straight democratic ticket. Republican and prohibition tickets are voted the same way. But if you want to vote a republican or prohibition ticket, except for marshal, you can stamp the square at the left of the names of all your other candidates except marshal. Don't stamp that but go over to the democratic ticket and stamp the square at the left of Joe. Pfefferl's name. Same way if you want to favor some other man.

WINE OF CARDUI, a Tonic for Women.

Beuret for paints and oils.

Make no mistake, J. G. Clapp for photographs. 14-17

Dr. Fruth's next visit to Auburn will be Wednesday April 29.

A house to rent. Inquire of James McClellan, East Seventh street.

Cushing perfection dyes, full line just received at Robbins & McCord's. 16-18

Mabel Hartman will give private or class lessons in elocution and physical culture.

We sell baby carriages on weekly payments and we sell them cheap. Robbins & McCord. 16-18

Mr. Coe's botany class went out to do "field work" again Tuesday afternoon, and found plenty of flowers.

We can convince you in two minutes that we can save you money in a baby carriage. Robbins & McCord. 16-18

Miss Ada Myers, the new milliner, next to Rainier's, North Main, sells at bottom prices. Call and see the lovely goods and styles.

Schaab & Bro. have a new and seasonable ad. in this issue. They are keeping right up to the front in every line of goods they handle.

J. S. Kalb, of Waterloo, renewed old acquaintances in a pleasant way last week, by subscribing for the Courier. That's the way to do it.

Stock breeders should remember that the Courier office has quite a number cuts for horses, cattle, sheep, etc. Call and see if we can suit you.

Buy your lumber and shingles of D. E. Willis at wholesale prices. Quick sales and small profits is our motto. Office over Farmers Bank. 16tf

The Cowan Sister's are becoming quite popular. Last Tuesday and Wednesday they received eight different orders for hats from various parts of the state.

John Nichols, of Newville, chipped in to help the Courier's cash box last week and added some good words of encouragement to boot. He says the Courier leads all the country papers.

Mrs. Hodson wishes to say to the ladies of Auburn that she has received a new stock of goods, which she will be pleased to call on them and show, hoping they will reserve orders for her.

Mrs. Funk has moved her millinery store, and is now located two doors west of Zeigler's meat market, and respectfully solicits a share of your patronage. Nice goods and low prices. 16tf

Frank Bush, at Wallace's old stand on West Seventh street is having lots of work in his line, such as tinning, spouting, all kinds of tin work, repairing etc. All invited to call on him when work is needed in his line.

We had the pleasure of seeing a small portion of the immense stock of the new summer goods received at Harter's last week. Everything that one could wish for he has, in fact one will have to see to believe how lovely.

The Foster Furniture Co., at Fort Wayne, are the largest dealers in baby carriages in the state. If in need of a carriage drop them a postal card, asking them to send you cuts and prices. They will save you from $2 to $10 if you buy of them.

What is it you want, clothing? No. Dressgoods? No. Groceries? No. Gold? No. Then it must be the earth. You can get it by buying your lumber and shingles of D. E. Willis, the lumber man. Office over Farmers Bank. 16tf

The C. L. S. C. will meet next Saturday afternoon with Miss Keeran. Program, Walks and Talks, Mrs. Plum; Classics French Course in English, Mrs. Clifton; The Referendum in Switzerland, Mrs. Sheets; Reading, Miss Keeran.

Have you tried South American Nervine—the gem of the century? The great cure for indigestion, dyspepsia and nervousness. Warranted the most wonderful stomach and nerve cure ever known. Trial bottles 15 cents. Sold by Robbins & McCord, druggists, Auburn.

Messrs Oliver and A. W. Camp, of Hudson, were up to see the Courier on Saturday. These gentlemen are up with the times in the matter of liquidating their accounts on the printer's looks. That's right, none can appreciate a good supply of "the dust" better than the printer.

The carpet department of the Foster Furniture Co., at Fort Wayne, commands an immense patronage. They handle only the best known makes which are sure to give entire satisfaction when put to the test of hard and long services the spring designs for 1891 are very beautiful.

Kiblinger is making a fine additoin to his already fine residence. It will be a half front and porch, the former containing hall, stairway, etc., and rising up into a tower, adding greatly to the building and we presume to its convenience. Sam. Rakestraw is the carpenter and Charley Picker puts in the foundations which are of selected, hard brick.

A painful story comes up from Leo, that Mrs. Dr. Murphy shot their youngest child Friday of last week. It appears she was insane, at least such is the report here. Dr. Murphy is well known up here, being a man eminent in his profession and highly respected. This double affliction calls out the sympathy of all who know him.

Jesse M. Brumbeck has got the nicest and most correct horse bills we have seen for some time. The Courier office had just the picture of his fine Cleveland Bay horse that took the premium at every fair last year, where he was shown. This is "Young Prince." He also has an equally fine imported Clydesdale "Neil Gow." People interested can see both these splendid horses, any day at his home, "Fairview Stock Farm," a mile east of Corunna.

Ida Stahl got back from her winter's visit at Burr Oak, Mich., Saturday. She brings word that all are prospering there, though her sister, Mrs. C. P. Urie has been quite sick. "Com." is still telegraph operator, and doing well. Will. is still enjoying good health, single blessedness, and a prosperous business in the hardware trade. Nettie is at home yet, which proves, in our judgment that Michigan boys are seriously deficient in good judgment, or else are not worth having, or they would have captured her by this time.

The Garrett Bologna announced last week that a copy of that unspeakable sheet will be left at the Reading Room each week. Our people, many of them, refuse to bring the nasty publication referred to, into their homes, or to allow their children to read it. They will certainly object to its presence in the Reading Room. Of what avail will it be if we keep up this worthy enterprise in order to keep our children off the streets and out of improper places, if this vile sheet is to be furnished them in this way? The managers of the Reading Room now have an opportunity to let us know whether they are in earnest or not. The thing is not fit to be on their files and we look to see them promptly refuse it.

Marshal Pfefferl scraped the streets again Tuesday. It is a big improvement.

Cook Ford for bran, middlings, chop feed and corn, at his residence north of new M. E. church.

Mrs. James Campbell got home yesterday. She reports the sick ones at Walkerton no better.

A large car of good shingles for sale at wholesale prices, D. E. Willis the lumberman, office over Farmers Bank, Auburn, Ind. 16tf

The M. E. parsonage is being remodeled and refitted. An addition has been put up, and other valuable improvements made.

Louis Laemle, now located in Wisconsin, was here this week. He is looking bright and happy and is evidently prospering.

Mrs. T. J. Cuppy has been quite ill but is now better. Mr. C. who has been in Kentucky for some time is expected home this week.

Our Waterloo friends will find their ticket in the Courier to-day, as required by the new law. It is the same in form as the one they will vote, May 4.

Chop feed, bran, middlings, corn and supplies of this kind generally always to be had of Cook Ford, at his residence north of the new M. E. church, Auburn.

A. J. Ralston has the enumeration about completed. He is taking the total population, so as to see whether the census agreed with the facts.

Inventors who wish to obtain patents or wish to sell rights in patents should address, Chas McClellan, Solicitor of Claims, 612 F. St. N. W. Washington, D. C.

Jeff. Boyle, of Butler, was in the city Monday, attending to the business of taxpaying. He is up to his ears in the real estate business, and making things hum generally.

Hon. S. S. Shutt was in town last Saturday for the first time since his long illness. He is looking as if he had been in a siege, but is now all right, a fact we are all pleased to hear.

Twenty-seven years ago Tuesday Mr. and Mrs. W. H. McIntosh were married at Murfreesboro, Tenn., he being in the army, and she a nurse at the time. It forms an interesting story.

There was a big wedding at the Catholic church Tuesday, Miss Delia daughter of Stephen Girardot, being united in marriage to Thomas Gobis. The latter, we are told, resides at Ft. Wayne.

Fred Funk reports that the stone work of Howard McCord's residence is now under. He does this work, while E. Y. Williamson, of Waterloo, Mrs. McCord's father, will put up the building.

Miss Alice Palmer organizer of the W. C. T. U., from Indianapolis, delivered one of her characteristic lectures at the Lutheran church on Friday evening. She is a smooth speaker and the cause she represents is a commendable one. The Hoosiers rendered some of their fine music. May the good work go on.

What Rickel & Sprott don't know about advertising don't count for much. They not only have lots of good real estate bargains to dispose of, but many novel ways of getting their business before the people. Their latest and cutest is a small note or memorandum book, the leaves being of fine slated card, and having a pencil attached so one can readily jot down any note he thinks of. It beats writing on your cuff all to pieces and gives you each time a square look at "Rickel & Sprott Real Estate and Loan Agents, Auburn, Ind." Good thing.

See the treasurer's notice of orders called for.

Mrs. Armstrong, of Ft. Wayne, visited with Mrs. Perrine on Monday.

Mrs. Plum went to Logansport last Friday to help take a lady to the asylum.

Dr. Johnston is having his house repainted. It improves the looks already.

The editor's wife is away this week, attending the missionary meeting at Peoria, Ill., to which she is a delegate.

Word comes from Indianapolis that Hon. Nicholas Ensley is very sick. He is having the second pull of the grip.

We are indebted for favors this week, to John Beerer, one of the liberal hearted boys employed in the Wabash shops at Butler.

We don't say much but we do say that we are ready to fill all orders for lumber and shingles at wholesale prices. D. E. Willis, Auburn. 16tf

Harter & Co. are still pushing out for business at a lively rate. See the inducement held out in their new advertisement of this week.

John Hebel has moved his woodshed away and will add a new kitchen, and make other improvements. John is bound to have the best.

Samuel Bricker, of Butler township, advertises good stock, horses and a jack in this issue. Farmers and stock raisers should bear this in mind.

Our old friend Christian Smith came up have a chat Monday. He thinks if we can live till the coming crops are in market, we will get along, but the last season has been hard on common people.

The New Bill Head manufactured by Kessler Bros., is a leader, and smokers will find that its standard of excellence is all that could be desired in a first-class cigar of any grade. Smoke one Bill Head and you will smoke no other brand.

Dotty Gibson made her Sunday school class glad Tuesday by inviting them and the teacher, Mrs. Plum, to take tea with her. The class gave her a very nice ring, and for exchange Mrs. Gibson treated them to an excellent supper. They all enjoyed themselves and wished Dotty would have another birthday soon.

Mrs. Albert Robbins has been lying dangerously ill for a week or more, and there is little or no hope of her recovery. It seems to be some spinal trouble, and her limbs have become paralyzed. In addition to some of our best home talent Dr. McCasky of Ft. Wayne, has been consulted, but it seems nothing can be done. It is indeed a most sad case and our people are anxiously waiting, watching and hoping even against hope, that she may yet be spared.

I have a fine lot of fruit trees and plants now ready for delivery, consisting of the leading varieties of apple, pear, cherry, plum and peach trees. A big lot of Number 1, Concord and other grapes, blackberry, raspberry, current and gooseberry plants, twenty varieties of strawberry plants, home grown, which I am going to sell at reasonable prices, and if required will give time until after harvest to pay for them. These trees are from the most reliable New York nurseries and are first-class in every respect and true to name. I am too busy with my planting and giving attention to my plants to deliver, so I will make it an object in price if those wishing to plant anything in my line will come to my residence one mile south of Auburn, and get it. Come and I assure you that you will go away satisfied. Those who come first will get first choice. C. P. Houser.

AN ingenius French engineer has discovered a device for ascertaining the speed of a train, so that a check can be had on the engine driver as he runs around curves and other difficult parts of the line. The instrument is a tuning fork, having a point which inscribes a curve on a rotating cylinder. The mechanism is set in motion and also stopped by the wheels of the train passing over treddles at known distances.

THE colored people of Hartwell, Ga., are bestowing the complimentary title of "Dr." upon their preachers. The other day one of the D. D. raised his silk beaver and responded in a most dignified manner: "I is quite well, my brother; how duz yo' large an' 'fluential family come on?"

He Thanked Him.

A horse attached to a buggy came running down Grand River avenue the other day lickety-cut, and a pedestrian rushed out, seized the trailing lines, and after being flung down and dragged through the mud a hundred feet, he brought the animal to a standstill. Then he led it up to a post, picked up the whip and cushions, and had just got everything ship-shape when a fat man, walking very leisurely and smoking a cigar, came along and took possession.

"So it was your horse?" asked the mud covered rescuer.

"Yes—my horse. Got away from my house on Fourth avenue."

"And—an——"

"Oh, I wasn't worried any. I knew that somebody would stop him sooner or later. There's some of that sort always around, you know!"

Not Drink, But Gum.

"My dear," said young Mrs. Fitts at the play, "it is a humiliating confession for me to make, but I am positively nervous for want of a piece of gum."

"I'll go get some as soon as the curtain falls," said Mr. Fitts.

No Soap in India.

It is stated that soap in India is regarded almost in the light of a natural curiosity, for it is rarely if ever to be obtained of a shop-keeper there. Of course it is sold in the larger towns; but the amount used by the natives must be very small, seeing that the total consumption of soap in India last year was only 5,000 tons. This means that the amount used by each person for the year was considerably less than one ounce.—Chambers' Journal.

THE SUGAR TRUST.

IT WILL NOT REVEAL ITS SECRETS.

A Fruitless Investigation—The Trust and Its Profits—How It Will Flourish Under McKinleyism—Millions for Monopoly.

A committee of the New York Legislature has been trying to investigate the sugar trust, but the president of that great monopoly, as well as others connected with it, was as dumb as an oyster to the most important questions put to him.

In the meantime, some facts are known about the trust which will show the people what this tariff monopoly has been costing them. The trust was organized in November, 1887, and there are about ten refineries in it, besides six independent companies.

How the trust put up prices in granulated sugar may be seen from the fact that while it sold granulated sugar in 1886–87 at an average of 69 cents per 100 pounds higher than the best raw sugar, the average in 1888–89 was $1.24½ higher.

The well-recognized cost of refining sugar, including all expenses per ton above the cost of the raw sugar, is $14, or ⅝ of a cent per pound. McKinley put a duty of ½ cent per pound on refined sugar to protect the trust against the lower wages of foreign countries, the protection being thus almost equal to the entire cost of refining. The difference between 96 centrifugals and granulated in 1886 and 1887 was $15.635 and $15.344, respectively, so that the profits of refining sugar in those two years were $1.635 and $1.344 per ton. But in 1888 and 1889 the differences amounted to $27.82 and $28.044, and the profits of refining per ton were $13.82 and $14.044, respectively.

In 1888 the "sugar trust" produced 72.7 per cent. of the refined, and the independent refineries 27.3 per cent., while in 1889 the "sugar trust" produced 65.7 per cent. and the other refineries 34.3 per cent. The total United States production of refined sugar in 1888 was 1,457,264 tons, of which the "trust" produced 987,570, on which it made a profit of $13,648,217.40. The independent refineries produced 371,886 tons at a profit of $5,139,465.52. So that the total profit of the sugar refineries in 1888 amounted to $18,787,682.92.

In 1889 the sugar trust refined 963,305 tons at a profit of $12,126,255.42, and the independent refiners produced 450,395 tons at a profit of $6,325,347.38, thus making the total profit of sugar refining in the United States in 1889 $18,449,602.80.

Such were the operations of the sugar trust during its first two years. It earned 27½ per cent. in 1888 and 24.1 per cent. in 1889 on its nominal capitalization of $50,000,000, over two-thirds of which is water. (At the recent investigation in New York it was testified by the trust's lawyer that one factory worth $300,000 went into the trust and got $3,500,000 as its share of stock.) On its real valuation the profits for 1888 were over 92 per cent., and for 1889 80 per cent. Every cent of the profits of sugar refining in the United States in 1888 and 1889 above a fair profit was taken from the consumers of sugar in this country in the form of an indirect bounty that could never have been squeezed from the people of this country had sugar been upon the free list.

Now that raw sugar is on the free list, refined sugar has fallen about 2 cents a pound; but the trust still has its half a cent per pound protection. Even a half a cent per pound on a million tons, which the trust can turn out in a year, amounts to $10,000,000. The trust still has a good thing.

What Jerry Simpson Saw in Florida.

In a recent speech in New York City, Hon. Jerry Simpson, member of Congress, told what he saw in Pensacola, Florida, as an illustration of the way in which our tariff prevents the importation of forein goods needed by our people.

"When I was down in Florida last summer," said Mr. Simpson, "I spent a day or two at Pensacola. Being a sailor, I went along the water front to take a look at the shipping. There were sixty-five vessels there of all classes at the wharves and in the roadway. Out of the lot, two little schooners flew the American flag. The rest of the vessels flew the flags of many nations, but the largest and best of them displayed the British union jack at their peaks. I talked with a number of the skippers, and asked them what they brought to Pensacola. All the vessels then in that port had come in ballast. They brought us dirt and rocks, some of it so foul that it had to be unloaded at quarantine, and in many cases had to remain there for thirty days or so before they could he sufficiently purified to be fit to come into Pensacola harbor. But they didn't go away in ballast. They went loaded with things produced in this country that were wanted in other countries, and we had got, in exchange, dirt, rocks and filth. Now, there were many things produced in the countries from which these vessels came that we wanted, and those vessels would rather have loaded with them than with the dirt, rocks and filth, and the people of those countries would have been glad to have exchanged their goods for our goods. But our protective laws stand in the way; we cannot trade, and we in Kansas know the reason why, and we intend one of these days to sweep that reason out of existence."

California Oranges.

A year ago the orange growers of California were begging Congress to raise the duty on oranges to $1 a box, pleading that labor in Italy was only 20 cents a day. They pretended that the old duty of 25 cents a box was equivalent to only 8 per cent., while the official figures used in the United States Senate showed that the duty was nearly 22 per cent. McKinley tried to double the duty on oranges, but the Senate insisted upon the old rates and these were retained.

Now, what has happened? Are the California growers being driven out of the Eastern markets by the cheap pauper-grown oranges of Italy? Not at all. On the contrary, the President of the California Fruit Union says that California oranges are now taking possession of the United States to a greater extent than it was deemed possible earlier in the season. Large shipments are made daily to all parts of the Union, even as far east as New York and Boston. Several weeks ago ten trains comprising sixty cars, started eastward from the southern part of the State.

Only another case where protected interests go to Congress with lies upon their lips to beg for higher protection when they really need none at all.

Why Europe Blamed Us.

The recent sensation in regard to the New Orleans lynching and Italy's recall of Baron Fava was widely commented upon in the newspapers of Europe. The haste with which those papers took sides against us and the cause of their hostility are thus explained by Harold Frederic, the London correspondent of the New York Times:

"Nothing could more clearly have indicated the truth of what I have frequently pointed out heretofore, that the passage of the McKinley bill has temporarily put us outside the pale of international good-will and amiable feelings. There is in this attitude toward America and things American both anger and contempt, and it is shared unconsciously by people of all classes and tendencies of thought in all the capitals and centers of population in Europe. Hence instinctively everybody, from the Dardanelles to the North Cape, took Italy's side against us, and would have done so had our case been ten times as strong. This may flatter voters in the First Maine District, but I do not fancy that the rest of the American people will get much solid comfort out of it."

NEW SUGAR INDUSTRIES.

What Free Sugar Will Do—The Jam Industry and Condensed Milk Business Will Grow—The Farmers and McKinley's Free Trade.

When sugar went on the free list, the President of the Sugar Trust said in an interview he thought that ultimately cheap sugar would cause the introduction of several new industries in this country, notably the manufacture of fruit jams and preserves, about 100,000 tons of which are made in England every year, while the manufacture is almost unknown here. He also believed that our brewers would use sugar instead of glucose, following the example of English brewers. The consumption of sugar would increase among the people, too. In Great Britain, for instance, with free sugar, the consumption is seventy pounds per capita per year, and in this country, where there is more general prosperity, it has only been only about fifty-five pounds, while of this over 40 per cent. is brown sugars. The manufacture of candy, he thought, would probably increase, and candy be cheaper.

The manufacture of fruit jams and preserves is even more extensive in England than as stated here. England uses 180,000 tons of sugar in these industries and employs thus 75,000 hands. The benefit which free sugar has been to the people of England may be seen from the fact that strawberry jam is sold in London at wholesale at $1.35 per dozen one pound jars, black currant and raspberry jam at $1.28, and so on down to plum jam at 94 cents.

There can be no doubt that free sugar will give an excellent opportunity for the development of a vast jam industry in this country and thus give a large and steady market to the growers of small fruits. At present our small fruit crop is very valuable. Conservative estimates by well-informed dealers place the value of the strawberry crop at $10,000,000; the raspberry, blackcap, and blackberry crop at $4,000,000; the cranberry crop at $2,000,000; the currant crop at $1,000,000; and the remaining varieties at $1,000,000—a total of at least $18,000,000. These figures can be enormously increased under free sugar. By reason of the higher tariff cost of sugar, and jars, and tumblers with us, we have been making only about one-sixth of our small-fruit crop into jam and preserves. England, on the other hand, has been using two-thirds of her crop in this way, turning out about $12,000,000 worth of jam a year. Thus the English have been supplying not merely all the jams used in Great Britain but the greater part of those used in all parts of the world, from which there comes a constantly increasing demand.

Another industry which can be built up to large proportions under free sugar is that of making condensed milk. To make 1,000 pounds of condensed milk 475 pounds of sugar are used with 1,460 quarts of milk. The saving here of $9.50 per thousand pounds by free sugar will give this industry the promise of large profits and will cause it to develop rapidly. In this the farmer will see a market for an enlarged sale of milk. But condensed milk must be packed in tin cans and these are taxed higher than ever under the McKinley law.

Free sugar is the one bright spot in the McKinley law—the one place where it gives free trade to any important extent. The great effect of free sugar in cheapening the expenses of the household and in enlarging our industries will teach the people the nature of the McKinley law where it does not give free trade. If the abolition of the duty on sugar does so much good, would not the same result follow in other cases?

Cheap Candy.

The London Grocer points out what will be one of the effects of the removal of the sugar duty in the United States. It says:

"Judging from the precedent that was formed here after sugar was admitted 'duty free' in 1872, one branch of the American native sugar industry is pretty certain to receive from the latest legislative acts a strong impetus to expand and augment almost beyond belief, and that is the section devoted to confectioneries and the business in sweetmeats. In the United Kingdom the trade in confections has progressed at an astonishing rate, both as regards the home and export branches, and soon we may have American productions actively competing in the markets of the world for a portion of the custom which has hitherto been given exclusively to our manufacturers."

While candy is one of the luxuries rather than necessaries of life, still the reduction of the price will be very popular with the children and with candy-eating misses.

Cheap candy will be a potent object lesson to teach that the sugar duty was a tax.

Meat in England.

Our silly protectionists sometimes venture the statement that free trade has worked disastrously in England for the laboring people. While they can point to many occupations in England in which wages are lower than with us, they persistently ignore the steady improvement in the condition of the British workman.

The following fact is but one of hundreds showing that improvement: The meat imported into Great Britain in 1876 represented a ratio of only one pound to every family of five persons. The recent returns of the British Board of Trade show that the annual imports, chiefly from America and Australia, now amount to forty pounds of "dead meat" for every such average family of five persons.

Higher Glass Prices.

It is reported from St. Louis that a combination has been agreed upon to raise the prices of window glass and plate glass. Under the present tariff the manufacturers of these articles have higher protection than they had under the old law, and now they are resolved to "get rid of unreasonable competition," as the phrase runs, and pocket as much as they can of the McKinley tariff spoils. Up go prices, and the consumer must reach deeper into his pocket. Meanwhile let him reflect that his loss is the monopolist's gain; and let him reflect upon the beauty of the protective system which takes money out of his pocket to protect labor, to "insure labor good wages and steady employment"—both of which labor does not get.

THE protectionists in France have been trying to "protect labor" for ten years; but labor in France is meeting with precisely the same experience as labor in America. A French writer points out that Belgian, Swiss, Italian, and even German laborers come into France and compete with French labor at lower wages. The attempt to protect labor by putting a duty on commodities fails everywhere; for commodities do not compete with labor. Labor alone competes with labor.

FOR as 'tis mete to soak ye feet,
Ye ailing head to mend,
Ye younker's pate to stimulate

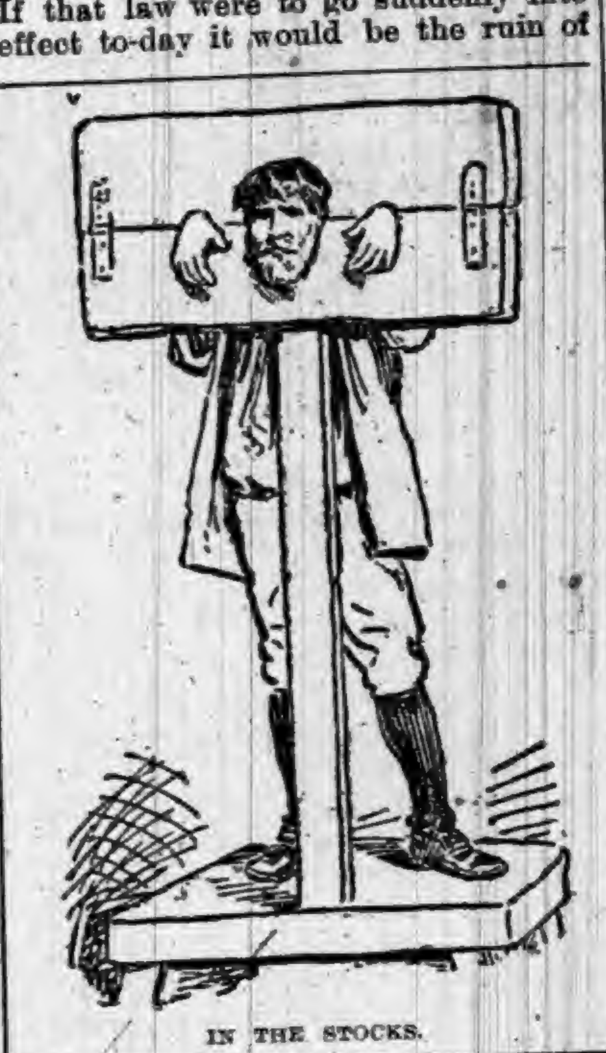
DUDES AND POETS WERE ILLEGAL.

Our Forefathers Would Have Whipped Modern Specimens.

If the laws of 150 years ago were in existence at the present time, the nineteenth century would never have produced what has proven to be two of its most characteristic and interesting institutions. Having said this, no one will deny that reference is made to the American dude and modern poet.

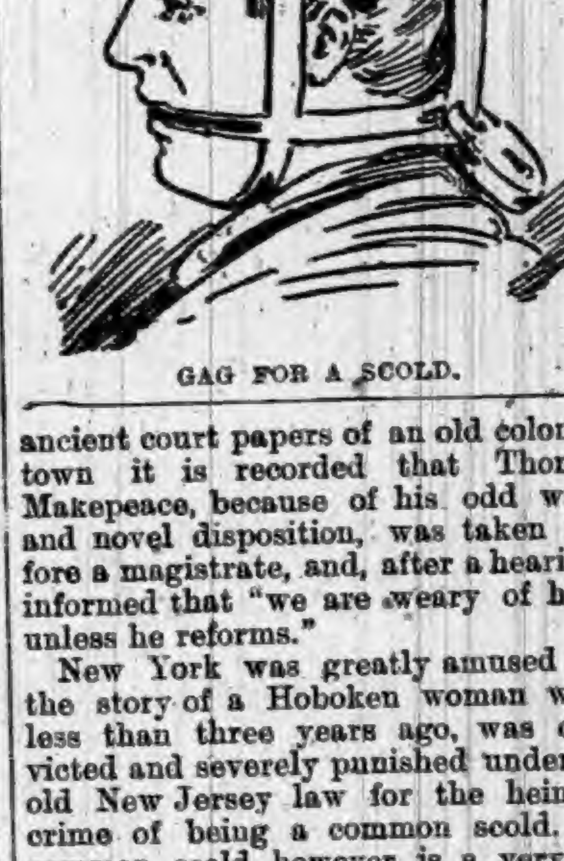
For instance, men who wore long hair in Puritan New England were heavily fined and whipped in public for the offense. This would take away the only distinguishing trait of the modern poet, and without it, it is extremely doubtful whether he would write at all. It is on record, too, that in the latter part of the seventeenth century a young Bostonian was brought into court and fined for possessing an excess of wearing apparel "in boots, waistcoats and gold and silver laces." If that law were to go suddenly into effect to-day it would be the ruin of thousands of young men whose incomes, while large enough to purchase the "excess," would never be sufficient to pay the fines that justice would demand. On the other hand, the law would be of inestimable value to thousands of other young men, whose income has never been large enough to permit them to break this old commandment.



IN THE STOCKS.

Our forefathers made the times in which they lived more than ordinarily picturesque by the novelties of their laws and the curious character of the punishments inflicted upon those who disobeyed official mandates. They believed in punishment. They punished heavily for what would now be considered mild offenses. Once in a while the people of the present generation are entertained by the publication of an attempt to enforce some old blue law which has never been stricken from the statute books. But the most absurd of these are nothing in comparison with some others that originated about the same time, but which, fortunately for a vast number, have long been extinct.

Dudes and poets were not the only objectionable people whom the blue laws prohibited. Cranks, and this more numerous class popularly known as "odd geniuses," could not have existed in those days. Among the ancient court papers of an old colonial town it is recorded that Thomas Makepeace, because of his odd ways and novel disposition, was taken before a magistrate, and, after a hearing, informed that "we are weary of him, unless he reforms."



GAG FOR A SCOLD.

New York was greatly amused by the story of a Hoboken woman who, less than three years ago, was convicted and severely punished under an old New Jersey law for the heinous crime of being a common scold. A common scold, however, is a very objectionable sort of person, even to the liberal-minded American of the present generation, so that the fate of the unfortunate woman did not arouse the indignation at the interference with personal liberty that some cases less just would arouse.

There is a law still on the statute books of Massachusetts which prohibits driving for pleasure on Sunday. Four or five years ago the erratic mayor of a small city not far from Boston attempted to put this law into force. Several prominent citizens were arrested for the crime of being found in a carriage in the public street without being able to give the arresting officer satisfactory proof of the necessity of being there. But this crusade did not last long. Popular opinion rose up in rebellion against the puritanical mayor, and he was relegated from office at the expiration of his term. Curiously enough, however, no attempt has been made to have the law repealed.

THE Colonial Government of Victoria (Australia) is offering a bonus to encourage the growth of tobacco. According to the regulations drawn up the sum of $250 will be paid for every 2,000 pounds of tobacco grown and manufactured in the colony. The maximum payment to any one manufacturer is not to exceed $2,500. This practically means a remission of the excise duty, which Mr. Ferguson, as the representative of a large tobacco-growing district, stated in the legislative assembly was one of the principal causes of the decline of the industry.

A STRANGER once walked into a Massachusetts court and spent some time watching the proceedings. By-and-by, a man was brought up for contempt of court and fined, whereupon the stranger rose, and said: "How much was the fine?" "Five dollars," replied the clerk. "Well," said the stranger, laying down the money, "if that's all, I'd like to jine in. I've had a few hours' experience of this court, and no one can feel a greater contempt for it than I do, and I am willing to pay for it."

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE TONIC
—AND—
Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar.
It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the Great South American Medicine Company, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by the native inhabitants of South America, who rely almost wholly upon its great medicinal powers to cure every form of disease by which they are overtaken.

This new and valuable South American medicine possesses powers and qualities hitherto unknown to the medical profession. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and diseases of the general Nervous System. It also cures all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the Great Nervine Tonic qualities which it possesses and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body and as a great renewer of a broken down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the Lungs than any ten consumption remedies ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic almost constantly for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir, are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied, and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This recent production of the South American Continent has been found, by analysis, to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its magic power to cure all forms of nervous derangements.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., Aug. 20, '86.

To the Great South American Medicine Co.:

DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If every-one knew the value of this remedy as I do, you would not be able to supply the demand.

J. A. HARDEE,
Ex-Treas. Montgomery Co.

Mr. Solomon Bond, a member of the Society of Friends, of Darlington, Ind., says: "I have used twelve bottles of The Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and I consider that every bottle did for me one hundred dollars worth of good, because I have not had a good night's sleep for twenty years on account of irritation, pain, horrible dreams, and general nervous prostration, which has been caused by chronic indigestion and dyspepsia of the stomach and by a broken down condition of my nervous system. But now I can lie down and sleep all night as sweetly as a baby, and I feel like a sound man. I do not think there has ever been a medicine introduced into this country which will at all compare with this Nervine Tonic as a cure for the stomach."

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., May 19, 1886.

My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with Chorea or St. Vitus's Dance. She was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to handle her like an infant. Doctor and neighbors gave her up. I commenced giving her the South American Nervine Tonic; the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of the nervousness, and rapidly improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the South American Nervine the grandest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to every-one.

My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus's Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus's Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the Stomach, because the experience and testimony of thousands go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to The Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted Stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

Mrs. M. Russell, Sugar Creek Valley, Ind., writes: "I have used several bottles of The South American Nervine Tonic, and will say I consider it the best medicine in the world. I believe it saved the lives of two of my children. They were down and nothing appeared to do them any good until I procured this remedy. It was very surprising how rapidly they both improved on its use. I recommend the medicine to all my neighbors.

Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I can not express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen.

Ed. J. Brown, Druggist, of Edina, Mo., writes: "My health had been very poor for years, was coughing severely. I only weighed 110 pounds when I commenced using South American Nervine. I have used two bottles and now weigh 130 pounds, and am much stronger and better than have been for five years. Am sure would not have lived through the Winter had I not secured this remedy. My customers see what it has done for me and buy it eagerly. It gives great satisfaction."

Competitive Examination.

An eminent psychologist in the Popular Science Monthly furnishes some expert testimony regarding the fallacy of competitive examinations as a test of brain power and practical knowledge, which might have been of service if it could have been introduced in the recent debate upon the Civil Service Reform bill in Congress.

Like all those whose intimate association with competitive examination authorizes them to pass judgment upon their value, he holds that as true tests of intelligence they are superficial and worthless. As illustrations he cites the cases of two young men, candidates for admission to the Royal Military Academy of England. One of them, Brown, passes fifth in the list and is admitted; the other, Smith, fails and is rejected. Twenty years after Smith and Brown meet.

The latter has jogged along and has made a decent citizen, has never done anything very wise or very foolish; while, on the other hand, Smith has developed into a man of remarkable force, has become a leader in public sentiment and shapes political measures while he writes clever books, his intellect proving to be one of the strongest and his mind one of the most brilliant in England.

Those who conducted the examination supposed it to be a test of the brain power and the intelligence of the candidates, when it was nothing but a demand upon the memory and not upon the reason. One of the young men had the faculty of retaining what had been crammed into his mind; the other had original force, inventive genius and a natural comprehension of logic.

But it is not necessary to go to England to secure illustrations of this fallacy. They are found in all the departments at Washington and in every institution of learning in the land. Technical questions making demands upon the memory and not upon the reasoning faculties and practical experience of the student are no test of his intellectual force or general capacity, particularly when men of ability to conduct practical transactions are sought for, and it is herein that the competitive examination misleads the inspectors and does injustice to the candidates. The only practical test that can be depended upon is a trial of fair duration, in which the faculties of those who enter upon it may be demonstrated by active contact with the affairs that are to be managed.

Burgling as an Art.

The methods of the American thief are very comprehensive and skillful, says the Cleveland Herald; more so than are those of the profession, for such has thieving become, of other countries. It is commonly acknowledged among the first police officers in the world that, for a fine job, the American thief is far ahead of the other nations. Why should they be? That is somewhat of a mystery, unless to the training he has received under the tutelage of the best of English thieves he adds the peculiar daring, coolness, cunning and skill that seems to be inherent in the fully developed American, but no matter for what reason, the fact remains unchallenged that he stands at the head of the craft. A consideration of his ways, gentle and otherwise, will be interesting to read. He is divided in many families, but first and foremost among thieves is the bank burglar or "high tobyman." He is the king bee in the criminal hive, and affects to be a gentleman when not otherwise engaged on a "lay." The history of nearly every large and wealthy city abounds in instances of the bank robber's daring roguery. He comes and leaves mysteriously, and his presence would not have been felt had he not left a "kit" of beautiful tools beside a wrecked safe or bank vault, and taken in exchange greenbacks and bonds that may be thousands, but more often is millions. This in his peculiarly sportive moments he might term a fair exchange, and does; but no amount of sportive wit can persuade the bank officers into thus regarding the visit. Bank burglars are not in the habit of working alone.

PEOPLE who lose their money in bucket shops would rejoice at a chance to kick the bucket.

A Timely Hint.

When Henry Ward Beecher was at the hight of his popularity, Plymouth Church was so crowded one Sunday evening that a lady fainted. She was surrounded by a curious crowd, which prevented the air getting to her, and annoyed her friends. Mr. Beecher at once dropped his discourse and said pointedly:

"When I was a boy at home I was always taught if a guest dropped a knife or fork, or created a momentary disturbance, not to notice it. I would like the congregation to be seated again."

The fainting member was then safely removed, and Mr. Beecher resumed preaching. The hint was not thrown away.—Free Press.

Big Drift or Big Story.

"Some pretty big stories," remarks the Kennebec Herald, "are told of the snow drifts in Aroostook County, Me., but the biggest comes from a commercial traveler this week. He had recently come from there and said some men were chopping wood. A large tree fell the wrong way and stretched its giant trunk directly across the road. The snow on either side the road was so high that, after clearing away the limbs, it was found that it would not interfere with travel in the least, as a horse and sleigh could easily pass under it. The narrator himself had done so."

Struggling Up Life's Rugged Hill

With youth, vigor, ambition and an indomitable will to help us, is no such grievous matter, but tottering down again, afflicted by the ailments which beset old age—our backs bent with lumbago, our elastic muscles and joints stiff and painful, is a woeful piece of business. For the infirmities which the decline of life too often brings, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a beneficent source of relief, a mitigating solace always to be depended upon. No regulating tonic evolved by botanic medical discovery is so well calculated, so thoroughly able, but without undue stimulative effect, to help the aged, the delicate and the convalescent—to resuscitate the vitality of a frame which time and physical decline have impaired as this. Kidney and bladder weakness and disorder, costiveness, malarial complaints, dyspepsia and rheumatism are among the bodily afflictions which this sterling recuperant and regulator overcomes.

Queer Appetites.

A butcher of Seymour, Ind., is said to have found in the stomach of a slaughtered cow a silver half-dollar, several small bones, a lot of needles and pins, and a quarter of a pound of iron nails. But a more remarkable discovery was that made by a servant in a St. Louis restaurant. While he was opening clams the other day there dropped from one of the bivalves a gold ring inscribed "S. S. to R. S." The clams had been purchased from a New York house and were gathered from the ocean bed near Fire island.

A MAN who has practiced medicine for forty years ought to know salt from sugar; read what he says:

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most forty years, and would say that in all my practice and experience, have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions. Yours truly,

L. L. GORSUCH, M. D.,
Office, 215 Summit St.

We will give $100 for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Taken internally.

Kansas and Greenland Houses.

The sod house on the Kansas frontier and the dwelling of a Greenland Eskimo are very much alike, about the only difference being an overground burrow in the home of the Eskimo. All Greenland houses are of the same size, face the same way, and are built of the same material—layers of rough granite, sod, and mortar.

Population of the World.

In the journal of proceedings of the Royal Geographical Society for January, 1891, it is estimated that the population of the world in 1890 was 1,487,600,000, representing an average of thirty-one to the square mile, and an increase of 8 per cent. during the decade.

MOTHERS, don't let your children suffer with ill-health. Try Dr. Bull's Worm Destroyers—dainty candy lozenges. It will do them no harm, and may be just the remedy they need. By mail, 25 cents. John D. Park, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Judge on a Bicycle.

The Nevada Legislature having refused to appropriate money for the traveling expenses of the District Judge, one of them has bought a bicycle on which to make his magisterial circuit.

This is the Season

In which to purify and enrich the blood, restore the lost appetite, and build up the nerves, as the system is now especially susceptible to benefit from medicine. The peculiar medicinal merit of, and the wonderful cures by, Hood's Sarsaparilla have made it the most popular spring medicine. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, and all humors, biliousness, dyspepsia, headache, kidney and liver complaints, catarrh, and all affections caused or promoted by low state of the system or impure blood.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"When my boy was two years old he was attacked and suffered a long time with scrofula sores. The physician at length told us to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla, which we did. Two bottles cured him. He is now 12 years old and has not had any sign of scrofula since. We recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. E. C. CLIPPER, 8 Kidder Street, Cleveland, Ohio.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as the best spring or fall medicine ever known. I was troubled with that tired feeling, particularly in the morning. Hood's Sarsaparilla gave me strength and made me feel well." ALEX. OEHLER, 634 West Cross Street, Baltimore, Md.

That the people appreciate the merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla is shown by the fact that this medicine has The Largest Sale of any sarsaparilla or blood purifier in this country. If you doubt this, ask any honest jobber or retail druggist. Hood's Sarsaparilla is to-day on the full tide of popularity, and has reached that pre-eminence by its own intrinsic, undisputed merit.

"I take Hood's Sarsaparilla every year as a spring tonic, with most satisfactory results." C. PARMELEE, 349 Bridge street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Spring Medicine

"When I lived in Piqua I was sick a long time, from what the doctor said was ague or malaria fever. I decided to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and it brought me out all O. K. I take it every spring, and any time my appetite is poor I go for Hood's Sarsaparilla, which always does me good." H. E. COLLINS, of Wightman & Collins, 5 Bolivar Street, Cleveland, Ohio.

The Spring Medicine

"I consider Hood's Sarsaparilla the best spring medicine, and can truly say that it 'Makes the Weak Strong.' I take it all seasons of the year when needed, and would give five dollars for a bottle of it if I could not get it for less." ALBERT A. JAGNOW, Douglaston, L. I., N. Y.

—Floriculture will be a main display of Indiana's at the World's Fair.

—Indiana Literary clubs all meet in convention at Terre Haute May 8.

—The Bank of Darlington is now open for business, and has a net backing of $250,000.

—James Duncan, a pioneer of Hendricks County, died at his residence, near Danville.

—Harrison County farmers are suffering considerable loss from the raids of sheep-killing dogs.

—Twenty-two Holstein cattle were sold at auction in Crawfordsville, averaging in price about $75.

—George Sears, 9 years old, fell under the cars at Lafayette, and had both legs cut off below the knees.

—Charles Franzeman, foreman of the Romana Stone Company, was dangerously crushed by a planer.

—A female prisoner in Petersburg jail has fitted up her cell with a piano, Brussels carpet and parlor furniture.

—Allen Owens committed suicide near Alamo. Left a note saying "life as a cripple has grown unendurable."

—Decatur County Agricultural Society promises the coming fair at Greensburg, August 25-28, will be the best they ever had.

—Miss Anna Becker of Evansville, was seriously injured by jumping from a carriage while the horses were running away.

—Calvin Shrader, a section man on the Nickel Plate road at Peabody, was run over by a work-train and instantly killed.

—Mrs. Jonathan Keller, wife of the first white child born in Wabash County, died at her home in Wabash of paralysis, aged 58.

—A man named Staton was killed near Brazil and his body placed on the railroad track and cut in two. No clue to murderer.

—While at work at McKendry's heading factory, at Muncie, William Kilbo, colored, had his left hand torn off by a circular saw.

—Benjamin Bennett, an employe in the Jefferson car-works, threw himself in front of a moving train, and was instantly killed.

—Danville students shooting at a mark with a flobert rifle, accidentally shot Miss Lou Kelleher in the neck, seriously wounding her.

—The general store of Frank Carter, at Hadley, was burglarized and several hundred dollars worth of merchandise carried away.

—A stylishly dressed elderly woman succeeded in passing several $100 counterfeit bills on farmers in the vicinity of North Vernon.

—There is general rejoicing in Madison, over the sale of the ship-yards to Captain Barmore. A big boat-building boom is anticipated.

—Fred C. Crane, of La Porte, was thrown from a bicycle, cutting an artery in the head, and sustaining injuries that it is thought will prove fatal.

—The banking house of Muncie have organized a clearance association for the purpose of providing a convenient method of exchange between the banks.

—The temperance people of Steuben County have been so successful in their work that wholesale liquor dealers no longer find it profitable to visit that section of the State.

—John H. Kluge, of Abington, is believed to be the first white male born in the State. He was born Dec. 31, 1805, near Anderson, on the banks of White River, in Madison County.

—Good people of Washington are whacking it to the saloonkeepers—going to make them pay $250 for licenses.

—In Starke County, a few miles from Winamac, Fred Smith, 14 years old, was shot dead by his cousin, Amil Smith, 19 years old. Young Smith and his brother were out sawing wood, when Amil, who had been hunting, approached them. In a playful manner Amil said to Fred that he could kill him, and without further ceremony pulled the trigger, killing him instantly.

—John S. Brown, of Crawfordsville, paid $260 on a forged order for timber, the person presenting the order being a woman. He has since received an unsigned letter stating that the writer had forged the order and had given it to the women to present for payment.

—Dr. J. J. Hamilton, one of the oldest and best known residents of New Castle, and an inventor of note, died recently, after a long and painful illness dating back to Andersonville prison, where he was confined for many months during the war, and out of which he came a physical wreck.

—Peter Carroll, of Clark County, who died recently, kept a coffin in his house for twenty years. He was buried in it.

—William Warner, a farmer 26 years of age, and living two miles north of Tipton, was found dead in his bed. His death is supposed to have resulted from heart trouble. He leaves a wife and two children.

—M. A. Weir, cashier of the New Albany National Bank, has contracted for the erection of a fine Methodist church at Salem. The name of the new place of worship will be the Weir Memorial, and it will cost $20,000.

—J. M. Harvey, who was stricken with paralysis upon arising to speak in a Farmer's Alliance meeting, near Crawfordsville, laid in a helpless condition for a day, and then recovered just as quickly as he was prostrated.

—George Paxton, a well-known and respected farmer residing four miles south of Fortville, fell dead very suddenly from heart disease. Mr. Paxton was 75 years of age, and was out in his orchard when stricken by death.

—A detective in the employ of Fish Commissioner Dennis, assisted by the Sheriff, arrested eight men for violation of the fish laws, at Paisley, on Cedar Lake, in Lake County. Over 2,000 feet of seines and gill nets were captured.

—A badly crippled engine on the Cincinnati, Wabash & Michigan railroad southbound passenger train was the result of its running into a pile of ties between Goshen and Waterford, supposed to have been placed there by tramps.

—Charles Genz and William Weihl, of Elkhart, have made an agreement that the one losing his bet as to the outcome of the approaching city election shall wheel the other from Elkhart to Goshen, a distance of eleven miles, in a wheelbarrow.

—When the body of William Imes, which was buried at Corunna, two years ago, was disinterred for shipment, it was found it was petrified, with every feature preserved perfectly, veen the hair. At the time of burial Imes weighed 180 pounds. The body resembles a hard limestone.

—Daniel Heaton, an octogenarian, of Goshen, married Emily Weaver, aged 30, and one week after marriage she abandoned him, and brought suit for divorce and alimony, alleging ill treatment. The defendant claimed that plaintiff married him to extort money, and the court ruled in his favor.

—Muncie now has fifteen churches and will soon have two additions. They will be a new M. E. Church at Avondale and a new Presbyterian church building at West Side, suburbs that have gained such population that the buildings are demanded, and will be erected at once. Muncie's church property is now valued at $220,000.

—Frederick Berger, a photographer, came to Greencastle a few months ago, and obtained employment in a local gallery. He was afterwards given the use of an outfit, to enable him to operate at Gosport, since which time nothing has been heard of him. His family, a wife and six children, are distressed over his disappearance, and are in destitute circumstances.

—About a year ago Joseph McKinsey, of Company B, Tenth Indiana Regiment, drew $1,300 pension money and deserted his wife and two children at Crawfordsville. The woman did the best she could to support herself and children, but now is sick in bed and in destitute circumstances. One of the children has just died with the grip, and the woman is very low.

—There is a strong reason to believe that Terre Haute is at last to have a gas-well. Gas was developed in the Guarantee oil-well, No. 6, which is 985 feet deep. The flow of gas is particularly strong, considering that it forces its way through a column of water filling the four-and-one-half inch pipe the full distance. In none of the other oil wells drilled there has gas been found below the marsh gas depth and in the rock, as in this instance. Further drilling is to be continued.

—Frank Robinson is in jail in New Albany on a charge which, had it been preferred in some parts of the country, would be sufficient to excite the community to violence. During the temporary absence of her mother, Robinson enticed the 5-year-old daughter of Charles Brewer to his room and there attempted to outrage her. The child's mother, attracted by her screams approached, and Robinson fled. He was arrested and logded in jail. The greatest indignation exists in consequence of the crime.

—The Monon Railroad narrowly escaped a terrible accident the other night. Between French Lick and Orleans is a trestle 400 feet long and not less than seventy-five feet high. An accommodation train was just entering on this structure when it was noticed that the freight car that was just ahead of the passenger coach had jumped from the track and in this condition, jumping along on the rails, it ran for fifty feet or more. There were fifteen passengers in the car, and it is not necessary to state that they were almost frightened to death, as the car was liable to be dashed to the ground, seventy-five feet below, at any moment. It was with difficulty that several passengers were kept from jumping to the ground. No one was injured.

—Wm. Wiseman, farmer near Corydon, dropped dead while planting fruit trees.

—Michigan City's quite confident its future as a manufacturing City is now established on a sound foundation.

—The superintendent of the Montgomery County schools has divided the Board of Education into two separate bodies. One is composed of the several township trustees, and the other of the town and city school trustees. This is done because the interests of the country and town schools are not identical.

—Mrs. Hooker, Elkhart, known to fame as the woman who applied for a pension, claiming to have served clear through the late war, turns out to be a fraud.

—Thirty Wabash citizens have commenced suit against the Indiana Steel Company for damages because of violation of their contract to erect their plant in that city.

—The body of a plasterer named Slater was found on the tracks of the Chicago and Indiana Coal Railroad, near Rockwell. The man was evidently struck by a passing train.

A NEW TRAIN

To the Pacific Coast, equipped with Pullman and Colonist Sleepers, has just been placed in service by the Northern Pacific Railroad, leaving St. Paul every morning at 9:00 o'clock. The "Fast Train" via the Wisconsin Central Lines, composed of Pullman Vestibuled Drawing Room Sleepers, Dining Cars, and Coaches of latest design, leaving Chicago daily at 5:00 p. m., makes close connection in the Union Depot, St. Paul, with this train, affording excellent service to all points West.

In addition to this the Wisconsin Central and Northern Pacific Lines run Pullman Vestibuled and Tourist Sleepers without change between Chicago and Tacoma, Wash., and Portland, Ore., on train leaving Chicago via the Wisconsin Central daily at 10:45 p. m., and St. Paul via the Northern Pacific at 4:15 p. m.

For tickets, etc., apply to George K. Thompson, City Passenger and Ticket Agent, 205 Clark St., or to F. J. Eddy, Depot Ticket Agent, Grand Central Passenger Station, corner Harrison St. and Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill.

A Traveling Corpse.

Ten years ago a Detroit man was killed in Rio de Janeiro. His body was embalmed and placed in a vault. Two years afterward the remains were shipped to Gowanus, N. Y., and buried in a cemetery. In 1886 they were taken up and expressed to Santa Barbara, Cal., and the other day the body was sent thence to Quebec.

GUS. A. DUBOIS, a well-known resident of St. Louis, says: "I have used several bottles of Prickly Ash Bitters for biliousness and malarial troubles, so prevalent in this climate, and heartily recommend it to all afflicted in a like manner. It is the best remedy I ever used."

Cost of Koch's Lymph.

The druggist firm of Boston that has Dr. Koch's lymph to sell to private physicians puts it up in boxes of twenty bulbs, each containing one, two, three, or five milligrammes of the dilution, according to order, and charges for the one-milligramme bulbs $2 a box or 20 cents a bulb. That does not seem high, but when it is remembered that the dilution is in volume 100 to one of the original material, it seems frightfully exorbitant; that is, for the undiluted lymph the charge is $2 a drop.

"BEFORE you marry have where to tarry." And when you have secured a house buy some SAPOLIO to keep it clean. Everybody praises it.

Dynograph Car.

The dynograph car is one of the most wonderful inventions in railway work. It has only to be rolled over a track to indicate every imperfection in the rails, whether it be spread rail, open joints, or defective iron. Suitable markings are left on the track, according to the fault to be denoted, so that the trackman who follows in the wake of the car has a large proportion of his labor saved, and can see at a glance where his repairs or alterations must begin.

Too Cruel.

He was the nephew of his uncle, just home from Europe for a visit. At dinner he said languidly:

"Ah've heard, don't you know, that celery isn't healthy—ah, has the twyphoid in it, you know."

His uncle looked at him savagely for a moment, then handed him the celery.

"Have some?" he said, and there was a world of meaning in the words.—Detroit Free Press.

Nothing Else Will Do It.

We have volumes of evidence to prove that S. S. S. is the only permanent cure for contagious Blood Taint.

I suffered for five years with the worst form of blood poison, during which time I was attended by the best physicians I could find, and tried numbers of proprietary medicines without any beneficial results. I continued to grow worse all this time, until my whole system was destroyed by the vile disease, my tongue and throat having great holes caused by it. I then commenced taking Swift's Specific (S.S.S.), and in a few months I was entirely cured, and to this great medicine do I attribute my recovery. This was over two years ago, and I have had no return or any effects of the disease since, and my skin is to-day as smooth as anybody's.—William Sowers, Covington, O.

PRICKLY ASH BITTERS

One of the most important organs of the human body is the LIVER. When it fails to properly perform its functions the entire system becomes deranged. The BRAIN, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS, all refuse to perform their work. DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, RHEUMATISM, KIDNEY DISEASE, etc., are the results, unless something is done to assist Nature in throwing off the impurities caused by the inaction of a TORPID LIVER. This assistance so necessary will be found in

Prickly Ash Bitters!

It acts directly on the LIVER, STOMACH and KIDNEYS, and by its mild and cathartic effect and general tonic qualities restores these organs to a sound, healthy condition, and cures all diseases arising from these causes. It PURIFIES THE BLOOD, tones up the system, and restores perfect health. If your druggist does not keep it ask him to order it for you. Send 2c stamp for copy of "THE HORSE TRAINER," published by us.

Consultation and examination free and strictly confidential in the private parlors of the

SWINEFORD HOUSE,

From 1 to 6 p. m. ONE DAY ONLY.

DR. D. O. FRUTH,
Celebrated Surgeon.

DR. A. C. FRUTH,
Examining Physician.

—OF THE—

Fruth Medical and Surgical Institute.

Permanently established and incorporated under the laws of the state of Ill., with a capital stock of $100,000, for the scientific and successful treatment of all forms of Chronic and Sexual Diseases, Catarrh, Asthma, Stomach, Kidney, Bladder, Nervous and Spinal Diseases of Men and Women.

Ably assisted by a full staff of eminent physicians and surgeons for every department of medicine and surgery.

Female Diseases positively cured by a never failing method. A home treatment entirely harmless and easily applied. Consultation free and strictly confidential.

Dr Fruth after years of experience has perfected the most infallible method of curing Vital drain in Urine. Nocturnal losses, Impaired Memory, Weak Back, Melancholy, Want of Energy, Premature decline of the Manly Powers if consulted, idiocy, insanity, falling fits, or total impotency results. These terrible disorders arising from ruinous practices of youth, blighting the most radiant hopes, unfitting patients for study society or marriage, annually sweeping to an untimely grave thousands of young men of brilliant intellect and exalted talent.

Piles Cured without pain, knife or cautery.

Marriage. Married persons or young men contemplating marriage, aware of physical weakness, loss of procreative powers, impotency or other disqualification, speedily restored.

Epilepsy positively cured by our new and never failing Hospital treatment.

Kidney and Bladder Diseases. Bright's Disease, Diabetes and kindred maladies treated and cures effected in thousands of cases that had been pronounced beyond hope.

Private Diseases—Blood Poison, Syphillis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Stricture, Hydrocele, Varicocele, Loss of Sexual Power and all diseases of the genito-urinary organs speedily and permanently cured. No risks incurred. Consultation free and strictly confidential. Medicine sent free from observation to all parts of the United States.

Catarrh Cured.—Catarrhal affections of the nose, throat, lungs, and stomach, bronchitis, asthma, consumption and dyspepsia, successfully treated by the most recent and scientific methods which a vast hospital experience has proved worthy of confidence. We desire no better proof of success than the testimonials on file at the institute, of thousands of helpless cases that have been restored to health and happiness.

Free Examination of the Urine. Each person applying for medical treatment should send or bring an ounce of their urine, which will receive a careful chemical and microscopical examination.

Wonderful Cures Perfected in old cases which have been neglected or unskillfully treated. No experiments or failures. Parties treated by mail and express, but where possible, personal consultation is preferred. Curable cases guaranteed.

☞ Cases and Correspondence confidential. Treatment sent C. O. D. to any part of the U. S. List of 130 questions free. Address with postage, Dr. D. O. FRUTH, 80 East Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Bids for County Printing.

As the Dispatch published at this place has seen fit to open up a controversy as to the county printing, and in doing so has misrepresented the action of the Board in that matter, the following statement is published by authority. The figures are furnished by the auditor, from the records of the Board in his office and are correct. There are four sets of bids; that of Burford, in the first column, of the Sentinel, in the next, then the Journal, and lastly, that of the Dispatch. From these figures it will be seen that the Dispatch's bid instead of being the lowest was bigger than any others. Believing the truth will harm no one, and being anxious that the public shall know every step the Board has taken, this statement is submitted with the hope that every taxpayer in the county will take the time to study it carefully. And if that is done, no one can fail to see that we accepted the lowest bid.

JOHN HOFFELDER, Pres. Board.

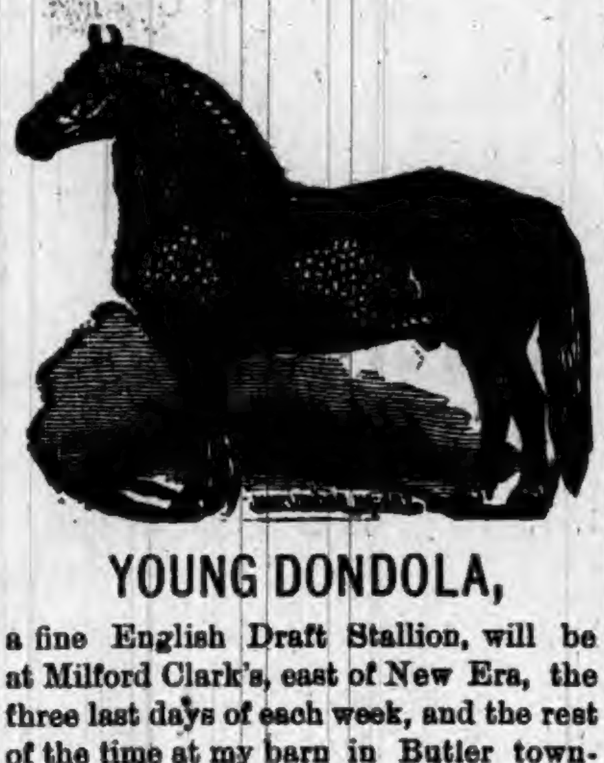
NOTE.—It will be seen that some numbers are omitted from the above list. The reason is, they were articles not used in this county, and therefore, no bids were made for them.



YOUNG DONDOLA,

a fine English Draft Stallion, will be at Milford Clark's, east of New Era, the three last days of each week, and the rest of the time at my barn in Butler township.

FLYING CLOUD,

a fine trotting horse will be at my barn only.

JACK.

BILLY WONDER is a large, well-built Jack, 8 years old. Will be at my place all the season. This is, perhaps, the only chance of the kind in the county. Farmers wishing good mules should bear this in mind.

TERMS:—To insure sucking colt, $8, being the same for each of the animals named above. Care will be taken to prevent accident, but I will not be responsible for any that may occur.

SAMUEL BRICKER, Owner.

Farmers.—Your Timber.

We want some of your timber suitable for our hub and handle factory. Such things as these:

Elm butts, 4 to 14 inches in diameter.

Hickory and ash butts, 5 inches and upward.

Timber for handles, etc. For particulars call at the Hub and Handle factory, south of Wabash station, foot of Main street, Auburn, Indiana. tf

Encyclopedia Britannica.

This great work is becoming more popular every day, and more and more interesting to our people. It is the leading encyclopedia of the English-speaking world. Business men, scholars, students, ministers, lawyers, the members of literary clubs and societies, all feel the urgent need of some complete work of this kind, on which they can rely for correct information, and to which they can turn at once for ready information on any subject. It saves a vast amount of valuable time and mental wear, and is becoming as much a necessity in the family circle almost, as a sewing machine. This work will be shown to our people in a week or two, and agents will actively canvass for its sale. We throw out this brief statement, so they may be thinking about it, and getting ready to buy, if they need such a work. Payments will be made light and easy, on the installment plan, and it is not likely, so favorable an opportunity will occur again. Let us think it over.

TWO YEARS AT REST.

The following lines have been written in memory of Miss Bertha E. Maurer, who died March 29th, 1889:

Two years our daughter, you've been at rest,
The thoughts flash o'er our minds thick and fast;
To-day thou art in that land of the blest,
Now done with cares and sorrows that have passed.

Your soul back to its maker has been taken,
To mingle with the happy spirits on high,
You did from death on earth to glory awaken,
Where bright angels and Jesus are nigh.

Have you been happy in that haven of rest,
Have white-robed angels welcom'd you there?
Are you looking with tearful eyes on our sporting jest,
About those realms so bright and fair?

Dearest daughter, we would not wish thee back to this world again,
To suffer the pangs of disease and death.
But will submit all to God's own gracious plan,
Knowing that life at best is but a passing breath.

For ages you'll enjoy the rich glories above,
While we must gaze wistfully and in vain,
To the shore where all is faith, meekness and love,
And be brought back to earth, its cares and its pain.

Live on in those celestial realms till the great eternal day,
When the world shall be judged for the deeds it has done.
And we'll live on earth till we by death are called away,
And the home circle now broken, will be reunited forever in ONE.

By L. B. Fretz,

The Public Printing.

We publish this week a full statement of the bids for public printing in last year's contract. It will be seen that the lowest bid was accepted, as far as is possible to know from any bid. But a good deal of this work can be done at home, and ought to be done at home. This, the commissioners propose to provide for and give the home printers a chance. We believe they understand the matter now fully, and will arrange to save home interests whenever it can be done, and the county be as well served. And we believe they will do the county a service by keeping as much work of all kinds at home as they can. And we also believe the Board justified in paying even a little more to home industry than to outside parties. No doubt they have at heart the county's interest at all times, and that this will always be uppermost in their minds, no matter, who gets the patronage in this or that department. The commissioners express themselves willing to have the public scrutinize their acts, and ask them to look over this list of prices and see that they took the lowest bid, and this they felt was a duty they owed to the county, to do. Had any other bid appeared the lowest, no doubt that one would have been accepted. The Dispatch had charged them with wrong doing, and they now give to the public the entire matter. This statement will fully exonerate them and set them right before the people.

Meeting of the Council.

Monday evening was the regular meeting, but they began with only three present, Harter, Lanning and Sheffer. Lanning was made chairman pro tem. Later, Dr. Matheny came, and afterwards, Mr. Hartman the board's attorney. Several bills were allowed including one for $76.65 an assessment, on the Waggoner ditch. This was understood to be the last full assessment, though there will likely be a partial one to clean up the last of it. It was decided, that the board would go over into McIntyre's Addition to see about some trouble caused by a ditch over-flowing. Decided also to push the completion of the walk along the south side of West Ninth street, along the old Wyllis Griswold lots. The ordinance to prevent boys from using bean shooters and such dangerous things, was ordered to be enforced and the boys must now look out. A sidewalk along the west side of Center street. Gas Addition for benefit of Frank Harris and other property owners, must be built. The list of allowances for the year and the statement showing the town's financial condition was read by Clerk Grund, fully discussed and then adopted. The list is published this week, for the information of the people. Mr. Campbell, of the Dispatch, brought up the matter of changing the town government into a city government. It was decided to add a "for" and "against" this plan, to the tickets to be voted May 4, and let the people say freely which plan they would prefer. Both papers agreed to add these two lines to the published ticket without extra charge, so it will cost the people nothing to say "for" or "against." The matter of oppointing inspectors and judges of the election was left till Friday evening, to which date, the board adjourned.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

A new and admirable portrait of the Hon. James G. Blaine appears on the front page of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for May, which contains a notable illustrated article by T. C. Crawford, the well-known Washington correspondent, setting forth officially Secretary Blaine's views, labors and plans upon the great subject of commercial Reciprocity between the United States and Latin America. A new rerial story entitled "John Maggs, Barbarian," by Scott Campbell, begins in this number of the magazine, which also contains amongst its numerous illustrated articles; "Going Abroad," by Frederick S. Daniel; "A May Day in Japan," by Norma Lorimer; "The Bamboo," by P. Hordern; "The Sandwich Islands and their Volcanoes," by Edward Spring; "The Wonderful Fireboat New Yorker," by Frederick M. Dey; "A Robin Paper," by Nelly Hart Woodworth; "Elephant Sport in Ceylon," by MacMahon Challinor; and "The Ocean Telegraph Cables of the World"; together with several short stories and poems by Joel Benton, Douglas Sladen, and others.

Central Michigan Farms.

In another column C. M. C. Cook of Saginaw, Mich., offers for sale at very low prices and on easy terms, 20,000 acres of good unimproved farming lands in Isabella County, geographically described as the center county of Michigan. Farms in Central Michigan are positively first-rate, as proven by both State and United States agricultural reports. In yield and value of crops, per acre, they exceed Southern Michigan, Indiana and Illinois. Our readers are thus afforded an excellent opportunity to purchase good farming property cheap.

Great Stock Man.

A reliable stock dealer of Missouri, Mr. A. M. Fisher, writes, and says that one dollar bottle of Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup taken in time cured him of a very annoying cough and pains in the chest, bordering on lung fever. He says: "I think it is the best cough syrup in the world and can recommend it to all that have occasion to use a medicine for coughs and colds, and I shall always keep a bottle in the house.

Resp. Yours,
A. M. FISHER.

A man at Crawfordsville applied to the township trustee for sufficient money with which to procure a marriage license.

Take One at Night.

One dose of Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup taken in the evening before retiring will give you a good nights' rest. It is guaranteed to cure any cough, will relieve you quicker than any other and very pleasant to take. If you have never used this remedy ask your druggist for Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup the next time you have occasion to use a cough medicine and you will be satisfied. Sold by F. E. Davenport.

Height of Cruelty.

Nervous women seldom receive the sympathy they deserve. While often the pictures of health, they are constantly ailing. To withhold sympathy from these unfortunates is the height of cruelty. They have a weak heart, causing shortness of breath, fluttering, pain in side, weak and hungry spells, and finally swelling of ankles, oppresions, choking, smothering and dropsy. Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is just the thing for them. For their nervousness, headache, weakness, etc., his Restorative Nervine is unequaled. Fine treatise on "Heart and Nervous Diseases" and marvelous testimonials free. Sold and guarranteed by F. E. Davenport. 3

One of the first instances of practical joking known to history was when Joseph was sold by his brethren.

A Mystery Explained.

The papers contain frequent notices of rich, pretty and educated girls eloping with negroes, tramps and coachmen. The well-known specialist, Dr. Franklin Miles, says all such girls are more or less hysterical, nervous, very impulsive, unbalanced; usually subject to headache, neuralgia, sleeplessness, immoderate crying or laughing. These show a weak nervous system for which there is no remedy equal to Restorative Nervine. Trial bottles and fine book, containing many marvelous cures, free at F. E. Davenport's who also sells and guarantees Dr. Miles' celebrated New Heart Cure, the finest of heart tonics. Cures fluttering, short breath, etc. 3

All pavements are more or less faulty, but some are not asphalty's others.

He "Do you object to my calling?" She "Oh, no. What worries me is that you manage to find me at home."

Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shephard, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely, Sold by Robbins & McCord 3

The Lord used but one pattern for all men but he cut the majority of them smaller than the pattern.

Now Try This.

It will cost you nothing and will surely do you good, if you have a cough, cold, or any trouble with throat, chest or lungs. Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, is guaranteed to give relief, or money will be paid back. Sufferers from La Grippe found it just the thing and under its use had a speedy and perfect recovery. Try a sample bottle at our expense and learn for yourself just how good a thing it is. Trial bottle free at Robbins & McCord's drug store. Large size 50c and $1.00. 3

WATERLOO.

Improvements going on everywhere.

Mrs. Myrtle, of Chicago, is visiting here.

Dr. Yeagy went to Ft. Wayne Monday morning.

Mrs. J. M. Waterman drove to Auburn Tuesday.

A. N. Wilson of Auburn, was over here last week.

Every body is cleaning house and making garden.

Mrs. Loudy is visiting her parents at Wauseon, Ohio.

Mr. Casebeer of Auburn, was here a few days since.

Last week B. B. Sheffer of Kendallville, was in our town.

G. W. Weamer and Mr. Gregg of Auburn, were up here Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Metevier, of Bluffton, visited their friends here over Sunday.

Isaac Speer is still in poor health and not able to attend to business very much

Tuesday a representative from Ligonier, of the carriage works there, was in our town.

R. M. Lockhart has been filling and sodding the grounds in his yard and about his residence.

Judge McClellan's familiar face was seen in town Tuesday. We believe he is attending to some business matters here.

Mrs. Samuel Goodwin is building a residence adjoining Mrs. Shull's property on Maple street on same side, and east.

Mrs. H. E. Braun attended the district meeting of the M. E. church at Elkhart Tuesday and Wednesday as a delegate from here.

Last week Thursday and Friday, Mr. Sawvel county treasurer, was in town to collect taxes. He seemed to find everybody ready for him.

The latter part of this week Bishop J. H. Becker of the U. B. church will be in Waterloo over Sunday. He will preach in the morning at that church.

Rev. Keller went to Bryan, O. Tuesday to assist in making arraugements for building a U. B. church there this spring. The same denomination will also build a new church the coming summer at Hicksville and Pleasant Lake.

Mrs. E. Dennison died Friday afternoon and was buried Sunday. Rev. J. M. DeWeese conducted the funeral services at 2 o'clock at the M. E. church. She was one of the old settlers, and lived in the vicinity of Waterloo. J. A. Dennison a business man here is a son of Mrs. D.

BUTLER.

Dr. Fanning is about to remove to his newly purchased residence on Oak street.

John Tyson went to Kalamazoo, Mich., last week to visit his son's family in their affliction.

The roads have so far improved as to enable our people to get in or out of town without climbing the fences.

We were very much surprised last week to see one of our townsmen actually mowing his yard. The first time we remember of having seen grass cut in April.

John Wike, an old gentlemen who once lived in this vicinity, and whom our people supposed had died ten years ago was on our streets last week hale and robust as ever.

A little son of Samuel Tyson now living at Kalamazoo, was so seriously mangled by the cars at that place last week, as to cause his death.

The contest in the coming corporation election is going to be over the marshalship. The republicans have a clean cut majority, of perhaps a hundred votes, but the democrats have carried away this plum for a number of years from causes that are not easy to explain. This year a certain element of the party assisted a number of democrats that took part in the caucus stole a march on the party and nominated an ex-saloon keeper for that office. As appearances now indicate the democrats will re-elect McMorgan by the largest majority he ever had.

Died at his home, one mile south of Butler, on April 20, 1891, in the 53 year of his age, Solomon Bordner.

Deceased was born in Chippewa, Wayne county, Ohio, Feb. 6, 1839. His parents died while he was small, and he then went to live with his brother-in-law, John Shaffer. He received his early education near Doylestown, Ohio. Mr. Bordner came to Indiana about 1858, where he became acquainted with and married Elizabeth Willard, March 3, 1861. Four children were born to them, two sons, and his wife survive him. Mr. Bordner has lived at his present residence many years and was well and favorably known by all our business community, as a social, honest, well meaning man. The writer has known him from a boy and often visited him at his home, always receiving a pleasant and hearty welcome. His domestic life seemed most pleasant. His death was caused from heart disease from which he had long been a sufferer and was very sudden, going to bed Sunday night feeling quite well, and quietly going to sleep he did not waken again. His funeral took place from his residence, the road to town being next to impassable, conducted by Rev. Diffenbach of the Lutheran church.

LARGE FOREST FIRES RAGING IN NEW JERSEY.

An Indiana Town Terrorized—More Warlike News—Chicago Gamblers Knocked Out—The President Takes an Ocean Excursion.

THROUGH THE GOLDEN GATE.

Harrison Given an Excursion Out to Sea—Brilliant Marine Display in San Francisco Bay.

A special from San Francisco, dated April 30, says: The morning of President Harrison's marine excursion opened with a fog enveloping the shores of the bay, but as the forenoon wore on it lifted, and left the harbor sparkling in sunlight. Notwithstanding the announcement that the invitations to accompany the President were limited to 500 in number, the committee having charge of the excursion were besieged with applications from fully 5,000 persons who, being unable to secure coveted billets, crowded the steamers Ukiau and Garden City and numerous smaller craft, which dotted the bay, so that at the hour of the President's embarkation over ten thousand persons had left the shore to accompany him on the trip. At 10:30 o'clock the Pueblo steamed out into the bay from Broadway wharf, and was soon followed by the warship Charleston, the Government steamers Rush and Marono, carrying the Federal officials, and the revenue cutters, Rush and Corwin, with the custom house officials. As the Pueblo passed these vessels, which had formed line about three hundred yards apart, a salute was fired and the band, which had been stationed on the Pueblo, played a patriotic air. After the Government vessels had swung into line other steamers and craft conveying unofficial excursionists made haste to follow, and with the white sails of the yachts skimming the scene, the pageant, from the marine point of view has never been excelled on the bay of San Francisco. The route followed by the Pueblo extended from the Broadway wharf along the northwest to Whistling buoy, ten miles out to sea, stopping to view the forts and military sites, which greeted the President with a salute of cannon as the vessels passed.

A Town Terrorized.

Haughville, a suburb of Indianapolis, has been terrorized by a gang of toughs. The other morning a mob of 100 citizens quietly assembled, broke in the jail and took out John Abbott, colored who had been arrested for highway robbery. They placed a rope around his neck and dragged him to the woods, a mile west of town. Abbott denied having committed the robbery and the mob began to swing him up. Cooler counsels prevailed and he was tied up to a tree and given fifty lashes on the bare back, after which he confessed that his brother and himself were the guilty ones. Abbott was then returned to jail. The citizens of Haughville have ordered all the worthless negroes from their town. A score of negroes from Bucktown drove out to Haughville for the purpose of releasing the negroes under arrest, but were met by citizens who persuaded them to leave under pressure of Winchesters.

Forest Fires.

Millville (N. J.) special: The biggest forest fire that this section has known for years, is raging about six miles southwest of this city and much valuable standing timber has been destroyed. The fire started from an engine near Dividing Creek station and has burned a swath about six miles long and about four miles wide so far It was supposed to be under control, but broke out afresh and is still burning fiercely. The fire is within three miles of Mauricetown. The little hamlet of Baileytown is completely surrounded by fire and some anxiety is felt for its safety. The brisk winds prevailing have fanned the flames, and columns of smoke are ascending high in the heavens and can be plainly seen in this city. The damage cannot be estimated at this time.

Gamblers Knocked Out.

Mayor Washburne's first official act on entering upon his duties as Mayor of Chicago was to issue an order to the police department to close up every gambling house in the city. The following order was given to Chief Marsh, who has been requested to remain in office for a few days until the force at headquarters is placed in something like running order:

Close up every gambling house in the city. Use all the men necessary.

The chief immediately enforced the order, and as a result every gambling house in Chicago is closed.

More Warlike News.

A special from the City of Mexico says exciting news may be expected as soon as Gen. Ezeta takes command of the Salvadorian force of the Guatemalian frontier. The Guatemalians are in a bad temper because the General is going to the frontier. These frictions will undoubtedly produce war, for which the leaders of both powers are thirsting, though the people are tired of war, and the overthrow of the governments of Barrillas and Ezeta may be the result.

Devine Touched a Live Wire.

John Devine, a lineman, while working on a pole on Fourth Avenue, near Twenty-First street, New York, touched a live wire and fell to the ground, fracturing his skull. A fellow workman went to Devine's assistance and was himself severely shocked. Devine died in the street.

Business Paralyzed.

A general strike of all the building trades is on at Zanesville, Ohio, and business is paralyzed.

This Duel Was Fatal.

A duel occurred at Baltimore between "Nick" Flood, son of Major John H. Flood, a prominent tobacconist of that city, and Charlie Ross, a sporting man, in which Ross killed Flood, and was himself seriously wounded in the face and chest. The duel was the result of a quarrel over cards.

China Objects to Blair.

The Chinese Government has notified the Government of the United States through the Department of State, of its unwillingness to receive Hon. Henry W. Blair as our Minister to China.

Grant's Monument.

Ground has been broken, in the presence of thousands of people, at Riverside Park, New York, for an imposing monument to Gen. Grant. Charles H. Freeman, department commander of the G. A. R. for the State of New York, presided and turned the first spade of earth. Admiral Braine and staff were also present. There was no marching. The United States steamer "Yantic," per order of Secretary Tracy, lay opposite the tomb, and fired a salute from her guns. Mrs. Sartoris and others of Grant's family were present. The Marine Band played the overture, and Rev. Dr. Clark Wright then led in prayer, after which the "Star Spangled Banner" was sung by the audience. Gen. Horace Porter delivered an oration, whereupon "America" was sung, followed by the laying of the corner-stone and benediction by the chaplain.

ROME SHAKEN.

A Terrific Explosion of a Powder Magazine in the Eternal City.

A special from Rome says: The powder magazine at the fort at Pozzo Pantaleo exploded, completely demolishing the fort, killing five peasants who were in the vicinity and seriously injuring hundreds of others. The fort was four kilometers from Rome, but the explosion shook the city to its center. The great cupola surrounding the Parliament building was mashed to pieces and the surrounding streets strewn with its debris. The doors of offices and private residences were burst open by the terrific concussion and heavy articles of furniture were overturned. Many of the people whom the early hour found still asleep were thrown from their beds and dashed violently upon the floors of their apartments. Confusion and terror was everywhere. Men looked into each other's faces only to find reflected there the fear which possessed themselves. Women praying aloud, others hurrying with their children to find refuge from an unknown danger, and still others weeping hysterically and aimlessly wringing their hands were met at every corner. When the city had quieted down and an investigation had been had it was found that enormous damage had been done to the fort, which was filled with soldiers a few moments before the explosion occurred. Fortunately the commandant heard the warning rumble and at once ordered the men to vacate the building. This was promptly done and a terrible disaster was thus averted.

"Jack, the Ripper."

New York special: "Jack, the Ripper" is believed by the police to have at last come to this city. In the East River Hotel, the body of a wretched woman was found with her abdomen horribly cut and her bowels protruding. Her name is not known. The resort in which her body was found is one of the lowest in the city. It is located on the southwest corner of Catherine Slip and Market streets. The woman was known about the neighborhood as one of the half drunken creatures who hang about the low resorts of Water street and the Riverside. Her abdomen had been fairly ripped open with a dull, broken table knife that lay in the pool of blood. The viscera had been cut, and from appearances part was missing. The woman's head was bandaged. A cloth had been tied about her neck and face. On the woman's back, near the base of the spine, the mark of a cross had been made with the knife. Similar marks were found on the bodies of London victims of "Jack the Ripper."

A Terrible Tragedy.

Lorenzo Coleman, a lunatic, son of 'Squire Richard Coleman, of Steubenville, Ohio, secured a shot gun and fired from the bed-room window to the garden, ten feet distant, where his mother and sister Alice were working. The first shot struck his sister about the head, shoulders and neck and three stray shots struck his mother. George Coleman a hired man, was attracted to the scene and went to pick up Alice, when the lunatic fired a second shot, taking effect in Coleman's head, face and shoulders. The lunatic was locked up. He was formerly a school teacher. His mind became unsettled and he was committed to the insane asylum at Columbus, but released as incurable in 1888. His sister and the hired man were riddled with shot and are not expected to recover. His father is well-to-do and a prominent farmer. The would-be murderer is perfectly unconscious of the affair.

Death in the Bottle.

Denver special: Some months ago Mrs. Josephine B. Barnaby, widow of J. B. Barnaby, a millionaire merchant, of Providence, R. I., took a trip to California for her health. Mrs. G. S. Warrell, wife of a prominent Denver real estate dealer, accompanied her. On their return, April 19, Mrs. Barnaby found a package postmarked from Boston, which arrived during her absence. It contained a small flask of whisky, with this inscription: "With best wishes, accept this fine old whisky from your friends in the woods." A few days later, when fatigued, both drank some of the liquid. From that time both ladies suffered terrible agonies, Mrs. Barnaby slowly sinking under the effects of the terrible internal burning of the poison which the bottle was afterward found to contain. Mrs. Barnaby died, and Mrs. Warrell is not expected to live. The motive for the crime is a mystery.

Advance Proofs.

Considerable excitement has been caused at the government printing office and the department of justice by the fact that advance proofs of Attorney General Miller's argument in the Behring Sea case were by some unknown means secured from the printing office and generously offered for sale. Solicitor General Taft said that the premature publication of the brief would simply be annoying but nothing more. It was a common thing for counsel to make mutual exchanges and there was nothing of a secret nature in connection with this argument. It was evident that a leak exists somewhere and he was anxious to discover whereabouts so that it might be stopped before something really important was published too soon. Public Printer Palmer will investigate the matter thoroughly.

Murderous Assault.

While Chief of Police Wilkinson, of Fort Wayne, was passing the saloon of John Gronendyke, a disturbance arose between the proprietor and a lady customer, which he entered to quell, and was attacked by Gronendyke and knocked down and badly beaten over the head with a billiard cue and a beer glass. Gronendyke drew a revolver and was about to put a ball into the prostrate policeman, when Officer Stoll burst in the door, and, after mauling Gronendyke over the head with his mace, took him to the police station. He was held to answer a charge of assault with intent to kill in the sum of $3,000.

A Gang of Robbers.

Attalia special: A gang of five white robbers broke open several stores and terrorized the community by shooting at random. After committing the robbery they fled, pursued by a posse of officers and citizens, and half a mile from town the robbers stopped and defied arrest. The posse surrounded them and a pitched battle followed. J. S. Wilson, Alderman of Attalia, was fatally wounded, and William Bentley, one of the robbers, is dying, and all the gang are arrested except two, Robert Bentley and Kayle Lattrell. It is believed they are parties who wrecked the Alabama and Great Southern train near Springville.

The Standard Thwarted.

Persons interested in the Standard Oil Company, who a month ago organized a company to lay an oil pipe line from Lima, Ohio, to Chicago, have been notified by the Erie Railroad management, operating the Chicago and Erie Railroad, that they will not be permitted to parallel the present pipe line laid in the Chicago and Erie right-of-way. The reason assigned is that the oil escaping from leaks endangers the company's property, and is so offensive that the passenger business is injured. The railroad company's action entails great additional expense upon the pipe line people.

Horrible Accident.

A frightful accident occurred at the residence of John Conrad near Fort Washington, Pa., when two persons were burned to death and a third fatally injured. It was the wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad, and the family was gathered around the table when a hanging lamp fell, spilling burning oil over the party. Mrs. Conrad and her daughter, Florence, were burned to death and Mary, another daughter, was seriously burned about the body. Mr Conrad was also burned about the hands in attempting to save his wife and daughters.

The Kaiser is Scared.

The Kaiser, says a Berlin dispatch, has ordered the Berlin garrison to be kept under arms on the 1st of May and will assume personal direction of the troops for that day. While all is apparently quiet, the Government acts as if in possession of important revelations as to the first of next month, and that the socialists are preparing for signal demonstrations in the leading cities of Germany. The police have been ordered to prevent the carrying of mottoes insulting to the sovereign or calculated to provoke disorder.

Sullivan and Slavin.

Charlie Johnson, the sporting man who has backed John L. Sullivan in more than one of his pugilistic encounters, said in reference to Slavin's expressed desire to meet Sullivan in the ring: "If Slavin is so anxious to meet Sullivan I am willing to back Sully for $20,000, but not a dollar less, as he would have to break a theatrical contract which has a year and a half to run; besides Sullivan has everything to lose and nothing to gain. If Slavin wants to fight he will have to put up $20,000 or nothing.

The Appointment Stanley Didn't Get.

According to a Brussels correspondent King Leopold did intend to appoint Henry M. Stanley Governor of the Congo State, it having been represented to him that the appointment would obtain the approval of the American Senate to the Brussels conference. The King was afterward induced by English influences to give up the idea, and it is also alleged that he has received assurances from America that satisfy him that America's approval will not be withheld.

Completely Paralyzed.

The entire system of the Detroit City Railway Company is paralyzed. The only cars out are two on the Woodward avenue line. Nine hundred stove moulders have quit work and joined the strikers to prevent the running of cars. Tracks were torn up on three lines, and obstructions have been placed on every line. The men the company had hired to take strikers' places refuse to take out cars. The police are tired out, and serious trouble is likely to ensue.

Tragedy in a Jail.

A tragedy occurred at the county jail at Monroe, Mich. As Turnkey Tehrer entered the cell of two colored tramps, who were awaiting trial for attempted burglary, to remove their breakfast dishes, he was set upon and a desperate attempt made to secure his keys, and thus escape. The officer in the fight shot both men. One was killed instantly and the other will die.

A Brave Girl.

A thief named Thomas attemped to rob the residence of a man named Branner, near Raleigh Court House, W. Va., a few nights ago, during the absence of all the family except Branner's daughter, aged 17. As he broke through the windows the girl brained him with an axe, after which she fainted and is very ill from fright.

A Famous Indian Dead.

Poncho, the famous Piute Indian who piloted Gen. Fremont across the Sierra Nevada Mountains, died at Pyramid Reservation, Cal. Poncho was a Mexican veteran and wore a bronze medal furnished by the Government. He served under Gen. Fremont in California.

Fight With Tramps.

A gang of desperate tramps entered a coach while the Vandalia south-bound train was stopping at the junction, near Crawfordsville, Ind., and tried to hold up the passengers. A fierce battle resulted and they were driven off.

The May Day Strike Postponed.

A Columbus, Ohio, special says: At the United Mine Workers' convention in this city, it was unanimously decided to postpone the date when the eight-hour working day would be established.

The Strike is Spreading.

The eight-hour trouble in Pittsburgh is growing. All the trades are agitating the question, and the indications are growing stronger that May 1 will bring a general cessation of work.

Portugal and England.

London special: It is reported that the Portuguese government asked that the modus vivendi in Africa be renewed for a month. Lord Salisbury has not replied.

Escaping Gas Caused a Death.

Escaping gas from a negligently closed jet caused the death of Mamie Burke, a 14-year-old servant girl employed by M. Swartz, of Chicago.

A Staff Appointment.

Mr. Charles D. Tillo, of Fort Wayne, Ind., has been appointed a member of Gov. Hovey's staff, with rank of Major.

FROM GULF TO COAST.

MAGNIFICENT RECEPTIONS TO THE PRESIDENT.

'Mid Roaring of Cannon, Huzzas of Multitudes, and Through Beds of Flowers, the Presidential Party Is Swinging Round the Circle.

Uncle Sam, in the person of President Harrison, has been making a few social calls upon some of his tenants. When the Presidential party reached Chattanooga, Tenn., fully 3,000 people were assembled at the station. A salute of thirteen guns was fired as the President descended from the steps of the train in the Union Depot. The pillars of the depot were draped with the national colors, and weaved in evergreens; above the main exit to the street were the words, "Welcome to President Harrison." The reception committee numbered fifty, and was composed of leading citizens and representative colored men.

The party visited Lookout Mountain and, returning, were driven through the principal streets. The business houses along the line of the President's route were handsomely decorated, flags and bunting floating from every window. President Harrison was introduced by Hon. H. Clay Evans, and was greeted with deafening cheers. The President spoke a quarter of an hour. He was followed by Secretaries Wanamaker and Proctor. A reception upon the stand followed, a mass of people passing hurriedly forward to shake hands with Mr. Harrison.

The President during his speech said:

My fellow-citizens, I have greatly enjoyed the opportunity of seeing Chattanooga again. I saw it last as the camp of a great army. Its only industries were military, its stores were munitions of war, its pleasant hill-tops were torn with rifle-pits, its civic population the attendants of an army campaign. I see it to-day a great city, a prosperous city. To-day I see these hill-tops, then bristling with guns, crowned with happy homes; I see these streets, through which the worn veterans of many campaigns then marched, made glad with the presence of happy children. Everything is changed. The wand of an enchantress has touched these hills, and old Lookout, that frowned over the valley from which the plow had been withdrawn, now looks upon the peaceful industries of country life. All things are changed, except that the flag that then floated over Chattanooga floats here still. [Cheers.] It has passed from the hands of the veterans who bore it to victory in battle into the hands of the children, who lift it as an emblem of peace. [Cheers.] Then Chattanooga was war's gateway to the South. Now it is the gateway to peace, commerce and prosperity, [Cheers.] There have been two conquests, one with arms, the other with the gentle influence of peace, and the last is greater than the first. [Cheers.] The first is only great as it made way for that which followed, and now, one again in our devotion to the constitution and the laws, one again in the determination that the severance of the Federal relations of these States shall never again be raised, we have started together upon a career of prosperity and development that has as yet given only the signs of what is to come. I congratulate Tennessee, I congratulate this prosperous city, I congratulate all those who, through this gateway, give and receive the interchanges of friendly commerce that there is being wrought throughout our country, a unification by commerce, a unification by similarity of institutions and habits that shall in time erase every vestige of difference, and shall make us not only in contemplation of the law, but in heart and sympathy, one people. [Cheers.] I thank you for your cordial greeting to-day, and hope for the development of the industries of our country and for the settling of our institutions upon the firm basis of a respect for the laws. In this glad springtime, while the gardens are full of blossoms and the fields give the promise of another harvest, and your homes are full of happy children, let us thank God for what He has wrought for us as a people, and each in our place resolutely maintain the great idea upon which every thing is builded—the rule of the majority constitutionally expressed and the absolute equality of all men before the law. [Cheers.]

Rolling south, the train pulled into Cartersville, Ga., where a great crowd welcomed the party. The President spoke as follows:

My friends, I have had great pleasure to-day in passing over some parts of the old route that I took once before under very different and distressing circumstances, to find how easy it is, when we are all agreed, to travel between Chattanooga and Atlanta. I am glad to see the evidences of prosperity that abound through your country, and I wish you in all your relations every human good. [Cheers.]

At Marietta the party was joined by a Reception Committee from Atlanta, consisting of Mayor Hemphill, Ex-Governor Bullock, Capt. John Milledge, Gen. J. R. Lewis, S. M. Inman, Col. W. L. Calhoun, President of the Confederate Veterans' Association; Col. A. J. West, of Governor Northen's staff, and seventeen members of the City Council. They came from Atlanta in a special train.

At Atlanta, Ga., an accident occurred at the time of the President's arrival that might have resulted in injury to the President and Mrs. Harrison had it happened a few minutes sooner. It resulted from the military salute fired in honor of the President. The cannon used for this service was mounted on a flat car at a siding near the track over which the Presidential car ran. In order to give emphasis to their work the soldiers having charge of the cannon discharged it just as the President's train was passing on an adjoining track.

The concussion was tremendous, and shattered three thick plate-glass window panes in the dining car Coronado, immediately next the seats assigned to the special use of the President and Mrs. Harrison. Luckily these seats were unoccupied at the time. A colored waiter who was standing in the aisle of the car was thrown down by the explosion. He was, however, more frightened than hurt. The Presidential party was at the other end of the train at the time and knew nothing of the accident until informed of it afterward.

When the Presidential train entered Atlanta Governor Northen advanced and received the party. The Governor said:

I am glad to welcome your excellency to the State of Georgia. You will find among us a loyal and hospitable people, and, in their name, I welcome you to the State.

Replying, the President said it gave him great pleasure to visit the Empire State of the South. The Presidential party was then driven around the city.

At the State Capitol the President was given a public reception. At the Executive Mansion, at 9 o'clock, the Presidential party saw the social side of Atlanta life. Here Mrs. Northen had invited about one hundred of Atlanta's leading society ladies to assist her in the reception to the ladies of the party.

The President had a royal reception at Galveston, Texas, and the people turned out en masse. On the arrival of the train a military salute was fired, the city bells were rung, and all the steamers and tugs in the harbor whistled their loudest. The city troops and Masonic and civic organizations were present in force, and all joined in cheering the distinguished visitor in a most enthusiastic manner. The demonstration was a most gratifying one in every respect. A procession was quickly formed, and escorted the President and party from the station to a steamship, on which they made a short trip on the bay for the purpose of inspecting the extensive harbor improvements now in progress.

Returning from the jetties, Capt. Joe Owens, the grand marshal, took charge of the party and placed them in the parade. The President and his party, together with the escort committee that accompanied them from Houston, occupied the first nine carriages, headed by a detachment of twenty-four police officers. Following the first nine carriages were twelve others occupied by the Consular Corps, City Council, County Commissioners, Galveston Deep Water Committee, the Governor's staff, Federal officers, etc. The Grand Army of the Republic post acted as a committee of escort to the President, marching on either side of his carriage, bearing floral emblems and a union jack, which, when seen on shore, indicates the presence of the President of the United States. The rest of the line was composed of militia, Masonic, and other bodies, school children and labor unions. The procession passed over a beautifully decorated route, one feature of which was an immense floral arch, and finally passed in review before the President. The school children threw their flowers at the President's feet as they passed and built a small sized hill in front of the stand.

After the review the President and his party were entertained at supper, during which the President was serenaded. The party then repaired to the hotel balcony, where in the presence of an immense throng of people the President was formally welcomed to the Gulf by Gen. Waul on behalf of the Mayor, who, though present, was too ill to speak. The President returned his thanks in a feeling speech. Addresses were also made by Gov. Hogg and Secretary Rusk. A public reception followed and a fine display of fireworks closed the ceremonies.

From Texas to the Pacific coast the party was greeted at every stopping place by immense and enthusiastic crowds. The presidential train rolled into Los Angeles on time. The party was met at Idaho by Gov. Markham and a delegation of prominent men of the State, who acted as an escort from that point forward.

At Los Angeles the visitors were greeted by a vast crowd and were again snowed under with fruit and flowers. Calla lilies seemed to be the favorite flower, and they were seen on every side. The ceremonies opened with a street parade, in which the United States troops, militia, Grand Army posts, and civic organizations in this vicinity participated. They escorted the President and his party through the streets crowded with enthusiastic people. Hundreds of children lined the sidewalks at one point of the route, and they showered the President with flowers as his carriage passed slowly by. The parade ended at the City Hall, where a covered platform had been erected for the public ceremonies. This platform looked like a tropical garden.

Addresses of welcome were made by Gov. Markham and Mayor Hazard. The President responded in a brief address. Brief speeches were also made by Secretary Rusk and Postmaster General Wanamaker. After the speech-making the President and party proceeded to the Hellenbeck Hotel, where elegant flower-bedecked apartments had been reserved for them. A fine dinner was served at the hotel during which the President was serenaded. In the early evening he went to the pavilion and held a public reception, which was largely attended, and later the President, Secretary Rusk, Postmaster General Wanamaker, and the ladies were entertained at the Union League Club. The President's invitation to the club was on a solid silver card suitably inscribed. The entire city was brilliantly illuminated at night.

Among the floral tributes was a handsome symbol of peace from the native daughters of La Esperanza. The Hon. Luiz E. Torres, Governor of Lower California, and other foreign officials participated in the ceremonies.

The Big General's Salad.

The late Chief Justice Chase's daughter tells this story of a visit to old General Winfield Scott at Cozzens', West Point: "He gave us seats at his own especial table, and was very kind to us, but I was terribly afraid of him. One of his greatest pleasures at the table was to mix the most fiery of salads, which he would send by his own man (who always stood behind his master's chair) with the General's compliments to the favored few. My gastronomic tastes were far from being developed, and the old gentleman's red pepper and mustard nearly killed me. I simply could not eat the burning stuff. Feeling the General's eye upon me, I vainly tried to swallow it, but failed ignominiously, with tears coming into my eyes with the effort. To add to my discomfort and mortification, a voice roared out in a deep tone from the General's throne: 'The little Chase does not like my salad.'"

"The Sea King" Returns.

Among comic opera productions none have more rapidly won favor than "The Sea King." At its first visit to Chicago it was pronounced superior to those other gems, "The Merry Monarch" and "Castles in the Air," and a return engagement will be played at McVicker's new theater, commencing May 3, by Gilmore's superb company. The scenic effects and the costumes in "The Sea King" approach closely to the marvelous.

In May, also, McVicker's will present the New York success, "Blue Jeans." This play—a comedy-drama—abounds in natural realism, and tells a story of life so thrillingly that interest is intense from start to finish. A startling innovation is the introduction of a sawmill in full operation. "Blue Jeans" will be presented with its original New York cast.

Kansas Philosophy.

Men measure common sense by grains, and use the ounce measure for vanity.

Success may hurt a man, but there never was a fellow who was not willing to run the risk.

There is only one way of doing a thing right, but how many ways there are of doing a thing wrong!

The modern Beauty and the Beast: He calls her a beauty before marriage, and she calls him a beast after.

The ignorance of some persons of the world is as great as the ignorance of some worldly people of religion.

A woman is most religious when she is poor; a man seldom begins to think of religion until he has become rich.

The trouble of it is that people do not get well enough acquainted before marriage, and get too well acquainted after.

The man who plays with the devil always gets the worst of it; the devil has nothing to do but bum; that's his business.

It is no compliment to a woman that ten men loved her one year, but it is a compliment to say of her that one man loved her ten years.

If you are going to take a long journey, it is better to travel alone than to take with you a man of doubtful reputation as a companion.

You are told to "watch the corners closely," and you'll get rich. But look at the loafer; he watches the corners all day, and is still poor.

When a man says he does not care what the world thinks, it is usually the case that it happened first that the world did not care what he thought.

Imitation is a graceful way of paying a compliment, but somehow men do not seem to be at all complimented when they see a woman who tries to act like a man.—Atchison Globe.

A FRENCHMAN in the Province of Lorraine is in prison on a curious charge. His brother died and left a will bequeathing France about $800 to buy arms to fight Germany in the next war, and as he was beyond the reach of the law, the Germans arrested his brother as accessory to the crime of sedition and conspiracy.

Stover, South Bend two-wheeled vehicle; David E. Vanhorn, Elkhart, wrench.

—While making an excavation at Mooresville, Floyd County, G. W. Atkins unearthed an old French coin bearing bearing date of 1701. The coin was found three feet under the ground at a place where there had not been an excavation of any kind within the memory of the oldest resident of that vicinity. That part of Indiana was traveled over by the early French settlers going from Vincennes, Ind., to Fort DuQuesne, now Pittsburgh, and the coin is believed to have been buried by one of them.

—The boiler at the excelsior-works of Philip Klein, in the center of Evansville, exploded, causing damage to the amount of $1,000. The boiler itself tore through the building, and it was only stopped by the heavy timbers in the front end. The front plate of the boiler flew across the street and partially demolished two dwellings, the occupants of which had narrow escapes. Other buildings in the vicinity were shaken up by the concussion. James Campbell, the engineer, and Philip Klein, Jr., were badly scalded.

—A fatality occurred near Eaton, in which David H. Edwards, residing near that place, lost his life. Mr. Edwards was in the woods cutting down a tree, which fell and lodged in another close by. The man succeeded in dislodging the tree, but was caught under the trunk and, it is supposed, was almost instantly killed. His little boy, 12 years old, was with him, and seeing his father's helpless condition, and being unable to render any aid himself, ran to the nearest house and told of the accident. They accompanied him with all speed, but found the unfortunate man dead when they arrived. Mr. Edwards was one of Miama County's prominent farmers, 35 years of age, and leaves a wife and three little children.

—At the outbreak of the rebellion Van Rensselaer Morgan was serving in the federal navy, but enlisted in the rebel navy. He owned a residence in Wabash and a fine farm of eight acres north of that place. During the war his property was confiscated by the government and sold at United States Marshal's sale, Miles Morgan bidding in the town property and T. F. Payne becoming owner of the valuable farm. A late decision of the United States Supreme Court holds that property sold under the confiscation act can be held by the purchaser only as long as the parties from whom it was confiscated live, and the heirs of Van Rensselaer Morgan, who died at Washington, recently, have begun proceedings for the property valued at $6,000.

—Miss Delia Keesling, 17, Avondale, given up to die by her physicians, was restored to health by the prayers of friends—at least, so the story goes.

—Henry Moran, aged 11 years, while attempting to get on a moving Big Four freight train at Crawfordsville, fell to the ground and his skull was crushed in.

—Mrs. Mary Rutherford, of Vernon, is said to have become insane upon reading letters written to her twenty years ago by the lover who deserted her at the altar.

—Thomas Hamblin, while preparing a dynamite charge to be exploded in a stream to kill fish, caused the charge to be accidentally exploded, tearing off his hand at the wrist and knocking him some ten feet upon the ground, where he remained unconscious for several hours.

—During May a reunion will be held at Shawnee Mound of the jurors, attorneys and witnesses in the murder case of W. F. Pettit. While one of the main actors in the events occurring at that place is serving a life sentence in the penitentiary, the other will probably be a guest of this assembly.

SAVED AT LAST.

AUBURN, IND., Oct. 3, 1890.

Dr. J. W. Bergen:

Dear Sir:—By this time, I presume, you will want to know how I am getting along with Bergen's Asthma Cure.

Well, you have heard of persons obtaining a new life. Now I really feel that way myself. When I began taking Bergen's Asthma Cure, I was just coming out of a long siege of it, and was reduced to 115 pounds; weak, short of breath, chills, fever, and badly demoralized generally, coughing from half an hour to an hour every night.

Since commencing, from the third night, I have not lost ten minutes' sleep all night, cough gone, gained seventeen pounds, chills gone, fever gone, shortness of breath and difficulty of breathing gone, consequently I feel a thousand per cent. better. I thank God every day that I ever saw your advertisement, and that I was induced to write to you.

This is peculiarly encouraging in my case, as I had suffered so long and was so discouraged about my case, having tried everything. I am telling the good news every day.

Push on the good work; you are on the right track.

Yours Very Gratefully,
R. McDOUGALL.

From the Hon. Harvey D. Colvin, Ex-Mayor of Chicago:

CHICAGO, July 24, 1890.

S. H. KLINCK—DEAR SIR: I am pleased to say that I consider your remedy the best medicine in existence, for the human afflictions you claim to cure. I suffered from catarrh with bronchitis for many years. During that time I employed physicians and faithfully tried many so-called remedies advertised to cure this disease, without any material benefit, when a friend induced me to try your remedy, claiming others had been cured by it. The first bottle gave me the most pleasing results. I have continued its use and I can not say too much for it. It found me too near the grave for comfort and restored me to health again. It adorns my toilet stand and by using it occasionally I am kept well.

I would not be without it if it cost $25 per bottle. I earnestly recommend it to all my afflicted friends.

CHUB.

A Romance of West Virginia.

BY DAVID LOWRY.

CHAPTER VI—Continued.

THE LAGGARD LOVER.

The gossips did not get much satisfaction out of Dan Bash.

They did find much to enjoy in talking about the preparations for Chub Dawson's wedding. The preparations were on a scale never attempted in that part of the country. The invitations were so numerous that the people wondered where Hank Dawson would put them all—where they would find room to dance.

Neither Mr. Dawson nor his daughter explained to the curious. As for Dan Bash, he had nothing whatever to say concerning the arrangements.

"I leave all that to the Dawsons," he said when questioned.

But he had planned it all. It was the schoolmaster, not the blacksmith, who calculated the quantity of lumber it would be necessary to lay down for a dancing floor on the ground before Hank Dawson's door.

It was Dan Bash who suggested the purchase of canned fruits and meats. He knew everything—could sum up the cost—and it was his estimate that Hank Dawson copied when he wrote out, with Chub's assistance, the order for the things that were to be sent by express from the great city.

When the wedding day arrived the country side knew all about it. How Hank Dawson had been to the expense of putting down a dancing floor that a hundred poeple could occupy at once, or maybe more.

Stories of the quantities of provisions Hank had brought from the town near at hand and the distant city were circulated the day before the wedding.

"Wasn't the names on the boxes—didn't everybody see the dead loads of stuff?"

And to crown all, there was to be real "band music." The band music referred to was a small but fairly balanced organization employed on extraordinary occasions in the town.

The guests were invited to be present at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. The marriage ceremony would take place at 6, when supper would be served. Dancing and all manner of diversions would precede and follow the marriage ceremony.

The guests were promptly on hand. They came from all quarters. Some were there who lived seventy miles distant. They came in wagons, in buggies, on horseback and afoot. It was the largest and merriest gathering ever witnessed in the county.

Hank Dawson was in his glory—laughed and talked with everybody. His hearty laugh rang over the farm as he moved among his guests.

Along about 4 o'clock the preacher came. The preacher was a famous wag. He was as welcome as any story-teller that ever entertained an appreciative crowd.

But one man was absent. That was Dan Bash, and he was due at 5 o'clock, when he would join the merrymakers.

Five o'clock came, but the bridegroom did not appear.

A quarter past five Dan Bash was considered a laggard in love by all the men there.

At half-past five his groomsman agreed with the bridesmaid that it would be serving him just right if Chub read him a lecture when he did get there.

The woman and girls began to speculate.

They somehow managed to get into little groups and talked in low tones.

Fifteen minutes to six, and no sign of Dan Bash.

And yet, as everybody knew, he was only four miles away. A lover with any fire in him could walk the distance in three-quarters of an hour.

At six the sports lagged—nobody seemed to be interested in them. There was no bridegroom—no sign of a bridegroom.

Hank Dawson moved around cheerily among the hundreds there—he was as bright, seemingly, as ever.

At a quarter past six he stood at the side of the platform the dancers were lounging on, and said in loud, clear, level tones that all could hear:

"My friends, there seems to be some mistake somewhere. I don't know what it is. Dan Bash ought to be here—he ain't and that's all I know. If he comes, why, he can marry after supper just as well as before, but I am not going to wait a minute longer. Supper will be served immediately. We will sit down."

There were whispers and wonderings, many winks and wise glances, but the guests promptly availed themselves of Hank Dawson's cordial invitation to "help themselves freely and make the most of everything."

To the surprise of the women folks, Chub Dawson flitted about, directing the assistants how to serve the guests. She was, to all seeming, as self-possessed as was her wont.

The supper was prolonged. The great crowd ate and drank heartily. If the absence of the bridegroom was unaccountable, unexpected, something that overwhelmed everybody with surprise, it did not interfere with the guests' appetites.

At the conclusion of the supper, Hank Dawson rose and asked his guests to give him their attention. Then he said, slowly and deliberately:

"This is a strange thing, friends. I promised you a wedding. I've done my part. The people here have done theirs. The only one to blame is Dan Bash."

"Father, father," said Chub softly, at his elbow. But Hank Dawson's eyes kindled, and his voice rang out bold and clear:

"I may as well say it as think it. Dan Bash has failed to come to time. Why he ain't here—what keeps him,—I haven't any more idee than anyone here has. But I'll try to find out—to-morrow. Now, then, you're a-goin' to proceed just the same as if it was all regular and they were married. I'm not goin' to have fun spoiled or a good time cut short just because something's happened or gone wrong I ain't noways responsible for. You'll go right on dancin' till 12 o'clock—or as long as you've a mind to."

A few of the men clapped their hands, but the women whispered to each other. Suddenly Chub's voice was heard:

"Father's right. Enjoy yourselves, but I want to say one thing. It ain't Dan Bash's fault. If he isn't here, it's because something's happened to prevent it. I won't say any more now—but if he is not here to-morrow, I will tell you what I think is the matter. Now, do as father says."

There was something in Chub's simple speech and manner that impressed all there. What did she mean?

But in the meantime they would dance, for the music had struck up; a lively air caused the blood to circulate swifter in the young people's veins, and soon they were mingling in mazy figures, while the voice of the leader called them to their proper places in ringing tones.

The merriment was at its height when a riderless horse came into view.

The moment the horse galloped up to the fence, Chub Dawson screamed and ran toward it. Hank Dawson followed her.

"It's Dan's horse, dad! Something's happened to him!"

The crowd heard Chub's cry and her exclamations of grief as she sprang to the horse, which neighed shrilly, and stood quite still as she stroked the horse's neck.

"See, dad, see! There's a mark on the saddle."

Hank Dawson peered at the saddle, then said in a low tone:

"It's—it's nothing much, I reckon."

But Chub was at his side now, and she, too, looked closer at the spot.

"It's blood! It's Dan's blood!"

Chub turned to the wondering crowd near her, and, pointing to the marks on the saddle, screamed, rather than said:

"I can tell you what I kept back for to-morrow—he's been waylaid—they've waylaid him and killed him."

"Murdered!" said the preacher in awe-struck tones.

Then silence fell upon the merry-makers.

When they separated later, to return to their homes, amazement found expression in threats of vengeance upon the murderers of Dan Bash on his wedding day. For all believed he had been murdered.

CHAPTER VII.

THE FRUITLESS SEARCH.

"This thing's got to be looked into at once," said Hank Dawson.

His face was stern. The men nearest him, and who lived near at hand, who were not compelled to accompany their lady friends or relatives home, volunteered to assist him in clearing up what promised to be the greatest sensation in the county.

They stood looking at the horse, which moved his head back and forward in a restless manner.

"Dad, this horse has been abused."

It was Chub's voice.

"See—here are marks. You can see them. And you can feel the lumps on him. Some brute has kicked or beat him. 'Tain't likely as Dan Bash would ever do that."

"No. I never seen a man who was kinder with all animals," said Hank, quickly. "You're right, Chub. Here, gentlemen, you can see and feel for yourselves."

The crowd examined the horse carefully. There was just enough light left to see the marks.

"It's a dern shame," said Eli Potts, the landlord of the tavern at the Corners, who was always on hand at a wedding or funeral, "cos they brought folks together."

Eli's opinion was heartily indorsed by the crowd.

The horse was quivering with excitement. He put his nose in Chub's hand eagerly. A human being craving sympathy couldn't have expressed himself plainer than Dan Bash's horse. And yet Dan had only had the animal two weeks. To be sure, he had borrowed the loan of the beautiful gray; he knew its temper and disposition, but he had not invested in the gray until he was sure of the school. Then he purchased the horse as an investment. He had said to the blacksmith and his affianced that he would double his money on the young gray.

"Don't cry, Chub," said her father, as she suddenly gave way to her tears when the women were all gone and she was hanging over Dan's horse.

"I was just thinking. He built so much on this horse, dad."

"Yes, he did. And a mighty good judge of horses Dan was."

"Don't say was, father, don't."

"I mean is. Who knows but he's all right."

"Well, we must go and see," said Chub. "Who'll go to where he put up? We'd best divide—there's no telling which way he come."

"That's a fact."

The men whispered. Half of the force that volunteered to search for the rider of the horse were in their saddles now.

A man with forethought rare brought Chub's horse to her side, ready for her to mount. Another brought Hank Dawson's.

"This is an ugly business, I'm afeared," said Hank Dawson as he mounted his big roan, a good traveler.

"Father, if the crowd will go to Dan's house, and if they don't find any word of him, divide and go round by the bottom of the big road. I'll take a lot with me, and we'll scatter among the big pines. That's the way to cover the most ground at once. And whoever finds him will take him to the nearest place—here, or back to his stopping place."

All agreed that Chub's suggestion was timely, the very best thing that could be done.

The crowd separated immediately, after providing themselves with material to strike lights, and prosecute the search thoroughly in the forest.

The search was conducted with vigor and spirit. Four different parties pushed in different directions toward the house where Dan Bash had made his home.

They cried aloud at intervals, listening for the response that never came. They peered into undergrowth, fired pistols, crossed and recrossed rarely traveled paths, but no sign did they discover of the missing bridegroom.

An hour later a gloomy crowd assembled at the house where Dan had made his home since he assumed charge of the school.

The men talked in low tones; each had his own idea, but they did not speak out boldly. The first man to express himself clearly and boldly was Hank Dawson.

"Gentlemen, it looks like wastin' time to look further. Of course, I'm goin' to look on the road home again. Any one that wants to can go with me. I don't expect any one, tho'. Seems lost time."

Half a dozen volunteered on the instant.

"Thanks, gentlemen. I'm obleeged t' ye. It's a powerful sight o' trouble—but one good turn deserves another. You all know you can count on me. Chub."

"Well, father?"

In was a remarkable thing—every one remarked it—that Chub never said "father" save when she was in a very sober vein. "Dad" was her favorite expression.

"I guess we'd best go home again."

"No, father; I'm not going home until I find Dan."

"Sho, Chub."

"I can't, father."

"Why?"

"I tell you I can't, father. He's somewhere nigh."

"We don't know nothin' about that, Chub."

"He has been followed or overpowered, and I think I know who did it. But I must find him. Dead or alive, I must find him."

"Well, well, well."

"You can go on round the cliffs, father; some of us will hunt through the big woods, wherever we think he might be hid."

"It's all nonsense, Chub; but it's just as you like. I'm going to do just as you like now. I'll hunt till daylight—I'll hunt all week if you say so."

"I do, I do, father."

"Why, of course—why shouldn't I do anything you ask me to? Besides, maybe he may be lying somewheres. Anyhow, here I am."

And there were others, too, a dozen or more, who resolved to hunt the mountains until daylight.

They scoured the mountain fastnesses till daybreak.

Then they breakfasted at Hank Dawson's, and ten strong men said they would devote another day to the quest.

"I'll never forget you folks," said Chub Dawson, smiling on them as they mounted their horses in front of her father's house.

Her own horse was champing his bit, eager to move.

The party were well provided for. They had abundance for lunch, and every man had his flask of liquor. They set out resolved to solve the mystery, if it could be solved.

They hunted all that day and until midnight, and then the volunteers sadly confessed their labors were fruitless, as they assembled once more, as by previous arrangement, at the house where Dan had boarded.

The people who made him welcome in their family were almost distracted. They had grown to like Dan Bash very much. Two grown sons regarded him as a very superior being. They were among the most active searchers.

These men shed bitter tears.

Not so Chub.

Chub had not shed a tear in the presence of any one since the horse came running up to her at her father's fence, with flying mane.

"It's all no use, boys," said Hank Dawson, sadly. "You may go home."

Chub was silent. She remained silent until the crowd separated.

When the two were alone with the people of the house, Chub said:

"Father, you know who has done this."

"I suspect, Chub. I'm not ready to swear it."

"I am. I feel it. I can't tell you how, but, father, I know it."

"You're nervous—upset, Chub."

"I am—but it aint that."

"You can't know it, Chub, 'less you see it, or hear something that you can prove. Have you?"

"No, I haven't. But I tell you I know it just as well as I know I'm talking to you. Father—I'm just as sure Dan's alive as I'm talking to you."

"If he's alive—where is he? Don't go too fast. How do we know what turn things may take. It's best not to say what you think."

"I know—I understand. You think some people may say that because we can't find no sign of Dan Bash—he's run away—gone and backed out of the marriage."

"My God, Chub, I didn't say that!"

"But you can't help thinking what people will think, father."

Hank Dawson was silent. He was so honest he would not lie to her even then.

"I know it. I've had plenty of time to think. That's why I'm not going to give up."

"That's all right, Chub. Of course it is nat'ral you won't give up looking."

"Dad."

There was something of her old brightness as she uttered the term of endearment.

"Well, Chub—out with it."

"Suppose you give out that we're goin' to stop here now till morning. It's after 12. We can take a rest, and have a good talk with the Biggers, and then, along about half-past 2 or 3, you'll start home with me."

"Just as you like, Chub. Anything you say."

So they talked to the Biggers as if they would remain till the next day.

"You've some little scheme, Chub," said her father in a whisper.

"I'll tell you by and by, dad."

Then they sat down to a late supper—all the volunteer party had eaten heartily before bidding each other good night—and after they ate began to talk over the extraordinary disappearance of Dan Bash.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Matrimonial Gossip.

Notwithstanding the fact that most women receive at least one invitation to marry, it yet occasionally happens that spinsterhood is forced upon them against their will. A lady, who had by no means found matrimony to her advantage, was visiting the Fall of the Passaic with a young lady friend. "If you are thinking of marriage, my dear," she said, "take my advice, and jump off yonder rock into the waterfall." "So I would," she replied, "if I thought I should find a husband at the bottom of it." This was frank and free. It seems very hard if such an honest, and no doubt deserving, young person should be driven to a matrimonial newspaper to find a mate, though that method of uniting two fond hearts is by no means of modern invention. In Genoa, a traveler early in the present century informs us, there were regular brokers who had their pocketbooks filled with the names, fortunes and personal attractions of the young ladies of the place, and who "arranged" matches, thereby saving all parties an infinity of trouble. Their charge, similar to that of our auctioneers, was 2½ per cent. upon the dowry. If upon acquaintance the intending bridegroom was dissatisfied with the lady, and broke off the match, it did not break her heart; and he had to pay the brokerage. So, after all, a trifle of sentiment entered into the matter; even a mercenary man shrank from a wholly uncongenial marriage, and perhaps the end justified the means.

A New Fire-Boat.

The new fire-boat in New York City, named the New-Yorker, cost $100,000. It easily throws a five-inch stream 250 feet. Its two boilers are built for a working pressure of 148 pounds, and they are 15 feet long and 12 feet in diameter, and each one has 204 three-and-a-quarter-inch tubes. The pumping machinery is, of course, of great power. It comprises two duplex vertical direct-acting pumps. Each has two steam and two water cylinders. The steam cylinders are 16 inches in diameter by 11 inches stroke; the water cylinders, of the same stroke, are 10 inches in diameter. The working pressure allowed for the water cylinders is 200 pounds to the square inch. The pumps draw water through two 16-inch suction openings in the bottom of the vessel, to which suction pipes are connected. The discharge is delivered into a 12-inch main that runs around the deck-house, and which is provided with numerous connections for hose-couplings. The hand-pipes are manipulated behind movable screens, 3,000 feet of hose are carried, and discharge pipes are provided for streams varying from two and a half to five and a half inches in diameter. The pumps will discharge 10,000 gallons a minute. A tender carries additional hose, and a fire half a mile inland from the boat can be furnished with abundant water.

"YOU had better resign or be resigned," said a bright official to one against whom rained "the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune," and who was not fated to escape "the whips and scorns" of time. There is a proverb which says: "It is the unexpected which is always happening," and the mere accidents of time and place will continue to astound the human race on its rapid journey to that common level of oblivion which finds

"All equal in the grave at last."

THE proverb, "Blessings brighten as they take their flight," refers to the servant girl who rubs up the parlor furniture.

A TOPER gave "the absence of soft water" as an excuse for hard drinking.

HUMOR.

A Recommendation.

"Well, Rastus, I hear you have left Mr. Smithers."

"Yas-sir."

"Did he give you a good recommendation?"

"Yas-sir. He dun write it, an' said I wuz de mos' mendacious an' fallible niggah he knowed."—Harper's Weekly.

A Special Dispensation.

Van Barclay is very absent-minded, the result of many years' grappling with the servant-girl problem. The other day the doctor rushed into his study to announce the arrival of an heir.

"Let me congratulate you," he said; "it's a girl."

"Thank heaven!" responded Barclay. "Put her to work in the kitchen at once."—New York Telegram.

A Great Jumper.

Scroggs—I say, Boggs, does Skinner belong to your athletic club?

Boggs—No; why do you ask?

Scroggs—Oh, he broke all records recently, so far as I know. He ran up a big board bill recently in London and "jumped" it, and the next heard of him was that he had landed in New York.—New York Herald.

He Was Right.

"Have you any photographs of your children, Mr. Peck?" asked a friend of the Hon. Alpheus Peck.

"I should say I had," answered Mr. Peck; "I've about a bushel of them."

"Why, Alpheus," exclaimed his wife.

"Well, haven't we? Haven't we photographs of all four of them, and don't four pecks make a bushel?"—Free Press.

His Little Game.

Tramp—Lady, is there any wood here to be sawed?

Lady—Yes, sir, out in the shed. If you saw some I'll give you a lunch.

Tramp (disgusted, as he turns to go)—Confound it! Isn't there one family in the town that's got all their wood sawed?

He Was Misunderstood.

New servant—There is one thing I don't like in this house.

Mrs. Gayboy—What is that?

Servant—Your husband, he always chucks me under the chin and calls me his pet.

Mrs. Gayboy—You must not pay any attention to that. He treats me in the same way. He doesn't really mean anything by it.—Texas Siftings.

A Miss-Understanding.

Typewriter Salesman—"Your typewriter is rather old; can't I make a deal with you for an exchange?"

Merchant—"No, siree; my time is too valuable to allow me to spend the day in swearing. I've tried the young and giddy blonde variety, and although it gives me a pain to look at the old crow's face, still the relief to my nervous system more than repays me."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Buttonless Boggs.

"I think you are a perfect heathen, Mr. Boggs," said Mrs. Boggs, a prominent worker in church charities.

"I wish I were," said Boggs. "You might pay me a little more attention then."

Signs of Wealth.

Gilhooly—Are the people who live next door to you rich?

Gus De Smith—I should say so. You ought to see the silverware they carry to the pawnbroker.

Most Suitable.

Maud—Oh, I'm invited to the Way-up's ball; but I don't know what in the world to wear. What would you wear if you had my complexion?

Millicent—A thick veil.

Their Worst Feature.

Mrs. Sanso—The fashions change so often!

Mr. Sanso (gloomily)—Yes; and they change a hundred dollar bill each time.

Needed a Vermifuge.

Apothecaries have some very queer applications for prescriptions. An old war veteran limped into a shop one day, and said to the druggist:

"I want some medicine."

"What kind of medicine?"

"Oh, some sort of vermifuge, I suppose."

"Where does the seat of your difficulty seem to be?"

"In my wooden leg, mister. It's gettin' all worm eaten."—Argonaut.

The Difference.

Lawyer Badger—"And do you think that you are competent to judge between a well-authenticated rumor and one which is baseless and foolish?"

Witness—"I believe I can."

Lawyer B. (sarcastically)—"Please illustrate your definition of the two."

Witness—"If I should be told that you were a lawyer, that would be a baseless rumor. Were I told that you were regarded as an ass, I should estimate that as a well-authenticated rumor."

The Crier—"Silence in the court."—Pittsburg Bulletin.

IN an account of Mexican meteorites, M. L. Fletcher, an English mineralogist, describes fourteen huge masses of iron which have been found within a small section of country. The largest has the form of a beehive, rises four feet above the ground, and is five feet in diameter at the surface of the soil, beneath which it extends to unknown depths. The second mass, estimated to weigh 4,000 pounds, is now in the National Museum at Washington. The Butcher masses number eight pieces, weighing from 290 pounds to 650 pounds, and having a total weight of 4,000 pounds. The Sandhez estate mass weighs 252 pounds, and the Fort Duncan mass 97½ pounds. The greatest dispersion is sixty-six miles.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, postoffice as second-class matter.

THURSDAY..........APRIL 30, 1891.

OHIO has passed the Australian election law.

FIRST vessel through straits at Mackinaw, Tuesday, April 21.

SPAIN is asking for reciprocity, which is free trade. The leaven prepared by the democracy is working.

ENGLAND taxes tobacco and spirits, and leave necessary articles free. This is an example we would do well to imitate.

RECIPROCITY concedes all that democrats have ever asked, except that it is likely to be limited to a few nations, part of which will do us no good. Republicans are falling into line. Democrats lead; they follow.

COUNT VON MOLTKE, the famous German general is dead. Was born in 1800, and was in the service in 1822, and ever since.

FRANCE likely to have a wheat famine. People are asking for a reduction of tariff on wheat, so it will be cheaper. They ought to know that certain parties in America claim a duty makes it cheaper.

FREE sugar means cheaper sugar. A thousand other things, if put on the free list, would be cheaper for the people and many of these things do not bring revenue to the government, as matters now stand.

THE Republican League which met at Cincinnati last week, had about 1000 delegates. Several steps were taken that showed the feeling stronger for Blaine than for Harrison. An expression of preferences for president as taken by one of the daily papers, showed.

Blain..........	211	Reed	1
Harrison.......	97	McKinley.......	3
Alger..........	6	Cullom	6
Sherman........	2	Scattering.....	16
Clarkson.......	2

Of the delegates from Indiana, Blaine has sixteen, Harrison fourteen, Sherman one, while one delegate is for either Blaine or Harrison. One is for the nominee, whoever he may be; one is non-committal, and one is for the administration.

Waterloo Corporation Ballot.

STATE OF INDIANA, } SS.
DEKALB COUNTY, }

I, Solomon W. Beidler, Clerk of the incorporated town of Waterloo, in the county and state aforesaid, hereby certify that certificates of nomination to office have been filed with me in my office, to be printed upon ballots for the corporation election to be held in said town on the 4th day of May, 1891, which tickets, with the devices used to designate the candidates of the different parties, will be printed and furnished to the voters at said election, in form substantially as follows, to-wit:

Dem.	Democratic Ticket.	Rep.	Republican Ticket.
Dem.	For Trustee, Second Ward, ELMER STAMETS.	Rep.	For Trustee, Second Ward, ADONIRAM B. DARBY.
Dem.	For Trustee, Fourth Ward, FREDERICK DEVENTER.	Rep.	For Trustee, Fourth Ward, ROYAL J. FISK.
Dem.	For Clerk, WILLIAM F. C. FRANCIS.	Rep.	For Clerk, SOLOMON W. BEIDLER.
Dem.	For Treasurer, HEZEKIAH K. LEAS.	Rep.	For Treasurer, FRANK N. BEIDLER.
Dem.	For Marshal, HENRY VOGTMAN.	Rep.	For Marshal, FRANK R. FISHER.

NAIL IT!
TO THE MAST!

JOE PFEFFERL
For Marshal!

No Interference by Outside Parties will be Tolerated. Auburn will Run Her Own Election

ALL FOR JOE.

The business men will vote for him; the taxpayers will vote for him; order-loving people will vote for him; all parties will vote for him; no one can find a worthy reason for refusing to vote for him. So we nail our colors to the mast for Auburn's next marshal.

The Marshalship.

The Garrett Clipper had not a word last week about its own election, but was filled to the rotten edge with stuff about the Auburn election. As we have before said, the whole fight is to get a marshal in Auburn that will let the Clipper Windbag, run Auburn's streets drunk. This is no guess work. We know what we are talking of. It is not long since this same Hank Little, editor (?) etc., was caught by our marshal, the present candidate, Joe. Pfefferl, up town here, drunk, and made to go home. He begged not to be put in the cooler, and was so scared he got home as fast as he could in his then condition. Is it not time that good citizens of Auburn, without regard to politics should unite, and give the Garrett Clipper and its managers and followers, to understand, that they cannot run Auburn affairs in the interest of immorality and indecency? Wherever the marshal has caught a lot of these chaps making the streets resound with their indecent rowdyism, he he has stopped them, and forced them to leave, or behave. For this they have set themselves against him and through their organ have assailed him from every quarter. They have even attacked his honesty. The last copy of the "Bologna" says Joe. has made his money off the town. This is none of their business provided he has worked for the town as cheap as any one else would do. But he has worked cheaper. Since last November when he came into the office he has saved the town $30 a month, or about $175 to date. If of these reduced wages he can save something, that is to his credit. As to his having "earned a house since being marshal," this is as false as the rest. Before moving to Cedar street, he sold his house and an acre of ground in the north part of town for $450, and it is this money that built his present home. As to the team expense, that is also in Joe's favor. When he first took charge of it they had been paying $15 a month to have the team kept, cared for and driven to fires, etc. The board then made a contract with Joe. to keep it at $110 a year for two years; a saving of $70 a year. In this bargain he furnishes the harness and axle grease, and attends to the whole business, drives to fires, etc. Another lie, we might as well nail now as ever. The filthy sheet says that the editor of this paper was told that Pfefferl had bought liquor for a man who had been refused at the saloons, and hinted that the man was a "rival in business." No such thing ever happened. At least this was never told to us. We dare him to name the "rival." The whole story had its origin in his own drunken imagination. The remarks we have made above about a very few, of the very many in the "Smut sheet" last week, will apply to all, including the "original letters" written by himself and pretended to be sent from this place. Instead of abusing Joe. Pfefferl, he should be thankful to him for scaring him out of several such drunks as last year ran him so close to delirium tremens.

CAMPAIGN NOTES.

All our candidates are good men; Lanning, Ensley, Grund, Jones and Pfefferl, and they will no doubt all be elected. They should each have 100 majority.

Did we ever have better work on the streets? Our marshals have all been careful in this regard, but Joe Pfefferl equals the best. Give him a big vote for marshal next Monday.

Let every voter of the Auburn, without regard to politics, vote the Auburn ticket for Marshal. What business has an outsider, to run a ticket for Auburn? Mr. Burke, we feel sure does not want the office. It would be a damage to his business and he would not be in shape to serve the town well as marshal and conduct his own business besides. Mr. Pfefferl, on the other hand, has had ample experience, has satisfied all our people. No one can say he has failed at any point. He is situated that he can attend to the team, etc., besides doing his ordinary work as marshal, thus saving several hundred dollars. No other man could do this. Besides he has had experience in making crossings, wells, etc., and can therefore do things to much better advantage than a new man could, again saving the people's money. The only objection made to him, is one opposed to every interest of the town. He is opposed merely because it is certain he will keep good order. Should that defeat him?

Election Officers.

At the meeting of the council Friday evening they appointed officers for the different precincts. In the north precinct, the inspector is Jacob Walborn, and the democrats had chosen W. E. Rush for judge and Ira Brandon for poll clerk. The republicans chose Chas. Raut for judge and John Otto for clerk. In the middle precinct, they are: J. A. Potter, inspector; G. C. Ralston and A. B. Richards, judges; Frank Myers and Ed. Casebeer, clerks. In the south precinct they are: S. R. Heberling, inspector; Francis Picker and Isaac Hague judges; Clyde Brandon and W. H. McIntosh, clerks. The board appointed the inspectors, but as to the others, they confirmed the selections made by the committeemen of the two parties. The marshal appoints the election marshals or sheriffs. John Picker and J. W. Johnson are election sheriffs for the north precinct; Clint Potter and Wm. Clark for the middle, and Samuel Fretz and John Keeran for the south precinct.

The Humane Society.

This society is now fully organized. The object is to carry unsectarian humane education all over the country and establish such societies wherever needed, and to supply needed literature on the subject. We give a synopsis of the constitution. The meetings of the directors are called by the secretary for the third Saturday in April, July, October and January, of each year, but special meetings may be called by the president. Three members of the board make a quorum. The president is the executive officer of the society. The secretary acts under the direction of the Board of directors, and pays all funds that come into his hands, to the treasurer, who in turn pays out money only on order of the secretary and president. Special agents appointed by the directors may be removed at will, and they, with the secretary, are paid such amounts as the board may direct. Officers make reports at each annual meeting, and no change can be made in the by-laws of the society unless proposed in writing at a meeting of Directors, and approved by a subsequent meeting. The present officers are: Dr. S. B. Johnston, president; E. L. Casebeer, Sec'y; J. L. Davis, treasurer; with A. Lewis, J. A. Barns, J. W. Baxter, L. T. Rice, A. Kinmont, Directors. J. E. Rose is attorney. The other members are: Rev. G. W. Healy, W. P. Harter, A. Robbins, Rev. D. F. Kain, R. McDougall, M. B. Willis, A. B. Richards, W. L. Meese, E. Zimmerman, H. H. Hoisington, Stevens and Campbell. The object is to prevent cruelty to animals, children, etc., and the promotion of humane sentiments. Anyone can become a member by election by the society. The entrance fee is $1. The annual meeting of the Auburn Society is April 6.

Lively Runaway.

J. McCann, general agent for G. G. Green, of New Jersey, in the placing of agents and arranging of their business in this part of the Union, has been here for a few days, getting things in shape. He had ordered shipped to this point, a wagon, or buggy, of the kind generally used in their business, and after coming here, had bought a fine span of horses of Dell Myers, to use with the wagon, and yesterday morning, he started out. He drove first to Garrett, and from there to Altona, thence around to Cedar Creek, DeKalb and Concord, a long drive, the team proving good drivers, and everything was pleasant. His trade too, had been successful, and he was feeling highly pleased with his day's business, when suddenly, with little or no visible cause, the buggy tongue broke and came down between the horses, a thing no horse with a grain of spirit will stand, and off they started. Mr. McCann held onto them pluckily, and kept them in the road till he saw that would not do longer. There was a rail fence on one side and a board fence on the other, and he properly preferred the latter. He forced them to that side and they were stopped, though not till they were forced well through the fence. He then got them loose from the rig and struck for Auburn. Mr. McCann's build is not what you might call ethereal, but rather what we call "solid" out here, but he trudged in with the remains of that outfit and reached here an hour or so later, safe and sound, and little worse, for what was really a very dangerous chance. An examination of the buggy pole, proved it to be rotten and worthless. The House had about forty of them made by a New Jersey firm and if they are all like this one, the best thing to be done is, to make a generous bonfire of them, before any of their men lose their lives by using them. We suppose Mr. McCann will have to let business wait till another rig comes. But we don't believe he cares to take another such a chance, though he insists that August Flower and Boschee's German Syrup will fetch a man through all right.

CAPT. W. R. MYERS, well known here, badly hurt in a railroad wreck near Indianapolis, Sunday morning. Will live.

THE Butler Record asks us, "what free raw materials would you suggest in the production eggs?" Answer: Free raw chickens of course. Boiled chickens don't lay eggs, and chickens on which a duty must be paid come that much higher, and would so far add to the cost of productions and this lessens profits. Try us on turkey.

A Good Law.

Hoosier Tidings.

The new law regulating the fees for same will put a stop to the organization of many buncombe companies, with mythical capital; especially in the line of railway companies. The new law, now in force, requires the Secretary of State to charge and collect for the benefit of the State certain fees from associations and corporations desiring certain benefits under the laws of Indiana, and requiring all associations and corporations desiring such benefits to pay such fees. Where the capital stock is $10,000 or under the fee is $10; when in excess of that amount one-tenth of 1 per cent., on amount of capital stock; mutual insurance, benefit or protective associations, not strictly benevolent or charitable, and and having no capital stock, $25; religious, benevolent, literary and express, railroad, telegraph or mechanics' or other associations of employes, fee $500; building and loan associations, capital $50,000 or under, $10; in excess of that amount, one twenty-fifth of 1 per cent.; certificate of reduction of capital, $5; increase same as original articles. This is all in addition to the old fee of $2.

"God Help the Surplus."

(New York World.)

It will take all the gold and silver produced in the world for four years to pay the appropriations made by the billion dollar congress.

All the wages of the workers in every protected American industry for three years.

All the wages of the workers in 1,000 cotton mills for twenty years.

All the wages made in 1,990 woolen mills in forty years.

All the wages in the glass industries for 110 years.

Our total wheat crop for 1890 will only pay one-third of it.

Our total corn crop will only pay two-thirds of it.

"God help the surplus?" It is God help the workingman.

Lake Shore Improvements.

The following article which we clip from the Ft. Wayne Daily Press, shows that the Lake Shore road is getting ready for the rush of work that will accompany the opening of the world's fair at Chicago, in 1893:

"The Lake Shore Railroad company will commence work on its improvements between Toledo and Chicago, as soon as the ground dries up enough so that men can work to advantage. The whole system between Buffalo and Chicago, will be double-tracked the coming summer, and all the steep grades will be cut down and several bad ravines and gulches will be filled in."

Notice to K. of P's.

Mrs. Haggart and Miss Hay state president and trearurer will be present, and there will be lectures by Alice Palmer and others. All who can attend from other towns should send their names to Mrs. M. A. Shultze, Kendallville.

Auburn's Population.

A. J. Ralston, as one of the school board, has been engaged for some time in taking the enumeration of school children, and finds we have pulled ahead greatly. The enumeration last year was 703. This year it is 796, a gain of 93. At the same time, he has carefully taken the entire number of our people. The figures show a little over 2,800, which is about 300 more than the census gave us.

The firemen's dance on Monday evening was very well attended, but not as well as it might have been. Every person ought to turn out or else show respect to the boys enough to buy a ticket. That is all they ask, for their services when they are called out to a fire, and it only comes once a year.

MRS. EATON, Harrison's sister, probably fatally hurt in a runaway near Cincinnati, Saturday. President in California.

THE "home market" cry has had a backset, by the recent rise in wheat. As soon as it was found that foreign countries had a short wheat crop, the price came up. We always have a "home market," but it needs something more, for we produce much more than we can consume. The democratic doctrine, that we need a foreign market, to get good prices for wheat is the correct one.

The Western Reversible Road Machine.

TO THE SEVERAL TOWNS AND TOWNSHIP TRUSTEES OF DEKALB AND ADJOINING COUNTIES:—

We call your attention to the fact that we have accepted the agency of the celebrated Western Reversible Road Machine for the four counties of DeKalb, Steuben, LaGrange and Noble. This is without a doubt the leading machine of the world and is the only machine made that can be successfully used on the road without the use of a plow—is the lightest drop machine made, doing the same amount of work; and we give you a guarantee of twenty-one points of superiority over any other road machine made. In fact it is the champion of the world, and we invite competition. Do not fail to come and see the machine before you buy. Remember it is reversible and can be used from either side, and the scraper or moldboard can be set at any angle you desire.

Dr. Casebeer was called to Connersville, near Cincinnati this week to assist in a difficult surgical operation. We did not learn the exact nature of it, but it was a perfect success. The patient, a boy, had been able to speak only with difficulty, but at once his full faculty returned and he is now doing well.

Lagrange Democrat: Here is an illustration of the way the new tax law is going to be particularly tough on real estate: A stock of merchandise in Lagrange that was assessed last year at $800 was listed this week at something over $6,000. If the property had been real estate the new appraisement would hardly have reached two thousand dollars.

Frederick Funk our good-natured stone mason, is rushing his business this spring, for all there is in it. He can be seen here and there building walls and in fact doing everything in his line with a vigor that suggests to our mind that he is doing a land office business. May he prosper in his profession and thus continue to be the good citizen he always has been.

A SPECIAL BARGAIN:—I will be enabled to offer for a short time, a line of fine, white-backed papers, very best quality, for 15 cents per roll. This is a special thing, and will only be open to those who take advantage of the opportunity, and come while the supply lasts. The patterns are just the thing for kitchen and hall papers. Don't miss this opportunity. 18t3

DAVENPORT, The Druggist.

Young man, when you get in earnest and have the connubial knot tied that shall link your prospects, hopes and aspirations, to that of your "better half" you must expect that the boys will have a festive time at your expense, and it is customary in this day to "set 'em up" to the cigars on that occasion. Now, don't go and invest your money in a poor, two-for cabbage leaf, but go to Kessler Bros. and get the genuine Bill Head, made from tobacco.

At the meeting of the council Friday evening it was decided to have an ordinance drafted to prevent boys, and other intruders and improper persons, from trespassing on the cemetery grounds. It appears that numbers of these are in the habit of making these sacred grounds a common resort both day and night, and where they indulge in all sorts of amusements, and unbecoming practices, to use no harsher terms. They must be made to stop it. The living should see that this "City of the Dead" does not become a reproach to decent and sensitive people.

Veterans who wish to obtain pensions, bounty etc., or who wish information concerning claims already filed, should write to Chas. McClellan Solicitor of Claims, 612 F. St. N. W. Washington, D. C.

Schnell & Weeks are still south of the jail with as fine a line of groceries, provisions, etc., as can be found in the city. They are great favorites with the "reciprocity" plan, that is, you will always get value received for every dollar spent for goods in their establishment.

Have you tried South American Nervine—the gem of the century? The great cure for indigestion, dyspepsia and nervousness. Warranted the most wonderful stomach and nerve cure ever known. Trial bottles 15 cents. Sold by Robbins & McCord, druggists, Auburn.

We made the acquaintance last week of Mr. Wooton the incoming pastor of the M. E. church, and find him a most agreeable, and cultivated gentleman, and one, we believe will be a worthy successor to Mr. Lamport. Our M. E. friends have had rare good fortune in their pastors.

Mrs. G. D. Dennison, southeast of Waterloo, died Friday afternoon, after an illness of several weeks. She was the mother of Mrs. Salyer, of this place, J. A. Dennison, of Waterloo, and of G. O. Dennison and Levi Dennison, the icemen. Mrs. Dennison was one of the most intelligent of the older ladies of this county, universally beloved and respected. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at the home, and was attended by a large concourse of friends from far and near.

The Lake Shore road seems to be taking some interest in the building of a new depot at this place. Mr. DeLapp has received a letter from Mr. Harris superintendent of the Jackson Branch, asking for a statement of the amount of business over their road from this point during 1890, and also a statement of the of the tons of freight received and sent for three or five years, and asked as to the size of the rooms in which the agent and the assistants here must do business. It looks a little as though we will get the new buildings.

Services for the ordination and installation of Mr. Healy, as pastor of the Presbyterian church, took place Monday evening. Nearly every minister in the Presbytery was present, to assist, and they added Mr. Wooton, of the M. E. church to their number, showing the friendly feeling that very properly exists between the churches. The services were conducted by Mr. Boggs of Ft. Wayne who preached an able sermon. The opening prayer was by Mr. Marshall of Waterloo. Dr. Moffit of Ft. Wayne, delivered the charge to the new minister and Mr. Townsend of Elkhart, delivered the charge to the congregation. The addresses were all able and scholarly and the ceremonies very impressive. Mr. Healy's aged mother was present and took a deep interest in all connected with this great event in her son's chosen life work.

We don't say much but we do say that we are ready to fill all orders for lumber and shingles at wholesale prices. D. E. Willis, Auburn. 16tf

Samuel Bricker, of Butler township, advertises good stock, horses and a jack in this issue. Farmers and stock raisers should bear this in mind.

R. Blum and wife spent Tuesday in Laporte. Mr. Blum went with the Odd Fellows band of Garrett to play for some doings of that order.

Mrs. A. B. Richards has the loveliest blooming cactus in town. We don't know the name of it, but anyone can see its multitude of bright flowers as it sits by the window.

J. A. Potter objects very properly to so many silly squibs about his getting married. He says it will be in better taste to wait at least till there are some indications of such a thing.

Auditor Coffinberry, will soon be a citizen of Auburn. He has made arranggments to have rooms for himself and family at the Swineford House, and will be here in a few days. Our people will give them a hearty welcome.

Gospel temperance meeting will be held at the M. E. church Sunday at 3 o'clock. An interesting program has been prepared and every one is invited to attend. Rev. George Wade Healy will conduct the devotional services. Mrs. Ehlers will give an address; recitations by Harry Lewis and Dottie Gibson; music by the Hoosier Quartet.

A. J. Ralston, J. L. Davis, Cal. Husselman, D. E. Carruth, C. C. Shaffer, Chas. Schaab, E. Trout and others went to Kendallville Tuesday to look over the dining hall in the fair ground, with a view to building a new one here. But they may give the privilege to two churches to put up a good building for each, with contract for several years.

Mrs. Robbins is no better to say the least, and is probably failing. A few day ago there seemed some favorable signs, but there is now little hope. As we go to press Wednesday evening, we learn that her limb was amputated this afternoon. Dr. McCaskey, of Ft. Wayne, was assisted by Dr. Casebeer, Drs. D. J. and Vesta M. Swarts, and Dr. Watson. She has not rallied yet, and the result is uncertain. Thursday morning — We learn that she rested easy over night.

The Dispatch has become a chronic critic. Nothing suits it, and nothing is done, but it can see a better way to do it. It has a long criticism on the town clerk's report, finding fault with a number of things that are wholly unimportant. It might be a good idea for the five trustees, clerk, treasurer and marshal, to step out and let the editor of the Dispatch have full swing and do it all. Then he would be suited.

THE first water mill ever built was erected on the River Tiber, at Rome, A. D. 50. Wind mills were in original use in the twelfth century. Tide mills were operated in Venice about 1708. Saw mills are said to have been in use at Augsberg, Germany, about 1332.

THE term "blue stocking" was originally used in Venice about the year 1400 to designate literary classes by colors. The application of the term to women originated with Miss Hannah More's description of the "Blue Stocking Club" in her "Bas Bleu."

TO MAKE an impermeable glue, soak ordinary glue in water until it softens, and remove it before it has lost its primitive form. After this, dissolve it in linseed oil over a slow fire until it is brought to the consistency of a jelly. This glue withstands water.

A SUBSTANCE having all the essential qualities of silk has been made from wild hemp of Japan. The plant grows on moors and hillsides, and could be cultivated. The fiber is strong and glossy, and several silk factories are said to have found it to be in no way inferior to silk.

BELLS were invented by Paulinus, Bishop of Nola, in Campagnia, in or about the year 400. They were first used in France in 550, in Greece in 864, and in the churches of Europe in 900. In Switzerland they first appeared in 1020. The first tuneable set of bells known to England were used in Croyland Abbey, Lincolnshire, in 960.

SO FAR as the hotels of Europe are concerned, not one in fifty has a fire-escape of any sort, and not one in a hundred burns lights to point out the stairways in the night. The idea that any of them will ever burn up is the last thing to be considered. When one does, the guests are of course charged with "extras."

THE whaling schooner William A. Grozier, of Provincetown, carries one of the youngest sailors afloat—the captain's son, aged 13 years, who is now making his seventh voyage whaling. He goes as assistant mate and navigator. He is regarded as a mascot both by owners and crew, as good luck has followed every trip.

THE first martyr to American liberty was Christopher Snider, 11 years old. On Feb. 22, 1770, a mob, principally boys, attacked the house of Mr Richardson in Boston, owing to his having attempted to remove certain marks set against the house of Lille, who had contravened the importation law. Richardson fired upon the mob, killing young Snider.

SEVERAL lots of French paintings for the Berlin art exhibition arrived on the Berlin-German border on Feb. 28. The breaking out of the anti-German movement in Paris had, however, so appalled the artists who sent them that all telegraphed to the custom house officials instructions to hold every consignment. A few days later orders were received that the pictures should be returned to Paris, and back they went.

IT is estimated that there are always 50,000 Americans in Italy, and that there are now ten times as many Italians in this country. Nearly all the Americans in Italy are well off, and nearly all the Italians who came to this country are in poverty. In most cases the Americans who go to Italy spend a few weeks or months there, while the Italians who come to the United States expect to stay here. The Americans in Italy spend their money; the Italians in the United States earn money.

A NEW glass is said to have been invented which is as hard and tough as cast-iron. It is proposed to employ it in the manufacture of stairs, street lamp-posts, and gas and water pipes. If it can be used for the last named purpose, and thus do away with the dangerous lead pipe, it will be an acquisition, indeed. It is thought that these and similar articles can be made of this new glass 80 per cent. cheaper than they can be made of cast-iron.

AN old crank named Conners, living in Iowa, tried to upset the last State election because he was too busy to go to the polls and vote. It cost him $800 in cash and a good deal of trouble, and the courts put a flea in his ear which made him lose fifteen pounds of flesh in a day.

AT one of the steel works in Allegheny City, Pa., there was recently rolled a strip of steel for a spring six inches wide, one-quarter of an inch thick and 310 feet long. The order for it had been tendered to all the large English and Continental works, but none of them would undertake the task.

"I AM going to die!" exclaimed a despondent youth, as he entered a Sacramento saloon not long ago. "Give me a glass of beer in which to take this poison." The drink was handed to him by the obliging barkeeper, who a moment afterward saw him sprinkle a small powder in it and drink it. Two hours later the man died, having taken strychnine. The barkeeper, when interrogated by the police, unfeelingly replied, "I didn't think he meant what he said; but anyhow it isn't my funeral."

THE proportions of the human figure are six times the length of the right foot. Whether the form is slender or plump, the rule holds good on the average. Any deviation from the rule is a departure from the beauty of proportion. It is claimed that the Greeks made all their statues according to this rule. The face, from the highest point of the forehead, where the hair begins, to the end of the chin, is one-tenth of the whole stature; the hand, from the wrist to middle finger, is also one-tenth of the total height. From the crown to the nape of the neck is one-twelfth of the stature.

"THE music of the future," says a composer of comic operas, "will be a blending of the German and Italian—not one, but both. Harmony is what the public demands. We have not at present any distinctive American music or school of music. The only distinctive school we have are the negro melodies, the great composer of which was Stephen Foster. These melodies embrace the 'Swanee River,' 'Old Folks at Home,' 'Gentle Annie' and other well-known tunes. Beyond these we have developed no seperate music. Our music, like our race, must be composite."

ONE of the properties sold by Philadelphia auctioners is of considerable historic interest. It is the house on Seventh street, below market. This has been known for many years as "The Jefferson House," and is said to be about one hundred years old, having been built by Jacob Hiltzheimer, who owned the corner house where the bank now stands and in which Jefferson drafted the declaration of independence, during the revolution. The present Jefferson House occupies the site of a part of the garden of the corner house and was built after the English soldiers departed from the city.

CAPTAIN CARRIE, of the British ship Wayfarer, which arrived in Oakland, Cal., a few days ago, 154 days from Antwerp, reports a weird phenomenon on the night of Nov. 13. It had been blowing for several days, but with nightfall the air became perfectly calm and the sea as smooth as glass. Overhead the sky was as black as ink from the dense masses of heavy clouds, and with the barometer at 28.50 a rainstorm was looked for. The expected downpour did not occur, but the sea glowed with a phosphorescence beyond anything the oldest mariner had ever seen. The ship's surroundings were lit up so that it was possible to read on deck. Nobody cared much for reading, however; the contrast between the light from the sea and the inky clouds was so gruesome that all hands could not help feeling that some unnatural catastrophe was about to occur. The crew were much relieved when a breeze dissipated the clouds, and the phosphorescence was cleared at the same time.

THE largest apple-tree in New England, according to the Boston Journal, is in the northwestern part of Cheshire, Ct., and it stands in the dooryard of Mr. Delos Hotchkiss. Its age can be traced to a family tradition to 140 years at least, and it may be twenty or twenty-five years older. It is now of symmetrical shape; the trunk is nearly round, without a scar or blemish; there are eight large branches; five of them have been in the habit of bearing one year, and the remaining three the next. Mr. Hotchkiss has gathered in one year from the five branches eighty-five bushels of fruit, and his predecessor has harvested 110 bushels from the same five branches. By careful measurement, the circumference of the trunk one foot above the ground, above all enlargements of the roots, is thirteen feet eight inches. The height of the tree is sixty feet, and the spred of the branches as the apples fall is 100 feet. The fruit is rather small, sweet, and of moderate excellence.

Turning it On Her.

He had finished his introductory remarks, and was about to propose, when he discovered that his proposal would be treated with contempt.

"Go on, Mr. Sprigger," she said, impatiently tapping her foot on the carpet as he paused in his remarks.

"I was about to say, Miss Hilder," he continued, "that I am aware that the human heart, especially a woman's, is a delicate thing, and I come to-night to correct a wrong impression which you have been under for some time, I think. To be plain, Miss Hilder, because I do not wish to cause you future suffering, let me state that I have never cared enough for you to ask you to link your lot with mine, therefore do not think that I can return the love you bear for me. My attentions to you have been prompted purely by a friendly feeling, nothing more. But I trust this will not mar our friendly relations," he said, taking his hat to go; "for remember, you will ever have in me a true friend. Be assured I will be always a nephew to you."

And she was so dumb with surprise and anger that she didn't say good-bye to him when he bowed himself out.—New York Herald.

THE DESIRE FOR REFORM

EX-GOV. MORTON ON THE FEELING IN THE WEST.

Tariff Reform Still in the Front—Why the Farmers Are Not Deceived by Talk About Pauper Labor—Work of the Reform Club and How to Sustain It.

Ex-Governor J. Sterling Morton, of Nebraska, has recently spent several weeks in New York, making his headquarters while there at the Reform Club. It will be remembered that it was this club which took so active a part in the Congress elections last fall in Iowa, Michigan, Illinois and other Western States.

Governor Morgan showed while in New York a deep interest in the tariff reform propaganda which the club has undertaken. Being himself a non-resident member of the club, he was delighted to find that all the money paid to the club in the way of annual dues by out-of-town members goes directly into the work for tariff reform.

To a member of the club he said on this point: "Every earnest tariff reformer in the West ought to be a member of this club. Every man who can pay $10 a year will have the satisfaction of knowing that every penny of this goes towards supplying the sinews of war in this fight against an iniquitous tariff system. There are a great many men in the West who are able and willing to pay this sum, and would gladly do so if their attention were only called to the matter.

"The protectionists have the advantage over us in one important respect. They can 'fry the fat' to an almost unlimited extent out of those who have large financial interests in protection. Now with us the case is different. On our side the financial interest in abolishing protection is not so great with any one individual. There are many manufacturers who are interested to the extent of thousands of dollars a year in keeping up protection. The opponents of protection have a financial interest in abolishing the system; but as with them the interest of each man is less than on the protection side there is less disposition to contribute money to carry on your educational campaign.

"Now it seems to me that there ought to be many men who are willing to join this club and give $10 a year to help you to keep up this agitation. The legitimate expenses of your work of organizing meetings at distant points and sending out speakers to them and also in supplying tariff-reform matter to a large number of newspapers must be very great. The country should come to your help."

Gov. Morton was asked whether the desire for tariff reform was growing in Nebraska.

"Yes," he answered, "the yearning for commercial freedom is becoming more and more general and more and more intense among the farmers of the Northwest.

"They find that protection compels them to buy of American manufacturers their farm implements at artificially enhanced prices. The Oliver steel plow, made at South Bend, Ind., sells for less in Canada than in the United States, and so—very often—do Diston's saws. And while the Northwestern farmer buys in a protected he sells in a free trade market. His meats and breadstuffs are fixed, as to prices, by the Liverpool and London markets. He sells against all creation, and he buys where all creation is shut out from competing with the pampered protectees of the McKinley tariff.

"The farmer sees that the profits of capital are the leavings of wages. After operatives are paid off the dividend fund is left, as is also a sinking fund, betterments and other increments, for the manufacturer. The farmer knows that under protection millionaires, in manufacturing ventures, have spawned and throve, like skippers in a cheese, all over the Middle and Eastern States. And it follows logically that the great fortunes—made with greater celerity in America than elsewhere on earth—like Carnegie's, must arise from very large leavings of wages for division among the capitalists.

"For this reason farmers, mechanics, and laborers generally are beginning to discriminate between high wages and high cost of labor. It is plain to them that a skilled laborer in the United States, who gets in steel-rail manufacturing $4 a day, may leave the finished steel rail with less cost of labor in it than a less-skilled, less-alert artisan in England leaves in the steel rail made there by labor costing only $2 a day.

"Denominational wages are one thing and the cost of labor is another; the former may be very high and the latter very low. Some farm hands are cheaper at $25 a month than others at $15. The cost of labor in grain grown by the former is less than that cost in grain grown by the latter sort of labor. One good farm hand will cultivate well forty forty acres of corn in Nebraska, and get from that area 2,000 bushels. But a lazy, inefficient, slovenly man will half till the same acreage and produce only 1,000 bushels. If the former is paid $20 and the latter $15 a month, the cost of labor in the 1,000 bushels is much greater than in the 2,000. The Alliance people are now thinking upon this economic question, and will not easily be bamboozled by the McKinley assumptions and assertions about 'protecting the wage-earners.'

"Alliance men are among themselves absolute free traders. They sell to the merchants who will pay highest for farm products, and then they buy of those who will give the most commodities for those products, direct or in cash. The farmer and his merchant trade with each other just as long as they each find it advantageous to do so. The moment either finds the exchange unprofitable, trade between them stops—unprofitable commerce always dies. All legitimate exchanges are mutually advantageous, both between persons and between peoples—nations.

"The United States had a growing trade with Europe. Her merchantmen flecked every sea. Transoceanic commerce grew apace. It must have been profitable, or it would have perished of its own unprofitableness. But it grew and grew until the Morill tariff—and now the McKinley tariff—was enacted to kill it—to abolish that which was mutually profitable—to eradicate the commercial advantages which—under comparative freedom—were mutual, natural, just and righteous."

Labor Does Not Believe It.

The silk-workers have had hard experience in the matter of wages for the past year. Reductions in wages are very frequent in the silk industry just now, and the Master Workman of the Silk-workers' Association declares that wages have in some cases been cut down 50 per cent. within a year.

It is only natural, therefore, that the silk-workers in their recent convention should have passed the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, The silk industry of the United States, despite the high protective tariff, is at present in a most deplorable condition, wages being so low that skilled operators are seeking other occupations, and in view of the fact that since 1889 the wages of ribbon weavers have been reduced 58 per cent., be it

Resolved, That the representatives of the United States Silk-Workers of North America, now in session, appeal to the friends of American labor not to purchase silk fabrics of foreign manufacture, which are actually inferior to those made here; and be it

Resolved, That in our opinion neither protection nor free trade benefits the workman, and we therefore call upon all silk-workers who are unorganized to band themselves together into the national body, and it is our further opinion that the only protection workingmen will ever receive will be that they give themselves.

The silk industry is protected by duties of 50 to 60 per cent. Why does not this protection secure good wages to the workers?

LET THE POOR USE SHODDY.

So Says Judge Lawrence, of Ohio—Carpets of Shoddy and Cow Hair—Greed of Protective Interests.

Judge Lawrence, one of the Ohio political wool-growers, writes to the Boston Journal of Commerce a long letter advocating the total exclusion of carpet wools from this country.

"The duties on carpets," says Judge Lawrence, "are substantially prohibitory; they are entirely so on all carpets of classes made in the United States. The duties on coarse wools should be equally so, even if used only for carpets."

Although we grow almost no carpet wool in this country, for the simple reason that it pays better to grow clothing wool, Judge Lawrence would exclude foreign carpet wools entirely, and thus compel the carpet manufacturers to use in their carpets some of the low grades of wool now going into cloth. This would increase the price of Judge Lawrence's wool; and that is just what he is striking for. But it would increase the price of carpets, too. Here, however, the Ohio shepherd proposes a frank and brutal way of making a low grade of carpet for those who are compelled to buy cheap stuff. He says use shoddy. Here are his words:

"If a still cheaper variety of carpets be required, as there always will be, they can be made from a mixture of such coarse wool with shoddy and cow hair sufficiently cheap."

Judge Lawrence ought to know that our cheap carpets are already made largely of "shoddy and cow hair." Recent improvements in shoddy spinning machinery, however, are rapidly increasing the use of shoddy in carpets.

The frankness and the audacity of Judge Lawrence's declaration for shoddy carpets for the poorer people should enlighten these people somewhat as to the spirit of protected interests generally. That declaration is but another proof that these protected interests are ready to enrich themselves at whatever cost to the people. Let all the poorer people in the land use shoddy carpets, but Judge Lawrence must have his wool duty!

But the day of these wool politicians is passing. Even such a dyed-in-the-wool protectionist paper as the Journal of Commerce tells Judge Lawrence something for his benefit which shows how the tide is setting. The Journal says:

"It is our impression, from the knowledge we have of the sentiment of woolen manufacturers on the tariff question, that the aggressive policy of wool-growers or their representatives will, in time, and that not far distant, arouse an antagonism on the part of manufacturers to all tariff restrictions on the imports of raw materials, regardless of threats concerning the tariff on manufactured articles."

A Hinge Trust.

The Iron Age, a high tariff trade paper, prints the following piece of news:

"The negotiations which have been in progress for some time between the manufacturers of strap and T hinges have resulted in the formation of a strap and T hinge association, which consists of the following concerns: Stanley works, McKinley Manufacturing Company, E. W. Gilmore & Co., Lindsay & McCutcheon, C. Hager & Sons Hinge Company. A new list has been adopted. The new prices represent an advance on the goods generally ranging from 5 to 10 per cent on strap hinges and something like 20 per cent. on T hinges."

Thus the industries of this country are gradually being consolidated into trusts. It is said by a competent authority that nine-tenths of our industries are already controlled by trusts and combinations to control prices and output.

The old duty on these hinges was 2½ cents a pound, and was practically prohibitory, only $2,377 worth of bolts, rivets, hinges, and hinge blanks having been imported last year. McKinley made the trifling reduction of a quarter of a cent per pound, leaving the rate still substantially prohibitory, as may be seen from the fact that this hinge trust is able to raise prices from 5 to 20 per cent.

There may be some dispute as to whether or not our manufacturers have the right to form trusts. However that may be, our people are great fools to continue to vote for the high protective duties which give these trusts a defense against outside competition. When industries combine and put up prices, it is time to cut off their protection at a single stroke.

A Window-Glass Trust.

There was talk of the formation of a window-glass trust last fall during the campaign. At that time Secretary Foster, who is largely interested in the manufacture of window-glass, was reported to be opposed to the formation, being then a candidate for Congress. One or more of the other large manufacturers held out against the trust proposal, and the scheme came to nothing then.

The talk about a trust has again been revived, and now the trust is considered much more probable. The New York Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter, which is an organ of the glass trade, has recently pointed out how the difficulties formerly encountered have mostly disappeared, and then continues:

"Another deterring cause has been removed by the appointment of Mr. Charles Foster to the Treasury portfolio in the President's Cabinet. Mr. Foster controls large glass manufacturing interests and at the same time is prominently identified with politics. He was a candidate for Congress when the subject of a consolidation of glass interests was first mooted, and the public outcry against trusts made him at once an enemy of the scheme, because to be connected with such a movement at the time might have ruined his chances of political preferment. As he is now placed in a position where condemnation of commercial combinations by the public—under mistaken impressions or otherwise—is likely to do him and his political aspirations no damage, his co-operation, at least, in the scheme may be expected."

The same journal points out that one of the leading manufacturers has recently put up prices 20 per cent. Such is the working of the high McKinley protection on glass. Trusts and higher prices are the order of the day.

Coming Horrors.

How few people in the commoner walks of life, who are hardly able to earn a subsistence, realize the burden the coming World's Fair will be to them. The hospitality of everybody will be taxed beyond the limit of endurance. All the relatives to the third remove, the schoolmates, the personal friends, the uncles, cousins and aunts will come as the leaves come when forests are rended, or as the waves come when navies are stranded. How is the householder who now barely keeps out of the clutches of the "butcher, the baker and the candle-stick-maker" going to stand this strain? He will be expected to give time that he cannot spare to show his visitors the sights, pay their street car and suburban car fare, and for tickets to places of amusement, till his empty wallet aches and his discouraged heart sinks into his left boot. Men are already planning to sell out their homes and buy or rent in Aurora, Elgin, and Joliet till after the fair, for it is either this or suicide. A grasshopper plague would be a soothing mercy compared with the visitations of 1893 and the hungry hordes which will then devastate us and render us homeless, bankrupt, and forlorn. Every contemplated marriage should at once be postponed till November, 1893, as a means of escape from the devouring horrors of the coming fair.—Pullman (Ill.) Journal.

IMPORTED INDUSTRIES.

WHY A GERMAN MANUFACTURER DID NOT BUILD HERE.

The High Tax on Raw Materials Frightened Him—This Tax Would Keep Him Out of the World's Market—Pauper Labor and Pauper Goods.

The high McKinley duties on many kinds of goods have already compelled some European manufacturers to set up factories in the United States to get their part in the tariff spoils, and still others will doubtless be induced to open branch establishments here.

Republican organs print news about these imported industries with many expressions of satisfaction, and point to the importation of industries as one of the best effects of the McKinley tariff law. But they do not reflect that when a mill-owner in Europe goes to the trouble and expense of shipping his machinery to America, building a new factory and putting it into operation, there must be some special hope of gain held out to him. Protectionists assert that the tariff lowers prices; but clearly the foreign manufacturer does not come here to get lower prices for his goods. He comes for higher prices—for McKinley tariff prices.

An interesting case, however, is that of a German manufacturer of woolen goods, who came here to look over the ground and went home without deciding to build a plant in America. His reasons for not building here are highly interesting from a tariff standpoint. The manufacturer gives the reasons why, after careful observation in his travels and upon ripe reflection, he concluded not to transfer his industry to this country. The first of these he declares to be the high duties on raw wool, yarn and dye stuffs, which make it hard for American manufacturers to compete in the home markets with their European rivals, notwithstanding the heavy duties on woolens, and impossible to secure an outlet for their surplus products in neutral markets. While the American manufacturers of woolens are absolutely and inexorably confined to the home demand, their competitors in England, Germany and France, with free wool, have the world for their customer.

While this manufacturer found the high duties on wool a great hindrance to cheap woolen manufacture in the United States, he did not find near so great a difference in wages as the protectionists have often asserted to exist between this country and Germany. He says that, after personal inquiries in the industrial districts of New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, he finds that the average rate is scarcely 25 per cent. higher than in Germany. He asks what this amounts to when the woolen products are subject to duties ranging from 80 to 100 per cent. Yet the advocates of protective spoliation incessantly repeat the fiction that the McKinley tariff is so adjusted as only to compensate American manufacturers for the difference in wages in this country and in Europe.

The fact is that when the actual production of a day's labor is taken into consideration the wages in the woolen factories of Pennsylvania and Massachusetts are lower than in France and Germany. This has been conclusively shown by experts who have examined the processes of manufacture in this country and in Europe, and have made comparisons as to the actual labor cost in a yard of goods.

Such a comparison the protectionists will never make. They always take the wages paid in Europe by the day or by the week, and compare them with the daily or weekly wages in the United States. Yet it must be clear to even a half-intelligent mind that the only valid comparison is that of the labor cost in the yard, the pound, etc. On this point the great contention of the protectionists as to the "pauper labor" of Europe breaks down completely; for if we can make a yard of cloth with less labor than they can in Europe, it is folly to talk longer about the "pauper-made goods" of Europe.

Truck Farming.

Truck farming is market gardening carried on so far away from centers of consumption as to require railway and vessel carriage to get the products to market. Long lines of railway have made such farming possible, and now North and South Carolina planters can daily send their "truck" to Washington, Baltimore, and Philadelphia. So far the Census Bureau finds that about 600,000 acres of land are devoted to this kind of farming, and that $100,000,000 are invested in the industry, and that the annual products are worth nearly $80,000,000 after paying freights and commissions. These farms employ 217,000 men, 9,000 women, and 15,000 children. Seventy-six thousand horses and mules are employed in the work, and nine million dollars' worth of implements. This industry has sprung into existence in the past ten years, and is growing very rapidly. It seems like pretty good farming which realizes $130 gross income an acre on the land tilled.

FROM Bergen, Norway, comes the news of a practical charity contemplating relief to a deserving class, which, however, in our changing domestic conditions does not make so ready a call upon our sympathies as in older lands. Mrs. C. Soudt has given two houses and 50,000 kr. to establish a home for aged women servants no longer able to work for their own support.

THE bad outlook for the European wheat crop has caused an advance in the price of wheat in our markets. The foreign demand for our wheat, it is thought, will be unusually large this year. As the foreigner buys more largely of our wheat our farmers learn the importance of their foreign market. Would it not be a good thing to enlarge and extend the foreign market for our farm products by taking foreign goods more freely in change for them.

STOWED away in one of the rooms at the Capitol in Montpelier, Vt., are the remains of the first printing press brought to this country. Upon it was printed the freemen's oath for Massachusetts, the first thing printed in British North America.

IF you want to see jerked beef, come down and watch a Texas cowboy lasso a running steer.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

NERVINE TONIC

—AND—

Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar.
It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the Great South American Medicine Company, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by the native inhabitants of South America, who rely almost wholly upon its great medicinal powers to cure every form of disease by which they are overtaken.

This new and valuable South American medicine possesses powers and qualities hitherto unknown to the medical profession. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and diseases of the general Nervous System. It also cures all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the Great Nervine Tonic qualities which it possesses and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body and as a great renewer of a broken down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the Lungs than any ten consumption remedies ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic almost constantly for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir, are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied, and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This recent production of the South American Continent has been found, by analysis, to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its magic power to cure all forms of nervous derangements.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., Aug. 20, '86.

To the Great South American Medicine Co.:

DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If every-one knew the value of this remedy as I do, you would not be able to supply the demand.

J. A. HARDEE,
Ex-Treas. Montgomery Co.

Mr. Solomon Bond, a member of the Society of Friends, of Darlington, Ind., says: "I have used twelve bottles of The Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and I consider that every bottle did for me one hundred dollars worth of good, because I have not had a good night's sleep for twenty years on account of irritation, pain, horrible dreams, and general nervous prostration, which has been caused by chronic indigestion and dyspepsia of the stomach and by a broken down condition of my nervous system. But now I can lie down and sleep all night as sweetly as a baby, and I feel like a sound man. I do not think there has ever been a medicine introduced into this country which will at all compare with this Nervine Tonic as a cure for the stomach."

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., May 19, 1886.

My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with Chorea or St. Vitus's Dance. She was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to handle her like an infant. Doctor and neighbors gave her up. I commenced giving her the South American Nervine Tonic; the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of the nervousness, and rapidly improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the South American Nervine the grandest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to everyone.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., June 22, 1887.

My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus's Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus's Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the Stomach, because the experience and testimony of thousands go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to The Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted Stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I can not express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."

Mrs. M. Russell, Sugar Creek Valley, Ind., writes: "I have used several bottles of the South American Nervine Tonic, and will say I consider it the best medicine in the world. [illegible] It was very surprising how rapidly they both improved on its use. I recommend the medicine to all my neighbors."

J. Brown, Druggist, of Edina, Mo., writes: "My health had been very poor for years when I commenced using South American Nervine. I have used five bottles and weigh 130 pounds, and am much stronger and better than I have been for five years. Am sure [illegible] this remedy. [illegible]"

Teaching Baby Ideas of Space.

Soon baby is curious to touch and handle all he sees. In this he should be indulged; it is a necessary part of his experiments. By comparing touch with sight, he comes to learn of the quality of matter, heat, cold, hardness, softness, weight. He has no idea of extension, and so he stretches out his little hand to lay hold of objects which may be within reach of many yards away, says the Jenness-Miller Magazine. He may even reach for the moon. This is not a command to you to bring him the thing, but only an effort of the senses to understand it. He should be carried about, so that he may learn the right relations of things in space, and in all ways encouraged in his investigations.

The Same—Reversed.

Now and then Senator Leland Stanford tells a joke and smiles wearily as if he almost regretted it was so humorous. Here is an amusing skit of the variety order that he occasionally relates:

"One day I was riding in a street-car in San Francisco, when I overheard a conversation between two men that struck me as peculiarly funny. They may have been comedians rehearsing. One of them said:

"'Well, Bob, I've got a job down town.'

"'Yes? What doing?'

"'Mixing lather.'

"'That's queer; I've got a job up-town in a barber shop lathering micks.'"

"PENNY wise and pound foolish" are those who think it economy to use cheap soda and rosin soaps, instead of the good old Dobbins' Electric Soap; for sale by all grocers. Try it. Be sure, buy genuine.

Bad Eating.

A United States marshal who got lost while hunting in the Indian Territory entered a deserted cabin and slept all night. When he awoke in the morning a big panther, who had occupied the same quarters, uttered a growl and jumped out of the window and ran away. Nothing but the toughness of a tough man prevented him from eating the official.

A Better Outlook.

It has come to that point that when a St. Louis murderer is found in Chicago the police of the latter city will permit him to be arrested and turned over, and St. Louis has actually given up a Chicago wife who eloped with a man and his five children. It has come slow but sure.

EXPOSITION DOINGS.

UNINTERRUPTED PROGRESS OF THE WORK.

Plan of the Exposition Grounds Showing the Location of the Different Departments and Exhibits—Some of the Attractions—The Naval Exhibit, Women's Building, Etc.

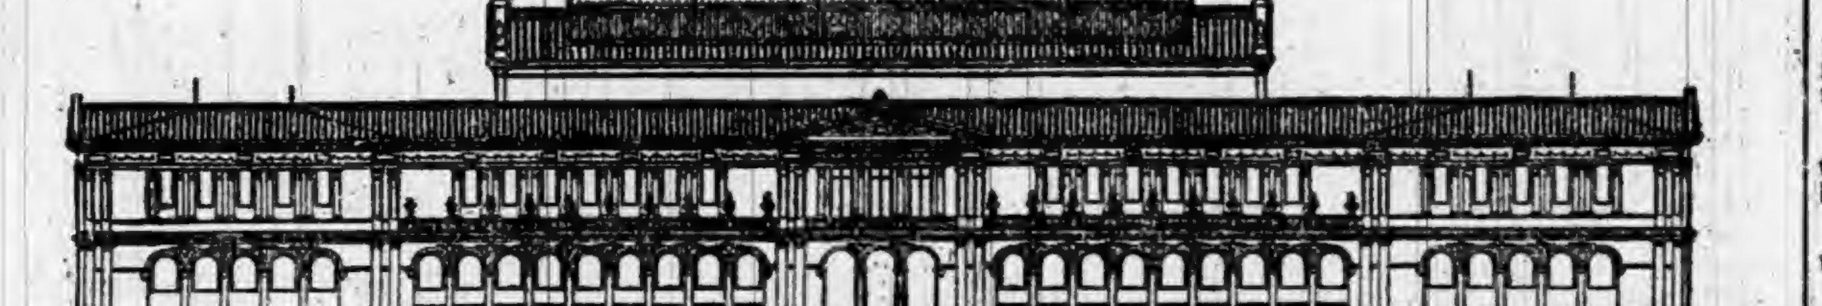
THE World's Columbian Exposition continues to mount every obstacle and to make giant strides towards the realization of all its magnificent and daring aspirations.

Chief of Construction Burnham has partly gratified the curiosity concerning the designs for the twelve principal buildings at Jackson Park, by exhibiting and explaining in person, to the Commission two bird's-eye views of the park and buildings as they will appear in 1893, one looking from the north and one from the south. Mr. Burnham said that the prevailing color of the buildings would be white, of an ivory tone, richly diversified with other colors. The drawings and the explanation completely captivated the Commission.

The Massachusetts Legislature is the first in the country to send a committee to Chicago to look after the interests of a State exhibit. This committee consists of Senator James Donovan, and Representatives Charles H. Boody, Louis E. P. Moreau, Myron T. Ferrin, and Haile R. Luther. They thoroughly posted themselves in everything pertaining to the Exposition, and expressed themselves as both delighted and surprised at what they saw and learned.

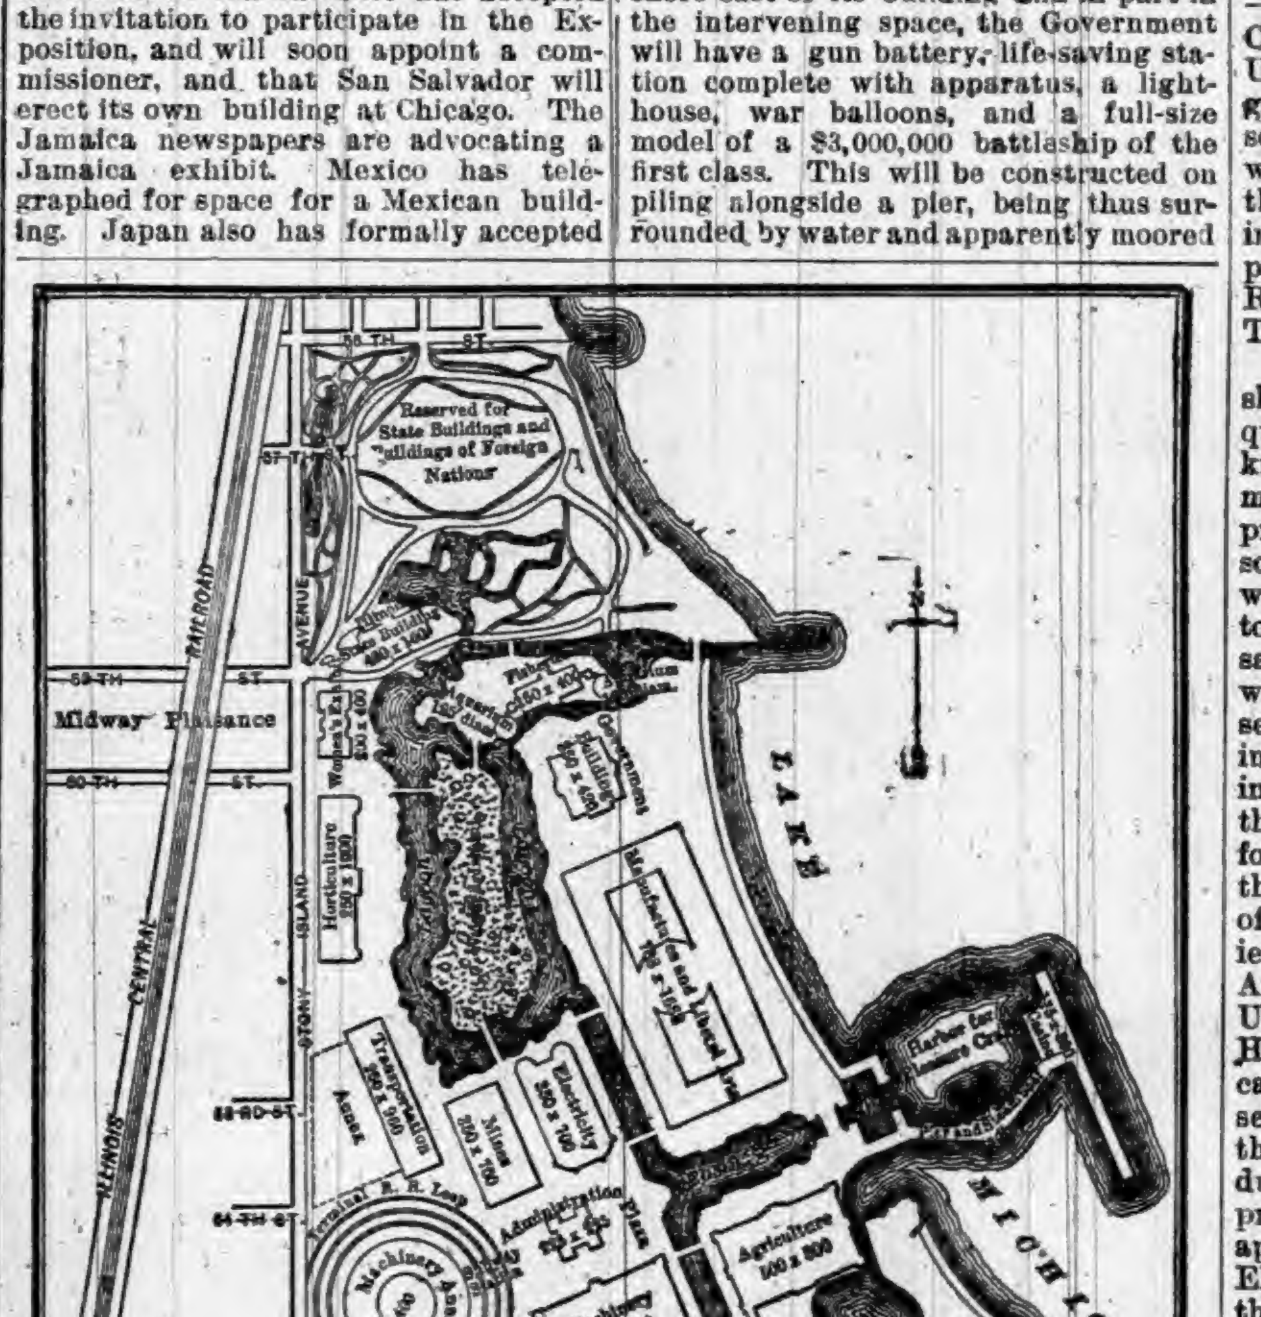
Abraham Moukad, an intelligent young Syrian, born at and still a resident of Damascus has applied to the Ways and Means Committee for facilities for making a Syrian exhibit. He proposes to have four natives weaving an embroidery, four making Syrian music, and four selling coffee, made and served in Syrian fashion. Its greatest attraction, however, will be a reproduction of the Christian antiquities of Damascus, including a part of the "street called straight," the house of Cornelius, in which the Apostle Paul was converted, and the part of the city wall from which he was let down in a basket.

Undoubtedly one of the greatest wonders that will be exhibited at the Exposition will be the "sliding railway," to be constructed by the Societe de Chemins de Fer Glissants, of Paris. This railway was exhibited at the Paris Exposition, and is pronounced by Chauncey Depew the greatest wonder of the age. M. Barre, the inventor, is now constructing one three miles long in London, and will arrive in Chicago this spring to make arrangements for the erection of one two miles long on the Exposition grounds. The cars are provided with slides which move in iron grooves, but are held above the iron by hydraulic pressure, so as to practically annihilate friction. They are also propelled by hydraulic pressure, and easily attain a speed of 200 miles an hour.



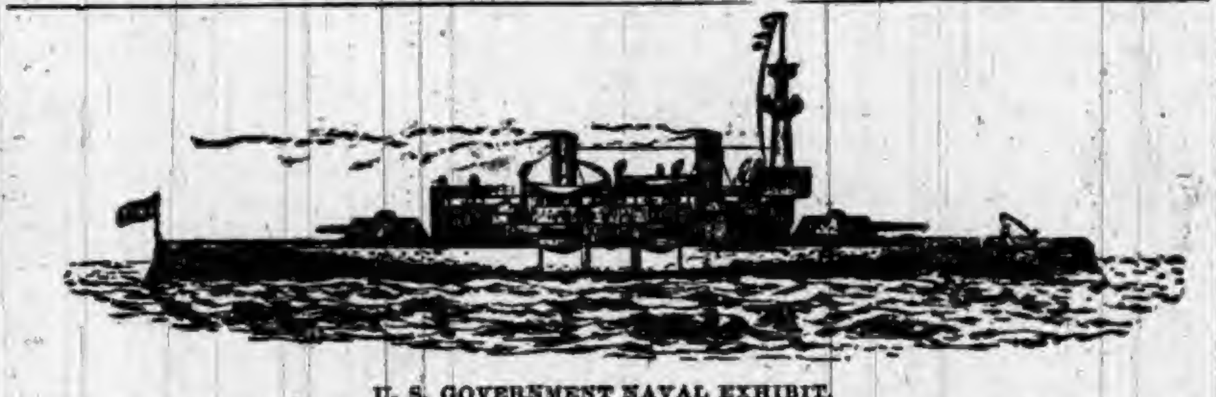
THE WOMEN'S BUILDING.

There have been during the week the usual indications of increasing interest in the Exposition in foreign countries, especially on the American continent. The Governor General of Cuba, not content with organizing a commission of the most prominent citizens of Havana to look after the Cuban exhibit, has now ordered that a similar commission be organized in every province of the island, under the guidance of the Presidents of the respective provincial deputations. News has been received also that the President of San Salvador has accepted the invitation to participate in the Exposition, and will soon appoint a commissioner, and that San Salvador will erect its own building at Chicago. The Jamaica newspapers are advocating a Jamaica exhibit. Mexico has telegraphed for space for a Mexican building. Japan also has formally accepted the invitation, and a bill appropriating 500,000 Japanese dollars for a Japanese exhibit has passed the lower house of Parliament.



GROUND PLAN OF THE EXPOSITION GROUNDS.

The first sight-seeing which visitors to Chicago in 1893 will do will be, of course, of the city itself—of its great, wide, busy thoroughfares and its magnificent buildings, ten, fourteen, and even eighteen and twenty stories high. To see this great, throbbing commercial heart of America, this marvelous young giant among the chief cities of the world, even though he does not spend the time necessary to inspect it thoroughly, will alone amply repay the visitor for going. But a second surprise will await him when he catches his first glimpse of Jackson and Washington Parks and the magnificent array presented by the Exposition Buildings. Beautiful as was the site—the Champs de Mars—and its approaches, and captivating to the admiration as were the graceful and imposing edifices at the Paris Expositions of 1878 and 1889, it is believed that they will be surpassed by those of the Columbian Exposition. The Chicago site is four times as large and has a frontage of two miles on Lake Michigan, the second largest body of fresh water on the globe. The buildings will cover twice the area and cost twice as much as did those at Paris in 1889. Alone they will cost nearly fifty per cent. more than the total expense attending the Paris Fair. The best architects in this country have prepared the plans for the several buildings, and the structures they have designed will exhibit the highest achievements of American architecture.



U. S. GOVERNMENT NAVAL EXHIBIT.

More than $4,000,000, exclusive of the cost of the land, has been spent on Jackson and Washington Parks, in laying them out and beautifying them. Another million will be spent in improving the former, which will be the chief location of the Exposition. Additional lawns, terraces, flower-beds, rustic seats, walks, drives, and fountains will be constructed; statuary will be placed at conspicuous points; the lagoon will be enlarged by sinuous branches, and the lake beach will be made a charming resort for visitors.

The most delightful, probably, though not the speediest means by which the visitor may reach the Exposition grounds, will be by steamboat on Lake Michigan. A ride of six miles from the embarking point at the Lake Front Park, with the towers and gilded domes of the Fair buildings constantly in sight, will take him there. When abreast of the site, a grand spectacle of surpassing magnificence will be before him—the vast extent of the beautiful park; the windings of the lagoon; the superb array of scores of great buildings, elegant and imposing in their architecture and gay with myriads of flags and streamers floating from their pinnacles and towers; and towering above them all the lofty Proctor Tower. In the northern portion of the grounds he will see a picturesque group of buildings, perhaps forty or fifty of them. Here, on a hundred acres or more, beautifully laid out, will stand the buildings of foreign nations and of a number of the States of the Union, surrounded by lawns, walks and beds of flowers and shrubbery. How many of them there will be cannot be stated yet, but it is certain that they will be numerous and will vary greatly in size and style of architecture. They will be ranged on wide, curving avenues, will include some of the most ornate, costly and palatial structures, and constitute, perhaps, the most interesting portion of the Exposition. In the western part of the group will stand the Illinois building, 400x150 in size, and costing $350,000. It will be severely classic in style, with a dome in the center and a porch facing southward. In this portion of the park, too, will stand the Fine Arts building, which is to be a magnificent palace costing half a million. Just south of the foreign and State buildings may be observed a considerable expanse of the lagoon, with inlet to the lake, and encompassing three islands. On the largest one will stand the U. S. fisheries building, 700 feet in length and flanked at each end by a curved arcade connecting it with two round pavilions in which will be the aquaria and the tackle exhibit.

A little further south, across an area of the lagoon, will be the United States Government building, measuring 350x420 feet and having a dome 120 feet in diameter and 150 feet high. On the lake shore east of its building and in part in the intervening space, the Government will have a gun battery, life-saving station complete with apparatus, a lighthouse, war balloons, and a full-size model of a $3,000,000 battleship of the first class. This will be constructed on piling alongside a pier, being thus surrounded by water and apparently moored at a wharf. The "ship" will be built of brick and coated with cement. It will be 348 feet long, 69 feet wide amidships, and will have all the fittings and apparatus that belong to the most approved war vessel, such as guns, turrets, torpedo tubes, torpedo nets and booms, boats, anchors, military mast, etc., and a full complement of seamen and marines detailed from the Navy Department.

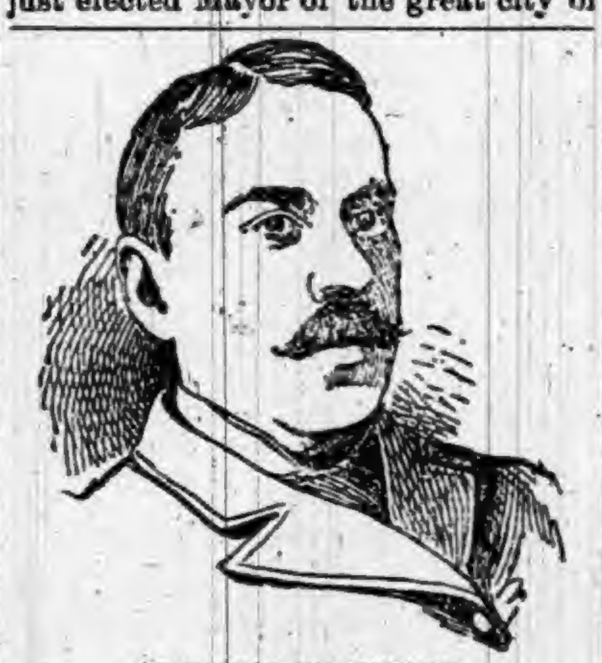
Directly opposite the park entrance of Midway Plaisance will stand the Women's Building, which, it is expected, will be one of the chief objects of interest on the grounds. It is to be 400x200 feet in dimensions, two stories high, and will cost $200,000. It will be built from designs prepared by Miss Sophia G. Hayden, of Boston. A prize competition for designs was invited, and Miss Hayden carried off the first prize of $1,000. Here the lady managers will have their headquarters, and here will be collected a doubtless wonderful exhibit illustrating the progress and attainments of women in the various branches of industry.

CHICAGO'S NEW MAYOR.

Hempstead Washburne a Representative of Distinguished Servitors of the People.

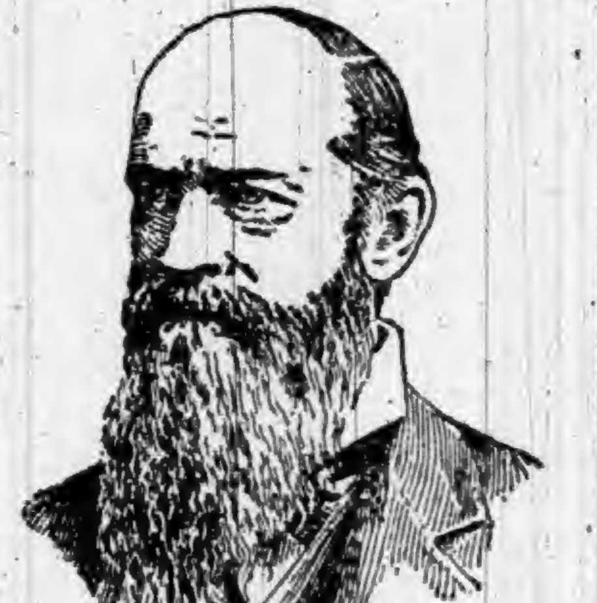
The most hotly contested Mayoralty fight that the city of Chicago ever experienced ended in the election of Hempstead Washburne, Republican.

Hempstead Washburne comes of a distinguished family, whose American history begins with John Washburne, who was the first secretary of the Council of Plymouth. The name has figured in many of the great events in our national history from this pilgrim father down. The great record of Elihu B. Washburne, of whom the just elected Mayor of the great city of Chicago is the son, is the common property of his countrymen.



HEMPSTEAD WASHBURNE.

There were seven brothers of this distinguished family, Israel, Jr., Algernon Sydney, Elihu B., Cadwalader C., Samuel B., Charles E., and William D., all now dead except the last named, who represents Minnesota in the Senate of the United States. At one time three of the brothers were in Congress at the same time, Israel, Jr., from Maine, Cadwalader C. from Wisconsin, and Elihu B. from Illinois. Among the Washburnes were four Congressmen, two Governors, two United States Ministers to foreign governments, and two distinguished soldiers. The father of the new Mayor, whose history is closely identified with that of the State of Illinois, was born in Maine in 1816, having come of a progenitor who fought through the Revolutionary war from Lexington to Ticonderoga.



DE WITT C. CREGIER, THE RETIRING MAYOR.

Hempstead Washburne has already shown himself possessed of many of the qualities for which his father was known. Like him, he is an uncompromising Republican and believes in the principles of that party with all his soul. He is a native of Illinois, but was educated at the home of his ancestors in Maine, and attended the same school at Kent's Hill in which his father prepared himself for college. Graduating there in 1871 he immediately joined his father in Paris, where he witnessed many of the stirring scenes which preceded the formation of the French republic. He then entered the celebrated University of Bonn, in Germany. Here he studied two years, and then returned to America to finish his education at the University of Wisconsin at Madison. He graduated in 1874 and went to Chicago, being the first of his family to select that city as his home. Entering the Union College of Law and being duly admitted to the bar, he began the practice of his profession there, and was appointed master in chancery by Judge Elliot Anthony in 1876. He served in this capacity until 1885, when he was elected city attorney by the Republicans, who re-elected him to a second term. He was a faithful servant, and a just prosecutor.

The young Republicans of the Fourth Congressional district sought to make him their candidate for a seat in the national legislature in 1888, but when Congressman Adams became the preference of that body of his party, he turned all his energies to the support of the successful man. It was his first defeat, but it did not change his fealty and allegiance as a Republican, pure and simple.

MR. PETROFF, who had charge of the census of Alaska, estimates the population of the Territory at from 35,000 to 38,000. Of this number one seventh are white.

Don't Throw Up the Sponge!

That hideous ogre, Giant Despair, often fastens his clutch upon the chronic invalid. Constantly plagued by dyspepsia, biliousness, and constipation—nervous and sleepless, too—what wonder is it that, having tried in vain a multitude of useless remedies, he is ready, figuratively speaking, to "throw up the sponge." Let the unfortunate "take heart of grace." Hostetter's Stomach Bitters can and will put a terminus to his trials. It strengthens the stomach, confers nervous vigor by promoting assimilation of the food, arouses the liver when dormant, and relaxes the bowels without pain. The ability to digest and assimilate restored, the ability to sleep follows. Nothing then can stay the renewal of health but imprudence. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, moreover, transcends all others as a remedy for malarial, rheumatic, and kidney complaints. A wineglassful three times a day.

Carried Too Far.

A farmer from Nankin Township was at police headquarters Saturday to give notice that some one had stolen about twenty bushels of oats from his barn.

"When did you miss them?" was asked.

"On the 1st."

"And this is the 4th. You should have reported sooner."

"Well, you see, the 1st was April Fool's Day, and I thought some one had stolen the oats as a good joke on me. I'm a great hand for jokes myself, and I like to have lots of fun going on around me, but this is a leetle too steep. I've waited four days for some one to bring the bags back, and now I guess I'll have to make trouble for some one."—Detroit Free Press.

Circus Towns.

The press agent of Barnum's circus says there are sixty first or money-making cities for circuses in the United States, and the only one-week stands are New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago and St. Louis. Strange as it may seem, Mr. Hamilton declares that there are but five other cities where a show can remain with profit during two days, and they are Baltimore, Washinton, Cincinnati Pittsburgh, and New Orleans. All of the West, including Kansas City with its nearly 200,000 inhabitants, will not support a circus longer than one day.

Scurvy and Scorbutic Affections, Pimples and Blotches on the Skin, Bad Legs; Ulcers, Wounds, &c., &c.

The cause of all these complaints is in the blood, and it often happens that they are floating in the blood a long time before they break out on the body.

This class of diseases requires that the blood be powerfully and perseveringly acted upon, in order to cleanse it from all the morbid humors which have been floating about in it, perhaps for many months. It is of no use to heal the sore by outward applications, for in so doing you only get rid of one trouble to make way for a much worse in a short time.

If there were absolute truth on the one hand and absolute confidence on the other, it wouldn't be necessary for the makers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy to back up a plain statement of fact by a $500 guarantee.

They say—"If we can't cure you (make it personal, please,) of catarrh in the head, in any form or stage, we'll pay you $500 for your trouble in making the trial."

"An advertising fake," you say.

He Has Not Secured His Pension.

The following Salem pension story matches the one I told a week or two ago. A veteran soldier of that town who applied for a pension was obliged to forward to Washington some testimony as to his disability, and this is the affidavit that he presented to his lawyer: "This is to certify that John Jones worked for me before the war and since. He doesn't do half a day's work now and never could." Jones' counsel thought that the testimony would not help along the claimant's case, and he wisely concluded not to send it.—Boston Traveller.

A Dead Law for Idiots.

There is a law in Michigan to punish the idiot who points a gun at a friend to see him jump, but it is practically a dead-letter. Indeed, no law can be framed to properly punish a person who was born without the necessary filling in his head. We must simply wait until he pours kerosene on the fire or sits down in front of a buzz saw.

GUS. A. DUBOIS, a well-known resident of St. Louis, says: "I have used several bottles of Prickly Ash Bitters for billiousness and malarial troubles, so prevalent in this climate, and heartily recommend it to all afflicted in a like manner. It is the best remedy I ever used."

Couldn't Recover.

A man in Dubuque sued a barber for having given him the barber's itch. The barber proved in court that the man drank from five to fifteen glasses of beer per day, and was unclean in his habits, and the jury returned for the defendant. They decided that he started the itch on himself.

PRICKLY ASH BITTERS

One of the most important organs of the human body is the LIVER. When it fails to properly perform its functions the entire system becomes deranged. The BRAIN, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS, all refuse to perform their work. DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, RHEUMATISM, KIDNEY DISEASE, etc., are the results, unless something is done to assist Nature in throwing off the impurities caused by the inaction of a TORPID LIVER. This assistance so necessary will be found in

Prickly Ash Bitters!

It acts directly on the LIVER, STOMACH and KIDNEYS, and by its mild and cathartic effect and general tonic qualities restores these organs to a sound, healthy condition, and cures all diseases arising from these causes. It PURIFIES THE BLOOD, tones up the system, and restores perfect health. If your druggist does not keep it ask him to order it for you. As to a City Government.

The few words in the COURIER of last week, had a good effect, for it set people to thinking over the matter. That is always a desirable thing. If people will study these questions, they will be able to decide in a satisfactory way. Then, in this case, if after studying up the facts, they decide to have a city government, they are entitled to have it. But if they decide that they do not want one, it would be wrong to push the matter further. For our own part, we feel some doubts as to the advisability of a change. It is likely a city government would increase our expenses, at least a little They are large enough now, and the only question remaining in this connection is, will the new form gives us money enough besides what we now get, to make up this extra expense? We do not believe it will. It appears to us, with our present efficient board, and the one we will have after election is over, that we can go on with our improvements just as well, as we now are, with our present form of government. Our success under either form must depend mainly on the men who are chosen to control our affairs. Let them go on, as they have done, giving us an intelligent, business-like and vigorous administration of our affairs, and we will not need any change. That is the way it now looks to us. But we do not say this form should always continue. In two or three years, we may find it to our advantage to make the change, but we think the time has not come yet. Still, if a majority of our people want the change, we admit their right to ask for it, and if the change is made, we shall do all we can to make it profitable to our town and its people. But at present we do not feel that the change would be a benefit. It must be noticed, however, that the vote at the election, "for" or "against," binds no one. It is merely to get the sense of the people.

SAMUEL BRICKER, Owner.

Says it Will be Cleveland.

J. S. Clarkson, Harrison's right hand man, his first assistant postmaster-general, was last week elected president of the national league of the republicans, at the great Cincinnati meeting. His opinions on his own party, and its newspapers, as well as on ex-president Cleveland, are worth reading. This is what he said.

"The next republican candidate for president," said Mr. Clarkson, "must be a man broad enough to cover this broad land and able to administer justice on all the different interests. President Harrison has made a faithful executive, in every public sense, and is lacking only in the personal popularity which gives a man the power of electricity in politics. He has demonstrated his qualities fully and his pure intellectual ability is not second to that of any American living today, not even to his phenomenal secretary of state. Whoever is the republican candidate must be a man who can maintain the solidity of the party in the great agricultural region west of the Mississippi. The candidate must not only be near to the people, but must not be far from the farm. All political parties will go more closely to the farms hereafter than they have in the past fifty years. The farmers are going to assert themselves in public affairs and for the good of the race."

Mr. Clarkson said he believed that Mr. Cleveland would be the next democrtic candidate. "If his personal views on the silver question do not quite suit the south and west, he will make them suit. He feels that the gold people will trust him anyway, and as the western and southern democracy believe in him as a man of destiny he can successfully hypnotize them on the silver question, and I think he is doing it. Ex-President Cleveland is one of the smartest politicians that his party has ever had and the republican party has alway underestimated him in this respect.

"To win in 1892," said Mr. Clarkson, "we must bring up the republican newspaper circulation to meet that of the democratic party in its program to circulate tens of millions of arguments directty to the houses of the voters."

Obituary.

Mrs. G. D. Denison departed this life, April 24, 1891, at her home near Waterloo, Ind., aged 71 yrs, 9 mos. and 11 days. April 28, 1890, Mr. and Mrs. Denison celebrated the fifthieth anniversary of their marriage, which was a grand re-union of all their living children; one daughter having died four years ago. At her death she leaves 7 children, 29 grandchildren and 6 great-grandchildren. The following is a biography written by herself, one year previous to her death:

"My maiden name was Saloma E. Fenner. I was born in Bucks County, Pa., July 13, 1819. I moved with my parents to Tompkins County, N. Y. In 1833, we emigrated to Plymouth, Richland County, Ohio. April 28, 1840, I became the wife of G. D. Denison. This union was blessed with 12 children; two pairs of twins who died in infancy, except one who lived until she was 16 months old—Little Clara. The rest all lived to be men and women, 4 sons and 4 daughters, all married and have families. In 1868, we emigrated to DeKalb County, Ind., where we remained until death. At the age of 20 years I united with the Presbyterian church; was baptized in infancy. After we were married, we both joined the Methodist church and remained in same until we removed to DeKalb County. This is written in my 70th year."

MRS. G. D. DENISON.

In Memory of Annie E. Pipes.

Lines on the death of Mrs. Annie E. Pipes, who departed this world, April 10th, 1890.

Dearest Annie, thou hast left us,
In our midst there is a vacant place,
Thou hast gone to dwell with Jesus,
In the heavenly realms of rest and grace.

A loving daughter, here among the many,
Thou didst regard us all with a sister's tenderest care,
An affectionate, dutiful wife, oh, Anna,
We'll meet thee in that world so fair.

Thou art gone from this land of care and strife,
To the regions of eternal peace and rest,
Thou art enjoying a purer, happier life,
In heaven, eternally and forever blest.

Thou hast left us, dearest sister,
Thou hast crossed the snowy tide,
Thou art with Jesus, sin's own resister,
In that world of endless glory deep and wide.

Thou hast gone to rest at life's even,
Away from this world of pain and care,
Thou hast been a year in heaven,
It seems but yesterday since you were there.

There is here on earth a vacant chair,
A place which never can be filled,
Thou'rt now in the Saviour's loving care,
Whose precious blood on the cruel cross was spilled.

How to Conduct Town Elections.

The election commissioners see that ballots are printed, and must count and seal them up in packages. There must be ten for each five votes as shown by the last election, and for any fraction of five. At the opening of the polls the inspector opens the package of ballots in presence of the other election officers in such a way as not to break the seals. He then gives to the poll clerk of opposite politics to his own, 25 ballots, and to the other poll clerk, the stamps for marking. Both clerks then write their initials with ink, across the lower left hand corner of the back of the ballots. Then when a ballot is taken away by a voter the inspector hands the clerks another and they both write their initials on that, and so on. This keeps 25 ballots on hand all the time. The ballot signed first is given out first, and so on to the end.

Before opening the polls, the inspector shall administer the oath to one of the judges, and that judge shall then administer the oath to the inspector. The inspector will then take the oath of the other members of the board, including poll clerk. See secs. 7, 8 and 9 of law, page 31 to 32. At 6 p. m. they must close by the inspector calling aloud to outsiders that the polls have closed.

The election commissioners must retain all the ballots not delivered to the inspectors, till the election closes, and then count them and burn all but one, which they shall paste on the election record, immediately preceding the place where the vote is to be recorded.

The inspector also counts and burns all the ballots left over, as soon as the polls close. But any ballots not received because purposely marked or mutilated or shown by the voter, must be preserved in a package for future use if needed. At close of the count, all those counted are burned. But contested ballots, and those on which the board could not agree or which could not be made out, must be preserved in a sealed package, and these with all the books, etc., must be returned to the clerk.

The board should have a copy of the election law, blank oaths for use of voters, etc., etc., as they may be needed.

A National Event.

That holding of the world's Fair in a city scarcely fifty years old will really benefit this nation as much as the discovery of the Restorative Nervine by Dr. Franklin Miles is doubtful. This is just what the American people need to cure their excessive nervousness, dyspepsia, headache, dizziness, sleeplessness neuralgia, nervous debility, dullness, confusion of mind, etc. It acts like a charm. Trial bottles and fine book on "Nervous and Heart Diseases," with unexualed testimonials, free at F. E. Davenport's. It is warranted to contain no opium, morphine or dangerous drugs. 4

Simpson "As much as is said against sin, it is honest." Jimpson "What do you mean?" "It is prompt with its wages."

Remarkable Facts.

Heart disease is usually supposed to be incurable, but when properly treated a large proportion of cases can be cured. Thus Mrs. Elmira Hatch, of Elkhart, Ind., and Mrs. L. Baker, of Ovid, Mich., were cured after suffering 20 years. S. C. Limburger, druggist at San Jose, Ill., says that Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, which caused the former, "worked wonders for his wife." Levi Logan, of Buchanan, Mich., who had heart disease for thirty years, says two bottles made him "feel like a new man.,, Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is sold and guarranteed by F. E. Davenport. Book of wonderful testimonials free. 4

Dick "I'm going to the races. Want me to put up something for you?" George "I haven't a cent, Dick. I was there yesterday."

Guaranteed Cure for LaGrippe.

We authorize our advertised druggist to sell you Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, upon this condition. If you are afflicted with la grippe and will use this remedy according to directions, giving it a fair trial, and experience no benefit, you may return the bottle and have your money refunded. We make this offer, because of the wonderful success of Dr. King's New Discovery during last season's epidemic. Have heard of no case in which it failed. Try it. Trial bottles free at Robbins & McCord's drugstore. Large size 50cts., and $1.00. 4

Good Looks.

Good looks are more than skin deep, depending upon a healthy condition of all the vital organs. If the liver be inactive, you have a bilious look, if your stomach be disordered you have a dyspeptic look and if your kidneys be affected you have a pinched look. Secure good health and you will have good looks. Electric Bitters is the great alternative and tonic acts directly on these vital organs. Cures pimples, blotches boils and gives a good complexion. Sold at Robbins & McCords drugstore 50c. per bottle. 4

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

1847.

In a few years a new community has been formed, the forest has disappeared beneath the sturdy arm of the emigrant, his children have grown up, the hardy offspring of the new clime, and the rising settlement is already linked in all particulars and associations with that from which its fathers and founders had wandered.

Such for the most part, is the manner in which the new states have been built up; and in this way a firm foundation was laid by nature herself for peace, cordiality and brotherly feeling between earlier and the more recent settlements of this country.

Two classes widely differed from our pioneers, the one a hunting and trapping people, who not infrequently consorted with the Indian in his rude shelter or led a lonely life by stream or lake and when too many clearings drove back the game, ever followed away to the foothills and ravines of the mountains of the far west; the other a people lacking fortitude, who were excited by stories of western chances, came hither only to suffer with disease and privation and to return with tales of discouragement. Their numbers were limited and their departure was a relief to the community which with inherent manhood, had resolved to make the best of it, and gradually won themselves good homes which they long lived and still live to enjoy.

It is an impressive truth to which the present generation give little thought that they yet have with them, survivors of two classes of people to whom they owe all the comforts, security and privileges they quietly enjoy.

The first is the venerable pioneers who for many years endured the discomforts and encountered the perils of isolated life in this new country to found the villages and towns, to lay out the roads, and clear up the lands and farms of what are now the foremost states of the great republic.

The second is the prematurely aged veterans of the war of the rebellion, whose self-sacrifice and valor, maintained the integrity of the union and preserved to them, a nation.

Each did their duty well, each is entitled to far greater consideration than, at a cursory glance, would appear to be their due. Whether at Old Settlers' Meetings or Soldiers' Reunions, all honors to these veterans—women in full measure with men, are most worthily betowed.

Ten years had now gone by since John B. Howe and Wesley Park had platted Auburn's original site. In that decade, Mr. Park had been a conspicuous figure at the county seat and while others came and went away, he and a few others stood by the village and gladly welcomed and hospitably entertained at times for months, the families of those who had come to make the place their home.

Although the population of the county had greatly increased, the village was but a straggling settlement in the woods bounded eastward by the marshy bottom lands through which the sluggish waters of Cedar Creek made way in shifting channels. Its buildings were composed in part of log cabins, small frames, and unpretentious store rooms. The residences fenced in by rails, stood close upon the street. On many a lot, the only and doubtful "improvement" was the felled trees, and the assessed valuation of the town including real estate, improvements and personal property was but $11,224.

Illustrative of the type of humble structures in which the leading men of that day, transacted business, we refe to the little office that John Morris was permitted to build on an area of twenty feet square on the "west end of the public square, thirty feet north of the clerk and recorders' office, fronting West street, (Main street,) to use till wanted for public use. For this site he was to pay the sum of $1. annual rent."

The old jail of which mention has been made, was of like primitive character and Thomas Lack, foreman of the grand jury of one of the court terms of those days making report of condition of the county jail as have grand juries down to the present time, presented the following unique document for record: "Inspected county prison and find the same suitable for the safe keeping and accommodation of prisoners confined therein, provided the prisoners have no assistance from without, in which case, the said prison would prove a very poor barrier to gentlemen wishing egress."

Samuel Widney and Nelson Payne were associate justices in 1847, and that year held both spring and fall terms of court, James W. Borden, president of the twelfth judicial circuit being absent.

Reuben J. Dawson was appointed and served as special prosecutor and T. R. Dickinson was admitted to practice.

Much the same class of cases came before that court as usually engrosses the time of present officials. An indictment was found against a party for selling spirituous liquors without license, and other violations of law were full as numerous as at this date, in proportion to the population.

Publication of legal notices was made in the Ft. Wayne Sentinel and the tax list again very large, was published by Auditor Waterman in the LaGrange County Democrat, of which L. D. Owen was publisher and B. G. Bennet, editor.

(To be continued next week.)

WATERLOO.

Wm. Bigler of Angola, spent Sunday at Waterloo.

W. Sewell of Auburn, was here Monday morning.

Thursday last Mr. Bants of Benton, was in our town.

Sunday last Mrs. Dr. Carpenter spent with friends near Hudson.

Miss Blair and her sister Rose drove over to Auburn Friday afternoon.

For several days and nights the weather has been so cold as to require fires to sit by.

Tuesday evening Prof. Davis gives his quarterly recital at the Presbyterian church.

John Fisher and wife are making arrangements to remove to Ft. Wayne shortly.

Bishop Becker preached last Sunday morning in the U. B. church to a large congregation.

H. Bartholomew is now at home in Waterloo, having quit work in the flouring mills at Auburn.

Rev. J. M. DeWeese preached a sermon Sunday evening, that pleased some of his hearers much, indeed his sermons generally are highly spoken of.

Miss Amelia Patterson who has been been out of health for some time died Sunday morning at 9 o'clock. The funeral was from the residence Tuesday at 10 a. m.

The cold weather and sharp winds we are having is trying to those who have had the grip during the winter and spring. As a rule these do not regain their strength, and a little over exertion sets them back, with less strength than before.

Misses Kitty and Nellie Koons have spent ten weeks in Grand Rapids for the benefit of spring styles in dresses and wraps, and feel well paid for the time spent. They were a few days in Kalamazoo where some firms receive their goods directly from New York. They returned Wednesday, ready for work and believing they can give good satisfaction to their customers.

The L. M. C. held their regular election of officers last week, Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Mary Boozer, with the following result; Mrs. Florence Waterman, president; Mrs. Rena Smith, vice-president; Mrs. Mary Boozer, secretary; Mrs. Chloe Kennedy treasurer; Mrs. Olive Jackman, critic; Mrs. S. C. S. Winslow, custodian of queries.

BUTLER.

The roads have so far improved that we can indulge in pleasant drives.

J. A. Campbell, wife and little daughter, Sunday with friends in Toledo.

A little son of L. Freeborn's is reported to have suffered the fracture of one of its limbs.

The strictures indulged in last week, in regard to the candidates for marshal, were perhaps slightly ill-timed. A long accuaintance with Mr. Hose, before he sold liquor, had gained for him a very good reputation, and we were slow to lower our estimate even afterward, and watched him closely to see if a man could sell whisky without drinking it too. We thought he was doing it, until later when we came to the conclusion that he was drinking, and this led us to the remarks of last week. Mr. Hose tells us that he is not drinking, and as this was our only objection, we cheerfully recall any thing we said that would detract from his worth as a citizen and gentleman.

A very severe the storm passed over this place last Thursday. The lightning played many pranks. A bolt entered Levi Stamps house on East North street, shattering the chimney and doing considerable other damage setting fire in different places, which was extinguished. The inmates were severely shocked, but not seriously injured. During the same storm a small barn on the DeForest farm just east of town, was struck and totally destroyed. Mr. Morrow, who farms the place, hastily left his work and put his two teams in the barn and hastened to the house, he had been in the house but a few minutes when some one gave the alarm and looking toward the barn, it was a mass of flames. His four horses perished; also all his harness and grain. Loss about $500, covered by insurance in J. A. Campbell's agency. On the same day, Levi Stoy, an old and well-known citizen who formerly lived at Stoy's Corners, in Stafford, but who now lives in Franklin township, suffered the total loss of his dwelling by fire, which originated from a spark from the flue lodging in the roof. Most of his house hold effects were saved. His loss will be about $500. We learn that he carried a little insurance in the DeKalb County Mutual.

CORUNNA.

J. Loveland was at Auburn last Friday.

Mrs. N. Blaisdell still continues very poorly.

Dave Shook drove over to Auburn last Thursday.

Mrs. D. Thomas, south of town, is seriously ill.

E. Knauer was at Kendallville last week on business.

Mrs. Stonebraker, who has been quite sick, is now better.

Mr. Casey, of Mich., is in town, the guest of B. Chaffee and wife,

S. Fisher and wife, of Waterloo, were Sunday visitors in this place.

C. H. Knapp has been making decided improvements at the postoffice.

G. Harding and Percy Alling drove over to Auburn Monday afternoon.

Mr. Chaney has his new residence in the north part of town well started.

Mr. Cristy and wife, of Kendallville, visited with relatives in town over Sunday.

F. G. Fried was suddenly taken very ill Saturday, and is still confined to the house.

Misses Alma Husselman and Mertie Bower, of Fairfield were in town last Thursday.

M. J. Thomas and family and C. H. Knapp and family, were visitiing in the country Sunday.

Wm. Dailey and wife, of Auburn, were in town over Sunday, visiting with relatives and friends.

Mrs. N. Blaisdell's sister, who has been visiting her several days, returned to her home at Kendallville Saturday.

Miss Sylvia Sherven, of Pierceton, who has been visiting with her sister, Mrs. J. Blaisdell, returned home Saturday.

Quite a number of the young folks surprised Miss Rosa Calkin Friday evening, in honor of her eighteenth birthday anniversary.

Dr. Rudolph, of Fairfield Center now occupies the residence purchased of Dr. Snyder. The doctor and his estimable family are a welcome addition to our little town.

CONCORD.

H. Baker will shortly ship a large amount of hubs.

Rev. T. E. Lancaster, of Muncie, was here Monday last.

James Hennessy is improving his property with a nice fence.

Miss Lilly Jones, of Edgerton, Ohio, is here visiting her sister Birdie Fetters.

Mrs. Will Sheldon, of Garrett, spent a few days with her parents near Spencerville.

Mrs. Joseph Stopher and son, of Maysville, were in attendance at the meeting Thursday.

Mrs. M. George and daughter, of Auburn were the guests of Mrs. Henry Sebert last week.

S. Wasson and wife, Sherm Keller and wife, of Garrett, spent Sunday with his parents, C. Keller.

F. Wise and wife, C. A. Rhodes and wife, of Spencerville, were the guests of J. B. Gifford last Sunday.

The District meeting, held here April 28th to 30th, was both lively and beneficial to all who attended. Notwithstanding the busy time with the farmers, the attendance was fair.

Rev. H. Stackhouse, of Kendallville, Rev. F. M. Hussey, of Adrian, Mich., W. H. Green, J. M. Reeves, of New Haven, Dr. Omo, of Maysville, John M. Henderson and wife were the guests of G. W. Draggoo and family last week.

Dedicatory exercises as follows: Love feast lead by H. Stackhouse, anthem, invocation. At 10:30 the dedicatory sermon was delivered by Rev. M. Hussey, of Adrian, Mich. The sermon was eloquent and impressive. The debt was reported to be $818. Only a short time elapsed until they had the required amount. Then the church was dedicated to the M. P. denomination. The evening sermon was conducted by Rev. H. Stackhouse, of Kendallville, also communion services in the evening.

UNION CHAPEL.

Wm. Healy is the proud father of a young girl baby.

Farmers have finished sowing oats and are plowing for corn.

Harmon Luce raised the frame of his new barn last Friday.

Elmer Mochamer has been suffering the past week with the grip.

Mrs. Elizabeth Lutz has been visiting with Samuel Brown and wife.

Rev. Hussey, of Michigan, visited with W. L. Hines and wife last week.

Obe Boren, of Jackson township, has been working for George Vanziles.

Byron Cosper now tell his friends, that he is the father of a fine young boy.

Elmer Mochamer can now be called papa. A new daughter at his house.

Miss Zula Cosper, of Auburn, is visiting with her parents and friends of this neighborhood.

G. D. McGowan came home from Chicago last week. Since coming home he has been quite sick.

It is nothing to see the remains of what had once been a buggy in passing along the road. Too fast and reckless driving.

Arnold Blodget, Mort Wilson and James Sherwood, went off fishing last Thursday. They report a good time, but not many fish.

The Sun, the golden orb of day, had just sunk behind a bank of summer clouds, twilight had already gathered, when, as if by some heady current or local vortex, wheeled into sight, John Topper. There was nothing surprising in his appearance, as he has been handling dry goods for a number of years in this country, and we are all acquainted with "Honest John." But the romance deepens. Seated beside Mr. Topper was a lady and when he dashed up and introduced her as his wife, we were surprised. He said that he was going to quit the road and turn farmer. We wish them success.

SUMMIT

Mrs. Martin Jackman is able to come to town again.

R. T. Duncan went to Auburn last Friday on business.

S. A. Harmon's brother from near Angola, visited him over Sunday.

John Ruff and family visited Mr. R.'s sister, Mrs. Geo. Clark, last Sunday.

Samuel Frederick and wife visited their daughter near Waterloo over Sunday.

Miss Margaret Mortorff, visited her sister Mrs. Kate Hilt a few days last week.

Thos. Baxter and wife of Cedar Creek, who have been visiting Mrs. B.'s parents, E. Jackman and wife the past two weeks, returned to their home last Monday morning.

William E. Gladstone of England, one of the ablest minds and greatest statesman ever known, states that the world has made more progress in the last hundred years than in all the past ages, and in no one thing more than in practical literature. The Encylopaedia Britiannica was begun in 1791, just a century ago, and its first edition comprised three volumes. Since then at various times other editions have been brought out, each better than the preceding one, until about four years ago, when the ninth and last edition was published. Valuable and exhaustive as this magnificent work was it proved to be too voluminous and cumbersome. Too much time had to be consumed in wading through numberless pages of superfluous matter to arrive at a satisfactory answer to a single simple query. How many, many times would its most ardent admirers while thus engaged exclaim: "Life is too short."

THE WORLD AT LARGE.

ROUTE LAID OUT FOR THE PRESIDENT'S RETURN.

A Murderous Couple—Sunk the Steamer—Bad Wreck—A Bread Riot—Runaway Accident—Kansas Outrage.

THE PRESIDENTIAL PROGRAM.

The Route Laid Out for the Return Trip of the Party.

A special from Portland, Oregon, dated the 6th inst., says: The following is a program as far as decided upon for the return trip of President Harrison. After stopping at Tacoma and Seattle, he will go to Salt Lake City, stopping one day at Boise City, Idaho, then to Leadville, Colorado Springs, Denver, Lincoln, Neb.; Omaha, Hannibal, Mo.; Springfield, Ill.; Decatur, Ill.; Indianapolis, Columbus, Ohio; Pittsburgh.

At Salem the Mayor of the city welcomed the President to Oregon. The party were then taken to carriages and escorted to the State House. The Governor and Mayor rode in a carriage with the President and Mrs. Harrison. Mayor Darcy delivered an address of welcome in behalf of the city and Gov. Pennoyer in behalf of the State. Gov. Pennoyer then extended a cordial welcome to the President, to which the President replied.

The Presidential party arrived in this city at noon promptly on schedule time. Twenty thousand people were in waiting and the President acknowledged their plaudits by riding bareheaded through the streets and bowing right and left. A slight rain was falling when the President reached Portland, but it soon turned into a heavy rain. However, it did not interfere with the formation of the parade. After marching about the city two hours, the parade moved down Sixth street and was received by the President. One feature of the parade was 4,000 school children drawn up in line. In the afternoon there was a general suspension of business. President Harrison had a short reception at the hotel to members of the G. A. R. and Loyal Legion. Postmaster General Wanamaker paid a visit to the postoffice during the afternoon.

A Murderous Couple.

Dr. John A. P. Baker and Mrs. W. B. Gilmer, of Abingdon, Va., are under arrest, charged with the murder of Mrs. Baker, wife of Dr. Baker, and an attempt to murder W. R. Gilmer, the husband of the woman under arrest. Mrs. Baker died suddenly more than a year ago. Recently some tell-tale letters were found which were written by Mrs. Gilmer to Dr. Baker. They show that a criminal intimacy existed between the two and that they plotted Mrs. Baker's death. Mrs. Gilmer has made a confession that Dr. Baker poisoned his wife and sent her poison with instructions how to administer it to her husband. She did so and nothing saved his life but the timely arrival of Dr. Gilmer, a brother of the poisoned man. All the parties are prominent in Abingdon and the affair has created a sensation.

Sunk the Steamer.

A cable dispatch dated Iquique gives details of the sinking of the insurgent steamer, Blanco Encalda, in Caldera Bay, by the torpedo boats Almirante Lynch and Coudell. The Blanco Encalda was lying at anchor in a helpless condition, part of her machinery being on shore undergoing repairs. She was unable to move from her position, thus forming a steady target for the Government vessels which steamed around her and discharged torpedoes as they pleased. Even with this advantage six torpedoes missed their mark and exploded harmlessly. The seventh, however, struck the iron-clad, blowing her up and causing a heavy loss of life.

Kansas Outrage.

Three men entered the house of J. A. Wickline, nine miles east of Arkansas City, Kan., while Mr. Wickline was at church. They demanded of Mrs. Wickline the money her husband had received for cattle the day before. On her refusal to surrender it they beat her over the head with revolvers, kicked her and left her for dead. They secured only $5. The husband returned from church and found his wife unconscious. She may die. A large posse is after the thieves, and if caught the robbers will be lynched.

A Bread Riot.

Rome special: Owing to a rise in the price of bread at Parma a riot occurred in that city. The women formed in procession and marched to the town hall, where they demanded from the officials that the latter secure a reduction in price. Before the crowd could be dispersed it was found necessary to place a number of persons under arrest.

A Serious Runaway.

While Dr. John Sellars, a prominent physician of Montpelier, Ind., was returning home from visiting a patient his horse became frightened, throwing him out of his buggy breaking five of his ribs, bruising his head and shoulder and giving him a severe shaking up all over.

Another Strike.

One thousand workmen, consisting of carpenters, painters, plasterers and cigarmakers are out on a strike at Hamilton, Ohio. They demand the non-employment by contractors of non-union labor, the payment of higher wages and lesser working hours.

Porter to Leave Rome.

A special from Rome says that it is reported that the American Minister Porter will shortly depart from Italy, leaving the rectory in charge of the legation.

This Means Us.

It is announced that Germany and Austria-Hungary have invited Italy, Switzerland, and Belgium, to join in a convention at Vienna for the avowed purpose of forming a coalition of the Central European States against protectionist countries.

Bad Wreck.

The Swedish bark Secla was wrecked near Renews, N. F., and will prove a total loss. Only one of the crew was saved, a sailor named Eliasson. The vessel is probably from Tonsberg, April 9, for Mirriachi.

Coke Strikers Shot Down.

Uniontown (Pa) special: Another collision has occurred between the coke strikers and deputies, the result being one striker dead and one seriously wounded. Superintendent Gray and pit boss Callaghan, of Leisenring No. 3, went to house No. 17 to rescue two of the men who had been at work and were being held at that house by the strikers. They were set upon and stoned and the deputies came to their aid. One of the strikers tried to take a gun from one of the deputies, when a shot was fired by the strikers. Superintendent Gray then ordered the deputies to fire, and in the volley which followed John Mahan, a striker, fell dead, and another, whose name is not known, received a mortal wound. The strikers then scattered, and the two men who were held prisoners were rescued and taken to Leisenring. The situation is now reported quiet.

BURNED ALIVE.

Five Colored Children Cremated in a Cabin.

Marlboro (Md.) special: A very exciting scene was presented to the Marlboro correspondent the other morning. After a drive of nine miles through the lower part of Prince George County, which is thinly settled, to the farm owned by Robert Connick, a Southern Maryland planter, near the village of Horse Head, to view the charred remains of five children of William Coale, a prominent colored citizen of Southern Prince Georges, which were burned alive while sleeping. The children—four girls and a boy—who always slept in the attic, were asleep when the fire broke out. It is thought the children built a fire in the stove owing to the coolness of the night and through carelessness left the stove door open and the sparks therefrom ignited an old hen-nest in the chimney corner which caused the conflagration. The first persons to arrive at the fire were Messrs. T. L. Naylor and Richard Naylor, neighbors, who live about a mile from the house. When they reached the burning house, half way out of one of the burning windows was protruding the body of a boy. The flames had burned him into a crisp. In a few minutes a portion of the roof fell in and his skull fell from the window and was picked up by one of the several persons who had by this time gathered around. The bones of the body fell inside and were burned to ashes. After the fire had been extinguished, through lack of material to burn, some of those present raked among the embers and found seventeen bones in a bunch, the remains of the four girls who always slept together. When William Coale, the father, returned from a distant relative, he was frantic with grief. He picked the boy's skull up and kissed it, saying: "God knows best, but this is hard to bear." This is the second time he has been visited by fire.

FOREST FIRES.

New Jersey a Sea of Flames—Other Damaging Fires.

New York special: The most destructive fire of many years is raging in South Jersey. The great pine region and cranberry bogs district, bounded by Point Pleasant and Bay Head on the north, down to Egg Harbor, sixty miles south, and from the Atlantic to points from thirty to forty miles inland, is being swept by fire. Thousands and thousands of acres of pine and cedar timber have been burned, many towns have been threatened, dozens of houses have been destroyed and fears are entertained for the safety of the people in the devastated country. So dense is the smoke that hangs over the burning forest that farmers going from town to town have to grope their way along the roads. Rain has not fallen in weeks and the inhabitants are unable to check the spread of the flames. At many places the residents have been forced to flee to the open country to save their lives, leaving their household goods behind to be burned. At one place, a sick woman covered by water soaked blankets, was carried out of her burning home in her bed. The loss will be over a million dollars and many farmers will be impoverished. Forest fires are also reported in the mountains about Reading, Pa., and in the vicinity of Newburg, N. Y.

PERISHED IN FLAMES.

A Fire in a Tenement House Suffocates Two Persons.

Fire occurred in the two-story frame building, 148 Naseau street, Rochester, N. Y., occupied by Mrs. Nellie Rosebloom's confectionery store on the ground floor and by a number of families in the other parts of the building. Mrs. Muntzki and her son, who lived in the rear part of the upper story, were awakened by the smoke and, though nearly unconscious, succeed in reaching the street, but saved nothing but their night clothes. The other occupants were soon aroused and it was supposed that all had escaped, but after the fire had been extinguished the bodies of a man and woman were found in the upper story, lying together at the door. The man was Herman Stephaski, but the name of the woman could not be ascertained, though it is supposed she was his wife. They were in the habit of drinking, and may have been under the influence of liquor at the time they were suffocated.

Minister Blair Ordered to Washington.

Chicago special: Mr. Henry W. Blair, the newly appointed Minister to China, will return to Washington, in accordance with a request from Secretary Blaine to that effect. Mr. Blair did not appear at all unpleasantly affected by the change in his plans, which was, however, something of a surprise to him. "I have no information regarding the matter beyond what is contained in Mr. Blaine's dispatch," he said shortly after its receipt. "I can say nothing, therefore, as to the rumor that the State Department has been notified by China that I am 'persona non grata,' and that in consequence I am to be sent to Japan or Persia. As I have no official knowledge of the cause of my being requested to return to Washington, I can, of course, say nothing about my future movement. Until an hour ago I was not aware that I was not to continue my journey to China.

Austria and Germany.

Berlin special: Bayron Wittek, under Secretary of the Austrian Ministry of Commerce, has arrived here on a special mission from his Government. His object is the unification of the German and Austrian railway systems by the enactment of common laws and the adoption of common regulations especially as to the management of the lines, the tariffs for freight and passengers, time tables for through trains, etc. In the negotiations to be undertaken by Byron Wittek special attention will be given to the arrangement of military and strategic lines, with a view to the rapid mobilization of troops in both countries. Politicians see most important results if this negotiation is carried to a successful conclusion. It will bind Germany and Austria in a closer union, and insure the permanency and greatly increase the strength of the triple alliance.

A Horrible Accident.

John Mancer, brother of B. F. Mancer, the inventor of many contrivances, has been employed by the Gilbert Car Works at Troy, N. Y., for many years. Among the machinery used are several machines on which a number of knives made 700 revolutions per minute. One of these knives broke and flew with awful velocity through the air, striking Mr. Mancer in the left breast, and sinking to the depth of over six inches, completely transfixing the heart. Mr. Mancer died in less than two minutes. He was 65 years old and leaves a family.

Burned to Death.

New York special: Three young girls were burned to death, and two other persons were badly burned at a fire in the fireworks factory in Morrisania. Lillie Hammond, 19 years old; Mary Lynch, 17 years old; Jennie Harpley, 17 years old, were caught in a burning building, and burned to death in sight of the crowd that had assembled to watch the fire. George Kreamly, 40 years old, was badly burned about the head and body, and Lottie Lorn, 14 years, was horribly burned about the body. The damage to the stock and building is $6,000.

Incendiary Fire.

Scranton, (Pa.,) special: The electric car stables here were set on fire by some unknown incendiary and the building was soon consumed, much valuable machinery and cars being totally destroyed. The flames communicated to St. Paul's Church, but the building was saved after a desperate struggle. The office of the Republican then caught, and so rapid was the spread of the flames that the printers at work had to flee from their cases. The magnificent building was soon gutted and only a part of the paper could be issued. The total loss will reach $350,000. Well insured.

Dynamite Cartridge Explodes.

At Martin's Ferry, Ohio, an unknown miscreant gave three little boys, James and Milton Turney and Charles Wilson, all under nine years of age, a loaded dynamite cartridge. The boys played with the cartridge and it finally exploded. All three of the boys were blown over sixty feet and frightfully mangled. Wilson had his breast and abdomen torn open and a leg badly lacerated. He will die. One of the Turneys will lose his sight, the other is burned to a crisp on his arms and body and cannot recover.

A Locomotive Explodes.

The boiler of freight locomotive No. 52, south bound on the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad, exploded with terrific force at Johnston's Station, Ohio. Fireman John Foley was killed. Front Brakeman Woods was seriously scalded, cut and bruised, and cannot live. Engineer Jacob Eich was severely scalded on the right arm and hand, and his right leg was badly injured. The engine is one of the Brooks manufacture, and was lately purchased by the company.

The Spiteful Kaiser.

Berlin special: The startling statement is made that no place was reserved for Bismarck in the Moltke funeral had he come, and that the Kaiser had plainly intimated his desire that the Prince should not be present. Whether this was communicated to Bismarck is not known, but by his absence he saved the high officers who had formerly been the servants at his bidding from an embarrassing situation, as any courtesy shown to Bismarck would have been promptly resented by the Emperor.

Eloper Sentenced.

Wm. D. Spayde, who eloped from Niles, Mich., last winter with Mrs. J. Rose Roberts, was sentenced to one year imprisonment. Mrs. Roberts, who was also in court, was discharged. There was a scene in the court room after the trial had ended. The husband whom the woman had deserted was present and appealed to her to return home with him and their three children. She declared that she would not do so, and after warning him never to speak to her, fainted. It was nearly an hour before she recovered.

Says Pool-Selling is Not Gambling.

Judge Perkins, in his charge to the grand jury of Kenton County, Ky., in the case of the Covington pool selling, said that under a recent decision of the Court of Appeals the selling of pools on races was not gambling. He also said that pool rooms were indictable for nuisance, but that a nuisance under the law must be continuous, and he therefore said that the arresting of pool-sellers for each pool sold was not according to law.

Bankers Under Arrest.

Edward E. Gedney, president of the North River bank, New York, and Cashier Frank Ingersoll, were placed under arrest on a bench warrant issued by Judge Martine. They were brought before Judge Martine in general sessions, and held in $15,000 bail each. They are charged with falsifying the quarterly report of the bank made on June 14, 1890. The complaint in the case was made by the receiver of the bank, Frank Higgins.

Barnum's Elephants.

During the parade of Barnum's circus at Jersey City, a horse belonging to Albert Roner, a truckman, took fright at the elephants and ran away. Several were knocked down and two were taken to the hospital. They are Colon Walker, aged 9 years, and Mrs. Michael Lang. Both of Walker's and Mrs. Lang's legs were broken and they were bruised internally. They are in a critical condition.

A Freight Train Ditched.

A heavy freight train in the Union Pacific yards at Omaha, was ditched through the engine jumping the track. Conductor Gleason was killed, and Engineer Whitney and Fireman Hamburg severely injured. Five loaded cars and the engine were totally demolished.

Minister Lincoln Makes a Speech.

Robert T. Lincoln, United States Minister, spoke at a meeting of the British and Foreign Sailors' Aid Society. Incidentally Mr. Lincoln remarked that the Behring Sea dispute would be settled amicably and honorably and in a manner satisfactory to both countries.

Eaten by Wolves.

Some laborers, while clearing the mountain roads of snow, near Silver Plume, Col., uncovered the mutilated body of David Cook, of Boston, who was lost last fall. Wolves had attacked his body.

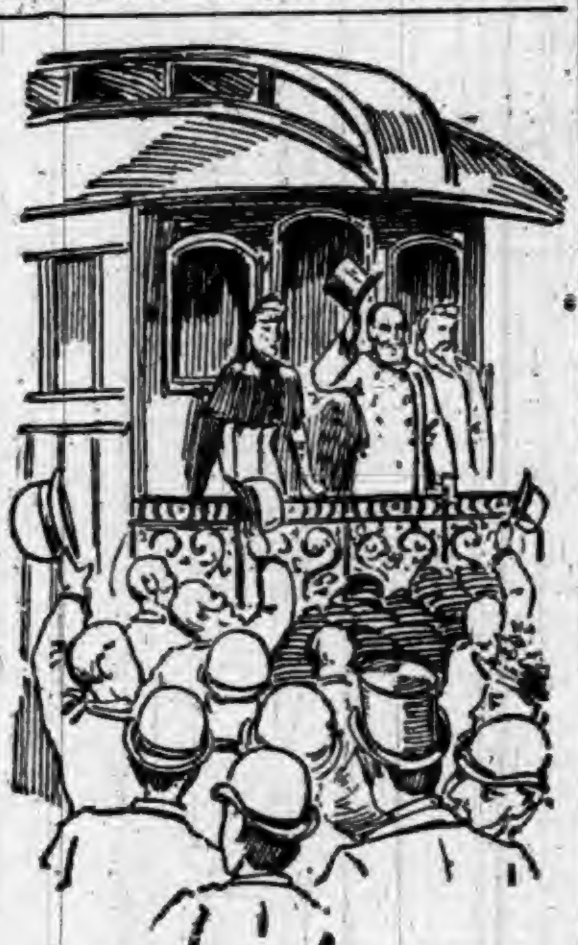
THE PRESIDENT'S TOUR.

A CRUISE ABOUT SAN FRANCISCO BAY.

He Is Accompanied on the Trip by Great Numbers of Gayly Decorated Craft—The Palatial Home on Wheels in Which the President and His Guests Are Traveling.

The morning of President Harrison's marine excursion from San Francisco opened with a fog enveloping the shores of the bay, but as the forenoon wore on the fog lifted and left the harbor sparkling in sunlight.

Notwithstanding the announcement that the invitations to accompany the President were limited to five hundred in number, the committee having charge of the excursion were besieged with applications from fully 5,000 persons who, being unable to secure coveted billets, crowded the steamers Ukiau and Garden City and numerous smaller craft which dotted the bay, so that at the hour of the President's embarkation over 10,000 persons had left the shore to accompany him on the trip. At 10:30 o'clock the Pueblo steamed out into the bay from Broadway wharf and was soon followed by the warship Charleston, the Government steamers Rush and Marono carrying the Federal officials, and the revenue cutters Rush and Corwin with the Custom House officials. As the Pueblo passed these vessels, which had formed a line about 300 yards apart, a salute was fired, and the band, which had been stationed on the Pueblo, played a patriotic air. After the Government vessels had swung into the line other steamers and craft conveying unofficial excursionists made haste to follow, and, with the white sails of the yachts skimming the scene, the pageant, from a marine point of view, had never been excelled on the Bay of San Francisco.



ON THE PLATFORM OF THE "VACUNA."

During the whole time that the Pueblo was steaming down the bay the President stood on the bridge with a pair of marine glasses, through which he scanned the various objects of interest which were pointed out to him. He was constantly surrounded by a group of army and navy officers, and apparently found great enjoyment in the trip. He responded to the salutes of different vessels he passed by removing his hat and bowing.

About 2 o'clock the Pueblo headed for the Union Iron Works. The vessels which had been lying in the stream waiting for her got under way and followed in her wake, making a marine procession several miles in length.

At the Union Iron Works the Pueblo was received with the blowing of whistles at the factory and on all steam vessels lying there. The cruiser Charleston, which had followed the President's steamer all day, anchored a short distance from the Pueblo. The President was taken off in a tug and paid an official visit to the Charleston, being received with a national salute when he boarded the vessel and also when he took his departure. By this time the bay for a mile in every direction from the Union Iron Works was studded with vessels of every description, upon the decks of which there were fully 20,000 people, who had come there to witness the launching of the armored coast defense vessel Monterey.

In addition to those on vessels there were probably forty thousand people who witnessed the launching from the shore. Every housetop and street and every hillside overlooking the iron works yard as well as the yard itself was literally covered with people. Never was there such interest taken or such enthusiasm displayed at any similar event in this part of the country. On the shore and on the bay there was a perfect sea of flags and bunting, and for some time before the launching occurred there was a continuous screeching of steam whistles, to which was added the music of a score of bands on excursion steamers.

A small platform had been built around the bow of the vessel, and on this were the Presidential party and other distinguished guests, and also a band from the navy yard. At 4:30 Mrs. Harrison pressed an electric button, which sent the vessel down the ways. The navy yard band played a national air as she glided into the water, and immediately there burst forth the greatest noise from steam whistles, to which was added the thundering sound of the Charleston's guns as she fired a national salute; cheer after cheer also arose from shore and from the vessels.

The launch was entirely successful. The President and party then returned to the Palace Hotel.

When the Presidential party arrived at San Jose a national salute was fired and a large crowd gathered at the station cheered lustily. The visitors were escorted to the Hotel Vendome, where an address of welcome was made by Mayor Rucker, and responded to by the President as follows:

> Mr. Mayor and fellow-citizens, I am again surprised by this large outpouring of my friends, and by the respectful interest which they evince. I can not find words to express the delight which I have felt, and which those who journey with me have felt, as we have observed the beauty, and more than all the comfort and prosperity which characterize the great State of California. I am glad to observe here as I have elsewhere that my old comrades of the great war for the Union have turned out to witness afresh by this demonstration their love for the flag and their veneration for American institutions. My comrades, I greet you every one affectionately. I doubt not that every loyal State has representatives here of that great army that subdued the rebellion and brought home the flag in triumph. I hope that you have found in this flowery and prosperous land, in the happy homes which you have built up here, in the wives and children that grace your firesides, sweet contrast to those times of peril and hardship which you experienced in the army, and I trust above all that under these genial and kindly influences you still maintain that devotion to our institutions, and are teaching it to the children that will take your places. We often speak of children following in the footsteps of their fathers. Nearly a year ago at the great review of the Grand Army of the Republic at Boston, after those thousands of veterans, stricken with years and labor, had passed along, a great army nearly as large came on with the swinging step that characterized you when you carried the flag from your home to the field. They were sons of veterans, literally marching in their fathers' steps, and so I love to think in the hands of this generation that is coming on to take our places our institutions are safe, and that the honor and glory of the flag will be maintained. We may quietly go to our rest when God shall call us in the full assurance that His favoring providence will follow us, and that in your children valor and sacrifice for the flag will always manifest themselves.

Monarchs have traversed land and sea and history has recorded the magnificence of many a royal equipage, but no emperor ever had opportunity to enjoy such luxurious traveling accommodations as have been conferred by ingenious and comfort-seeking man upon the President of the greatest republic the nations of the earth ever beheld.

There have been many fine specimens of the car-builders' art previous to the creation of this "Presidential special," but it is questionable whether there is in railroad annals a more elaborately complete vehicular aggregation than the one which was prepared for the journey of the chief executive and his guests. The great pan-American excursion train was regarded as being the acme of perfection, but that made its pilgrimage a year and a half ago, and there have been many important improvements since that came to a close.

First in the string of five cars is the combination baggage, smoking, and library-car, Aztian, upon the forward panels of which is inscribed in large gilt letters: "The Presidential Special." In one of the corners nearest the engine is a perfect incandescent electric light plant, with a noisy little dynamo in frequent operation. In the same compartment the baggage and a reserve stock of supplies is stored away, all in the most admirable order and looking as little like the ordinary everyday baggage car as could be easily imagined.

A narrow doorway, generally occupied by a swinging door, separates the baggage section from the smoking-room and library. The upholstery is of olive plush, and the furniture is of a character that cannot fail to contribute to the comfort of those mortals who are privileged to use it. Two bookcases, one on each side of the car, contain a couple of hundred standard works, and beneath each of the cases is a desk and a supply of writing material. Between the cases and alongside of the clock is an electric screw-fan which faces a twin contrivance at the opposite end of the apartment; these, when in operation, will keep the atmosphere fairly clear and reasonably cool.

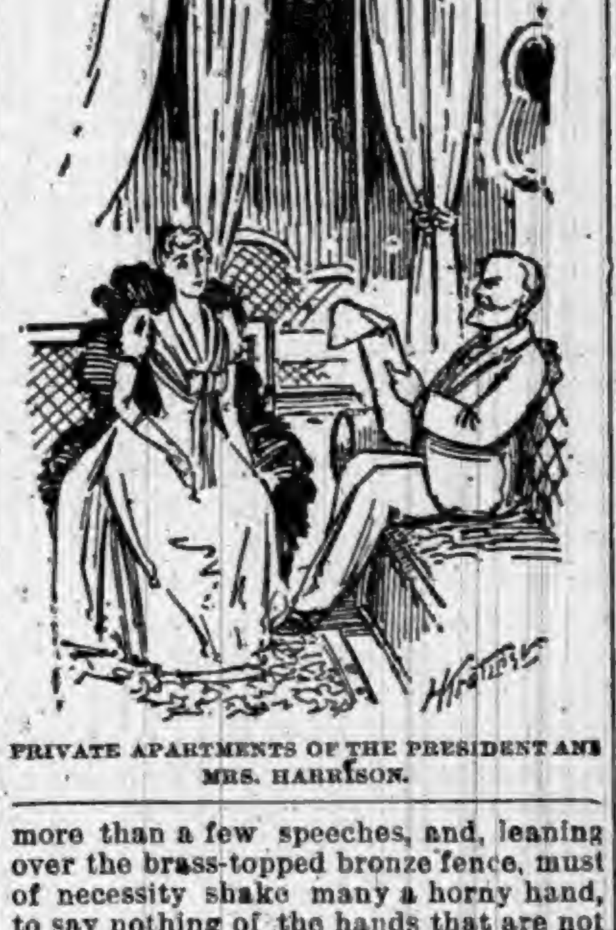
"Colorado" is the name of the dining-car, and a more nearly perfect creation in the shape of a restaurant on wheels could not easily be found. The furnishings of the dining-car proper are supremely æsthetic. Cleanly waiters, clad in spotless white raiment, are not least among the attractions. The kitchen lacks nothing, and is presided over by one of the most experienced Afro-American chefs.

Next the commissary headquarters is the President's car, the "New Zealand." So far as the upholstery of the main interior is concerned, this is probably the least attractive subdivision of the train. The plush is a dull variety of blue, and the curtains are seal brown. Here and there newspaper representatives are quartered.

But beyond the somberly comfortable-appearing draperies is a traveling paradise—the drawing-rooms occupied by the President and Mrs. Harrison. The apartments, which are en suite, are models of artistic taste. All the woodwork is enameled in white and decorated with the choicest floral patterns in gilt moldings, while the seats and sofas are covered with a rich shade of terra-cotta plush. A more pleasing effect would hardly be possible.

The "Ideal," which is the car following immediately after the Presidential vehicle, differs materially from the other cars. Its interior is divided into six drawing-rooms, and each of these subdivisions possesses coloring and design distinctively its own.

More interesting than any other portion of the train to the millions of men, women and children who will strive to see the President and Mrs. Harrison during the next few days will be the "Vacuna"—the last car in the train. From its rear end the President will deliver more than a few speeches, and, leaning over the brass-topped bronze fence, must of necessity shake many a horny hand, to say nothing of the hands that are not even moderately hard. When the train was inspected by Mrs. Harrison, shortly before the hour of departure, she expressed a decided preference for the Vacuna as a day-car, and her judgment was applauded by the ladies of the party. The foward end of the Vacuna contains six sleeping sections, upholstered in blue and metal fitted in brass. In the rear of these and separated from them only by the buffet is the observation compartment, with plush-cushioned willow chairs enough to accommodate sixteen people, provided no one chair is burdened by more than one individual. The windows are large and are made of the finest plate glass.



PRIVATE APARTMENTS OF THE PRESIDENT AND MRS. HARRISON.

Human ingenuity may be able to make railway travel less irksome and more comfortable than it is now, but ingenuity must strain itself considerably if it succeeds in turning out anything more elaborate and complete than the "Presidential special."

The British warship Thunderer has received four specimens of a gun, from which great things are expected. The original armament of the Thunderer consisted of two 38-ton and two 35-ton muzzle-loading guns, and one of these burst in the course of practice, inside the turret, with fatal results. It was believed that the gun had been twice loaded before firing. The new guns, two of which are mounted on each turret, are of 10-inch caliber and 20 tons in weight. The total length is 26 feet 10 inches, the projectile weighs 500 pounds, and the full charge of powder is, as is now usual, just half that weight. At a range of 1,000 yards it is calculated to pierce twenty-one inches of wrought-iron plate.

In Sussex, England, a necklace of beads, made from peony root, was placed on the child's neck to assist the operation of teething and one of amber beads was also thought powerful.

WITH THE NEWS OF THE STATE OF INDIANA.

Henry Keller Suicided at Fort Wayne—Henry Albright Killed by Vandalia Limited Express at Reelsville—Indiana Patents—State Board of Health to Enforce the Law—Deaths, Accidents, Etc.

Reduced Railroad Fare.

Members and candidates are notified, that through the courtesy of the Central Traffic Association, excursion fares have been granted from all points in Indiana to those attending the Scottish Rite and Shrine Convocations, at Fort Wayne, Ind., May 13 and 14, 1891. When buying tickets, ask for a certificate, which when endorsed by Charles B. Fitch, will entitle the holder to one-third fare, returning.

Patriarchs Militant Meeting.

At a meeting of the Patriarchs Militant in the State at Warsaw, called and presided over by Charles W. Gruesbeck, assistant Adjutant-General of the Department, the following elections were made:

First Regiment—Colonel, F. H. Foster, Pierceton; Lieutenant-Colonel, G. W. Dowswell, Fort Wayne; Major Second Battalion, Freman Crosby, Valparaiso.

Second Regiment—Colonel, J. E. Beiline, Indianapolis; Lieutenant-Colonel, George P. Graft, Knightstown; Major First Battalion, M. H. Chappel, Knightstown.

Third Regiment—Colonel, W. W. Canader, Winchester; Major Third Battalion, Daniel Meyers, Columbia City; Major Second Battalion, J. G. Stober, Wabash.

Fourth Regiment—Major Second Battalion, W. H. Northcut, New Albany.

Minor State Items.

—The Salvation Army Corps has advanced on Seymour.

—Terry Owens, of Westport, was killed by a fall from a wagon.

—Alfred Farrington, jr., of Jerome, drank concentrated lye and died.

—A paper has been established at Bainbridge by Morrison & Scott.

—The delinquent taxes of Montgomery County amount to nearly $20,000.

—The residence of William Bales, near Martinsville, was destroyed by fire.

—New men have taken the places of the striking DePauw glass-workers.

—The Jeffersonville town council has adopted standard time for that city.

—Mrs. Sally Matsen aged 93 years, died of physical exhaustion at Amo.

—The Seymour Street-car Company will employ steam as a motor power.

—H. S. Winters, of Terre Haute, was drowned while fishing near Martinsville, Ill.

—The new breeders' association at Greencastle, will build a mile track at once.

—Kokomo is to have a distillery with a capacity of 3,000 barrels of whisky daily.

—Jerry M. Floyd has driven the Paoli stage 122,520 miles in the past fourteen years.

—The city High-school of Crawfordsville will hold field-day exercises on May 21.

—James Parker, at Tipton, has disappeared, leaving a simple "good-bye" note to his wife.

—Isaac Kunerine, engineer, was killed in a wreck on the Cloverleaf Railroad at Kokomo.

—Harry King, of Carmel, got a verdict for $1 damages against the editor of the Westfield News.

—Asher Cullom, living near Mooresville, was fatally injured by a falling apple-tree limb.

—John Schmidt, of LaPorte, was killed by his horse taking fright at a runaway team and falling on him.

—A six-ton roll has been cast at a New Albany foundry for the Premier steel-works, Indianapolis.

—Putnam County has been losing school-houses by fire at the rate of one each month since January.

—L. S. Lafferty, the C., W. & M. brakeman, who was struck by a bridge at South Bend, will recover.

—Charles D. Tillo, of Fort Wayne, has been appointed a member of Gov. Hovey's staff with the rank of Major.

—John Johnson, of Peru, got a year in the Penitentiary for stealing a bushel of potatoes, for which he received 95 cents.

—Mrs. Margaret Tilford, of New Albany, compromised her $10,000 damage suit against the L., N. A. & C. Railroad for $4,500.

—John Edwards, a boarding-house-keeper, at Crawfordsville, lays claim to $1,000,000 of the Edwards $200,000,000 estate in New York.

—Joseph Combs broke jail at Brownstown, fled, fell through a trestle, sustained severe injuries, returned to give himself up to the Brownstown authorities, was tried at once and acquitted.

—John O'Donnell, a miner, was found dead in shaft No. 8, belonging to the Brazil Blockcoal Company. It is supposed he was caught between a bank car, loaded with coal, and the roof. His neck was found to have been broken. The deceased was unmarried and lived at Perth.

—The cheese and butter factory at Wilkinson is now receiving 3,000 pounds of milk per day. Thus far the company has not been able to keep up with the orders from various places for their gilt-edged butter and fine cheese.

—The Jay County Agricultural Society has let the contract for building an art hall on the fair grounds. The officers are determined that the annual fair shall continue to be the best county fair in the State if anything they can do will assist it.

—A red-oak log at a saw-mill near Edinburg was split and found to contain 127 blacksnakes hidden in the hollow.

—Circulars are being sent from the office of the State Board of Health to leading physicians in the various counties of the State, calling attention to the recent law enacted for the purpose of faciliating the work of gathering complete statistics in this line. The circular contains a copy of that law, and the purpose is to convey to the physicians of Indiana the idea that the penalty for failure to report births, deaths, and other such statistics will be enforced.

—Jacob Rosenbourger's planing-mill at Marshall was burned. Loss, $2,000.

—Two industrious peddlers have been selling pounded charcoal, done up in little bags, to La Porte housewives, with the explanation that no lamp containing one such sack would ever need refilling.

—Grant Phinney, while fishing near Muncie, had his hand and arm shattered and maimed by an explosion of nitroglycerine which he was handling in a bottle.

—A Jonesboro dyspeptic had his wife and most of his relatives arrested on warrants for attempting to poison him, and then admitted that he had committed perjury in so doing.

—The government depot, Jeffersonville prison, school board and shipyards have all refused to conform to the Jeffersonville Council order adopting central standard time. The difference is about thirty minutes.

—It is said that Gen. Lew Wallace's patent-applied-for, double-jointed, aluminium fish-pole contains divisions designed for carrying lunch and buttermilk, as well as matches to light a pipe, and a copy of the latest novel.

—Mrs. Meredith, the esteemed wife of the minister of the Friends' Church, of Mooresville, fell into the fire while suffering from an epileptic fit. None of the family was near enough to rescue her, and she received burns from which, it is thought she cannot recover.

—Three miles from Muncie resides a farmer, Marion Wilson, with his family. Their 11-year-old daughter had her infant sister in her arms, when she accidentally dropped the baby to the floor. Its skull was fractured, and the child has since died of its injuries.

—Recently one of the small bones in the leg of Andrew T. Conner, of New Albany, snapped as he was walking along the street, and before that reunited another one was broken. Mr. Conner then discovered that he was afflicted with chalky deterioration of the bones.

—Sohn Schneirer, a young man [illegible] years old, attempted to board a freight train on the Wabash railroad near Delphi, and missed his hold. He was thrown under the train and so badly injured that both legs have been amputated. There is little hope of his recovery. He was a miller, living two miles east of the city.

—Henry Albright, a farmer near Reelsville, was killed by the Vandalia east-bound limited express. He was walking on the track with a basket of eggs, on his way to market, and did not seem to hear the usual danger signals, sounded repeatedly. When picked up his faithful dog was standing guard over his mangled and almost unrecognizable remains.

—While engaged in plowing new ground, about four miles north of Danville, Jason Thompson and Nathan Thompson unearthed eighty-one stone implements, relics of a race long since extinct. Some twenty feet away they plowed up what had evidently been an Indian's fire-place. The farm has long been noted for the number of arrow heads found on it, but this is the largest single discovery made.

—Patents have been granted Hoosier inventors as follows: Hiram Brooking, assignor of one-half to J. Ulery, North Manchester, spark arrester; Charles E. Darrow, Kokomo, nut for axle spindles; Franklin Fulkerson, Russiaville, fence; John Jones, Elkhart, railway crossing (reissue); Samuel McDonald, Dunkirk, holdback for vehicles; Seymour Rouse, Indianapolis, pump cylinder; Nathaniel G. Stader, Columbus, molding flask.

—Near Roachdale, Dick Adams, a former saloon-keeper, was fired upon by would-be assassins while in bed, and probably fatally injured. Four shots were fired through the window at him, one taking effect in his left breast, perforating the lung. Adams has long been regarded as a desperate character, but the causes of the midnight assault is a matter of conjecture only. Great excitement prevails in the neighborhood. No arrests have been made, but suspicion rests on certain known enemies of Adams.

—Frank Lake, a well-known farmer residing in Tippecanoe County since the days when boats came up the Wabash, was killed by lightning during the storm recently. He had been to Stockwell, and was returning home with his team, when they were driven by the violence of the thunderstorm to seek shelter beneath a broad oak that stood by the road. The tree was split from the top to the earth, part of the trunk being smashed to splinters. After the storm had passed over, both Mr. Lake and his team were found dead.

—Mitchell has a youthful band of White Caps, whose members seem to be doing their work thoroughly. John Grubb, a lad about 12 years old, who is the son of a hard-working widow, has been in the habit of loafing about the streets all day and until late at night. He continually disobeyed his mother, who needed his help. One night recently, while returning at the usual hour, he was met at a dark corner by several masked boys laying in wait. They seized him, and, taking him off the street, administered a severe whipping and admonished him to mend his ways. He has profited by the discipline, and is not seen on the streets after dark.

—Mrs. Anna Borkenheim, of New Albany, aged 83 years, is dead. She had resided in that city for more than a half century and was greatly respected.

—At the examination of applicants for a teacher's license, at Crawfordsville, eight young ladies were detected secreting books from which to get the answers. The superintendent at once marked their papers "not passed," and did not even examine them. At the previous examination forty-four person failed to pass out of seventy applicants.

—Enumeration of school-children in Montgomery County shows a large increase in all townships excepting Wayne.

—Mrs. Thomas Longley, an old resident of St. Joseph County, was accidently killed. She and her husband were driving to church, having to pass through South Bend on the way. Crossing the street car track the king bolt broke, letting down the buggy and throwing the occupants out. Mrs. Longley's neck was broken and she died in a few minutes. Mr. Longley, however, received only a few bruises, from which he will recover.

SAVED AT LAST.

AUBURN, IND., Oct. 3, 1890.

Dr. J. W. Bergen:

Dear Sir:—By this time, I presume, you will want to know how I am getting along with Bergen's Asthma Cure.

Well, you have heard of persons obtaining a new life. Now I really feel that way myself. When I began taking Bergen's Asthma Cure, I was just coming out of a long siege of it, and was reduced to 115 pounds; weak, short of breath, chills, fever, and badly demoralized generally, coughing from half an hour to an hour every night.

Since commencing, from the third night, I have not lost ten minutes' sleep all night, cough gone, gained seventeen pounds, chills gone, fever gone, shortness of breath and difficulty of breathing gone, consequently I feel a thousand per cent. better. I thank God every day that I ever saw your advertisement, and that I was induced to write to you.

This is peculiarly encouraging in my case, as I had suffered so long and was so discouraged about my case, having tried everything. I am telling the good news every day.

Push on the good work; you are on the right track.

Yours Very Gratefully,
R. McDOUGALL.

Wonderful Remedy

That Cures Catarrh, Hay-Fever, Cold in the Head, Sore Throat, Canker, and Bronchitis.

The testimonials to these FACTS are NUMEROUS and STRONG, similar to the following:

From the Hon. Harvey D. Colvin, Ex-Mayor of Chicago:

CHICAGO, July 24, 1890.

S. H. KLINCK—DEAR SIR: I am pleased to say that I consider your remedy the best medicine in existence, for the human afflictions you claim to cure. I suffered from catarrh with bronchitis for many years. During that time I employed physicians and faithfully tried many so-called remedies advertised to cure this disease, without any material benefit, when a friend induced me to try your remedy, claiming others had been cured by it. The first bottle gave me the most pleasing results. I have continued its use and I can not say too much for it. It found me too near the grave for comfort and restored me to health again. It adorns my toilet stand and by using it occasionally I am kept well.

I would not be without it if it cost $25 per bottle. I earnestly recommend it to all my afflicted friends.

CHUB.

A Romance of West Virginia.

BY DAVID LOWRY.

CHAPTER VIII.

CHUB'S RUSE.

Chub talked the most. She seemed to regain her spirits sitting there with the people who prized the companionship of Dan Bash.

"Was Dan like himself—just as he always was, Mrs. Bigger?"

"Just the same, more'n he was a bit livelier. Natrally. Seein' as how it was his——"

"Did he say anything about any one—meeting anyone on the road?"

"Why, no. Leastways, not as I heerd."

Hank Dawson looked meaningly at his daughter. Chub did not notice the glance.

"Did Dan ever say he had any particular enemy in school?"

"Why, no, child. The folks as didn't like Dan Bash didn't go to school, an' they didn't send their children."

"Then there are folks that didn't like him?"

"Bless you, don't everybody know them Monks can't bear the sight of him? And he hadn't not a mite of love for the Monks. The hull parsell was agin him, and he was hot on the hull hassell."

"So?" said Hank Dawson.

"Well, mind; what he said to us he wouldn't blurt out afore everybody."

"He wasn't afraid of them, then?"

"I know what's in your mind, Chub. No! He didn't care a mite for the hull gang o' them, and they knew it, like as not, cos he was outspoken that way."

"I know that."

"Course you do. Everybody knows Dan Bash speaks what's in his mind if he don't like a thing."

"Did he ever say he met any of the Monks crowd?"

"Often."

"Well—what more?"

"Why, he laughed, and said they gave him a clear track."

"Well?"

"That's about the heft of it. 'Less it be the time he caught Bob Squatty peekin' round the road somewhere near the fallin' rock."

"The falling rock," said Hank Dawson. "Why, that ain't on the road."

"Course not. Dan was out hunting."

"Oh!"

"And Squatty came round there, too, an' something passed atween 'em. I never could just make out what 'twas. I suspect—just because, somehow—that Dan had some words with Squatty."

"He always did laugh so when any one mentioned Squatty after that time."

"How long ago was that, Mrs. Bigger?"

"Well, two weeks or more, I reckon."

Chub looked intently at her father, who returned her look meaningly. He was beginning to understand the drift of the inquiry Chub was making, for that was the practical result of her prolonged talk with the Biggers.

"Is your dog good?" was Chub's next query.

Her father looked at her curiously. Mrs. Bigger whispered to one of her sons:

"Seems to me Chub's gettin' kinder out of her head."

The son turned to Chub quickly:

"Yes. I'd not swap my dog for any around these parts."

"Is he quick on the scent?"

"None quicker."

"Well, dad"—here Chub looked at her father smilingly—"I reckon we'll go home now."

"Home? Home this time o' night!" said Mrs. Bigger.

"I thought you cal'lated on sleepin' hyer," said the oldest Bigger boy.

"I've changed my mind," said Chub. "Dad, let's get our horses and go."

"No hurry yet a while, Chub."

"None in the least," said Mrs. Bigger, in a friendly tone. "If so be you must go home, you can take a good rest afore you start agin."

"I'm willin' any time."

Hank marveled much at Chub's notion, but they sat talking at least half an hour longer, and then Chub rose.

Tom Bigger prepared to accompany them. The horses were brought around very quietly at Chub's special request, and when they were ready to go she requested Tom to instruct his dog to keep quiet.

"He will mind you, Tom."

"He'll do just as I say, that dog will."

"Well, then, keep him near you, so that you can make him obey you no matter what happens."

Tom Bigger spoke to his dog, and then the three rode out into the darkness.

Tom Bigger and his dog were in advance. Hank rode behind his daughter.

"What is it, Chub?" said Hank Dawson.

"Can't you guess, dad?"

"No. You know, I reckon."

"Why, I wanted the rest to go away first, and it would get out that we'd stopped at the Biggers'."

"Well?"

"Then if anybody's on the lookout—anybody who knows anything about Dan, or who may be looking for him on their account, like the Monks, we may come on them unawares if we ride along quietly."

"That's the reason you brought the dog along."

"To strike any fresh scent. I feel pretty sure we'll find somebody."

As if to verify her prediction, Tom Bigger cautioned his dog at that moment.

"Quiet there. Here, Hero."

"You heard that, dad?"

"I'm wide awake, Chub, you bet."

They were near Tom Bigger now.

"There's something up there atween us and the rock," said Tom Bigger.

"Dad," said Chub in a low tone, "you go ahead; Tom, you make right after whatever it is, and I'll stay right where I am. Then we'll find out what Hero's smelled."

This seemed a wise course to pursue.

"Dad," said Chub, as he left her side, "mind your shootin' irons."

"They're handy," said Hank Dawson, as he moved on.

It was as much as Tom Bigger could do now to restrain his dog. Hero wanted to rush up the mountain side.

"Now, then," said Chub, when her father had ridden out of her sight, "you let the dog go, Tom."

Tom made a sound that the dog longed to hear, and then Hero leaped through the heavy undergrowth, crashing his way toward the rock that rose like a wall to the right of the little party on the road.

There was another sound heard—a sound of crackling twigs, and leaps rather than steps, as of a man or large animal brushing its way through the undergrowth.

This was succeeded by a single sharp cry, as of one in mortal terror.

Then Hero gave tongue freely. He howled rather than barked.

Chub was all eyes and ears. She had her rifle in her hand, ready to use it. She had held it ready for use during the entire search for Dan Bash.

Suddenly a form leaped across the road below her. She could just distinguish the outlines of a man—then the figure disappeared in the darkness.

"This way, Tom! Dad! It's a man!" cried Chub.

They both rode to her side quickly.

"Where's the dog?"

"I can't make it out," said Tom Bigger. "Didn't you see Hero?"

"No! But it won't do to let the man escape. Everything depends on catching him, dad."

They sat like statues there in the darkness, listening intently.

"Where can the dog be?" said Tom Bigger angrily. "That's the first time I ever knew Hero to——"

A yell, a growl, and a howl of pain startled them.

Hero was proving the stuff he was made of. He had found his game.

CHAPTER IX.

RUN DOWN.

"Now, then. Let us be quick, dad!"

As she spoke, Chub turned her horse's head to the left, and made her way as rapidly as the forest trees would admit of in the direction of the sound made by the man and the dog.

It was plain, now, that a combat was waged between the two. The dog yelped; the man shouted and swore.

Hank Dawson was unwieldy on horseback, but he reached the dog's side almost as soon as Tom Bigger and Chub.

In an instant both were off their horses, and Tom Bigger was speaking sternly to his dog.

"Hero! Quiet there. Behave yourself. Who is that? If you answer, I'll pull the dog off."

"My God! he's eating me up. Take him off."

Bigger pulled Hero back by main strength, while Hank Dawson struck a light.

"Humph! Thought I knew that voice."

"It's you, Bob Squatty."

Chub looked down on him scornfully.

Hank Dawson held a freshly lit blazing pine knot near Squatty's face.

Squatty was trembling like an aspen.

Tom Bigger held Hero back with his right hand.

Hero licked his chops, and opened his jaws. Squatty recoiled suddenly.

"What are you doing here?" demanded Hank Dawson.

"Yes, that's what I'd like to know," said Tom Bigger.

"Take the dog away, will you?" whined Squatty.

"Not till you tell me what you were doing on the road this time of night," said Bigger.

Poor Squatty was quaking with fear.

"A nice specimen you are," said Tom Biggers.

"The dog won't touch you now," said Chub. "We are here. You know we won't permit the dog to hurt you. But tell us what you did to Hero. He is mad to get at you for what you have done."

Tom Bigger looked closely at his dog.

"You mean skunk! You've cut him, so you have."

"He did, did he?"

Hank Dawson glared at the trembling wretch.

"Anybody'd done what I did. He was coming at me with his teeth when I slashed him."

"That's why he howled," said Bigger.

"And I howled, too, didn't I?"

"Yes—you are a pooty one," said Bigger, contemptuously.

"Let's take him to Biggers'," said Chub, suddenly. "Then he'll tell us what we want to find out."

"No, no! don't! Don't!" said Squatty, shivering with terror.

"Well, then, tell us what you are doing on the road at this hour," said Hank Dawson.

"He seems tongue-tied," said Bigger as Squatty continued silent, looking from one to the other.

"Who was with you? Were you alone," demanded Chub.

"Yes."

"All alone! I scarce thought it," said Hank.

"Well, I was."

"And what were you doing?

"I was walking along the road just."

"Just taking a little stroll," said Tom Bigger.

"Probably he was thinking of turnin' over a new leaf," said Hank. "Speak out, you poor coward! Who sent you up here? And what were you sent for? Now, tell the truth, or maybe you'll wish you had. You know I never said one thing and did another. I mean to get at the truth. Did you know where you were going?"

"Y-y-yes. Yes, I did."

"Oh! you did. Where were you going?"

"J-j-just along p-p-past your p-p-lace, Mr. Dawson, to the Corners."

"Oh! and who sent you? Who were you going to meet? Did you expect to see anybody at my house? You knew nobody was there, didn't you?"

"Ye-yes."

"You thought dad and me wouldn't be home; isn't that it, Bob Squatty?" said Chub.

He looked at her fearfully. Hank gave the pine knot a shake, and as it played up brightly they could see now quite plainly the marks Hero's teeth had made in Squatty's bleeding arm.

"Yes—we thought you was to stop at Biggers'."

"We? We?"

Hank Dawson laughed a grating laugh. It was not like any laugh Squatty had ever heard before. He shivered with apprehension.

And then Chub coolly took charge of all the horses, bringing their heads together, while she prepared to hear what the trembling Squatty had to reveal. That he was compelled to tell at least a portion of the truth, if not all of it, she was convinced. And she resolved he should not escape with anything unsaid that woman's wit could extract from his cowardly tongue.

"I—I—I guess I'd best tell all I know."

"I reckon that will save a heap of trouble," said Hank Dawson, dryly; "a heap of trouble."

"Just begin at the beginnin', Bob; an' if you happen to forget anything, we'll try to remind you of it, so's to help you out. Dad, you'd best get another pine knot."

"Y-y-you'll not hurt me—promise you won't."

"Shut up, you dog!" said Hank Dawson, sternly. "Tell us all you know, and be quick, for I'm in a bad humor, and gettin' no better fast."

"Then I'll own up," said Squatty.

"That's right. Make a clean breast of the hull business," said Tom Biggers.

"I will," said Squatty. "But mind the dog—keep the dog off me!"

CHAPTER X.

SQUATTY'S SURPRISING STATEMENT.

"I was going over to spy 'round your place, Mr. Dawson."

"Just to see everything was all right—kind of you, Bob," said Hank Dawson, as he lit a fresh pine-knot. "Go ahead, I'll not spoil your story, cos it must be interestin'."

"I didn't mean to touch a thing. I was just going over to look around. And then I was going to the tavern. That was all. Just to look around."

Squatty gulped down a big lump in his throat.

Nobody replied.

A single night bird screamed. Squatty started, then settled down again, and glanced from one to the other.

They were not a friendly group. Chub's lips expressed scorn and aversion.

Hank Dawson looked as he never looked before. There was a gleam in his eyes that frightened poor Squatty. Tom Biggers was as hard-looking as fate. There was a relentless stare in his big black eyes that chilled Squatty.

He cleared his throat twice, and resumed his story.

"I wasn't doin' all myself. Of course not."

Still no response.

"'Twasn't my idea at all."

Still that chilling silence. Squatty grew frantic with fear.

"My God, folks! If I split on 'em they'll kill me. They're sworn to do it sure."

"They? They? Who's they?" demanded Chub quickly.

"You know. Of course you know."

"I know nothing," said Chub. "Tell me."

"Why Ned and Bill and Pete and all the rest of the Monks, and the crowd."

"Oh."

"You do know, Chub. You saw everything that day."

"What day."

"The day at the spring."

"What spring? Speak out plain."

Of course Chub knew very well what he referred to; but she had an object in view.

She wanted a witness. Hank Dawson and his daughter were good enough—it would be still better if their statements were corroborated by a third party. This was why she compelled the poor wretch to be explicit.

"I mean the day you seen Ned Monk tryin' to shoot Dan Bash."

"You mean the same day you tried to club him while Bill Monk rushed on him with a knife—and I shot his arm, and then came between you and all?"

"I never heard of that," said Tom Biggers.

"You hear it from Squatty, now," said Chub meaningly.

"O! I'm wake-awake, you bet."

"Yes—well that was the folks I meant," said Squatty.

"That was the same day the whole crowd jumped on Dan, and I threatened to put a bullet in the first man that touched him," said Chub.

"Yes. The same day. Ned and Bill sent me along ahead to-night, because——"

"Stop. How did you know we wer'n't at home?"

"Why, we knew."

"How did you know?"

Hank Dawson's look was so threatening that Squatty recoiled.

"Don't hit me."

"Hit you! Hit you, you poor devil. If I touched you with my boot, I'd burn it. Go on."

"Why, they've been on the watch."

"Where?"

"Everywhere."

"Be more explicit," said Chub. "Where were the Monks to-night?"

"At the forks of the road."

"Where were they?"

"In the trees—up high."

"How did they learn we were not going home?"

"They overheard your folks talking as they rode home."

"Humph!"

"It's God's truth."

"What do you know about God's truth, you wretch?"

"Well, I ain't lying now."

"That comes nearer it. Now, then, Squatty."

Bob bounced as he was addressed sternly.

"You've spun a nice yarn to us."

"'Deed, Mr. Dawson, I—I——"

"Shut up! I'd not believe you if you swore on as many bibles as you could pile up all over the county."

"Nor I," said Tom Biggers.

"Nor I either, Squatty," said Chub, quietly. "I happen to know that part of what you say is the truth. Now to begin with. What do you know about Dan Bash? Where is he?"

"I don't know. I swear I don't know nothin' about him."

"Very well," said Chub, coolly.

"Now, who was in the business? Which of the Monks besides you? Or were you all in the scrape?"

"Before God, Chub——"

"See here," said Hank Dawson, roughly, "I thought I told you once afore not to mention somebody as don't know you, an' ain't likely to have you for a tenant."

"I won't say God again."

"Best not. You'd best talk about the devil. He's your company, Squatty."

"Well, I swear I don't know nothin' about Dan Bash."

"You lie!" said Tom Biggers.

"If I die for't, I don't," said Squatty.

Chub looked at him earnestly.

"No use in lying now, Squatty."

"I ain't lyin'."

"And you'll swear you don't know who has waylaid Dan Bash?"

"I'll swear it. I don't b'lieve he was waylaid by nobody."

"You'll swear Ned and Bill Monk haven't got him hid somewhere?"

"I know they haven't."

"How do you know? They don't tell you everything. They make a tool of you."

"I know it. But I know they didn't do nothin' to Dan Bash, too. If they know'd where he was, what'd they keep me trottin' roun' trying everywhere to get track of where he is afore your folks found him for?"

"See here, Squatty," said Hank Dawson, suddenly, "if you say that again—if you pretend they don't know where he is at this moment, I'll smash you."

The blacksmith drew his arm back. His tremendous fist was clenched.

At that moment Chub grasped his arm.

"Don't, don't, dad! Squatty's telling the truth. I see it in his face."

Hank Dawson's arm fell at his side, and Squatty breathed free for the first time since he fell into their hands.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

A Monster Gun.

What is said to be the largest dynamite gun ever manufactured is now nearly completed at Birmingham, Eng. The barrel or pneumatic tube of the gun is of Whitworth forged steel, and weighs about eleven tons. It is supported at the breech end on fixed trunnions fifteen inches in diameter, which are hollowed for the passage of the compressed air. Toward the muzzle it is carried on movable trunnions engaged with two forged steel arms or levers. These levers have sliding fulcrums, and are actuated by a hydraulic plunger for the purpose of elevating or depressing the gun. The breech is closed by means of a steel screw block with interrupted threads as in heavy service ordnance. A peculiar feature of this particular gun is that it can be loaded within its working range. Pivoted to the breech trunnions there is a loading slide or tray for the reception of the projectile or torpedo, the weight of which is about one ton. This slide at all times when the barrel is elevated above the horizontal line, rises by hydraulic pressure to receive the projectile from a tram-trolley. By opening a valve the slide is then made to descend with its load, and becomes lineable with the barrel of the gun. It is to be discharged by the expansion of condensed air at a pressure of 5,000 pounds per square inch, and will throw a charge of 600 pounds of dynamite a distance of three miles.

The Matter of an Allowance.

"My dear," whispered the young man, "as we are so soon to be married, we should take a practical view of life and profit by the mistakes of others. For instance, there is the subject of a regular allowance every week for spending money, you know."

"Oh, I've thought of that," she replied, sweetly.

"Have you?"

"Yes, indeed. Hundreds and hundreds of times, and lately I haven't thought of much else."

"Eh?"

"Yes. Your income is $2,000, isn't it?"

Yes, and I want it to go as far as possible toward your happiness."

"Of course. Well, I've talked it over with mamma, and she thinks an allowance of one dollar a week will be plenty."

THOSE republicans who still insist that the tariff is not a tax, will please expain why sugar came down as soon as the duty was partly taken off. We pause for a reply.

THE Michigan City Dispatch and the Saturday Evening Appeal have been consolidated. The city having only about 12,000 people could not support so many separate papers. Now they will have but two papers there, one democratic and one republican. Good plan.

EX-SECRETARY BLAIR of New Hampshire, was sent by Harrison as Minister to China. But the Emperor objected to him. He started last week and had reached Chicago when Blaine sent a dispatch for him to return. It is now believed the objections against him in China will prevent his going there, but he may be sent to Japan instead.

THE Press wonders "where all the money goes, that is paid in for taxes. If he is hinting at federal taxes and expenses, he might read this which we copy from an exchange:

"The fifty-first congress made appropriation that cost the people $17.88 a second, $1073 a minute, $65,105 an hour, $1,562,300 a day, $10.937,300 a week, $43,750,000 a month and $525,000,000 a year, breaking the record of any preceding congress, by a large amount."

Council Meeting.

The council met Monday evening at 9 o'clock, for a short session. All members and Attorney Hartman proceeded to discuss again the matter as to an ordinance to keep improper persons out of the cemetery and school grounds. It is likely both these points will be rigidly cared for. Various bills were allowed, and the meeting adjourned till this, Thursday evening, when the board will be re-organized, and new members sworn in. They meet at 7:30.

Paid Promptly.

The insurance companies in which Frank Hoff had his policies paid up last week, and week before. The Phœnix of Hartford, had the $1000 on stock, and the Home of New York had the $600 on buildings, shelves etc. Both paid cash in full. This speaks well for these reliable old companies. In fact, they are among the very best. T. J. Saxton, the local agent who placed these policies, and attended to their payment, has reason to feel pleased with them. And so has Mr. Hoff.

CITY ELECTION.

The Democrats elect the Whole Ticket.

The election Monday resulted in a clean sweep for the democrats, although there was a hard struggle on marshal, and he came near being defeated. For various reasons, Mr. Pfefferl had become disliked by some of the democrats, and they worked all day against him. But the republicans, to their credit be it said, preferred to secure first, a good marshal, and talk politics some other time, and enough of them voted for Pfefferl to make up what he lacked from his own party. Then again, Mr. Burk, did not want the office, till he was at last almost dragged into it, and we believe he did not pay any attention to the matter. He is a number one man, and is no doubt better suited as it is, than if he had been chosen. There was no struggle over any of the other offices, and all went in by good majorities, especially Mr. Ensley, who has always been popular. Mr. Lanning, Mr. Grund and Mr. Jones, were all re-elected by increased majorities, proving that their services have been satisfactory. The following shows the vote by precincts:

ELECTION NOTES.

It will be seen that the vote in each of the four towns was very light. The day was cold, and people were busy. We can count up many names that were not put on the poll books that day.

In Butler several candidates, particularly, Mr. Hirsch and Mr. Stone did not want to be elected. The republicans swept the platter clean.

In Garrett only a small vote was polled, as the election was conceded to the democrats, except as to marshal, and there, as in Auburn, the republicans helped to put in the man they thought would best help the town. Our young friend, Sam Teeters, got a big vote of course.

The vote in Waterloo was light, and the democrats were beaten all around except on treasurer for which H. K. Leas who has given such good satisfaction, was re-elected. All the democrats, we believe ran up with their tickets, as they should, for they were good men.

We have to thank L. J. Gengler in Garrett, W. H. Leas in Waterloo, and A. J. Baxter in Butler for corrected returns from those towns. Such favors are appreciated.

The voters found but little difficulty this time, with the new system, and voted rapidly, and few errors were made. All parties are satisfied with the plan and hope it has come to stay.

Hoff's New Location.

Frank Hoff has repaired the building on the south part of his lot, and moved it out flush with the street, so that it is full on Eighth street, and has put in a new stock of groceries, and added such part of the dry goods of the former stock as were not injured by the fire. So he has business started up again, ready for his customers, only they must look for him on that street, two doors west of Ed. Baker's bakery and next door west of McDowell Brothers' barber shop. They have also sorted up goods injured in the fire, but which are still good for many purposes, and will put them on a ten-cent counter, where people will get some cheap bargains. As soon as he can, the old building on the north part of the lot will be taken out and work will then begin at once, on the new brick building. In the meantime, he asks his friends to call on him at his present room, the south part of the old store, and fronting on Eighth street.

School Population.

The trustees were in town Friday. May 1st, to make their report as to the number of school children in their respective towns and townships. The list stands as follows, the left hand column showing the number last year, the second shows the number for this year, the third column shows the loss over last year, and and the fourth the gains as compared with last year. The figures were furnished by Supt. Merica, and are therefore, correct:

Costly Mistake.

The Garrett Clipper last week, still urged that no notice of their election need be published in the Dispatch, and that all that the law required was to have the ticket published twice in one paper. Had they paid more attention to their own election and less to that in Auburn, they would have known more about it. The law is very plain. The ballot, just as it is to be voted, must be shown in two papers of opposite politics, in their two last issues before election. Garrett should have published in the Clipper, and in the Auburn Dispatch, just as Waterloo published in the Press and the COURIER. But the fool managers of the Clipper were in a state of frenzy over the Auburn election, and utterly oblivious to all else. The Press, COURIER and Dispatch were looking to the interest of their towns, and had studied the laws. The COURIER on April 16, and at other dates gave full instructions. But the Clipper as late as last week, insisted that all the notice needed, was "two weeks notice in one paper," being perhaps too full to know that they could not issue two numbers after that date, or in that one week. They had a part of the notice in April 16, but it had no certificate attached and no emblems. In fact it would constitute no legal notice, either as to date or form. The chances now are that the Garrett election will be pronounced illegal and the town government be totally crippled. The Clipper disgraces Garrett badly enough, without costing it so much as this is likely to do. Garrett is a live town and ought to have a decent newspaper.

Obituary.

Lydia A. Himes departed this life May 2, 1891. Deceased was born in Jefferson Co. N. Y., April 20, 1830. She was 61 years and 12 days of age. She leaves a loving husband, six children and a large circle of friends to mourn her departure.

Dearest mother, thou hast left us,
We are severed on the shore,
But beyond the tide of Jordan,
We shall meet to part no more.

We shall miss her but will meet her,
In the land of bliss above,
Where no pain and sorrow enter,
And all is peace and joy and love.

Worlds may pass away and perish,
And every feeling die away,
But the constant love we cherish,
Never, never shall decay.

Farewell, dear mother 'tis hard to know,
Thy transient life is o'er,
That we shall hear thy loving voice,
And greet thy smile no more.

A FRIEND,
Cedar Creek, Ind., May 4, 1891.

To Smyrna Rug Buyers.

The Foster Furniture and Carpet Co., at Fort Wayne, have just placed on sale five hundred Smyrna Rugs at half price. These goods were bought for cash of a manufacturer, hard pressed for money. They are extra fine in quality and of the handsomest designs. They will be run off at the following extraordinary low prices:

Rug 45 inches long for	$1 20
Rug 54 " " "	$1 75
Rug 60 " " "	$2 00
Rug 72 " " "	$2 95
Rug 84 " " "	$4 90

Card of Thanks.

We desire to express our heartfelt thanks to the kind friends and neighbors, of the late Mrs. Lydia A. Himes, for the assistance so kindly given during her late illness, and our sad bereavement.

FATHER AND CHILDREN.
Cedar Creek, May 4, '91.

Please Call and Settle.

Frank Hoff respectfully asks all who owe him on account, to call and settle as soon as they can, as the fire compelled him to buy new goods, and to put up an expensive new building, and he will need every cent coming to him.

How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

MARSHALL'S HOOF CURE

MARSHALL'S HOOF CURE cures sand and quarter cracks, split hoofs, sore and contracted feet, corns and all hoof troubles. Stops cracking, shelling and scaling hoofs. Softens and toughens brittle hoofs. It is better than soaking with oil, meal, etc. Should be used on all horses standing on hard floors or driven on hard roads. It also cures scratches, tetter, galls of all kinds, bruises, etc.

TOLEDO, O., April 6, 1891.

I had a horse in my stables that had hoofs so brittle that it was impossible to keep a shoe on his feet. I have used one can of Marshall's Hoof Cure on his hoofs and the horse has been shod for four weeks and the shoes stay on all right. I consider it the best hoof cure I have ever used.

Farmers are at present very busy getting out their spring crops. The late season has put them so far back that the oats crop will not be as extensively grown as anticipated. Many farmers will plant their usual oats ground to corn, potatoes and other summer crops.

Say farmers, if you want some of the best machinery manufactured, you should go to Ed. Weeks, south of the jail. He handles the Champion reapers and mowers, also some of the best grades of small implements. Give him a call and examine his terms. 19tf

If you will just cast your optics about, you will plainly see that Auburn is still advancing in matters of improvement. New and elegant residences are being erected in various parts of the city, which is evidence conclusive, that people are willing to risk their future habitation among us, thus adding citizens, interest and wealth to the community.

Bam Swart, the wide-awake representative of the Metropolitan Man'f'g. Co., of New York City, having a branch in Ft. Wayne, was in this city a few hours Tuesday. He was returning from a flying trip to Detroit, and Windsor. Mr. S., is we are pleased to learn, doing a good business for the firm that has placed a part of its representation in his hands. He is a good, honest and enterprising fellow and we wish him success.

A Special Bargain:—I will be enabled to offer for a short time, a line of fine, white-backed papers, very best quality, for 15 cents per roll. This is a special thing, and will only be open to those who take advantage of the opportunity, and come while the supply lasts. The patterns are just the thing for kitchen and hall papers. Don't miss this opportunity. 18t3

Davenport, The Druggist.

We are in receipt of the San Diego Daily Union of April 24, containing a full account of the visit of President Harrison to that place, and his reception especially, by the Indiana Association, a band of former Hoosiers located there. They presented him fine floral offerings, such as can no where else be seen in such beauty and abundance, and one of their number delivered an appropriate address. It was evidently a pleasant meeting for both parties, the president and the people. We suppose we are indebted to D. P. Hale or Ed. Long for this favor.

WINE OF CARDUI, a Tonic for Women.

We know the friends of Curtis F. Ash will be glad to hear from him. He is at Kansas City, and writes us a characteristic letter, that we certainly should have given our readers, had not his warning words stopped the arrangement. Glad to hear from him anyway, and assure him the old friends here wish him well.

Dr. James Squires and wife, of Churubusco, were in town this week visiting the families of Mr. Madden and Mrs. Askew. The Doctor has been in Detroit for some time, doing hospital work, and having other valuable practice. He will remain till June. He is rapidly climbing to the top round in his profession, and has been a successful physician from the first.

April 16, the Courier published an article instructing how to vote. Since that date, our exchanges have been copying its leading paragraph back and forth, ending with the one in the Dispatch last week, and not one has given credit. It all goes as "original." Never mind, boys; some time when you look over the election law half a day to get a little of it boiled down for your readers, we'll steal from you.

In reporting the operation on Mrs. Robbins last week, we were not fully informed as to what part was taken by each of the physicians present. We learn however, that Dr. Casebeer performed the operation, the others named assisting. We had stated the matter as if Dr McCaskey, had been chief operator, which we learned the next day he was not. We are not aware that the error called out criticism, but we wish to be right for our own sake.

The Reading room has arranged a very complete program for next Friday evening. The exercises last week were postponed for good reasons, which were fully and satisfactorily explained by Supt. Rose. It has been decided that Monday evening of each week will be devoted to having a social time, Everyone is invited to come on that evening and assist in the creation of better interest in the institution. All should, however, attend the entertainment to-morrow evening.

The Dispatch is still harping about those bids for public printing. We assure our friend that we likewise object to giving the public printing to a foreign firm, but we must still insist the commissioners are honest and competent, and that there was nothing in the bids to show otherwise than that Burford was the lowest, and no doubt they did their duty by accepting his bids. If the Dispatch can find any comfort in making these harmless attacks on the commissioners, we suppose they should be allowed to keep it up. But there is one thing, we shall seriously object to. That is the assertion that "Burford pays the Courier for printing" a list of the bids. The editor of this paper is not on such good terms with Burford, as the Dispatch seems to be. They never visit this office, at least have not done so for a long time. We have not seen, much less have we spoken to an agent of theirs for a bout a year. We never heard of their agent's visit to this place, and to the Dispatch office recently. The cost of publishing the bids was charged up to DeKalb county, before the Dispatch thought of having it charged to Burford, and DeKalb county will pay it. Mr. Yontz, the agent of Burford, is president of the Indianapolis city government and we presume he did not really call at the Dispatch office to talk about printing, but to get ideas from the great fountain head, as to municipal and county government.

W. J. Wallace has had his premises nicely sodded, adding greatly to the appearance of his residence and its surroundings.

Taking advantage of election day when all saloons were closed, John Neal had a new floor put in the Huelsenbeck building which he occupies.

Chop feed, bran, middlings, corn and supplies of this kind generally always to be had of Cook Ford, at his residence north of the new M. E. church, Auburn.

Now is your chance to build when you can get your lumber and shingles at wholesale prices of D. E. Willis, the lumberman, Auburn, Ind., office over Farmers Bank. 16tf

Mr. and Mrs. Lamport and the children, Willie and Addie, were here over Sunday, to attend the funeral of Mrs. Robbins. Everybody was delighted to see them again.

Miss Ada Myers has completed the facilities in her millinery department by securing the services of Miss Edith Metler, of Centreville, Mich., who will do trimming in all latest styles.

Are you aware of the fact that Beuret is handling one of the finest lines of screen doors, window screens, etc. Well, he is, and those wishing to keep out the pesky flies and insects during the summer months, will find that he has the very screen that will keep 'em out. 19tf

Among our callers May 1, were Ex-Postmaster Stoy, and Prof. Teeple, of Butler. They took considerable interest in looking over the Courier establishment, which certainly is no cheap John affair. Always glad to show our friends one of the best offices in the country.

The sermon to the K. P. order, as announced for last Sunday at the M. E church, was postponed on account of the funeral of Mrs. Robbins. It will be on next Sunday, at 10:30 a. m. the sermon being by Rev. Mr. Wooton, pastor of the church. The K. P's. and all others please bear this in mind.

The Greenhurst farm affords one of best registered Poland China boars now in the state. He is brought here for the purpose of improving the swine. His breeding cannot be excelled. Anyone wishing to use this fine fellow will find him at the Greenhurst farm just north of Auburn. He is owned by Chester Hodge. tf

A neatly printed invitation received last Friday announced the marriage at Burr Oak, April 30, of Miss Nettie Urie to Mr. Henry Schall. They go to housekeeping at Three Rivers. We take back all the disparaging things we have said about Michigan young men, for one of them at last has good taste and judgment. The old friends in DeKalb will heartily unite with the Courier in good wishes for the happy couple.

FARMERS' ALLIANCE LECTURE.

The National Lecturer of the Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union, will speak in Auburn, Ind., on Tuesday, May 12, 1891, at 1 o'clock, p. m., and all members of the order and all other labor organizations are earnestly requested to make special efforts to insure a good attendance. Let every member and workingman attend and hear the principles of the order discussed.

Davenport's stock of mounted shades is very complete. Get his prices.

Dr. Allen caught and hurt his foot on the railroad track, and it caused him to lay by several days.

Mrs. C. M. Dickinson will build an extensive addition to her home on West Seventh street soon.

Decoration day draws near. Get ready to do honor to the boys who fell in the service of their country.

We don't say much but we do say that we are ready to fill all orders for lumber and shingles at wholesale prices. D. E. Willis, Auburn. 16tf

The young people of the Presbyterian church met last Friday evening to talk up a Christian Endeavor society. They will meet to-morrow evening to perfect their plans.

A man crazy drunk tried to cut his throat last week on South Main street. Some points about this remind one forcibly of the Clipper editor's way of doing things, except the means used should be "Rough on Rats" instead of a dull knife.

W. B. Adams on the John McCullough farm two miles north of Corunna, will sell his personal property at public sale on Saturday, May 9. This will be a large sale, as he has sold his farm, and is going to move away. All should remember the date.

There was quite a family reunion at Salyer's Sunday, seventeen being present, including Mrs. Libbie Cramer of Striker, Mrs. A. W. Lyttle of Valparaiso, J. A. Dennison, wife and daughter and G. O. Dennison, wife and daughter, besides two relatives from York State.

We notice that Chester Hodge has invested in a very fine Jersey bull. This bull is registered in the A. J. C. C. records, his number is 24,111. He is of the fawn color, and is out of a cow that made 21 pounds of butter a week. He is but 2 years old and a perfect beauty. He will be kept at the Greenhurst farm just north of Auburn. Anyone wishing to breed to a Jersey will not find anything better in the state. tf

The Dispatch is inclined to be smart, when it speaks of Coroner Miser's "husking his pumpkins." We are willing to compare Mr. Miser with some of the late republican county officials at any time. But we believe up to date, the Dispatch has not criticised them in the least. Although Mr. Miser is but a carpenter, we believe he will make a successful coroner, and if at any time he should need any advice on the nice points of the coroner business, he can draw on the great municipal head that presides over the Dispatch.

Barnum has a goose that can walk the tight rope, but is safe to say it would not be goose enough to cross Niagara on one.

Recent statistics show that French railways annually kill one person out of 2,000,000 carried, while in England 21,000,000 are carried before one meets a violent death.

The Chinese spend $200,000,000 annually on their religious worship. There is a spiritual side of their religion, and spiritualism, pure and simple, has existed in China for ages.

Look down when you walk along the streets. It is the indication of a thoughtful man, and you may be able to pick up any money that may be lost on the sidewalks, besides.

An olive oil factory is soon to be built in Sonoma County, Cal., by a company which now has sixty acres of six-year-old olive trees, and is planting 700 acres more. The plant will cost $250,000.

Howard Carroll, who has had long and valuable experience in metropolitan newspaper work, is the editor-in-chief of the new journalistic venture, the New York Daily Recorder.

A new roofing paper is made by applying to the paper a composition of boiled linseed oil and pulverized charcoal. The paper so prepared is said to be perfectly air and waterproof under all circumstances.

In Southern Oregon there is a forest 16,000 miles in extent, with an estimated amount of merchantable timber of 400,000,000,000 feet. At $10 per 1,000 feet the proceeds would pay our national debt twice over.

If a man mispronounces a word, and you have occasion to pronounce it after him, what is the correct thing to do? Would it be better to say it as he says it, though it may be wrong, than to say it right, and correct him?

A suit about a calf in Texas has resulted in wiping out all the parties involved except the calf. One of the litigants shot the other, and the Sheriff shot the survivor in trying to arrest him. The calf was valued at $6.

Next to agriculture, mining and the extraction of the metals from the ores, which may be regarded as one, constitutes the most important industry in the United States. In 1888 the value of these products was $584.550,676.

A Persian philosopher claims to have unearthed records to prove that Adam and Eve were not happy together from the very first, but he cannot unearth any to prove that either went to the divorce court or let their sorrows be known through the newspapers.

Cloth is now being made from wood in Manchester, N. H. Strips of fine-grained wood are boiled and crushed between rollers, and the fibers having been combed into lines equally distant, are spun into threads, from which cloth can be woven in the usual way.

Boston has a wonderful little housekeeper. When she comes across anything she thinks good for nothing, instead of throwing it away she consigns it to a trunk in the garret. When she wants anything she doesn't have, she goes to this trunk and is sure to find just what she wants.

A Pennsylvania man advertised that he was poor, knee-sprung, homely, and cross, but wanted a wife, and in response he received fifty-four letters from women who said they'd take him. No man, no matter what sort of a house has fallen upon him, need be discouraged in facing the martimonial world.

An eccentric tragedian, whose chief attraction is the hardihood with which he faces guying audiences, and endures such approbation as is expressed by showers of stale vegetables and venerable eggs, has been compelled to protect himself by a net stretched across the stage. Now the boys attack him with putty blowers.

The Dahl process of sterilizing milk has recently been introduced into London. Fresh milk is placed in cans which are hermetically sealed, then heated and cooled alternately until the germs are destroyed. The milk can then be kept for years without losing its freshness, or failing to yield cream and butter.

It is boldly asserted by a Buffalo paper that there is not a city of 30,000 population in the United States where the people believe the Common Council to be entirely honest. If there should accidentally happen to be such a town it would be well for it to speak up, as the dime museum men are always on the watch for a good thing.

A jury in a court at Mexico, Mo., brought in such an outrageous verdict that the Judge dismissed them in this humiliating fashion: "It is the sentence of this court that the sheriff conduct you to the rear door of the court-house and allow you to depart, as your services will not be again required during my term of office.

A scheme for bringing heat from the interior of the earth, through pipes, and utilizing it for warming purposes has been suggested by a genius in Butler, Pa. He proposes to bore a pipe line 10,000 feet below the earth's surface, and give the warm air a chance to ascend to a reservoir, whence it can be distributed all over the town.

Remuneration was asked of an accident insurance company, at Zaliska, Ohio, by a man who claimed to have been kicked by a dog, and severely injured. Another resident of the same city put in a claim for being gaffed in the wrist by a game rooster, as he was picking up some kindling wood. This man said he was disabled for some time.

It is claimed that the fastest time ever made on an American railway was on the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago road. The official report showed that a train ran fifty-three miles in 45 minutes, eleven miles of which were covered in 7 minutes, or at an average speed of ninety-four miles an hour. This record is said to be authenticated by the train sheets.

Very cold or warm baths when used to excess diminish the elasticity of the skin and its power of resistance to external irritants. Dr. Auspetz, of Vienna, says a healthy skin is not necessarily beautiful, and water is serviceable to in only moderate amounts and in moderate temperatures. The same authority says that a sponge soaked in oil should be applied to the scalp and roots of the hair at night.

Gen. Booth, the general manager of the Salvation Army, has decided to get a farm of a thousand acres not far from London, England, and there employ tramps and vagabonds generally who apply for assistance. If the plan could succeed it would be invaluable to the poorer classes in and around London who belong to the Salvation Army. It will, however, have the tendency to cause lazy tramps to give the vicinity a wide berth.

People who are fond of taking medicine may gratify their taste, and put money in their pockets at the same time. A homeopathic college in New York pays persons to take drugs, and keep a record of their effect. These drug-takers must be sound in health, and not habitual users of tobacco, tea, coffee, or alcoholic stimulants. For converting their stomachs into laboratories, the "provers," as they are called, receive $5 a week.

A singular incident is related of two Georgia brothers, who were devotedly attached to each other, and who had often expressed the desire that they might die together. At Gainsville, Walter Wood, in attempting to cross the Tombigbee River in a skiff, was drowned by his boat capsizing. The same day and about the same time his brother, Julian Wood, who was working in a glass furnace at Birmingham, was overcome by gas and died in a few minutes.

The Araucanian People, inhabiting the northern part of Patagonia, are of medium height and great strength, the principal peculiarity of formation being in the narrowness of the front of the head and the size of the foot. Their marriage is an odd mixture of ceremonies. Theoretically the bridegroom is supposed to steal his bride against her will and in opposition to the wishes of her parents; practically he buys her. Strange to say, the match is generally one of affection. As in Spain, music is the method of expressing feeling, but alas, the instrument is a jew's-harp, without which no lover is ever seen.

A story is told of a letter carrier in one of our large cities who, a few months ago, found on returning to the post-office from one of his long rounds of delivery that a letter in his bag had been overlooked. It was an ordinary, unimportant looking missive and he kept it over for the first round next day. The consequence was that a great firm failed of a notification, their notes went to protest, their mill was closed and 100 of their operatives were thrown out of employment. The letter carrier was discharged and his family suffered for the necessities of life during a severe winter. All went to show the importance of thoroughness in the business undertaken to be done.

Every one may not know that the Bank of England notes are made from new white linen cuttings—never from anything that has been worn. So carefully is the paper prepared that even the number of dips into the pulp made by each workman is registered on a dial by machinery, and the sheets are counted and booked to each person through whose hands they pass. They are made at Laverstroke, on the River Whit, in Hampshire, by a family named Portal, descending from a French Huguenot refugee, and have been made by the same family for more than 150 years. They are printed within the building, there being an elaborate arrangement for making them so that each note of the same denomination shall differ in some particular from the other.

"He's a Brick."

Plutarch, in his life of Agesilaus, King of Sparta, gives us the origin of the quaint and familiar saying. On a certain occasion an embassador from Epirus, on the diplomatic mission, was shown by the king over his capital. The embassador knew of the monarch's fame—knew that though only nominally King of Sparta, he was ruler of Greece—and he looked to see massive walls rearing aloft their embattled towers for the defense of the town, but found nothing of the kind. He marveled much at this, and spoke of it to the king.

"Sire," he said, "I have visited most of the principal towns, and I find no walls reared in defense. Why is this?"

"Indeed, Sir Embassador," replied Agesilaus, "thou cans't not have looked carefully. Come with me to-morrow morning and I will show you the walls of Sparta."

Accordingly, on the following morning, the king led his guest out upon the plain where his army was drawn up in full battle array, and pointing proudly to the serried hosts, he said:

"There thou beholdest the walls of Sparta—10,000 men, and every man a brick!"

Preachers rarely make deals in mercantile exchanges, but in their pulpits they are very apt to speculate on futures.

TAXING AN INDUSTRY.

THE PIANO MAKERS AND THEIR BURDENS.

How McKinley Taxed a Flourishing Industry—Greed of the Makers of Keys, Strings, Pins, Felt and Actions—How These Men Prey Upon the Piano Makers.

Pianos were first manufactured in this country nearly one hundred years ago. The industry has grown rapidly, the production last year being double what it was ten years ago. Last year we made about 72,000 pianos, and it is estimated that since 1820 we have made 1,210,000. It is estimated that we now have 200 factories engaged in turning out pianos or parts used in them—such as keys, wires, actions, etc. The estimated capital of these factories is $15,000,000, employing 10,000 workmen at wages of $6,500,000 a year, using $9,000,000 worth of material, and turning out a product worth $18,000,000. New York alone has about two-thirds of the factories, Massachusetts ranking next.

McKinley's dealing with the piano industry affords an excellent example of how protection to minor industries may become very burdensome to more important industries. Our piano makers are so successful that they care nothing for protection for themselves; but they have a just grievance against McKinley for the great increase of duty which he placed upon the parts of pianos which are bought ready-made by many of the manufacturers. Such parts are the ivory keys, the wire used in making strings, the tuning pins to which the strings are fastened, the felt used in making hammers, and the actions which transmit the strokes of the fingers to the strings.

There are only three establishments in this country engaged in making ivory piano keys. These establishments import their elephants' tusks free of duty. Under the old law the duty on piano keys was 30 per cent. McKinley raised the duty to 40 per cent., and already it is said that a set of keys costs the piano manufacturer one dollar more than last year.

The wire used in making piano strings is made almost entirely by Washburn & Moen, of Worcester, Mass. By one of the familiar tariff tricks, the McKinleyites made it appear that they had reduced the duty on piano wire from 2½ cents a pound to 2¼ cents on one size, and had made no change on the other size. But at the end of the wire schedules a paragraph was added placing a duty of 45 per cent. on all iron and steel wire worth more than four cents a pound. Now piano wire is worth from thirty to forty cents a pound abroad. Thus the old rates of duty, equal to an ad valorem of 11 per cent. on smaller wire and 14 on the larger sizes give place to a 45 per cent. rate, which means increasing the rates over 300 per cent. on the finer and over 200 on the coarser wire. Where the piano manufacturers paid 2½ cents a pound duty under the old law they now pay over 8 cents, and where they paid 3 cents they now pay over 12 cents.

These higher duties were at once taken advantage of by the dealers. Just as soon as the McKinley law went into effect they changed their lists, and wire which had been sold to the piano manufacturers at 50 cents per pound was advanced to 70 cents. The firm of Washburn & Moen, the principal beneficiaries of the increased duties, were the moving spirits in the recent organization of the barbed-wire trust, they holding valuable patents which gave them a monopoly before the trust was formed. It is currently reported in the piano trade in New York that a large sum of money was corruptly used to secure the advance of duties on music wire.

Tuning pins bore a duty of 25 per cent. under the old law. Although they have never been manufactured in America, this duty did not satisfy the McKinleyites. The makers of piano actions came forward with a loud demand that the duty on "actions and parts of" be fixed at 50 per cent. These men did not make tuning pins, but in drawing up their paragraph they made the language so sweeping as to include everything used in piano making. McKinley gave these men 40 per cent. protection, but the Senate struck out the paragraph and tuning pins were made dutiable at 45 per cent. Immediately after the duty was increased the price of tuning pins was raised from $2.40 per thousand to $3.20.

Another important item is the duty on the actions themselves. The old duty was 25 per cent., but the twelve action-makers clamored for 50 per cent. Against this increase there was a vigorous protest from the smaller piano manufacturers, who do not make their own actions. In their petition to McKinley they said:

"The undersigned pianoforte makers of the United States would protest against such an advancement of duty as being unjust, obstructive and fatal to the piano-making industry of this country. There appears to be no good reason for a higher rate of duty on pianoforte actions, since the manufacturers of this article in this country have been highly successful, having made large fortunes within a comparatively short time under the present protective duty. To raise the duty on piano forte actions would simply mean to create a monopoly for a few action-makers at the expense of hundreds of piano-makers."

The action makers, however, got nearly all they asked for. Their protection was raised from 25 per cent. to 45 per cent. This increase was made despite the fact that only a very few actions are imported, and gives a complete monopoly to the domestic makers, two of whom manufacture one-half of all the actions used here.

A beautiful tariff trick was performed in regard to the felt used in making piano hammers. There is only one factory engaged in the production of piano felt in the United States—that of Mr. Alfred Dolge, of Dolgeville, N. Y.—the annual production of which, according to Mr. Dolge, is about 300,000 pounds. The only piano felt imported into the United States comes from Germany, and amounts to from 25,000 to 30,000 pounds per year, so that only one-tenth of the felt used here is imported.

Under the old tariff law piano felt was taxed as "manufactures of wool not otherwise provided for," at 35 cents a pound and 40 per cent., this double duty being equal to 67 per cent. The duty in this paragraph in the McKinley bill was made 44 cents a pound and 50 per cent. When, however, the bill was in the conference committee of the House and Senate, Mr. Dolge, acting through Senator Hiscock, had the three little words, "felts not woven," put into the ready-made clothing paragraph, bearing the highest duty of all the manufactures of wool—49½ cents a pound and 60 per cent.

By this little trick Dolge's protection becomes complete. Under the old tariff the duty paid on 100 pounds of felt was $122; under the McKinley law it is $191. Some importers have already raised the price of foreign felt one dollar a pound. The greedy Dolge had two objects in view with his tariff trick: (1) To shut out all foreign competition, and (2) being a manufacturer of hammers also, to drive out of business all the manufacturers here of piano hammers who have been using imported felt. The result is that he will be free from all competition whatever in the American market. At the same time he will continue to export felt to Germany as he has done in the past, on all of which felt drawbacks of duties will be paid by the United States Government.

To compensate the piano manufacturers for having thus offered them as a prey to the greed of the makers of actions, keys, felts, and strings, McKinley raised the duty on pianos themselves from 25 to 45 per cent. As the piano makers never asked for any protection at all, McKinley's gift to them is but a shallow pretense. The piano industry is independent of foreign competition, as our manufacturers export their instruments to the most musical countries of Europe. McKinley's duty on pianos can therefore do them no good, while his duties on wire, keys, felt, and tuning pins can only serve to increase the cost of manufacture, and to strengthen and enrich the monopolies engaged in making these articles.

PROVING THE PUDDING.

CLOTH EXAMINED UNDER THE MICROSCOPE.

A Tariff Lesson—Cloth Made by High Tariff Manufacturers and by Free Wool Advocates—High Tariff Makers of Shoddy Goods.

The New York Dry Goods Economist, a protectionist trade paper which wants free wool, has hit upon a novel method of carrying on its agitation against the wool tax. There is in Philadelphia an organization called the Manufacturers' Club, which is devoted to the high McKinley tariff with its high duties on wool. In New England is another organization called the Wool Consumers' Association, a body of wool manufacturers who want the wool duty removed.

The Economist has undertaken to analyze the cloth manufactured by prominent members of these two organizations to see if it can discover any reasons why they should differ so radically on the subject of the wool tax. The result of this examination is very interesting from a tariff standpoint. It shows that the men who want a high tax on wool use a large quantity of shoddy and cotton in making what they call woolen cloth, and that the free wool men make good, honest woolen cloth with only a slight mixture of shoddy.

The first examination made was on the goods manufactured by Thomas Dolan, the President of the Manufacturers' Club. The Economist said that one fabric of this manufacturer, which was sold at $1.50 to $1.75 per yard, was found to be "composed of a worsted warp made from delaine wool, which entirely composes the face of the cloth and constitutes 28 per cent. of its weight. The filling makes the balance of 72 per cent., and is entirely cotton and shoddy, in the proportion of 92½ per cent. of cotton and 7½ per cent. of shoddy.

"We have also before us," the Economist goes on to say, "a finer fabric of the same order in a fancy trousering selling at $3.42½, to all appearances a solid worsted fabric, both face and back. An examination, however, proves these appearances are deceptive. The fabric is of a class known as a filling cord stripe, having a slight mixture of silk twist between the cords. The worsted is of three-eighths and delaine stock, yet every alternate pick of filling is cotton, as is also the warp between the filling cord and the back warp. Thus we have a cloth which every one but an expert would call an all-wool worsted cloth, yet contains 21 per cent. of cotton and 79 per cent. of worsted. The production of this mill is much superior to most of the cotton-filled worsteds that are on the market."

Over against this is the report on the goods manufactured by Jesse Metcalf, one of the most prominent manufacturers of the Wool-Consumers' Association. Two fabrics of this manufacturer were examined. The Economist says:

"The low-priced fabric, at $2.25 less 5 per cent., contains 73 per cent. of delaine worsted, while 27 per cent. of carded wool yarn containing a small percentage of shoddy is used for backing.

"The high-priced fabric sells at $2.75 less 5 per cent., and is a similarly built cloth to the lower one, but made of a somewhat finer grade of wool. The delaine wool is mixed with Australian, and of a worsted made from this blend the fabric contains 78 per cent. of its total weight. The backing composes the balance of the 22 per cent., and is made of a somewhat finer stock than the $2.25 grade."

Another examination was made of the goods of the Camden woolen mills and the Weybosset mills. The treasurer of the former mill is John T. Bottomly, who was appointed by the Manufacturers' Club to assist in arranging the wool schedule of the McKinley law. Mr. Bottomly was so successful in getting high duties put on wool that he was banqueted by his club. After examining the goods of High Tariff Bottomly the Economist says: "An analysis of these goods brings us to the conclusion that wool is only used in a limited quantity. It is a safe assertion to make that the production of heavy-weight woolen goods of this mill contain at least 70 per cent. of cotton and shoddy." Another specimen of fancy cassimere twill was found to contain 71 per cent. of cotton.

William B. Weedom, of the Weybosset Mills, is prominent in the Wool Consumers' Association. The goods of this manufacturer are reported to be "as well and honestly made as goods can be." "We have not come across a fabric in which a particle of cotton is to be found." "Such an analysis," says the Economist, "is one of which any mill may be justly proud, and is an analysis that should entitle the mill making such goods to a voice and a very loud voice in the framing of any legislation pertaining to woolens."

This is a striking tariff lesson. The manufacturers who clamor for a high wool duty are clothing the people with cotton and shoddy; those who want free wool are making solid woolen cloth. Choose ye whom ye will serve.

Praising Free Sugar.

The simplicity of the Republican organs in persistently pointing out the advantages of free sugar is beautiful to see. The Cleveland (Ohio) Leader says:

"Every one of the 175,000 grocers in the country and their 350,000 clerks are to-day informing their customers that sugar has dropped one-third in price 'because the McKinley law abolished the duty on sugar on April 1.' It is a big thing for the country—about $65,000,000 a year—and a big thing for the McKinley law. And the reduction will go right on advertising the beneficence of that measure until the Presidential election of 1892."

In other words, the one strong, redeeming point in the McKinley law is where it gives practical free trade! But how is that going to make people believe in protection? This organ points out that the removal of the duty on sugar lowers the price. But the familiar protection doctrine is that increasing duties lowers prices. How can the removal of duties have the same effect?

In these days when reductions of wages are so frequent, cases where wages are increased stand out in lonely prominence. One such case of higher wages has been reported recently in Ohio—but it was not in a protected industry. It was that of the trackmen of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. Protection is not doing much in these days in the way of raising wages.

Adam and Eve had no wealth, few clothes, no diamonds, no education, no ancestry, didn't edit a paper, did not use Haviland china, and ate with their fingers, yet they were one of the first families.

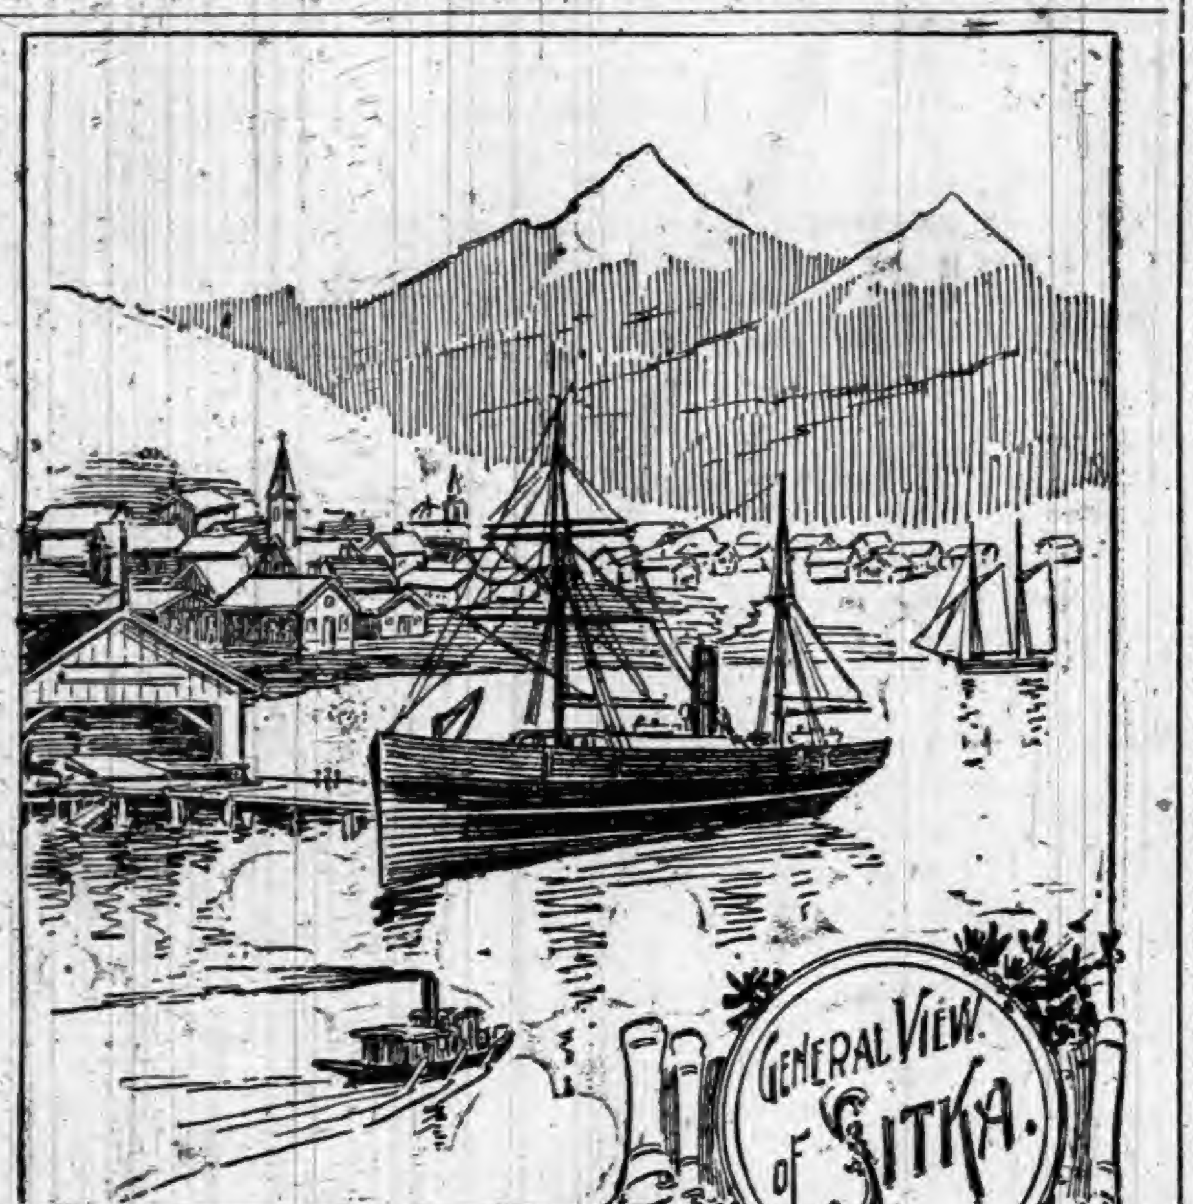
FACTS ABOUT ALASKA.

OUR GREAT NORTHWESTERN TERRITORY.

Extent of Its Boundaries—Sitka, Its Principal Town—Precious Metals Found—The Whaling Industry and Fishing Interests—Its Extensive Forests.

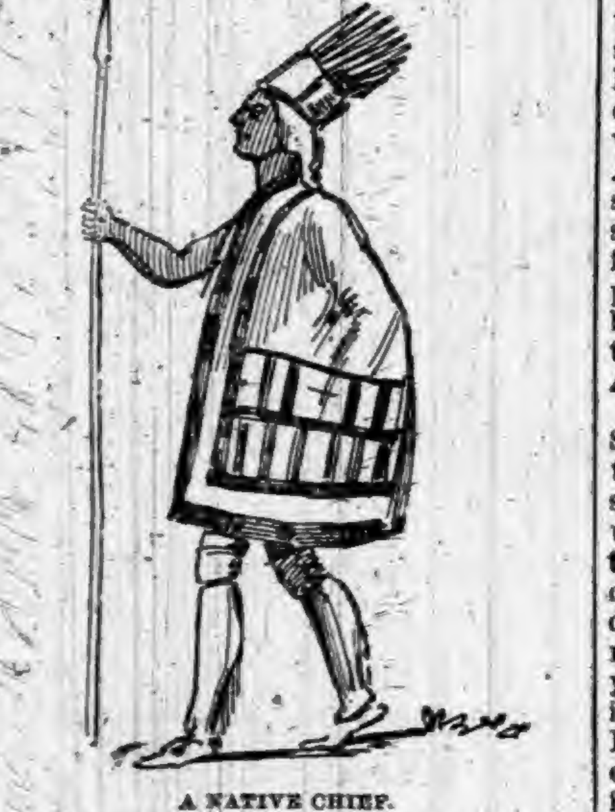
TO one whose attention has never been called to the fact, it seems rather surprising that San Francisco is on the meridian that divides the possessions of the United States into equal parts. The Alaskan archipelago according to the Scientific American, extends as far to the west of San Francisco as Maine is east of it. We are furthermore not apt to realize that the coast line of Alaska exceeds that of the United States, and that its territory is equal in extent to the portion of the United States east of the Mississippi River. Its islands are some 1,100 in number, and its scenery is as grand and rugged, with its abrupt headlands, its gigantic ravines, its snow-covered mountains and glaciers, and enormous rivers, as any on this continent. It has a population of about 32,000, only 3,000 of whom are whites.



GENERAL VIEW. OF SITKA.

The few towns that are to be found are scattered along the coast, and are principally trading and fishing stations. The most important is Sitka, formerly the seat of the Russian Governor, and at that time called New Archangel. It has a population of about 1,500, and is the headquarters of the United States authorities. It has fortifications, magazines and a magnetic observatory, and has a Greek church and bishop. It also boasts of a training school for Indian children. The influences of civilization have wrought a great change in the natives, who were formerly very turbulent and savage. The Indian school is well attended, and the effects of education and the missionary have already been felt. The Greek Church, which we have reproduced with its dome and graceful minaret, is the most foreign feature of the town, and is in fact the only edifice that has any claim to being an architectural production.

The Russian block house, which was formerly garrisoned with a Russian force, is now abandoned. On a rocky point near Sitka is situated a castle, which, in spite of its rugged walls and severe aspect, possesses its secrets and its romance. It was formerly the abode of a Russian princess who held sway in the Territory, and who was murdered in her own home in the midst of gay revels by a jealous admirer.



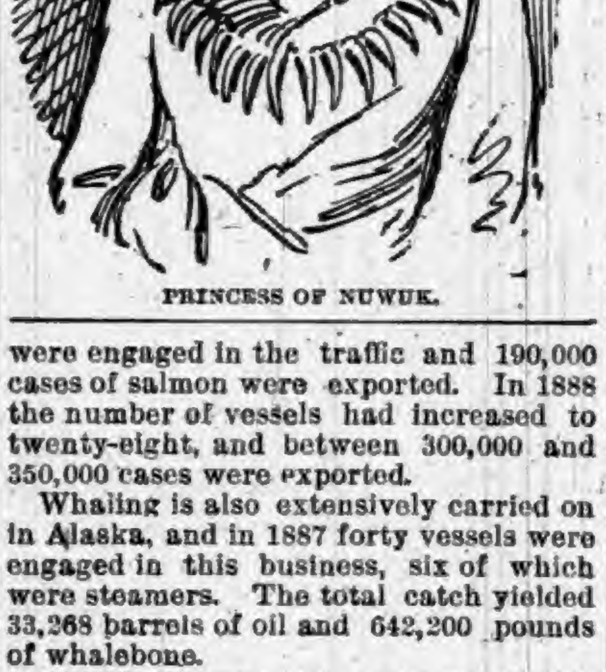
A NATIVE CHIEF.

A portrait is reproduced of Kitch Konk, a native chief, in full dancing costume. His mantle is brilliantly colored, while in his hand he carries a rattle. A group of Alaskan ladies is also given. They are not in their war paint and best linen, but in their every day costume, while their faces are simply daubed with a mixture of spruce gum, grease and lamp black, put on, it is said, to preserve the complexion.

One of the most curious practices of the natives is their method of disposing of the dead. The bodies of the departed are cremated and deposited in log houses, which are surmounted by some carved object in wood, called a totem, which is supposed to guard the ashes of the deceased whose bones lie beneath. Cremation has been generally abandoned since the arrival of the missionaries. The carvings on these totems are emblematic of important events in the history of the chief in whose honor the totem has been raised. Each family or subdivision of a tribe has its own totem, and these monuments serve to distinguish between families much as armorial bearings did in the middle ages. Sometimes the dead are carried out without any ceremony, and laid on the snow and are soon forgotten. The bodies are generally eaten by the dogs. There is no marriage ceremony, but children are often betrothed when infants. Marriage relations begin at the age of 12 or 15 years. Large families are rare, and children are born at intervals of from two to four years. Children are frequently given away. Polygamy is not common, being confined to the leading influential families. When a man's wife dies he immediately selects another. Aged and infirm parents are treated with great tenderness. Owing to the continual hardship, the people die young, and the race is rapidly decreasing. Fire is procured by flint and steel. The people have a natural craving for rum and tobacco, and will do anything to get it. It is always the first thing they ask for.

Gold is found in some quantity, and the Treadwell stamp mill is quite an extensive concern. Fishing, however, is a more important industry, and one which is being very rapidly developed. Nineteen salmon canneries are now in operation in Alaska, and very few realize how the waters of Alaska abound in salmon. They are much more numerous than they are in the prolific waters of California, Oregon, and Washington Territory. Thousands have been taken, so we are informed by a recent Government report, by a single haul of the seine. We quote the following from this report:

"On the southeast shores of the Alaskan peninsula, in the bays with small streams entering into them, the salmon are crowded so thickly that the progress of the boat is impeded by them, and, should a southeast storm suddenly arise at such seasons, the fish are driven on the beach in innumerable quantities. One of the Russian navigators assured us (1867) that under such circumstances he has seen the beach strewn two or three feet deep with stranded salmon. Vancouver has recorded that he saw them in Burrough's Inlet cast upon the beach in great numbers." This all sounds, indeed, like a fish store, but we must not look upon it askance, as it appears in Government records, advance sheets of which have been received from the San Francisco Bureau of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey.



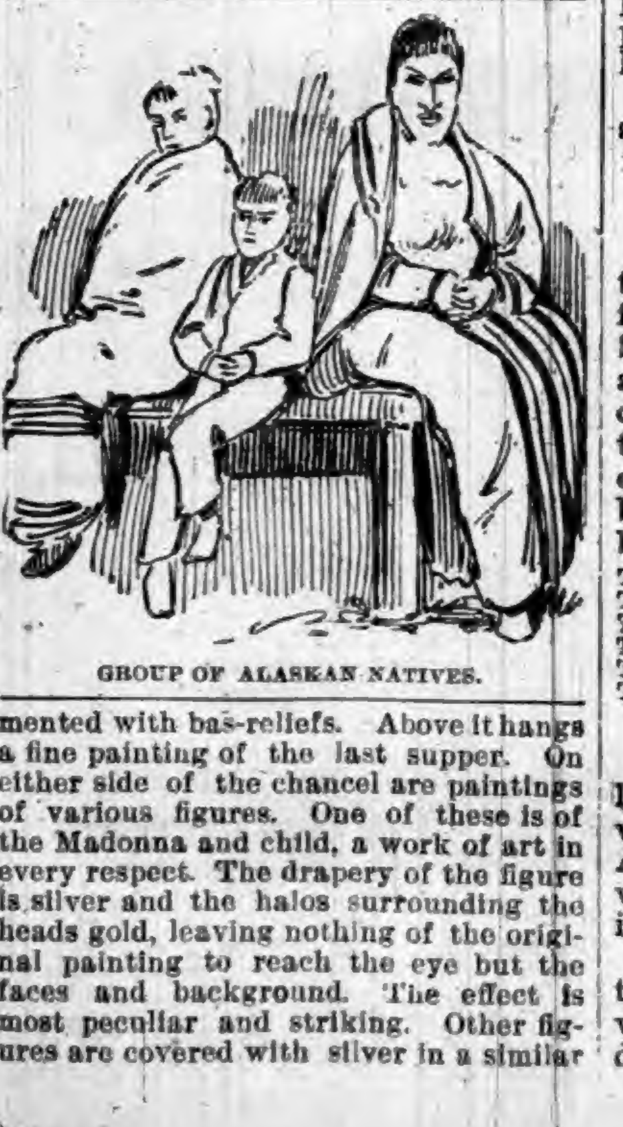
PRINCESS OF NUWUK.

The salmon fisheries have increased very rapidly. In 1887 eighteen vessels were engaged in the traffic and 190,000 cases of salmon were exported. In 1888 the number of vessels had increased to twenty-eight, and between 300,000 and 350,000 cases were exported.

Whaling is also extensively carried on in Alaska, and in 1887 forty vessels were engaged in this business, six of which were steamers. The total catch yielded 33,268 barrels of oil and 642,200 pounds of whalebone.

One of the greatest resources of this vast region is its forests, which are practically virgin. The value of these is not so much appreciated now as it will be later, when the wood supply of the Pacific States, which is being so wantonly wasted now, has begun to give out. Then Alaska, with its great supply of hemlock, spruce and cedar trees, will be sought to supply the devouring hunger of advancing civilization. The views herewith presented are from photographs procured by a gentleman who has recently returned from an extended tour through Alaska.

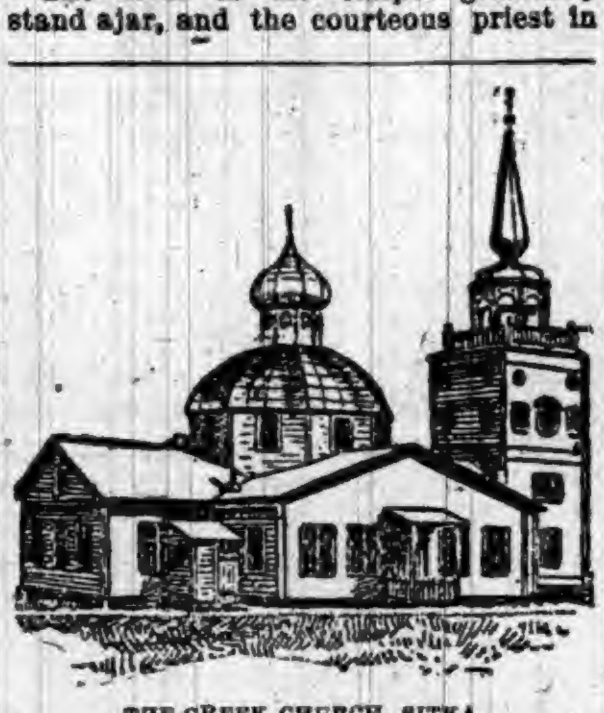
One of the chief objects of interest in Sitka is the Greek Church, which no tourist fails to visit. It is the most conspicuous structure in the town, and its peculiar architecture catches the eye at the first glance. It is built in the form of a Greek cross, with an emerald-green dome in the center, and a cupola surmounted by a bell-tower. Sitka was for years the seat of government in America for the Greek Church, the official Russian religion, but this honor is now enjoyed by San Francisco, where there is a church maintained for the few of that faith to be found in the city at the Golden Gate.



GROUP OF ALASKAN NATIVES.

The fittings of the church were presented to it by the Empress Catherine and are very rich and costly. The most interesting portion is the chapel, which occupies one wing of the edifice. Its appointments are very magnificent. The chancel is raised, and is reached by three steps, leading to four doors, two of which are carved and gilded and ornamented with bas-reliefs. Above it hangs a fine painting of the last supper. On either side of the chancel are paintings of various figures. One of these is of the Madonna and child, a work of art in every respect. The drapery of the figure is silver and the halos surrounding the heads gold, leaving nothing of the original painting to reach the eye but the faces and background. The effect is most peculiar and striking. Other figures are covered with silver in a similar manner. The great candlestick, candelabra and ornaments are of solid silver.

The doors of the chapel generally stand ajar, and the courteous priest in attendance willingly shows to visitors the gorgeous vestments and the Bishop's crown, heavy with pearls and jewels, and explains everything. The foot of woman is never permitted to cross the threshold and thus profane this holy of holies.



THE GREEK CHURCH, SITKA.

Visitors are conducted through the entire church, and are made welcome at all services. The communicants are the few residents of mixed Russian blood still living there and the natives who continue under the influence of the priests. The chief element of interest the church possesses is the suprise with which one is assailed at finding so unexpectedly a church so richly endowed in that far-away corner of the universe, and one's curiosity is naturally excited.

HOW TO EAT 'POSSUM.

A Dialect Story as Told by Congressman Coleman, of Louisiana.

Only those who have enjoyed an acquaintance outside of business relations with the modest Representative from the Second Louisiana District know that Hon. Hamilton Dudley Coleman is one of the best story tellers ever a member of Congress. A year or two ago, it was at a club, after a promising meeting of one of the American shipping conventions, that a score or more of gentlemen were enjoying a lively run of such stories as "set the table in a roar." Mr. Coleman was called upon by a companion and told what is given below, being twice encored, so inimitably did he tell it. It is the story of an old plantation negro.

"If yuh wants to know what's good, des lis'en: You look at de 'possum and smack yor lips, fer he a big, fine feller. Den yuh take 'em an' go rite bac home, an' jes' fo' yuh git to de do' yuh take yo' axe-helve an' put 'em across de neck an' brake de neck by pullin' of de tail. Den yuh take 'im in de house an' de ole 'oman done lef' a great big fireplace heep full hick'ry ashes; yuh takes de shubble an' opens er big hole in dem pile er ashes an' draps dat 'possum in dar; an' when yuh takes 'im outer dar he hair dess pull off dess as easy, an' yuh put 'im in some hot water an' scrapes 'im wid er case knife an' he cums dess as clean. Den yuh takes out de intrals, hangs 'im up an' wash 'm good; den yuh salts 'im down and puts 'im away twel Monday mawnin.' Monday mawnin' cum, de old 'owman takes 'im out an' parbiles 'im good; den she gets 'bout peck of taters, an' den slices dem taters an' piles 'em all ober 'im, an' den she bakes him twel de greese run all fru dem taters. Den she takes 'im out an' puts 'im in de big dish an' sets 'im on de dinner table wid de taters piled up all over 'im. Yuh cum ter dinner from der fiel' an' yuh walks in an' sets down to de table, but yuh doan' eat dat 'possum den. Eh! eh! eh! eh!

"No sah! doan' eat dat possum den. Arter dinner yuh takes 'im an' de taters an' sets 'im up in de cubburd. Bimeby yuh cums home frum de day's wuk; fer yuh comes home for yer supper. Yuh frows de ole hat on de flo', takes yer seat in dat char an' gibs up yer soul to Gord"—Chicago Journal.

Florida's Labyrinthian Waters.

"Where have you been?" said a guest at one of the hotels as a friend walked up the steps, well laden with souvenirs from South Florida.

"O," was the reply, "I've been down to Charlotte Harbor and up that river with the unmentionable name."

"Caloosahatchee?"

"Yes, that's it. I spent six days trying to pronounce it and haven't succeeded yet. These Indian names are beautiful names, but they are decidedly hard to pronounce. By the way, where have you been?"

"Well, I went over to the Suwanee river, cut over the country, shot 'gators on the Withlacoochee, fished for bass in Tsala Apopka, sailed on Thonotosassa, skipped over to Okonlockhatchee, walked by the shores of the Weohyakapka, plucked flowers by Hickpochee's limpid waters, visited the sugar fields on Tohopekaliga, sailed on the tortuous Kissimme, was buffeted by the waves of Okeechobee, and have also captured tarpon on the Caloosahatchee. I expect to visit Istokpogayoxie, Lockapepka, Hatcheneeha and Ecautockhatchee before I leave the State."

"Gosh!" ejaculated his companion, as he stepped into the hotel.—Florida Times-Union.

A Bill for Kisses.

A wise lady, wiser in her generation than the children of light, who keeps a fashionable boarding house not far from Sutter street, San Francisco, has taken an excellent method of checking the disposition of her guests to embrace the pretty chambermaids, in which her establishment abounds. A frolicsome boy received, at the end of a month a bill in which these charges occurred:

To one attempt to embrace Mary	$1.60
To one attempt to embrace Jane	.50
To one attempt to embrace Fanny	1.50
To kissing Fanny	2.00
To catching Jane around the neck	.25
To holding Mary by the waist	1.00
Total	$6.25

Poor Jane, being antique and freckled, was put at the bottom of the list, while Fanny, the buxom, was classed A1. The young man paid the bill without a murmur, but inquired what it would cost to kiss the landlady.

"That goes with the receipt," said the good lady, demurely, and the seal was forthwith placed upon the business document.

A Wonderful Printing Press.

A Georgia hand-press that really saw George Washington will be exhibited at the great World's Fair. It is at present in the office of the Lee County News, and is in a remarkable state of preservation. Curious heiroglyphics are carved upon its iron frame. Among them "G. W. His x mark," can be plainly seen. There is not an older or more curiously constructed hand-press in the country. It was used as a battering ram during the Revolutionary War; put together afterward and made to do service as a cotton-gin; later on it was a corn-sheller, and still later it served its time as a cane-grinding machine. It has a personal acquaintance with every editor in the State, and with many generations of them gone before.—Atlanta Constitution.

O! the Misery of It.

Human wretchedness touches bottom in sea sickness. Life is held a feather's weight by the unfortunate afflicted with it. Why endure its atrocious internal convulsions when Hostetter's Stomach Bitters relieves them instanter? Not only relieves, but prevents. It is not always on the "briney" that traveler's nausea is experienced. Railway journeying, riding with one's back to the horses or the locomotive sometimes produces it in super-sensitive stomachs. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is always the prompt remedy. The mischievous properties of brackish water, the evil influence of miasma, unwholesome or unaccustomed food, excessive fatigue, whether bodily or mental, the dyspeptic tendency bred by sedentary pursuits, the pernicious effects of exposure to extremes of temperature or dampness, all these are effectually counteracted by this genial preservative of health. Cures also rheumatism, kidney, and bilious trouble.

He Robbed Her.

A certatn Queen of Hanover once upon a time, when traveling, stopped at an inn called "The Golden Goose." She remained two days to rest herself and retinue, and receive such entertainment as was needed, and for the same was charged three hundred thalers. On her departure the landlord besought her with obsequious difference to favor him with her patronage on her return. "If you desire that, mein lieber mann," replied her majesty, "you must not again take me for your sign."

A Divided Duty.

Woman (to tramp)—There, I have obeyed the divine injunction to "Feed the hungry," and now I hope you will remember that one good turn deserves another, and chop a little wood for me.

Tramp—I'm very sorry, mum, but I've got an engagement, an' must hurry off.

"Why, what have you to do?"

"It is my solemn duty, mum, to go out into the highways, an' tell hungry gents like myself that this'ere house is a good place to git a square meal."—Street & Smith's Good News.

WHY are you sick? Because you have neglected Nature's laws. She continually tries to correct the trouble, but cannot do it without assistance. Prickly Ash Bitters is the assistant needed, and with the help of this medicine your health will be fully restored. Give it a trial and watch the results.

Off on His Date.

A man in Covington, Ky., has just paid a fine of $15 for firing a small cannon on the 7th of April in honor of the anniversary of George Washington. He had forgotten the date, but the court held that a prudent man would have chalked it down on the wood-shed door and burned his powder at the proper time.

As a Bluff.

All foreign nations look upon Italy's action in the New Orleans affair as a great big bluff, intended to scare Uncle Sam. As he didn't scare, every diplomat is laughing at the way the Rudini ministry has had to crawfish. The yell of a few Italians doesn't throw a nation like this into a cold sweat.

THE demands of society often induce ladies to use quack stimulants when feeling badly. They are dangerous! Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is adapted to such cases.

He Found Him.

George Taylor, an Arkansas man, went out to look for his brother Bill the other day, and when he reached the spot where he had been chopping, the man was found in fragments, with bunches of hair lying around to prove that he been tackled and almost devoured by a panther.

The Snakes Ahead.

The Government bounty on serpents in Central India has been withdrawn, as experience has proved that no effort on the part of man can exterminate the pests. A district thoroughly cleared of them will be overrun again in a month. They grow like pig-weeds.

PURIFY YOUR BLOOD.

But do not use the dangerous alkaline and mercurial preparations which destroy your nervous system and ruin the digestive power of the stomach. The vegetable kingdom gives us the best and safest remedial agents. Dr. Sherman devoted the greater part of his life to the discovery of this reliable and safe remedy, and all its ingredients are vegetable. He gave it the name of

Prickly Ash Bitters!

a name every one can remember, and to the present day nothing has been discovered that is so beneficial for the BLOOD, for the LIVER, for the KIDNEYS and for the STOMACH. This remedy is now so well and favorably known by all who have used it that arguments as to its merits are useless, and if others who require a corrective to the system would but give it a trial the health of this country would be vastly improved. Remember the name—PRICKLY ASH BITTERS. Ask your druggist for it.

He Couldn't Sing.

"Reginald," exclaimed an up-town bride of two months as she returned from a shopping tour, "I saw the loveliest diamond necklace imaginable to-day; and so cheap, too; it can be bought for a mere song."

Then she paused to hear what remark Reginald would make.

"My darling," quoth he, "you know how gladly I would grant your every wish; but I grieve to say that in this case I am unable to do so. Nature has not endowed me with the power of producing vocal melody. I could not sing though I should be promised a solitare for every note."—Lockport Journal.

We give the article entire. It is taken from the Orrville Crescent, and Mr. Owen and Mr. Husselman, who formerly lived near there are well acquainted with the locality and knew some of the parties named.

"An old uncle of mine, Samuel L. Grim, by name, died short time ago in Frankfort, Ky., and I being his only lawful heir, received his worldly effects, among which is an old chest which contained several articles of wearing apparel, half a dozen old books and a packet of letters, securely tied with thongs of deer skin and dim and dusty with age. These letters, and maybe the other articles enumerated, had been handed down to my uncle by some distant relative of his, and more distant of mine, and probably had not been opened since read by the first recipient of them. As soon as I discovered them, my curiosity was excited by the evident marks of age upon them. Severing the thong that bound them, with a feeling akin to awe and reverence, I perused them with wide open eyes until I came upon one that interested me greatly and through which an incident is brought to light, that the most inquisitive and searching historian has failed to record. The letter is as follows:

"DAY'S BLOCK HOUSE, OHIO,
August 7, 1809.

Dear Sister Mary: Abner Chump will be apast your house and I thought I would rite you a few lines and send them by him, to let you know we are well at present and hope these few lines may find you the same. Abner belongs to the Militia and they are goin' after the injuns at Sandusky. We han't been pestered much by them yet. Two weeks ago a man by the name of Snard come runnin' down the trail from the South and told Jake there was a parcel of them comin' to massacree us. I was jest lettin' a little bucket with about 2 pounds of butter in down into the well to cool, when I heard him say they was comin' and I jest dropped bucket, butter and all and run into the block house; and its there yet and will stay there I expect, for the well is deep and we have no way of getting it out.

* * * * * * *

Write as soon as you get a chance to send a letter. From your sister,
ABIGAIL FRANCH."

We have omitted a portion of the above letter on account of its unimportance.

As to the party who wrote it, the ones to whom it was written and the ones mentioned therein, we have not the slightest knowledge nor means of gaining the same, at present time, at any rate.

After reading and pondering over it for some time, I imparted the contents of it to my old friend, Frank Haverstock, who at once proposed that we visit the site of Fort Day and if the old well was still in existence, ascertain if possible, whether or not the bucket and contents were still intact. No sooner had the proposition been made by Mr. Haverstock, than I accepted and together we drove from Mt. Eaton to the home of David Carr, four miles south of Orrville and procuring his service as guide we soon arrived upon the spot where in 1809 Oliver Day erected a block house for the protection of himself, family and neighbors against the incursions of marauding Indians, who, at that date, were quite numerous in this county. This old block house, or Fort Day as it was often called, was situated about ¾ of a mile due east of East Union postoffice, near the state road. Two tall Lombardy poplar trees planted by hands that death has long since made passive and decay made fleshless, like giant sentinels, whisper and moan while they watch over it.

The old well is still there, safely covered over and fenced around, and as good as it was eighty-one years ago. The owner of the farm willingly granted us permission to prosecute our investigation and with rope and grapple we soon exhumed the contents which consisted of a few small pieces of boards and the identical object of which we were in search—the bucket—and a bucket it is, of the most remarkable pattern conceivable—a cut off of a hollow gum tree, about a foot in diameter and fifteen inches in length with a rough bottom fitted into it and an iron bail to which was still attached a short piece of hempen rope. A rounded cover held in place by a wooden pin completed this rude specimen of handiwork. Removing the cover, imagine, if you can, our surprise and satisfaction at the further confirmation of the verity of the letter, for there was a small roll of butter, the size of the one indicated, yellow and to all appearances fresh as if newly made. The bucket and butter, submerged in the cool water, had been perfectly preserved through all these long years.

The bucket is now in the possession of Edward McCullough, who resides five miles south of Orrville, and the butter, placed in a hermitically-sealed, glass jar, is in the shoe store of Michael Cotterman in Apple Creek.

Obituary.

Mrs. Nettie Brailey, died at the home of her father, A. C. Comparet, in Hicksville, April 27, 1891 at the age of 32 years and 9 months. Deceased was a sister of Mrs. W. H. Keeran who has been with her most of the time lately. She has many friends in the old home neighborhood about Newville and St. Joe. Her disease was consumption which first developed itself about a year and a half ago. She bore her sufferings with fortitude, and when it was certain she could not recover, she longed for that release that only death could bring. She had been a resident of St. Joe for some time, and the good ladies of that place, her former neighbors, remembered her with fine tributes at the funeral. The funeral took place, April 29, Rev. Mr. Cook, of the M. E. church conducting the services.

Laid to Rest.

Mrs. Anna B. Robbins, died at her home in Auburn, May 1, 1891, at the age of 47 years, 4 months and 23 days. Her maiden name was Bumpus and she was born in Ft Wayne, Ind. She was married January 5, 1865, to Albert Robbins, who survives her. Three children were born to them, one of whom died in infancy, Bert C. and Edward, surviving her. She united with the M. E. church of this place, under the ministry of Rev. J. W. Welch, and entered actively upon her church and Sunday school work, in which her zeal and interest never flagged till her final sickness forced her to remain at home. She had been in charge of the primary class in Sunday school, for fifteen years continuously. This class was always a large one, the enrollment at recent dates being about ninety, with an average attendance but little lower than this. This class, she never neglected nor did its great cares and labors keep her in the least from her regular attendance at service, or the many other church duties she felt impelled to assume. She had been for years, a leading member in the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, as well as in the Ladies' Aid Society. In fact she took an active, leading part in all church work. Nor did her work end here, for her family circle was always a happy one, and one that received the full share of her loving and sympathetic attention. But especialy during the laborious year just past, while so much had to be done, and so much was done. by the self-denying ladies of her church, have her activity and self sacrificing spirit been manifested. She was a leader among the leaders, and made efforts and sacrifices second to none in that noble band who did so much to rear the beautiful edifice to which all our people came on Sunday to pay their last tribute of respect to her memory. The funeral services were held at three in the afternoon, the great church being filled long before the ceremonies began. The exercises were in charge of Mr. Wooton, present pastor assisted by the late pastor, Mr. Lamport, and by Mrs. Ehlers. The firs address was by Mr. Wooton, and was an able and feeling tribute to the memory of the deceased whom it has been his fortune to know but a short time. Mr. Lamport followed, in a feeling and eloquent address speaking as one who had known her and her good works, for he had been her pastor for five years. Mrs. Ehlers followed, with one of those simple, pathetic and eloquent addresses for which she is so much admired, and which all so love to hear. It was fitting that these three should have been selected for this sad "labor of love." At times, during each address, tears and sobs were the responses from the stricken audience all over the building. An affecting part of all this, was the presence of her class of little ones, marshaled into the auditorium by the Sunday school superintendent, Mr. Merica. The little folks, were visibly impressed with the solemn occasion. They attended also at the grave, where they strewed flowers on the grave of their loved teacher. There was an immense throng at the last rites, when she was laid to her final earthly rest in the new "Woodlawn" cemetery. The floral tributes were many and very beautiful, and were contributed by the various church interests with which she had been connected. We believe such a profusion of of rare flowers has never been seen here on a similar occasion.

Birthday Surprise.

Wednesday eve April 29, at the home of Fred. Bartles in Jackson township, occurred one of the most pleasant and social events, we have ever been, permitted to enjoy. It being the 23d anniversary of their son Charles, it was arranged to give him a surprise which was accomplished in a most elegant manner. About eight o'clock his friend gathered in the road in front of the house and thence proceeded in a group to the door, and Charles all unconscious of what was going on outside of his home, was making the hours pass more pleasantly by rehearsing some of his favorite songs when the door opened and in rushed his, friends to the number of forty. Among those present were: Messrs Bartles and Keopka of Garrett, Frank Simington, Wm. Kruse, John Lochner, Elmer and John Davis, A. V. Smith, John Bailey, Linus Hilkey, John Moudy, Newton and Bert Pendlam, Al. Ervin, Charles Bartles of Jackson Center, and Hattie and Nora Romine, Mary and Kate Bartles of Garrett, Sarah Lochner, Lottie Houston, Lizzie Keope, Mary Hilkey, Clara Freeman, Bertha Smith, Mary and Nettie Comeskey, Maggie Reed, Dora Hilkey, Anise Ferguson, Lena Bartles and others. The evening passed pleasantly in the indulgence of music and games until the clock chiming the hour of two bade each and every one to seek their homes wishing him many more such surprises.

Married.

At the home of the bride's parents in Butler township, April 30, 1891, Marion Shutt to Lydia Carnahan, Rev. Mr. Valentine of the U. B. church at Leo, was the officiating clergyman on this happy occasion. The groom is a son of ex-trustee A. J. Shutt of Jackson township, and the bride is a daughter of M. A. Carnahan, a well known citizen of Butler township. The young people are well and favorably known in all that part of the county, and start on life's journey with the best of prospects, for realization of which the COURIER joins its hopes with those of many other friends. We should not omit to state that the printer was generously remembered with a supply of the wedding feast. This is due, not only to the frendly thoughtfulness of the bride and groom and parents, but also to the good will of our friend Charley Glazier, who with his family was present on the festive occasion. There were many valuable presents, and the next day there was an infare at the home of A. J. Shutt. All speak highly of the pleasant time they had.

SAMUEL BRICKER, Owner.

Last Day of School.

School closed at district No. 3, Richland township, on Friday May 1, 1891, after a very successful term under the direction of Emory Shook, who has given general and entire satisfaction throughout the district. The school has been credited with good government in the past under the management of Messrs. William Franks and David Shook, but in the common judgment of the people in this district, none have been able to secure better results than Emory Shook. We are inclined to think the county unable to produce a better teacher. He gets his pupils interested in the work, and by his kind, manly bearing commands the respect, confidence and obedience of all those coming to him for instruction. The patrons of the district were so well pleased with the work done, that on the last day an immense quantity of roasted chicken, pies, cakes, etc., was brought to the school house, where a table the whole length of the building was spread with the tempting edibles. All did ample justice to the bounteous repast. The school closed with union in sentiment and harmony of purpose, but the sadness of the hour when the parting hand was given impressed itself deeply on the minds and hearts of all.

R. M. SHIPPY.

Foolish as Ever.

The Butler Record is one of the few papers still foolish enough to claim the tariff is not a tax. He still insists the production of eggs is increased by a tariff. As if the poor hens stopped to consider the fact before laying an egg.

⁂

As to the industries he feels such great interest in suppose we admit he is correct. Then the only conclusion that can be reached is that when an article from a foreign country is shut out of our markets, we must pay all the higher for it, and the government gets nothing. No one is benefited but manufacturers who were getting wealthy before, and they don't need more. So the republican party, will occupy this ground by choice, and let the people know that all they care to do, is to make the necessaries of life dearer. and for this blessing, they ask the support and confidence of the people they are robbing.

⁂

Among the "other causes" we give for the reduction in the price of some articles is the general reduction of wages to workmen, though they were promised higher wages when the McKinley bill got to work.

⁂

He calls it an "exploded theory" that the duty levied must add so much to the cost. That is to say 10 cents plus 5 cents is not equal to 15. We suppose suppose his idea is that 10 and 5 equal 8. He says that in case of an article that can be produced in this country, it surely does not add to the cost to tax it a little, and dares us to name one article where it does. Well, take one of several hundred, a very common article, pottatoes. A few years ago our crop was short, we imported them, paid about 50 cents in Canada, and 15 cents duty. The consumer paid 65 cents and the profit on first cost and on the tax. Don't that add to the cost? And so of all the articles taxed.

⁂

He says an increased tax of 5 cents made a certain grade of thread 13 cents cheaper. What nonsense! Let us take $1 worth of this thread; add 5 cents, that makes $1.05. But he says it makes 87 cents! There are many conditions that may make thread or other articles become cheaper, but adding to its cost don,t.

⁂

It is such nonsense, taught by republican editors to people too intelligent to believe it, that has given the republican party the dry rot. Let them read the closing words of Mr. Clarkson, a leading republican, which we give elsewhere.

A Slip of Paper.

S. D. Henderson, of Mead Center, Kas. says: "I can not say too much in praise of your Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup and the peculiar way I came to try this medicine. I once found a slip of paper lying along the road, on which was printed these words, "Use Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup for Asthma," and my wife being troubled with asthma for several years, and having tried a great many different medicines, I thought I would just spend 50c more and try yours, and I must say it is the best she has ever used, and think it will cure her sound and well." How to Succeed.

This is the great problem of life which few satisfactorily solve. Some fail because of poor health, others want of luck, but the majority from deficient grit—want of nerve. They are nervous, irresolute, changeable, easily get the blues and "take the spirits down to keep the spirits up," thus wasting money, time, opportunity and nerve force. There is nothing like the Restorative Nervine, discovered by the great specialist, Dr. Miles, to cure all nervous diseases, as headache, the blues, nervous prostration, sleeplessness, neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, fits, and hysteria. Trial bottles and fine book of testimonials free at F. E. Davenport. 5

By a new device pieces of metal may be shaped with rapidity by being forced under dies while rendered soft or plastic by an electric current.

A Fatal Mistake.

Physicians make no more fatal mistake than when they inform patients that nervous heart troubles come from the stomach, and are of little consequence. Dr. Franklin Miles, the noted Indiana specialist, has proven the contrary, in his new book on "Heart Disease," which may be had free at F. E Davenport's, who guarantees and recommends Dr. Miles' unequaled New Heart Cure, which has the largest sale of any heart remedy in the world. It cures nervous and organic heart disease, short breath, fluttering, pain or tenderness in the side, arm or shoulders, irregular pulse, fainting, smothering, dropsy, etc. His restorative nervine cures headache, fits, etc. 5

Electric Bitters.

This remedy is becoming so well known and so popular as to need no special mention. All who have used Electric Bitters sing the same song of praise.—A purer medicine does not exist and it is guaranteed to do all that is claimed. Electric Bitters will cure all diseases of the Liver and Kidneys, will remove Pimples, Boils. Salt Rheum and other affections caused by impure blood.—Will drive Malaria from the system and prevent as well as cure all Malarial fevers.—For cure of Headache, Constipation and Indigestion try Electric Bitters—Entire satisfaction guaranteed, or money refunded.—Price 50cts. and $1.00 per bottle at Robbins & McCord's Drugstore. 5

A Wonder Worker.

Mr. Frank Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be consumption and incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds and at that time was not able to walk across the street without resting. He found before he had used half of a dollar bottle, that he was much better; he continued to use it and is to-day enjoying good health. If you have any throat, lung or chest trouble try it. We guarantee satisfaction. Trial bottle free at Robbins & McCord's 5

Last Sunday evening a young man by the name of Dunn hitched his horse by the U. B. church, and as there was an appearance of rain, attempted throwing a blanket over the animal, which startled him when he ran away, breaking the buggy into fragments, but doing no other damage.

The L. M. C. meets this week with Mrs. Winslow. The attendance is good even in this the busiest season. The members are very much interested in geology. and if ladies are seen any where within three or four miles of town, with hammer and chisel, pounding away at rocks, or investigating gravel pits, it need not be supposed it is a new fad, or that they are beside themselves, but only they have taken up a new study, or reviewing an old one, and are searching for specimens of rocks and fossils.

High school commencement will be at the M. E. church, May 27 and 28, two evenings, as the class numbers seventeen in all. They are: Alice B. Phillips, Lizzie Fisher, Lucy R. Harper, Raymond Willis, Clara Snyder. Rose Wenrich, Edward Koons, Eda Farrington, Grace Roby, Alfred Bartholomew, Hubert O. Butler, Nellie J. Carpenter, Geo. A. Kennedy, May Davison, Lulu Rempis, Clyde Willis and Effie Locke. The baccalaureate sermon will be by Prof. L. W. Fairfield, of the Angola Normal school, on Sunday evening, May 24.

Memorial.

Wednesday, May 5th, 1891, the W. F. M. S., of the M. E. church, at Auburn, held memorial services for Mrs. Anna Robbins, who, on May 1st,

> "Passed through glory's morning gate,
> And walked in Paradise."

She was a charter member of the Society, which was organized May 15th, 1878, and for thirteen years, she had been identified with all its interests, and was always present at its sessions unless out of town, or caring for the sick. For ten years, she had superintended the "Busy Bees," and was also an active member of the Young Ladies' Band. They will greatly miss her wise counsel, and fine executive ability. The services were conducted by the President, and were opened by singing, "Work, for the night is coming," which was a favorite hymn of the deceased, and which was very opportune, as the sentiment of the hymn was in perfect consonance with her daily life. A heart-felt and appropriate prayer was the offered by Mrs. Pearce, after which Mrs. E. L. Casebeer read a history of her work in the different missionary societies with which she was connected. Sister Pearce then delivered an address which was eloquent, as well as beautiful. Reminiscences were called for, and Mrs. McCord, Mrs. Sheffer and Mrs. Zimmerman responded, each one in a few well chosen incidents, which has been a help to them personally, in their work for the society. Seven new members joined the society, nearly all of whom said they they did so, because Mrs. Robbins had so many times asked them to. "She being dead yet speaketh."

A closing hymn was sung, and with aching hearts and tearful eyes we went to our homes. "She was missed, for her chair was vacant."

We earnestly pray that God will help each one of us to work harder, for in this way we will best show our appreciation of her labor of love among us, and we can only in this way, fill up the breach.

> "Oh let us think that she does not withdraw,
> From the dear place where her lot was cast
> And where her heart, in love's most holy law,
> Was schooled by memories of the past.
>
> And let us think that near us she will stand
> With loving ministrations, for we know,
> The heart was never happy when the hand,
> Was forced its tasks of mercy to forego."

not only covers all subjects treated of in the original work, and a very large number of additional subjects, but brings its historical and statistical matter up to 1890. Of the forty-four States which compose the American Union, the old or ninth edition gives only thirty-eight. All the others are left as they were in 1873, the time the last edition was put on the market. The old work gives the population and other statistics for 1870 for a part of the union, and for 1880 for the rest.

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

1847.

David Altenburg had started a nursery at his farm east of town and later David Cosper had planted out a second, and from these the villagers of Auburn as well as settlers generally, obtained a fine variety and great abundance of apple trees of which many a lot has its quota to-day. Other fruit trees, peach, pear and cherry then gave fine yield and, in fact, the lot has been to the resident inconsiderable source of maintenance as the soil is very fertile and is very easily cultivated.

Flour and meal were obtained from the Orange mills, John Bates miller in 1843, and from the Spencerville mill shortly afterwards. Much grinding was done at Union Mills, located south of Lima, Lagrange county.

About 1846 G. and J. Wolcott put up a mill nearer the northwest limits of DeKalb county, than were the Union Mills and to this newer mill, the settlers went for their grinding. The process was simple and the flour was richer in nutrition than in these days of complicated machinery and roller flour.

'Squire Cosper who put up the first buildings in Kendallville worked upon this mill building. When the mill got to running, the proprietors of Wolcott mills kept for the convenience of their patrons, a stock of goods and of salt always on hand to exchange with their customers for beeswax, flaxseed, wheat, pork and other articles and doubtless not a few who read this will recall many a journey to and from the Wolcott Mills.

The village of Wolcottville at present seems to be having a new growth. Thither Edward Morell, the pioneer of Auburn Machine works has gone to build up a flourishing manufactory, and to the same place Rev. Kane will remove his Road Cart factory, Auburn's loss is Wolcottville's assured gain.

A tourist's map of the '40's locates Auburn in the southeast corner of Union township. "DeKalb" was about where Uniontown is, and Spencerville, on the St. Joe river. Two roads are laid down. Both start from Ft, Wayne, one running to Spencerville, and thence northeastwardly, the other north through Auburn to, and beyond Angola.

To the northwest was Lima, a highway center, as here converged quite a number of roads, while a single railroad crossing the northern boundary of the state connected Detroit with Chicago.

It was a very small town indeed, that had not its hotel and taverns, and proprietors were not infrequently able to supply horses and carriages to convey their guests a quarter or less distance towards their destination.

The traveler having passed the night at Freeman's, Sherlock's or Parsons' taverns at Auburn, pushed on to Angola where William L. Orton kept the Angola House and if required, supplied stage facilities to convey him west to Lima. Here he had his choice of the Hoosier House situated on the east side of the public square or of the Lima Hotel. The proprietor of the former, Francis F. Jewett could accommodate gents with separate rooms, his bar was supplied with the choicest liquors and his table with the best the country afforded, and still further, his large and more convenient stable was attended by honest hostlers, but, there was one drawback—he was a late arrival. On the other hand, H. W. Wood of the Lima Hotel, was also, a dealer in tailor goods, kept carriages and horses for the convenience of travelers to and from any place, and was an early settler.

The march of improvement is remarkably shown in the specialties of trade and profession. Every man now to his calling. There came a time in Auburn when the drugstore took the drugs and patent medicines, wall paper and school books; when the groceries had a monopoly of such goods; when boot and shoe stores took the old stocks to clear them out and when the dry goods stores were as they are, strictly such, and lawyers are no longer school examiners nor teachers.

The writer asked several of those who were residents of Auburn and vicinity in 1847, what newspapers were taken by them in the vain hope that some of them might have been preserved. Their reply was that many took no papers. There was not then that feverish thirst for news now raging and yet in these backwoods there was no lack of information.

The settler not infrequently had the old familiar loved home paper sent him, just as many now gone to the far west have the COURIER sent to them, each number calling up thoughts of familiar associations; each name recalling a friend or acquaintance, each incident of interest, every notice of changes and improvement so enjoyed as if while reading, still as of the old home.

The news was meager enough and stale enough if we measure it by modern standard, but such as it was it was well read.

Some received the Stark County Democrat, edited by the McPherson brothers, some the Canton Repository, published for fifty consecutive years by the veteran journalist Saxton, some took the Indianapolis and New York papers as many do now and the story paper for the young was ever welcome, Brother Jonathan, a copy of which is in possession of J. W. McKay and is well worth seeing.

Weekly the mail carrier went over his route and letters were few and costly and not always prepaid. In those days the postal card, the stamped envelope and the registered letter were unknown.

THE PRESIDENT'S TRAVELS.

He Is Welcomed to Denver by a Mighty Throng.

A special from Denver, dated the 14th inst., says: The presidential train arrived here on time yesterday morning. It was preceded by a special train bearing the Governor and Mayor of Denver. It is estimated that fully 100,000 people were in the streets to welcome the President. Senators Teller and Wolcott met the party at the depot. A procession was formed, headed by a platoon of police. Following were the local military organizations: The President's carriage, drawn by six white horses; carriages containing other members of the party and the local committees. Seven local posts of the Grand Army of the Republic acted as the guard of honor. A halt was made at Lincoln avenue, where the Grand Army of the Republic and the Colorado pioneers passed in review. Addresses of welcome were made by the Governor and Mayor, which were replied to by the President. The President eulogized the hardy pioneers, who amidst the desert wastes had established the State and city. Referring to the history of the State he said its wonderful development in mining precious metals would be followed by others of great statue in the baser metals, so valuable to the industry. He also referred to the prospect of great agricultural wealth being developed by irrigation. He expressed his pleasure that with the other development, schools and churches were remembered. He closed his address by speaking especially to the G. A. R. in such a touching manner that it brought tears to the eyes of hundreds of the grizzled veterans who surrounded the stand. After a drive the President and gentlemen of the party lunched at Hotel Metropole, accompanied by the local committee, Mrs. Harrison and the ladies lunching at the residence of Gov. Routt. After lunch the President visited the Franklin high school and later the Argo smelting works. The train left at 6 o'clock and is due at Lincoln, Neb., at 7:15 a. m. to-morrow.

Ta, Ta, Consul Corti.

New Orleans special: Consul Corti was ordered by his government to return home immediately and lay before it the facts concerning the recent uprising. He left Thursday. He said he would make every effort toward a conciliation of the existing differences. The Vice Consul at Boston, Mr. Poma, will arrive here in a few days and will have charge of the consulate until the return of Mr. Corti. The grand jury made a special report regarding the communication received from Consul Corti a few days ago. It is as follows:

To Signor Corti, consul of Italy:

Sir—Your communication of the 6th instant has been placed before the grand jury. We find its tenor not consistent with the official dignity of this body. The grand jury is, therefore, constrained to return the document without further comment.

Respectfully,
WILLIAM H. CHAFFEE,
Foreman.

On the Warpath.

A special from Oberlin, Ohio, dated the 13th inst., says: There is a big row among the students of Oberlin college which may result in bloodshed. A few days ago the juniors began missing their silk hats and the thefts were attributed to the seniors. The trouble brewed for a time and burst out in earnest this morning, when the juniors armed themselves with hatchets, revolvers, axes, shot guns, etc., and began parading the streets, threatening to kill several members of the senior class. The juniors attended prayers in the chapel, arrayed in the cowboy habiliments and are still on the warpath. Warrants have been issued for the arrest of several of the unruly students.

Attorney General's Mistake.

Indianapolis special: Soon after the Legislature adjourned Attorney General Smith was called upon to interpret the mechanics' lien law. He held that the repealing act of 1891 did not repeal Section 5 of the act of 1882 requiring notice to owners. In an opinion issued recently he holds now that Section 5 of the act of 1883 is repealed, and that men who have furnished material may have a lien without giving notice, except the usual notice to the County Recorder.

Will Seize the Itata.

"Orders have been sent the Charleston and other United States vessels in Pacific waters to overtake and seize the Itata wherever she may be found," said Mr. Raymond, private secretary to Secretary Tracy. "There are no further details which can be given to the press at this time and Secretary Tracy has decided that he will not talk at all upon the subject." No further official information than the assurance of Mr. Raymond could be secured at the Navy Department.

Oil Wells Burning.

Lima special: Several large oil wells along the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago track, burst into flames and the railroad bed, ties and rails are in danger. Traffic will be delayed. The telegraph poles are on fire and no further detail of the conflagration can be sent. The loss will reach many thousand dollars.

Crushed to Death.

Joseph Noonan, a laborer employed at Jaap's stone yard, Fort Wayne, Ind., was crushed to death by the falling of a heavy stone. He leaves an invalid wife.

Neal Not a Candidate.

The New York Herald's Parkersburg, W. Va., dispatch says that L. P. Neal, father of L. T. Neal, who is mentioned as endeavoring to secure the Democratic nomination for Governor of Ohio against Campbell, said that his son would only accept the nomination for that office in the event of Campbell declining the honor.

Washed Away by a Cloud Burst.

A party of campers near Liberty, N. M., were washed away by a cloud burst. E. J. Wilcox was drowned, and the others had a narrow escape.

A Potomac Catastrophe.

Baltimore special: A three cornered collision occurred in the Potomac River, near quarantine, in which the brig Edith, with a full cargo of sugar, went down, and the schooner Henry S. Little and the tug Peerless were badly damaged. The cargo of sugar was worth $40,000. The total loss is estimated at $65,000; insured. The crew of the brig had a narrow escape from death, while one of the men on the schooner was seriously injured. The Edith and Peerless were at anchor when the Little was seen bearing down upon them with every sail set. The Edith sank in a few minutes. Louis Nelson, of 33 Commercial street, Boston, had a leg broken. The lost brig was owned by Hutchinson Brothers, of New York. The responsibility has not yet been placed.

PERILS OF THE RAIL.

Three Killed and Thirteen Injured in a Triple Collision at Shepherd, Michigan.

An extra freight from the north approaching the yard at Shephard, Mich., ran into fourteen loaded log cars, wrecking engine No. 20 and the caboose. The men on this train jumped and escaped uninjured. The force of the collision started thirteen cars down the grade, through the Shepherd yards, to a mile south of Shepherd, where the rest of the train was being loaded with logs. In the collision which followed three men were killed and thirteen injured. Following is the list of the killed and injured: Killed, Z. Bigelow, Clark E. Stubbles and Sherwood Clark, all of Shepherd. Injured, Charles Walling, badly bruised and head smashed; Jay Strubble, slightly bruised; John Kennedy, bruised slightly; Amos Pickett, breast injured; O. H. Farrel, shoulder badly smashed and dangerous scalp wound; C. Huntington, back injured; Frank Hartford, spine injured; Augustus Ride, head and leg badly injured, Geo. Starr, shoulder bruised; Lew Cole, shoulder bone broken; James Wilson, severely bruised. All these live in Shepherd. Conductor Anway, of Owosso, was slightly injured, and Brakeman Squires, of Owosso, had his breast and head injured. The injured are quartered at farm houses, except those who were able to be moved to their homes.

A Frightful Death.

By the explosion of a can of gasoline Miss Jennie Tucker, aged 19 years, was burned to death at Chicago. A can of gasoline for house cleaning purposes had been placed besides the register in the bath room of her uncle Prof. Loomis' house. It is supposed that the heat from the register forced the stopper from the can and allowed the fumes of the gasoline to escape. Miss Tucker went to the bath room to get some of the fluid and struck a match to light the gas. The flame ignited the fumes from the gasoline can, which immediately exploded, enveloping her in a sheet of flame. The screams of the unfortunate girl could be heard, but as she had fallen on her back, against the door, those outside were powerless to open it. When they finally succeeded in opening the door Miss Tucker was found stretched on the floor, her lower limbs burned almost to a crisp. She died a few moments afterward. Prof Loomis, with his wife, was seriously burned attempting to rescue her.

Killed in Church.

J. T. Stephenson and three brothers named Cumbo, the former married and the latter three single, were engaged in tearing down the old Southern Methodist Church at Ashland, Ky., when the ceiling on which they were standing fell with a crash, burying the four men beneath the debris. Mr. Stephenson died in a few minutes after being removed, but the other three men are yet alive, with small chances of recovery. One of the Cumbo boys sustained a fractured skull, and had a hip broken in three places. The other two are not mangled, but have serious internal injuries. The old church building has been standing for more than thirty years, and the roof was constructed after the truss bridge fashion. A new church building is to be erected on the old church site.

Death in a Well.

Emanuel Ulrich, a farmer living near Maples, Allen County, Ind., met an almost instant death from fire damp at the bottom of a well. Mr. Ulrich informed his family that he wanted to find out what was the matter with the well, and to do so he had to go to the bottom of the pit. When Mr. Ulrich had descended about twenty feet, he suddenly relaxed his hold and fell to the bottom. It was evident he had been overcome by the dreaded damp and was beyond human aid. After repeated efforts a rope was looped around the body and it was drawn to the surface. The heart had ceased its action and the man was beyond resucitation. Mr. Ulrich leaves a family.

Terrible Mine Explosion.

An explosion occurred in Ocean mine, near Clarksburg, W. Va., which resulted in the death of four miners and serious injury to several others. A fire followed the explosion which is still burning. Those killed are: Joseph Feather, 50 years old, of Connellsville, Pa. Wm. Dougherty, 35 years old, of Bridgeport. Nathan Gaines, 35, Clarksburg. Chas. Welsh, 23, Clarksburg. The body of the last named victim was the only one recovered. It was found some distance from the pit with the clothes entirely burned off. The heat from the burning mine caused a suspension of the search for the other bodies.

Tortured Unto Death.

Frankie, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weber, of 123 Maumee avenue, Fort Wayne, died from the effects of being scalded about his face, hands and body. The circumstances are painfully sad. The child playfully caught hold of the teapot, which stood on the kitchen stove, and pulling the vessel too near the edge, it was upset and the boiling contents showered over the little one's body. Medical attendance was summoned, but the child was beyond the physician's power. The child lingered in great agony a few hours, when its sufferings ceased with the flight of breath from its body.

A Radical Flop.

The New York Herald has come out with a bold and remarkable announcement of which the following is but a line. It suffices, however, to give the drift of the announcement: "Our candidate, James G. Blaine, the man who attends to business and does not go masquerading about the country." President Harrison seems to have awakened the ire of the Herald to a tremendous degree, as for the past few months this journal has been conducting a systematic fight on Blaine and all his pet measures. The Herald's flop is creating considerable comment.

Crushed to Death.

Passenger trains No. 7, west-bound, and No. 10, east-bound, on the Pan Handle road, collided at Suscarwas, Pa. Daniel Longenecker, baggagemaster, of Columbus, Ohio, was instantly killed. C. D. Rogers and Otto Miller, postal clerks, of Indianapolis, and G. F. Marvin, express messenger, were badly injured, being cut about the head and limbs. Their bodies are also contused. The engineers and firemen of both trains jumped and escaped injury.

Murderer Ford Hanged.

Ford, the murderer, was hanged at Ottawa, Ill. The crime for which Ford suffered the death penalty was the murder, on June 23, 1880, of David Moore, an Omaha traveling man. Ford's wife, Kate, enticed Moore to Allen Park, on the banks of the Illinois River, where he was set upon by Ford and one Bill O'Brien and beaten to death with railroad coupling pins. Mrs. Ford and a woman named Winterling, who were suspected of complicity in the murder, remain to be tried.

Captured a Train.

Citizens of Waynetown, Wayne County, Ind., and a number of the employes of the Midland railroad, captured a train and are holding it at that place. They say that no trains shall pass through the place till the employes are paid. The men are backed by the most substantial citizens of the town. The trainmen called upon the local officials when the train was stopped, but they refused to interfere.

Michigan Forest Fires.

Forest fires are raging in Newaygo County. The villages of Otis, Fields and Park City have been entirely destroyed, and the hotel and depot at Lilley are all that remain of that village. A great number of cars belonging to the Chicago and West Michigan Railway have also been burned. The above named places are villages of about three hundred people each.

The Levee Broken.

The Lake Concordia levee at Farriday's, Miss., has given away and the water is rushing through with great velocity. The whole Farriday plantation is submerged and the track of the New Orleans and Northwestern Railroad is covered with about four feet of water, which has caused a suspension of trains on that road. The crevasse water will flow into Bayou Concordia, which will carry off all that comes into it from the break.

A Mysterious Death.

W. J. Ransom, an upholsterer from Milwaukee, was locked up at the Central station at Cleveland, on a charge of intoxication. A few hours later he was found dead with his throat cut and two stab wounds over the heart. Ransom's wife went to Cleveland and began an investigation, as she does not believe that he committed suicide. The jail turnkey says Ransom had no knife or other weapon in his possession when searched at the station.

A Town Burned.

A little hamlet, Glenfield, eight miles out of Pittsburgh, on the Fort Wayne road, was half burned down. The village hotel, kept by a man named Stayer, Thomas Phillips & Brothers' large general store and three dwelling houses, were burned. No fire engine in the place made an appeal to Allegheny necessary. Engines sent there arrived only to see a heap of embers. The fire broke out in the bake-house of the hotel. Loss estimated at $67,000; partially insured.

Arsenic in the Coffee Pot.

Mrs. George Carter, who lives with her husband and family in Lawrence County, Ky., made a desperate but unsuccessful attempt to poison her entire family with arsenic. For some time the woman has been despondent and her friends feared she was insane. One day recently she put a quantity of arsenic in the coffee pot. After the family had partaken of the meal all became violently ill. Medical assistance was called.

Killed by His Wife.

Chicago special: While in jail in the suburban town of Austin, Alfred Townsley, a gambler, was shot and killed by his wife, who has of late been separated from him, residing in Lafayete, Ind. The charge against Townsley was that of many times repeated criminal assaults upon his 18-year-old step-daughter, whose father was Townsley's brother. Mrs. Townsley was arrested. There was no witness to the tragedy.

A Woman in the Case.

The Union Pacific Tea Company, of New York, with ninety-five branches in that and many other cities, has assigned without preferences. The senior partner, Robert P. McBride, was divorced from his wife recently on the ground of cruelty and intoxication, and was ordered to pay her $6,000 a year alimony. McBride said at the time that his business did not warrant so large a payment.

Only a Baby Boy.

A mysterious case of cancer of the stomach has just come to a head at Bloomingsburg, Ohio. Miss Ada Noble, the 34-year-old daughter of prominent parents, was taken ill several months ago, and for a long time has been bedfast and under medical treatment for cancer of the stomach. What was the surprise of everybody a day or so ago, however, when Miss Noble gave birth to fine large baby boy.

Trade Dollars.

The express company, by order of Secretary Foster, is removing silver bars from the assay office at New York, for shipment to the mints at Philadelphia and New Orleans. Seven million of trade dollars melted into bars are being shipped at the rate of $250,000 worth of silver a day. Two weeks will be required for completion of the shipment. The bars are to be recoined.

One Editor Less.

Hon. Frederick Fieser, editor of the Columbus (Ohio) Westbote, and one of the proprietors, is dead. He was a partner in Reinhard & Co.'s bank, and had been for thirty years a member of the School Board. He was one of the oldest and wealthiest Germans in the city, and leaves a large family. He had not been well for months, and his death was due to natural causes.

Oil Wells on Fire.

Thirteen of the oil wells of the Fuel Supply Company at Pine Grove, Pa., are on fire. Several fishermen have been arrested for setting fire to the forest.

—Quite a number of "queer" half-dollars are being circulated in and around Edinburg. They made their appearance the first time within the past few days. They bear dates of 1854 and 1856, and are light in weight and color. They are also easily mutilated.

—A colored man in Crawfordsville, besides carrying a rabbit's foot and other voodoo articles, has lately secured the dried hand of a child, which he keeps in his vest pocket. He secured this human relic in the West and considers it a charm more powerful than the incantations of a voodoo doctor.

—Henry Harris has twenty acres of land in German Township, Shelby County, on which, twenty years ago, Henry Maley purchased 100 fine walnut trees for $3,300. Last week Maley purchased seventy-five walnut trees on this same tract for $1,600. There is yet $1,000 worth of ash and oak timber on the tract.

—Bedford can now boast of three banks. A new bank, organized under the State law, has just been incorporated under the name of the Citizens' Bank of Bedford, with a capital stock of $50,000. Col. A. C. Voris is President, and J. R. Voris, Cashier. The directors are W. H. Martin, John Hasse, F. D. Norton, and J. R. Voris.

—Wm. Wrightman, living near Middletown, who has kept several hundred bushels of wheat stored in his barn for a year, while removing the wheat for market, found an old pocketbook containing $11,500 in gold coin and paper currency. How the money came there is a mystery. The money has been placed in the bank at Middletown.

—Rev. Gee, Attorney M. G. Rhoads, Dr. M. L. Hall, and several other prominent citizens of Newport went to the Wabash River fishing. They tied their teams some distance from the river, and when they returned one of Attorney Rhoads' fine ponies was missing. After searching some time the animal was discovered at the bottom of an old well, into which he had fallen. The pony was small and easily hauled out of the well, slightly worse off for his fall.

—The Attorney General has been asked: "Is a convict, who is granted a new trial by the Supreme Court, and returned to his County, entitled to $15 as provided by the law?" Green Smith's opinion says: "The law says that every convict who shall have served six months or more when discharged shall be furnished with $15. A convict is not discharged when a new trial is granted; the custody of the prisoner is simply shifted from the warden of the prison to the County Sheriff, and in a legal sense is not discharged."

—The Episcopal minister at Crawfordsville was awakened the other night by woeful yelps of a dog. A search revealed the fact that the dog had fallen into a dry well under his house. He planned and carried out several schemes to get the dog out in vain. As a last resort he got a rope and made a lasso on the end. After a few minutes' time he got the head of the dog in the lasso and then pulled the dog out. The animal was almost choked to death when he reached the top of the well, but soon recovered breath and started for home on the run.

—Great excitement has been caused at Burrows by a gang of so-called White Caps, who have been trying to terrorize the community for the last eight months. A mob has been meeting secretly at various times recently, and the other night collected at midnight and aroused from bed some of the best citizens. They have for some time been sending "White Cap" letters threatening to burn and do bodily harm. They threaten to burn the Wabash Railroad depot. There is strong talk of a vigilance committee getting in some effective work if this state of affairs continues.

—At Muncie, Patrick Ford came within a hair's breadth of losing his life. Constable J. K. Miller called at Ford's home to subpœnea him. The little Irishman was intoxicated and refused to go. As Miller took hold of him Ford pulled a revolver, but the officer was too quick and fired first. The ball hit Ford over the left eye and miraculously glanced off, plowing a furrow to the ear. Miller, supposing he had blown out the man's brains, gave himself up. While going to look after the dead man the horrified officers met Ford on his way to demand the arrest of Miller for attempted murder.

—John Kohback, fatally injured in a runaway accident at Fort Wayne.

—A man living near Jamestown would not go to the funeral of his daughter because she did not die at home.

—John Evered, of Peru, hid $200 in greenbacks in an old stove, and his wife set fire to the rubbish without realizing its contents.

—The Supreme Court has affirmed the decision giving the widow of brakeman David L. Pearcy, of North Vernon, $8,000 damages.

—Luther T. Brown, a life prisoner at Michigan City, has been paroled by the Governor. Brown was sent from Madison County, in 1885, for the murder of Eli B. Cummins. The two men were rivals for the hand of a pretty girl, and had two fights in consequence. Brown was badly whipped in the first of these affrays, but in the second he stabbed Cummins. The plea is that there was strong provocation for the deed, Brown having been humiliated by his rival before a company of young people, whereat his temper got the best of him and a fight ensued with the above-noted result.

CALLS IT AN "ERROR."

SECRETARY BLAINE'S SHARP REPLY.

He Trips Up the Italian Premier on His Recent Communication—An Alleged Telegram Not Delivered in Strict Confidence at Washington.

Secretary Blaine replied to the dispatch of Premier Rudini to the Marquis Imperiali, which was made public in a green book at Rome and telegraphed to this country. The Secretary is even more sharp in the tone of the cablegram he sent to Rome than before, and distinctly contradicts a statement of the Italian Premier. The dispatch is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
WASHINGTON, D. C., May 4, 1891.

Porter, Minister, Rome:

A series of statements addressed to the Marquis Imperiali by the Marquis Rudini was telegraphed from Rome yesterday, and was published by the press of the United States to-day. The only part of the Marquis Rudini's communication which this Government desires to notice is the one here quoted, namely, "I have now before me a note addressed to you by Secretary Blaine, on April 14. Its perusal produces a most painful impression on me. I will not stop to lay stress upon the lack of conformity with diplomatic usages displayed in making use, as Mr. Blaine did not hesitate to do, of a portion of a telegram of mine communicated to him in strict confidence, in order to get rid of a question clearly defined in our official documents, which alone possess a diplomatic value." The telegram of March 24, concerning whose public use the Marquis Rudini complains, is the following, which was quoted in full in my note of April 14 to Marquis Imperiali, Charge d'Affaires of Italy at this capital:

ROME, March 24, 1891.

Italian Minister, Washington:

Our requests to the Federal Government are very simple. Some Italian subjects acquitted by the American magistrates have been murdered in prison while under the immediate protection of the authorities. Our right, therefore to demand and obtain the punishment of the murderers and an indemnity for the victims is unquestionable. I wish to add that the public opinion in Italy is justly impatient, and if concrete provisions were not at once taken I should find myself in the painful necessity of showing openly our dissatisfaction by recalling the minister of his majesty from a country where he is unable to obtain justice.

RUDINI.

The intimation of the Marquis Rudini that the telegram in question was delivered in strict confidence is a total error. As a telegram expressed the demand of the Italian government it was impossible that Marquis Rudini could transmit it in strict confidence. As I have already stated, it was communicated to me in person by Baron Fava, written in English by his own handwriting, without a suggestion of privacy, and the telegram itself has not a single mark upon it denoting a confidential character. I have caused a number of copies of the telegram to be forwarded to you to-day in fac simile. The usual mark for italic printing was used by me under four lines, and they appear in the copies. You will use the fac simile in such manner as will most effectually prove the error into which the Marquis Rudini has fallen.

BLAINE.

It was plain to those who saw Mr. Blaine that he was annoyed by the remark of Rudini that he had failed to conform to diplomatic usages. The Premier also went so far as to accuse the American Secretary of disclosing a confidential dispatch in order to get around a question which the Marquis intimates had puzzled him in the previous negotiations. The Secretary by this reply has once more placed the Italian Premier in an unfavorable light, and has spoiled his attempt to let himself down easy. This dispatch necessitates a reply from Rudini, and the opinion among Government officials is that it cannot add anything to the dignity of his position or aid in maintaining the Italian side of the controversy.

Bite the End of Your Cigar.

Dr. Ferd Wilson and friend went into a Broadway cigar store the other day. The friend selected a dark Havana, put one end between his lips, rolled it a bit to moisten it, then put the tip in the metal cutter on the counter and clipped it off. He then placed the clipped end in his mouth and drew in once or twice before lighting. He coughed several times as he lighted the weed. "Pardon me," said the doctor "you should never do it that wa Here is the method." The doctor picked up another cigar, bit the end off with his teeth, placed the other end in his mouth and blew smartly once or twice and then leisurely lighted it. "You notice," said the doctor, "I did not cough. You did. The philosophy of it is this: when the end of a cigar is bitten off it crushes a small portion of the tobacco into powder. If you put the end immediately into your mouth and inhale, the small particles are almost certain to lodge somewhere in the throat and cause irritation. That makes you cough, and, if your tonsils happen to be in the right direction for it, a case of bronchitis or worse may compel you to call me in. I never use the clipper that is used by the frequenters of a cigar store. The majority of the men moisten the tip of a cigar, as you did, before cutting it. Now you never know the condition of the man who preceded you. Some of the moisture from his lips remains on the cutter, and your cigar may take on a portion of it.

"Some years ago a young man came to me with cancer of the lip, contracted as near as I could trace in the way I have described. He had had chapped lips at the time, and the poison got into his blood through a break in his skin. It was a particularly distressing affair. The young fellow was a personal friend of mine, and was engaged to be married. I knew his habits and conduct to be above reproach, but he was extremely sensitive. He broke off his engagement and went West, although his prospects here were excellent. I could only commend his course, for disease had become fastened in his system. I pitied him from the bottom of my heart. So don't use the cigar clipper that others use."—New York Recorder.

The Old Way Best.

The old poem of the days of the month, entitled "Thirty days hath September," has been changed in the New York public schools so that the charm and beauty of its defects have vanished, and it is now correct and commonplace. As it stood for a century or more it ran:

Thirty days hath September,
April, June and November,
February has twenty-eight alone
All the rest have thirty-one;
Excepting leap year, that's the time
When February has twenty-nine.

The version peculiar to New England would have done so far as correct rhyming goes. That version ended with these lines:

Except the second month alone
Which has but twenty-eight in fine,
Till leap-year gives it twenty-nine.

But the form in which it is taught in the public schools is neither more correct nor as simple. This is the part that has been subjected to modern improvement:

All the rest have thirty-one,
Excepting February alone,
Which has four and twenty-four,
And every fourth year one day more.

GOOD-BY TO CALIFORNIA.

President Harrison Makes His Last Speech in the Golden State.

President Harrison and party made the first portion of their journey in Northern California in a mild rainstorm, the first experience of that kind they have had in the Golden State. The President arose early, and was the only member of the party to greet the crowd that gathered about the train at Tehama. He was loudly cheered and shook hands with all the people within reach. About half an hour later the train drew up at Red Bluff, where a large crowd with a band was assembled. They gave the President a most enthusiastic welcome. Captain Mattock, an old army comrade, introduced him to the people. The President in his speech referred to Captain Mattock, and alluded to the number of Indiana people he had met in the State. Continuing he said:

My friends, you have a most beautiful State, capable of promoting the comfort of your citizens in a very high degree, and, although already occupying a high place in the galaxy of States, it will, I am sure, take a much higher one. It is pleasant to see how the American spirit prevails among all your people, love for the flag and the Constitution, those settled and permanent things that live whether men go or come. They come to us from our fathers, and will pass down to our children. You are blessed with a genial climate and a most productive soil. I see you have in this northern part of California what I have seen elsewhere, a well-ordered community, with churches and school houses, which indicate that you are not giving all your thoughts to material things, but are thinking of those things that qualify the soul for the hereafter. We have been treated to another surprise this morning in the first shower we have seen in California. I congratulate you that it rains here. May all blessings fall on you like the gentle rain. [Cheers.]

Postmaster General Wanamaker, Secretary Rusk, and Mrs. Harrison were also introduced to the crowd and were loudly cheered. At Redding the President and party were greeted with a national salute and showers of bouquets from a throng of school children. The President addressed the throng, saying:

MY FELLOW CITIZENS: It is very pleasant as we near the northern line of California after having traversed the valleys of the South, and are soon to leave the State in which we have had so much pleasurable intercourse with the people, to see here as I have seen elsewhere a multitude contented, prosperous and happy. I am assured you are here a homogeneous people, all Americans, all by birth or by free choice lovers of one flag and one Constitution. [Cheers.] It seems to me as I look into the faces of these California audiences that life must be easier here than it is in the older States. I see absolutely no evidence of want. Every one seems to be well nourished. Your appearance gives evidence that the family board is well supplied, and the gladness on your faces is evidence that in your social relations everything is quiet, orderly, and hopeful. I thank you for friendly demonstrations. I wish it were possible for me to do more in exchange for all your great kindness than simply to say thank you. But I do fondly thank you and shall carry away from your State the very happiest impressions and the very pleasantest memories. [Cheers.]

The Presidential party at Dunsmuir shook hands with a large number of old soldiers, and thanked the citizens for their reception.

They arrived at Ashland, Oregon, shortly after 8 p. m., and received an enthusiastic welcome. A special committee from the Oregon State Legislature boarded the train and welcomed the President. The President made a happy response and also spoke to the crowd at the depot. After a stay of about thirty minutes the train pulled out, preceded by a special carrying the legislative committee and prominent citizens.

At Tacoma, Wash., the President and party arrived in the midst of a driving rainstorm. He was met at the depot by a procession composed of companies of the National Guard, Sons of Veterans, a troop of cavalry, posts of the G. A. R., Sons of America, Odd Fellows, Masons, and others. The President was escorted through the city to the City Park at Tacoma avenue, where the school children were lined on each side of the street. The little ones, dripping with rain, gave the President a hearty welcome. When the carriage stopped to enable him to make them a brief address he was covered with a shower of flowers.

The party reached Portland from Seattle and left over the Union Pacific for the East. When the train left Portland the skies were clouded, but about half-past ten they cleared, and the remainder of the trip through the picturesque Valley of the Columbia was made in bright sunlight, which disclosed the mountains and cascades in all their beauty and grandeur. One of the pleasantest incidents of the run from Portland was the visit of the President and party to Multnomah Falls. The entire party left the train and spent several minutes admiring the slender veil of spray falling 850 feet from a cliff. The first stop of any importance was made at the Dalles, where the party received an enthusiastic ovation. Responding to an address of welcome by the Mayor, President Harrison said:

"I quite sympathize with the suggestion of your Mayor that it is one of the proper government functions to improve and open to safe navigation the waterways of our country. The Government having reserved to itself the exclusive control of all navigable inland water, it is of course incumbent upon the Government to see that the people have the best possible use of them. They are important, as they furnish cheap transportation and touch points that are often either for economy or natural reasons inaccessible to railway traffic."

Postmaster General Wanamaker also made a short address.

At Celilo the President visited a salmon-canning establishment and was presented with a large box of salmon caught that morning.

Worms that Spoil Corks.

Investigation in France proves the existence of two or three types of moths in wine cellars. The grubs feed on the fungoid growth that forms on the wine vats and moldy corks. The insect bores and forms galleries in the cork nearest to the glass, and through the holes thus formed air gains access to the wine, spoiling it.

The San Francisco Chronicle says: "Our chief difficulty in bottling wines has been in obtaining a supply of perfect corks. At least 25 per cent. of corks, after examination for fitness, are rejected. An examination of several bins was made at the vineyards, and it was found that the corks were perforated, and in some cases the wine oozed through them. Now we are trying a method to stop the inroads of these grubs. After soaking the corks in hot water and then in brandy they were dried, and when they are put into the bottles the tops are coated with a layer of paraffine wax previous to sealing them with the ordinary wax." We hope by the use of the paraffine compound to stop the ravages of these insects. Neither the grubs nor insects feed upon the wine, but simply use the cork as a place to deposit their eggs, and the coating may possibly prevent their entrance.

SAVED AT LAST.

AUBURN, IND., Oct. 3, 1890.

Dr. J. W. Bergen:

Dear Sir:—By this time, I presume, you will want to know how I am getting along with Bergen's Asthma Cure.

Well, you have heard of persons obtaining a new life. Now I really feel that way myself. When I began taking Bergen's Asthma Cure, I was just coming out of a long siege of it, and was reduced to 115 pounds; weak, short of breath, chills, fever, and badly demoralized generally, coughing from half an hour to an hour every night.

Since commencing, from the third night, I have not lost ten minutes' sleep all night, cough gone, gained seventeen pounds, chills gone, fever gone, shortness of breath and difficulty of breathing gone, consequently I feel a thousand per cent. better. I thank God every day that I ever saw your advertisement, and that I was induced to write to you.

This is peculiarly encouraging in my case, as I had suffered so long and was so discouraged about my case, having tried everything. I am telling the good news every day.

Push on the good work; you are on the right track.

Yours Very Gratefully,
R. McDOUGALL.

The testimonials to these FACTS are NUMEROUS and STRONG, similar to the following:

From the Hon. Harvey D. Colvin, Ex-Mayor of Chicago:

CHICAGO, July 24, 1890.

S. H. KLINCK—DEAR SIR: I am pleased to say that I consider your remedy the best medicine in existence, for the human afflictions you claim to cure. I suffered from catarrh with bronchitis for many years. During that time I employed physicians and faithfully tried many so-called remedies advertised to cure this disease, without any material benefit, when a friend induced me to try your remedy, claiming others had been cured by it. The first bottle gave me the most pleasing results. I have continued its use and I can not say too much for it. It found me too near the grave for comfort and restored me to health again. It adorns my toilet stand and by using it occasionally I am kept well.

I would not be without it if it cost $25 per bottle. I earnestly recommend it to all my afflicted friends.

CHUB.

A Romance of West Virginia.

CHAPTER XI.

ANOTHER SURPRISE.

"Well," said Tom Biggers, "this is the gaul-darndest idee out yet."

"I can't understand it," said Hank Dawson.

"I do, dad."

Chub spoke cheerily. It was wonderful the pluck Chub Dawson displayed. Nothing could dash her bright spirits. Although upward of forty-eight hours had passed since she had seen her betrothed—he had met her at a neighbor's the morning of the day set for their wedding—although everybody gave Dan Bash up for dead, or worse than dead if living, Chub's faith in him, her belief in his restoration to her, was not lessened an iota.

"Dad! we're all wrong. Maybe it isn't as we'd a right to think. Maybe something else has happened to Dan. The Monks maybe ain't in it at all—or, leastways, I believe Squatty don't know just now any more than we do. Say, Squatty, where's the rest of your gang?"

"Well, I suppose Ned and Bill will be nigh your house now."

"What are they doing there?" demanded Hank Dawson, fiercely.

"O! don't you make any mistake, Mr. Dewson. Nobody would go to your house to touch a hate. You might hang all you've got on your fence and none of the Monks would come nigh it."

"I believe you," said Tom Biggers grimly. "You'd rather tackle a locomotive with a full head of steam on."

"Well, what are they over at my place for?"

"Why—didn't I just tell you."

"Speak out."

"They've a notion maybe Dan Bash would be making for your house."

"Well? What then?"

"O, dad! Don't you see? Why, the Monks would catch him and do something with him."

"Kill him, do you mean?" asked Tom Biggers.

"No! They're so mad at me, it would do them more good to keep him somewhere and torment him. That's more like the Monks. Ain't that what they were after, Squatty?" Chub asked.

"Yes."

"I knew it, dad."

There was a brief silence after this confession, extorted from Squatty's trembling lips. The trio looked at the trembling wretch, then at each other.

Poor Squatty's hands were shaking now like those of a paralytic.

"I guess we've got all he's able to tell us," said Hank Dawson gloomily. "What will we do next, Chub?"

"In the first place, dad, let us decide what we'll do with Squatty."

"My God! you won't do nothin' to me. I couldn't help it. They made me do it. I'd get shot in my tracks if I didn't do as they told me."

"Stop your whining," said Hank Dawson. "It's a pity the Almighty lets such carrion as you live. You're no more account than a crow—you're a durn sight meaner."

"I know I am," said Squatty.

"Shut up!" exclaimed Tom Biggers, angrily.

"I tell you what, dad," said Chub. "Let us send Squatty on ahead of us, just the same as if he'd not been interfered with. Then we'll follow, and go on to the Corners, and maybe we'll meet the Monks. They wont want to fight you, I reckon.

"What if Squatty tells about meetin' us."

"I won't—I swear I won't," said Squatty.

"Let him," said Chub contemptuously. "Let him, if he dares, break his word to me."

"I won't—I won't, Chub."

"Of course you won't," said Tom Biggers. "You'd best say your prayers if you do."

"I don't exactly follow your idea, Chub," said her father, "but I guess you know what you want. You just mean that this hound is to be let go, and join the gang of cutthroats that he belongs to, and we're to spy on them, instead of them takin' us unawares."

"That's it, dad."

"That's all right. You can go, Squatty—git out."

"Yes—light out," said Tom Biggers.

"Not yet, Squatty," said Chub, in warning tones; "you've found ways to obey the Monks. If you don't find a way to let us know just where the gang is by 10 o'clock—mind, that's six or seven hours yet—plenty of time to get around—if you don't let me know where the gang is, or the Monks at least—look out for trouble."

"I'll mind you. Be sure I'll let you know."

The next moment Squatty hurried off in the darkness.

"I'm most sorry I didn't let the dog follow him," said Tom Biggers.

"A bargain's a bargain," said Chub.

"Not with that gang," said Tom Biggers. "I wouldn't believe one of them—not if the rope was around his neck, and his legs in the grave."

Whereat Hank Dawson coughed. It was the first sign of change in his mood. His fierceness had evaporated.

"Lord! Did any one ever see such a coward as that poor fellow."

"I don't think he is a bit worse than the Monks, dad. Did any one ever know them to show fight unless there were two or three of them together."

As nobody had, there was no more to be said on that subject.

"Listen," said Tom Biggers. "That's him breaking his way to the road."

"I'm not so sure about that," said Chub, as she inclined an ears. "Dad, don't that sound seem to come from below, instead of above?"

"It does, Chub."

"Let's go back on the road quick as we can."

They were already in their saddles again; Hank Dawson had held the pine knot until it was nearly all burned out.

"Throw it down, dad," said Chub. "Maybe its best to be quiet—so's nobody'll suspect us. We'll hurry up on them."

As they rode back to the road it was very evident Chub's surmise was correct. The sounds they heard did not come from the part of the road Squatty said he would take.

"Queer," said Hank Dawson. "Suppose you go ahead with your dog, Tom, or send the dog on."

Tom acted on the hint. Hero bounded away, and soon the party were on the traveled road.

At that moment Hero gave tongue.

Then there was a pistol shot, and all was silent—as silent as the grave.

"Blast it all! they've killed my dog!" exclaimed Tom Biggers in a rage.

CHAPTER XII.

THE MEETING AT THE CORNER.

"What does it mean, anyhow?" said Biggers, turning to Chub.

"It means we're tricked—fooled by that skunk Squatty," said Hank Dawson. "If I had him now, I'd smash his bones."

"Maybe we're wrong, dad," said Chub. "How do we know it aint the Monks been stealing along after Squatty, and the dogs scented them, and they've shot him."

"Well, let us turn back and see," said Hank.

"No! Don't, dad."

"Why, Chub?"

"It's one thing to meet them at home, another to fight them up here, where they're at home, and you don't know who you've got again you!"

"That's so, too."

"Everybody would know who to go for to try in court if they came to you—up here, it's hard to tell each other. The Monks would swear out of it."

"That's so, too."

"I wonder if the dog's dead?" said Tom, slowly.

The words were scarcely uttered when Hero limped back to the spot they stood on, whined, fell, and dropped in his tracks.

Tom got off his horse and cursed as roundly under his breath as if the ruffians had killed his dearest relative.

"Is he dead, Tom?"

"Dead as a stone. Now, then, you may bet I'll get even with them as killed Hero. If I have to hunt 'em ten years, I'll get even with em."

"Let us go back, dad," said Chub.

The trio retraced their steps, but no sound was heard. At one time Chub thought she heard a moan, but it was dismissed as idle fancy, and they moved on.

"It's no use, Chub."

"No, I see it isn't, father," said Chub sadly. "I reckon we may as well give it up now, and go after Squatty."

So they turned their horses' heads again and resumed their journey home cautiously. They were on the lookout, and rode along in silence, trusting that fortune might enable them to hear or see something that would assist them in clearing up the terrible mystery that involved the fate of Dan Bash.

But they were doomed to disappointment. They reached Hank Dawson's without encountering anything unusual. All was as it should be at Hank Dawson's.

They rode on to the Corners.

The morn was beginning to get gray at this time. The Corners was as silent as the grave. Not a soul was in view.

So they turned over the sloping hillside, and putting up their horses and feeding them well, the party entered Hank Dawson's comfortable home.

What a picture was presented there!

The dishes prepared for the feast were as they were left by the merrymakers. Many of the rich viands were as yet untouched. The evidences of a grand frolic were on every side.

"This don't look much like a wedding," said Chub as she made room for Tom Biggers, "but you mark what I tell you. They'll be the jolliest time here when Dan Bash gets back, as he's sure to do."

"Don't talk that way, Chub," said her father sorrowfully.

"Why not, dad? I feel that way, and I'm going to talk that way till Dan is found, as he's sure to be soon."

"Tell you what, Chub," said her father. "Let's all go to bed for an hour or two and begin again."

"After we get a little to eat, dad. Nan and Tom must be pecky, and I know I'll be the better of a bite."

She busied herself, and while her father made a big blazing fire in a few minutes, Chub soon had a pot of tea ready, which they all appreciated, and after eating heartily they all retired for an hour or two of sound rest.

As Chub lay sleeping she had a strange dream.

She thought she was walking on a bright morning along a mountain path. The path seemed natural at first, but as Chub strolled on she realized that it was a strange freak of nature.

It was not a path at all. It was a channel cut in the rocks—a cleft. The vines grew in it; the sun shone straight down in it, but she could not see on either side. She could see the tops of the trees. She heard the birds clearly—felt the breeze blow her hair.

Then something seemed to hold her there. She was unable to go forward or back. She was paralyzed. She was not afraid, however. She simply wondered what was the matter. Then she discovered suddenly that the vines formed a vast network; they held her arms, her feet. She was like one tied, bound hand and foot. She could not move a finger. She was crying out for help when she awoke.

"What is it, Chub?" It was her father's voice calling her.

"O! I've had such a strange dream, dad."

Then Chub got up and dressed herself with nervous haste.

Hank rose at once too, and soon their guest joined them.

"I've had the strangest dream, dad. I know where Dan is now."

"Where is he, Chub?"

"He's caught—he's held fast somewhere. Them Monks, I reckon, can tell. Leastways we'll hunt 'em up, right away now, and make them talk."

The breakfast was speedily prepared. They were so anxious to resume the inquiry that they ate sparingly. Then they saw to their horses, and half an hour later they were on the road, and at the Corners.

The sun was hours high, and all was bustle at the Corners, where Eli Potts was waiting on his customers at the bar, and his wife Susan was scolding her help for not being able to wait on her customers as fast as breakfast was called for. Many were late callers—such a rush was never known at the Corners Tavern before since Eli Potts took charge of it.

As Chub and her father rode up they beheld a number of horses and men near the tavern. Chief among the group was Ned Monk, and a little distance from him was his brother Bill. A little further from the main group, Pete Monk stood talking with Bob Squatty. Besides these three, there were one or two others who were associates of the Monks.

The crowd were talking of the mysterious disappearance of Dan Bash. Nobody made any pretense of concealment. The entire county was aroused now. Pine County was excited as it had never been excited by anything before.

The crowd of loungers looked at Hank Dawson and his daughter and Tom Biggers as they rode up and dismounted. Hank was in quest of news—others sought to learn from him whether anything had been discovered that would throw light on the strange case. Chub Dawson addressed those whom she was intimate with cheerfully and hopefully.

There was a sparkle in her bright eyes as she glanced at the Monks, who affected indifference.

The indifference was poorly assumed. They felt uneasy, and to make up for lack of ease, they talked very loud.

They had been drinking freely too, early as it was. They all swaggered more or less, as was their wont.

The latest comer in quest of news, and on the lookout for fresh developements in the mystery that thrilled all Pine County, had been served. Eli Potts and his wife stood at the door. The dozen or more loungers on the porch, and the half score leaning on the bars and around their horses, were suddenly startled by Chub Dawson, who said in a voice loud enough to be heard by all there:

"Now, dad, I reckon it's time to talk to the Monks."

Ned and Bill Monks suddenly stood shoulder to shoulder. Pete and Squatty shuffled up behind them.

"We are right here," said Ned Monk. "Anybody kin talk to us," added Bill, with a sly look and a strange smile that made his countenance, evil as it was, appear more villainous.

"Humph!" exclaimed Hank Dawson dryly, "you're most too ready, for the majority as knows you, Bill."

Then pausing to add effect to his words, he added, "and as for being here when you're wanted—by gum! it's the first time I ever know'd you to be on hand when you was wanted for anythin' useful, Ned Monk."

The Monks exchanged looks of rage, while the listeners laughed at the thrust the brawny blacksmith gave them.

As for Hank Dawson, he laughed himself, laughed loudly. Then he changed his mood suddenly. Turning to Ned and Bill Monk sternly, he said:

"Now, then! what have you done with Dan Bash?"

The crowd approached, gathered closer around the principals of this strange scene. They foresaw something extraordinary.

"Answer me! Say it right out now! and mind—mind what you say, for you're in mighty close quarters!"

The giant of Pine County faced them as if he felt able to deal with the Monk gang individually and collectively.

"Say, out with it! What have you done with Dan Bash?"

Bill Monk looked at Ned, Ned looked at Bill, then Bill cleared his throat, put a bold face on, and said:

"I reckon that's a question you can answer; you seem to know."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

The Monkey and the Cigar.

A correspondent of the London Telegraph relates the following incident: Some years ago I was bringing two monkeys home from the West Indies, which I had named "Jack" and "Jill." Jack was a brown monkey about the size of a fox terrier, while Jill was smaller, and of the type known as "white-faced." One day Jack was indulging his curiosity in diving into my pockets, and among other things fished out a cigar. He smelled it, and before I could stop him bounded off to his cage with his prize. Jill rushed after him to see what he had got, and he considerately allowed her to smell and no more. Then he tore it up and began to chew it, and presently worked himself up into an ecstasy of delight, taking the half-chewed cigar from his mouth and smearing it over his face and body with maudlin satisfaction. Jill sat the while at the other end of the cage regarding her lord and master with wondering interest, but afraid to disturb his revels, though she once or twice crept cautiously up to obtain a nearer view of the cause of all this excitement, and to make a sly attempt to get hold of it. Jack's excitement began to get too much for him, and he rolled about his straw and twisted himself into all sorts of contortions in uncontrollable delight, and at last fell down in a helpless state of intoxication. Thereupon Jill carefully covered him well over with straw and mounted guard over him, energetically resisting any attempt on my part to see how he fared. She remained steadily at her post until he awoke and emerged from his covering, looking very, very seedy, sick, and sorrowful.

The Set of Steel Wire.

G. Leverich, of the Brooklyn Bridge staff of engineers, was associated with the late Colonel Paine for over twenty years, and relates some interesting reminiscences of his connection with the big structure. When the big sustaining cables for the bridge were being constructed considerable difficulty was experienced with the coils of steel wire, which, being pretty hard, had a strong tendency to spring back into coil form after being straightened out. This wire in the manufacturing process is reduced to proper size by being drawn through holes in a steel plate. Colonel Paine found that the coiled wire was not so strong by ten or fifteen per cent, as if it had been kept straight, and he tried to get the manufacturers and Colonel Roebling to have the defect remedied. One day Colonel Paine drove up to his house in Jersey City, and taking a box of coiled wire out of the vehicle stretched it out straight, and lo! it remained as it was, without any tendency to coil up again. The Colonel had discovered an extremely simple method of accomplishing the desired result, which was, instead of coiling up the wire close to the perforated steel plate after it had been drawn through, and thus making it set, to draw it out some considerable distance before coiling.

A Remarkable Clock.

Another marvelous piece of mechanism has recently been exhibited in Paris. It is an eight-day clock which chimes the quarters, plays sixteen tunes, playing three tunes every hour, or at any interval required by simply touching a spring. The hands go as follows: One one a minute, one once an hour, one once a week, one once a month, one once a year. It shows the moon's age, rising and setting of the sun, the time of high and low tide, besides showing half ebb and half flood. A curious device represents the water, showing ships at high water tide as if they were in motion, and, as it recedes, leaves them high and dry on the sands. The clock shows the hour of the day, the day of the week, the day of the month, and the month of the year. The mechanism is so arranged as to make its own provisions for the long and short months. It also shows the signs of the zodiac, equation, and the difference between sun and railroad time for every day in the year.

How Various Nations Sleep.

In the tropics men sleep in hammocks or upon mats of grass. The East Indian unrolls the light portable charpoy or mattress, which in the morning is again rolled together and carried away by him. The Japanese lie upon matting with a stiff, uncomfortable wooden neck-rest. The Chinese use low bedsteads, often elaborately carved, and supporting only mats or coverlids. A peculiarity of the German bed is its shortness; besides that it frequently consists in part of a large down pillow or upper mattress, which spreads over the person, and usually answers the purpose of all the other ordinary bed clothing combined. In England the old four-posted bedstead is still the pride of the nation, but the iron or brass bedstead is fast becoming universal. The English beds are the largest beds in the world. The ancient Greeks and Romans had their beds supported on frames, but not flat like ours. The Egyptians had a couch of a peculiar shape, more like an old-fashioned easy chair with hollow back and seat.

THE suspension of Colonel Forsyth, of the Seventh Cavalry, during the Pine Ridge campaign seems to have been uncalled for. The investigation proved nothing whatever against him, but much in his favor.

IN this world misery constantly peeps mockingly over the shoulder of happiness, and just as we are about to grasp her by the hand he knocks her roughly aside and with a strong grip grasps our outstretched hand in his own.

HUMOR.

The Last Straw.

First Bad Spirit (on the way to a warm climate)—"You don't look very wicked."

Second Bal Spirit—"I am not. I am only unfortunate. In life I was a printer——"

"I see. Your mistakes caused a great deal of profanity."

"Yes; but I might have been forgiven them all if it had not been for one thing. On my last day at the case I set up the line 'Hell hath no fury like a woman with corns.' That was the last straw, and here I am."—Street & Smith's Good News.

Designating the Brand.

Mr. Mossbunker—Well, Honeymoon, they tell me you've been getting married.

Mr. Honeymoon—I am proud to say, sir, you have been faithfully informed.

Mr. M.—Umph! Well, how do you like married life?

Mr. H.—My dear sir, it is a veritable dream to me.

Mr. M.—Precisely what it's been to me.

Mr. H.—Yes.

Mr. M.—Yes; one of that kind of dreams that are continually breaking out into nightmares.

A Tight Squeeze.

Bride-elect—Let's see, dear, the wedding takes place at 9 and the train leaves at 12, and I've got to change my satin wedding dress for one to travel in. How can I do it?

Bridegroom-elect—Well, that will give you three hours, darling.

Bride-elect—True; but just think, I've got to be kissed by all of my old admirers.—Cloak Review.

A Starter for a Sonnet.

Will—Help me out, old boy. I'm inditing a sonnet to the dear, pert little nez retrousse. Give me a starter.

Harry—Open up with something appropriate from Shakspeare. For instance: 'That which we call a nose, by any other name would smell as well.'"—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Couldn't Agree with Him.

Parson—Time heals all things, my dear Mrs. Douter.

Mrs. D.—Reckon not, Parson. I take notice I hafter tackle my boys' socks every week.

A Matrimonial Venture.

Blinkers—Hello, Winkers. I hear you married a woman with an independent fortune.

Winkers (sadly)—N-o; I married a fortune with an independent woman.

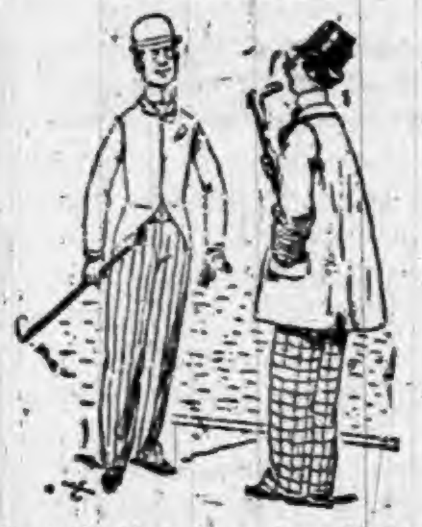
A Striking Testimonial.

Dr. Brown—That was a very interesting case of Miss Squaller's. For nearly a year she had lost her voice entirely, but I succeeded in restoring it perfectly.

Friend—You deserve a testimonial to your skill.

Dr. Brown—I received one this morning. The man who lives next door to Miss Squaller shot at me.—West Shore.

Very Mortifying.



"His affliction is a dreadful mortification to Hoffy."

"What is his trouble?"

"He has an ingrowing mustache."

A Practical Joke.

Tramp—"You gave me a counterfeit $5 bill a few moments ago."

Practical Joker—"He! he! he! ho! ho! Found it out, eh!

"Yes, sir; and on my information, an officer is now looking for you. Gimme $5 in good money and I'll throw 'em off the track. Thanks. Ta, ta!"—Street & Smith's Good News.

Had Suffered Enough.

St. Peter—"Humph! I don't know about letting you in."

New Arrival—Me? I was a clergyman."

"I know it. But you had charge of a fashionable church at a fat salary, which you spent in the luxurious adornment of your grand residence; and you were given a long vacation and a trip to Europe every summer."

"Y-e-s; but whenever I went to Europe I had to spend all my time traveling in the Holy Land."

"You have suffered enough. Come in."—New York Weekly.

Very Bad Form.

Daughter (after the theater)—That play was so interesting, I couldn't do a thing but just sit and listen to it.

Fashionable Mother—It was abominable, the way you watched that play. People must have thought we were from the country.

Profit and Loss.

Foreign guest—The Indians are rather expensive, I presume.

American citizen—No, not while we let them live; it's killing them that counts.

The Age of Speed.

Friend—Let's go round to Boozles.

Police justice—All right. Be with you in three minutes. Got only fifty more cases to dispose of.

Our Flexible Language.

"How sad she looks since her engagement has been broken! She seems utterly crushed."

"And her sister, who has just become engaged, is as happy as a lark. In fact, she seems completely mashed."—Indianapolis Journal.

No One Stopped Him.

Says Judge Richards, of Chicago: "I was once a justice in Bosque county, Texas, when a little man was brought in by a constable and two assistants for the offense of carrying two revolvers. I told him he must pay $2 and lose the weapons. At that the little fellow broke down and actually cried. Finally, with the tears streaming down his cheeks, he said: 'Oh, Judge, jes' let me bid 'em good-by. Ma giv' 'em to me an' I can't go without handlin' them jes' once.' I consented, and the moment he got the weapons he straightened up and, leveling them yelled: 'I'd like tew see the galoot as can get ma's pistols now. Now I'm agoin' on my journey.' Nobody tried to stop him."

In the DeKalb circuit court May term, 1891, Ira R. Barager is hereby notified that an action has been commenced against him in said court, for divorce by [illegible] Barager, and that the same will be heard and determined on the 37th juridical day of the next term of said court, which commences May 18, 1891.

Witness, the clerk of said court, this 6th day of May, 1891.

BENTON HARBOR, and St. Joseph, Mich., have been quarreling for a long time, and all the time building nearer together. Now the legislature has decided to call the place "St. Joseph's Harbor" and make the town one. That may stop the racket.

TERRIBLE accident in Pennsylvania Monday. A forest fire was raging, and a train of 100 men went out to fight it, but soon found the fire was all around them. They tried to run back past it, but the heat had spread the rails, and the cars went over into the fire. Many were burned in the wreck, or in the fire. About twenty dead.

THE Itata, supposed to be a rebel Chilian ship was taking in what was believed to be war munitions for the rebels, at San Diego, last week. She was very properly seized by U. S authorities, as we did not wish to have any "Alabama claims" to pay. A U. S. marshal was put on board to hold her for further investigation. But next day she sailed off, carrying him with her. He was put ashore about eight miles down the coast and footed it back to town. Uncle Sam. and he are very mad. Don't know whether a war ship will be sent after the Itata or not as it is not certain whether she has an illegal outfit or not.

Later reports are that the U. S. ship Charleston, has been sent after the Itata with orders to capture her. If he misses her she may fall into the hands of some of our ships now off the coast of Chili The trouble with the Itata, was, that she was taking on arms, etc., from another vessel, the "Robert and Minnie," in American waters, just as the Alabama had taken her outfit in an English harbor. The Charleston is a fast sailer, and it is believed she will overtake the Itata at Acapulco, a Mexican town. Both will likely be out of coal there, and it is a question if Mexico will permit either one to coal up in her harbor.

Locked Him Up.

A big burly Irishman was sailing about town Saturday, full to the gunwales, and caused some annoyance to various citizens. He had been put out of Kessler Brothers' cigar factory for throwing the cigars about the floor. He brought up in Schnell and Weeks' grocery, and there made himself offensive to Mr. L. Bowers, who happened to be present. Bowers told him to go off, but the fellow attempted to seize Mr. B. when the latter pushed him back, and got rid of him. Mr. Schnell finally had to put him out into the street. In the meantime Marshal Piefferl, had been called, and he took charge of the fellow and led him over to the calaboose. Just then the man saw what was going to be done with him and he clinched the marshal, and a fight started. The man being a large, strong fellow, and it being hard to get him into the lockup, in the struggle they hit the bell rope, and Bob Simpson and John Reasch, came in and assisted to subdue him, though it took a struggle. He was kept in till Saturday afternoon, when 'Squire Walburn fined him $2 with costs, amounting to over $5. He was bailed and staid around awhile that evening, but finally concluded Auburn was too expensive for him and left.

Auburn Normal School.

The usual Summer Normal School will be held in Auburn again this year, under charge of Mr. Harrison and Mr. Coe, the gentlemen who have done so much to make the public schools of Auburn such a splendid success. The term will begin, July 20, and continue six weeks, ending Aug. 28. The following week, the county teachers' institute will be held here, and following that will be the Auburn fair. All these things, coming in this order, should be remembered so those who desire to attend the Normal school can arrange matters to suit. It would be well to cut this article out and keep it for reference.

Town Board.

The town board met last Thursday evening and reorganized. Dr. Matheny was made president, and the new member, J. E. Ensley took his seat. The first part of the session, however, was occupied in discussing the matter of salary for the past year. Mr. Harter made a motion, which was seconded by Mr. Sheffer, that the allowance be $50. Dr. Matheny made a motion to donate the entire salary to the town, but it received no second. Lanning then made a motion that $70 be allowed. This received no second. Finally each marked what he thought a proper allowance and on adding the several amounts and dividing by five, it was found that $70 was the result. So each was allowed this sum. It was after midnight when the work was concluded and they were ready to adjourn.

Wanted a Birthday Gift.

There is no accounting for what a boy wants. He hardly agrees with Watts, the old hymn book man, who said "Man wants but little here below." Perhaps this is because he is not a "man,"—only a boy. These sage reflections were called up by a little incident in Auburn. Jimmie Dills last week found himself facing a return of his birthday, and it became a question as to what would suit him best. It was discussed some, and thought of more. Saturday morning his mother found a "bill of particulars" that he had left where she could find it. It was handed to us by our young friend Will Kessler, and we give it for the benefit of our readers. Here is the list she had to choose from: 1, A gun; 2, a foot ball; 3, a fish pole; 4, a bicycle; 5, a watch; 6, a pair of cloth shoes; 7, cloth for a striped coat; 8, pair of tight pants; 9, a pup. And yet there are people who say a boy is hard to suit.

The New Assessment Law.

We publish this week part of an article copied from the Princeton Democrat, this state, that we think should be read by all. Among other things, it shows that the new law is almost exactly a copy of the last one, as far as the matter of "cash value" goes. Our people will remember that when the last law went into effect, there was an outcry against it, because property must be taken at "cash value." But it did not continue long, for assessors gradually drifted away from it, and went on to assessing property lower than ever. We believe this feature, however, is a very good one, provided it is lived up to, so that trustees and county commissioners can have time to make their rate of levy accordingly. If these officers are careful, they can arrange, that even with a higher assessment, the total tax will be no higher. Suppose the assessment foots up a third higher than before, then the commissioners can make the county levy that much smaller. Then, too, the township trustees can make their rates of levy lower. Take for example, the tuition fund. The state levies 16 cents, and if the assessment is higher than before, perhaps the trustee need not make any local levy whatever. And so on other funds. In this way the burdens of taxation can be kept about as they are, except the state levy, which cannot be changed till the next Assembly meets. So it will be seen, if we manage properly, things will go on about as before. But there are many other points about the new law that are good, for there will be little or no chance for concealment of property, or for cheating, and property not heretofore bearing much of the burdens, will now bear its proper share, and the honest taxpayer, will be benefited by the change. Let us give the new law a fair trial, before we complain too much.

Nearly 100 Years Old.

Mrs. Rebecca Swihart, who died at Mr. Steckley's, near Sedan, last Friday, was nearly a centenarian. Her age was 96 years, 4 months and 25 days, at least that was the way she claimed, and her faculties seemed good, and her mind clear up to the close of her life. We have talked with friends, who have conversed with her lately, including L. Bowers, and they say her faculties all seemed clear and bright. She was buried at Sedan Saturday, Elder Barton of the German Baptist church officiating. From the age given it would appear that she was born Dec. 13, 1794. What a long range of history, of changes and improvements, this opens up. Her birth was about four months after Wayne defeated the Indians on the Maumee, Indiana was still a part of the territory of Ohio, and DeKalb county known only to Indians and the French traders at Ft. Wayne. Washington, the first president was serving his second term; he died when she was four years old. The seat of government was at Philadelphia, and the City of Washington recently selected and part of the site surveyed in the woods. Only three states, Vermont, Kentucky and Tennesee, had been added to the original thirteen, and the population of the country was about six millions. She would be 18, when the war of 1812 was fairly under way. So she could have a distinct recollection of the wars with the various Indian tribes; with Mexico, as well as of the rebellion. She could remember, no doubt, the admission of twenty eight new states, and she lived under every president the country has ever known. In her time, all the great improvements, were either invented or developed, including the use of steam, the telegraph, and nearly every electrical appliance. Chicago at her birth, with its more than a million people, was unknown. Our country extended only westward as far as the Mississippi, and we did not have Louisiana or Florida. In brief, what a chapter could here be written! What changes! What improvements, and what a multitude of events! All these come up to the mind in a bewildering profusion, and the pen, wearied out, must rest, for "not a half can be told." But to the student of history these few thoughts may be of value. They certainly open up an interesting study. As we said, the period covered is nearly 100 years, so near that we may say, the events of a century are crowded into the life of this venerable woman, lately laid to her final rest.

The Memoir of Jefferson Davis.

In the work just published by Belford Company, New York, a variety of subjects connected with Davis' life will be found.

The story of Mr. Davis' career as a soldier in the Indian wars of the period is full of interest. On one occasion it was only his quickness and fertility of resource that saved himself and party from torture and death. Vol. I, p. 60:

"They would have been captured had not Lieutenant Davis thought of rigging up a sail with one of their blankets Fortunately, the wind was in their favor, but it was very boisterous. As it was a choice between certain death by the hands of the Indians, or possible death by drowing, they availed themselves of the slender chance left and escaped. This was one among many instances of Mr. Davis' fertility of resources when a sudden exigency arose. . .

"When Lieutenant Davis was on an expedition in the neighborhood of Fort Gibson once, he met Washington Irving and also Eleazur Williams, the person who believed himself to be the Dauphin of France. His impression of Washington Irving was that he was a most amiable and charming man, lamentably out of place on that frontier, and he suspected Mr. Irving of secretly coinciding with him. Of Mr. Williams he had only one memory, and that was that he looked like a preacher and had a measured cadence in his speech like one."

Obituary.

Daniel Haller was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, March 14th, 1825. When he was 3 years old, with his parents, he emigrated to the United States and landed at New York. In the year 1835, settled down in Wayne Co., Ohio, removing in 1845 to Indiana, where he resided until his death, May 9th, 1891, at the age of 66 years, 1 month and 25 days.

A part of the family preceded him to the spirit world. He leaves a sorrowing wife and four children to mourn his departure. Peace be to his ashes.

The funeral services were held in the Pleasant Hill church, and the body was interred in the Fairfield cemetery. By request of the deceased the services were conducted by Rev. W. H. Mygrantz, of Hicksville, Ohio, assisted by Rev. W. S. Tracy.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

By virtue of a certified copy of a decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb circuit court, in a cause wherein Lewis C. Shutt administrator of estate of Barbara Ann Wearley deceased is plaintiff, and William L. Wearley is defendant requiring me to make the sum of Two hundred and twenty dollars, with interest on said decree and costs. I will expose at public sale, to the highest bidder, on Saturday, June 6, 1891.

between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m., of said day, at the door of the court house in Auburn DeKalb county, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years, of the following real estate, to wit:

Commencing at the southeast corner of the northwest quarter of section thirty-four (34), in township thirty-three (33) north, of range fourteen (14) east, thence west forty (40) rods, thence north easterly to the northeast corner of said quarter and thence south to the place of beginning, situated in DeKalb County State of Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place expose to public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs. Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

Florida Letter.

ST. PETERSBURGH, FLA Apr 20, '91.

DEAR FRIENDS:

I am at last in my new home. I left Pleasant Lake the 6th of April and came to Evansville and stopped with my sister one week, and then resumed my journey. On the 13th I left Evnasvill, and crossed the Ohio river at Henderson. The water was very high at that point, full from bank to bank. The fruit trees were all in bloom here. I do not like the country in Kentucky. I am now passing through a small village called Campbell, among hills and swamps. It is now 6 in the evening and I will travel all night. The morning of the 14th finds me in Montgomery, the capital of Alabama, and it is a nice place. I like the country here, it is beautiful. The forest trees are all leaved out and I see vegetables growing all along. After leaving Mongomery I saw a corored woman plowing. I see flowers at every place, lovely to see, but the houses are all built cottage style with the chimney on the outside Here I came into Troy, a large city full of life. Am still in Alabama. I now see my first cotton fields, they are done planting. I am now crossing the Chattahooch e river, the line between Alabama and Georgia. Here we see a cedar grove. I am now in Georgia the old slave state, and it looks slavery to me yet, for oh! the black people! I have only crossed one corner of Georgia and am now in the land of flowers, Florida. Here we see small towns spring up all along our route. Wednesday morning, the 15th, at 5 o'clock finds me at a way station called Lacucha, near Lacucha river, I am now among the orang groves. But this season's crop is off now, though there are some on the tree syet. Here I take the Orange Belt railroad, but have to stay here till 4 p. m. I am sitting in the hotel, all the windows up and am just comparing the difference between Florida and Indiana. Good by Lacucha. I will get to St. Petersburg to night at 9:45. My husband met me and I found him well, and think I shall like it here. We live forty rods from the bay, and have eaten some of the nicest fish I ever ate. We are surrounded with orange groves, mangoes and banana groves right here by my side; I can see a large branch from where I now sit in my window. We have a cool sea breeze all the time. It is always cool in the shade here. The town is growing, they say. I never saw as nice a hotel in Indiana, it is five stories high, with a large steeple on and a balcony on which you can see miles on the bay. Here at St. Petersburg, I finish my letter the 5th of May.

I thoughth best to wait and see, and I have seen that it is a delightful country, the air is cool and refreshing. Tampa Bay is a beautiful sheet of water. It is 22 miles to Tampa Town and 9 miles to Fort Tampa. Steamers land at our dock every day. The orange trees are in bloom again. The productions of our surrounding country are oranges, lemons, mangoes, pears, pineapples, bananas, guaguas, abradoes and all kinds of vegetable produce at a fair price. Butter 35c per pound; eggs 25c a dozen; flour $6.85 per barrel. Just the place for health, plenty good spring water and a bath house on the dock, or you have the whole large bay to bathe in, which is salt water, and plenty of fresh salt water fish. I had the pleasure of seeing a shark as I stood on the dock, 15 feet below me. It looked large to me in the water. There was one caught from the wharf over 8 feet long, the other day. We are six miles from the mouth of the Gulf of Mexico. Our town is rapidly growing, lots are being sold every day. You can hear the saw and hammer in all directions now. Houses are being built, and St. Petersburg is fast becoming a seaport town. It is a summer resort as well as a winter resort. People come from the northern states to spend the winter and from the southern states to spend the summer, on account of the sea breeze and salt water. In conclusion I will say it is a paradise on earth for comfort and health. Yours truly,

MRS. G. P. BALL.

MARSHALL'S HOOF CURE

cures sand and quarter cracks, split hoofs, sore and contracted feet, corns and all hoof troubles. Stops cracking, shelling and scaling hoofs. Softens and toughens brittle hoofs. It is better than soaking with oil, meal, etc. Should be used on all horses standing on hard floors or driven on hard roads. It also cures scratches, tetter, galls of all kinds, bruises, etc.

TOLEDO, O., April 6, 1891.

I had a horse in my stables that had hoofs so brittle that it was impossible to keep a shoe on his feet. I have used one can of Marshall's Hoof Cure on his hoofs and the horse has been shod for four weeks and the shoes stay on all right. I consider it the best hoof cure I have ever used.

Fred. Hulsenbeck and John Leasure had Cal. VanAuken make a survey of their lots, Monday so as to get them right before building began. It was found that Hulsenbeck's east wall, was exactly right, but the west one varied a little, the north end being slightly over onto Mr. Leasure's land, and the south end not quite out to the line. It has been arranged that Mr. Leasure will have the use of the Hulsenbeck wall, as far as it is built, and will build the rest of the wall extending south to the end of the lots, and so they will own the entire wall jointly. The arrangement is satisfactory to both parties.

We received last week late copies of the Essex, Ontario, Free Press, a live local paper published by our friends over in Canada. We gladly accept this exchange and shall look for the visits of the "Free Press" with interest. There is much information to be gained from it, that will broaden the range of our readers' knowledge and we shall take early opportunity to glean from its pages, such new ideas as we think will interest them.

O. W. Werntz, at Auburn Junction, has invented a patent sectional cast iron culvert, which is being manufactured by the Eagle Iron Works. It is quite a contribution taking the place of wooden culverts. It is put together in such a way that it is perfectly solid and will outlast many of the wooden ones. Mr. W. is a success as an inventor and we hope he may realize his most sanguine expectations in the manufacture of his last and best construction of inventive genius.

Lovers of historical matters will be delighted with our Texas letter this week and next. It is from the famous old town of San Antonio, where Bowie, Travis and Col. Crocket laid down their lives so heroically in the Texas revolution. It was writen by Mrs. Belle Dilgard, wife of David Dilgard, they being now at that being now at that place. It will be completed next week. We might add, that a fine package of fresh roses, came in the letter, with a note saying the vine had been blooming all winter. We have just received a letter from Mrs. Ball in Florida, sister to Robert and Geo. Simpson, and to Mrs. Andy Plum, of Butler, and Mrs. Levi Till, of Waterloo. A SALT LAKE CITY editor, who is blind, is to have his eyes replaced by those of a rabbit.

THERE is a bill now pending to abolish the last and only turnpike toll road in the State of Connecticut.

A MODE of making pepsin from the common pineapple, so strong that the essence of one pineapple will digest ten pounds of beef, has been discovered by a Detroit physician.

BERLIN gets her winter cauliflowers from Italy and Holland, new potatoes from Malta, beans from North Italy, pickles from Holland, onions from Russia, Hungary, and Egypt.

GOV. NICHOLS, of Louisiana, is minus a leg, an arm, and an eye, but is still accounted not only a good man, but one of the smartest Governors in the whole South. He complains less than some men who have only dropped an ear.

A FRENCH paper warns the people of that country who may visit America that "many ferocious lions and hyenas have appeared near Fargo, and people walking out to see the Mammoth Cave should by all means go armed and prepared."

AMONG the assets of a traveling salesman who died in Cincinnati the other day were no less than seventeen different sorts of liver invigorators. He had taken only about half a bottle of each one. His death was caused by a liver trouble.

THERE are still several tribes of Indians in Mexico which believe in witchcraft, and the other week a woman was killed because it was contended that she drove the sun over into the United States and filled up the space with rain.

A PHILADELPHIA surgeon says that by three strokes of the lancet he could paralyze the nerves acted on to make a man get mad, and thereafter any one could pull his nose, cuff his ears and spit on his boots and he would simply smile a soft, bland smile.

ONLY about one factory out of seven in this country is properly fire-escaped or equipped with apparatus to quench an incipient conflagration. The rest of them simply take chances that nothing will happen, or if a fire occurs that the employes will get out some way.

ELMER YOUNG, an Oswego man, felt funny the other morning, and he said to Mrs. White, who was going to the grocery, "Trot along after your coal oil, sissy." She had him arrested, and the court decided that "sissy" was slander and gave her a verdict for $50.

A PREACHER at Kinderhook, N. Y. has been in the habit of saying "Gosh hang it!" and "By gum!" but his case has been investigated, and it has been decided that he must quit right off, and not even exclaim "Oh, sugar!" when he steps into a post-hole full of water.

ONLY one letter out of every 750,000 properly stamped and posted fails to reach its destination by the first regular mail, and east of the Rocky Mountains only one letter in 1,550,000 is lost in transit and never heard of. These figures do not include stolen letters, of course.

NO MATTER what other astronomers declare, those of Switzerland persist that the sun is only 78,000,000 miles from the earth. They set that figure forty years ago, and stick to it in their school books and geographies. Fifteen million miles isn't worth quarreling about, however.

ANNA DICKINSON is in such poor health that she will never be heard in public again. Her friends say she ought to have been married at the age of twenty; but, like many another woman, she wanted to be "independent," and has never taken any real comfort in her life.

A SCHOOL is to be opened in New York to instruct people how to carry an umbrella so as to protect the toes and coat tails at the same time. One has only to keep his eyes open on a rainy day to realize that only one person in twenty, man or woman, understands the "art."

JOHN HAVEN'S dog killed thirteen of William Black's Kentucky sheep. William then killed John's dog, and John shot to kill William, but only wounded him, and got himself on the road to State prison. It was long ago decided in Kentucky that no one had any moral right to keep sheep.

COMMANDER MCCALLA, of the navy, who was convicted of tyrannical and cruel conduct toward his men, and suspended for three years, has seen two other commanders promoted over him in the last year, and it is said that he is heartbroken. His case may teach others a good lesson.

IT has been finally settled in Scotland that after a single man and woman have kept company for fourteen years, and have not denied to outsiders that they contemplated matrimony, that the man can be sued for breach of promise, and that no further proof shall be needed by the plaintiff.

IN 1889 there were in Ireland 1,363,781 milch cows, while in 1890 there were 1,400,426, being an increase of 36,645. The tendency of Irish butter makers is to adopt small, neat, and convenient packages, and to prepare butter with great care. The result of this is that Irish butter has rapidly gained favor in Great Britain, and is now largely in demand in districts that had ceased to order in the old forms and packages so long in use.

THE trains passing Elberton, Ga., do not seem to be particularly noted for rapidity of motion. Not long ago, a young man having an important letter to mail, failed to reach the train on time. He thereupon saddled a grocer's horse and sped after the train, overtook it in a short time, and mailed the letter.

A MRS. WILLIAMS, of Valley City, Dak., wagered that she could put the slips on five pillows while any man present at a church fair could encase one, and seven different men took her up and suffered defeat. No man can ever acquire the knack of holding a pillow in his teeth to work with both hands.

LONDON has been looking up the records, and finds that the winter of 1890-1 was the coldest, and accompanied with the most snow, of any winter since that of 1790. It has been quite a change for her, as there have been many days when the skies were actually clear and the sun shone.

"IF I am ever killed," said a Northern Michigander as he shouldered his gun the other day, "it will probably be by a falling tree. No gun has ever been made to kill me." In climbing a fence ten rods further on he shot himself through the heart. The country gun will do it if given time.

A MAN came out of prison in Spain recently who had been confined in a room 4x9 feet for thirty-eight years without once stepping foot outside or seeing the sun or sky. No one can tell what he was imprisoned for, or at least no one will, and no one knows by whose order he was turned loose.

AN athlete named Cummings, at Milwaukee, has been betting and winning his bets that he could board any train passing a station without halting. He did it five or six times at suburban stations, but the other day he grabbed, missed, and now has only one leg left. The railroad will down any man if time.

IF a villager in Russia petitions for privilege to keep a gun, and that gun shall accidentally go off within three or four years and wound somebody or something, the man who wrote the petition, the villager for whom it was written, the two men who signed it, and the official who forwarded it can all be fined or sent to prison.

THE way to insure a quick and healthy growth of timber, according to the Nebraska Farmer, is to mulch around the trees with straw, old hay, or trash of any kind. Such treatment will, it says, in the course of ten years secure a growth of timber from one tree greater than that of half a dozen of its kind left to their own resources.

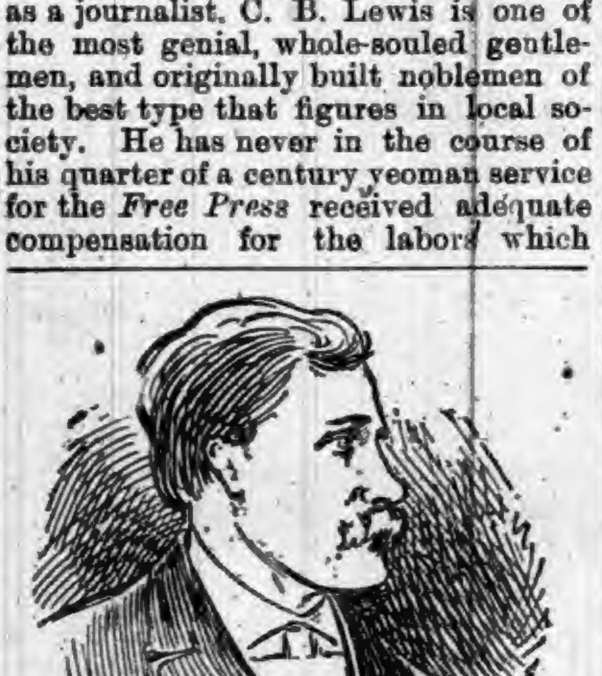
A CINCINNATI chemist took a pound of ice gathered on a pond where the ice-cutters were at work to lay in a stock for families, and dissolved it to show that it contained enough germs of typhoid fever to pull down the strongest man in the State. The cutters didn't stop, however, and the ice will come out this summer warranted strictly pure.

SHERIFF KINGERY, of Adair County, Iowa, lately had an unpleasant experience with a prisoner, whom he was conveying to jail. They were on a rail road train, and the wide-awake prisoner asked that his handcuffs be removed, that he might sleep comfortably. The sheriff complied, and soon after fell asleep himself. When he awoke he was alone. It is supposed that the prisoner suddenly thought of important business elsewhere, and felt that it would be unwise to arouse the Sheriff from his rosy slumbers.

ONE of Hartford's prominent ministers was pacing a hotel corridor not long ago, when a tract distributor approached him with this question, "Are you a Christian?" "I hope so," replied the clergyman modestly. "Hope so? Don't you know so?" persisted his interlocutor. No response from the divine. "Well, now," said the stranger, "if a man should strike you on the right cheek, would you turn to him the other also?" "No, I wouldn't, if he had as much cheek as you have." The interview was not prolonged.

M. QUAD'S NEW VENTURE.

A notable national journalistic event has taken place, "Brother Gardner" having transferred his Detroit club room to the New York World Building. Apart from his conspicuous standing as a journalist, C. B. Lewis is one of the most genial, whole-souled gentlemen, and originally built noblemen of the best type that figures in local society. He has never in the course of his quarter of a century yeoman service for the Free Press received adequate compensation for the labors which have resulted in the enrichment of its owners. For some time previous to three years ago his compensation was $90 weekly, when a better offer from a great Eastern daily secured an increase to $150. Mr. Pulitzer's determination to secure his services has led, however, to a tender of double this sum, which has been accepted—in round numbers at $15,000 annual salary. Charles B. Lewis is a native of Ohio, 48 years of age, largely a self-educated man, and was in early life a river pilot. An accidental publication of a richly humorous contribution to a country paper was widely quoted, and led to his engagement by the Free Press. The subsequent career of this eminent journalist is generally known.



C. B. LEWIS.

"GIVING OUR MARKETS."

THE SHALLOWNESS OF THE RECIPROCITY IDEA.

We Trade for Our Own Good—We Enrich Ourselves by What We Get in Exchange—"Reciprocity" Good, but Must Be Wider—Thoughts for Farmers.

A shrewd Yankee shoe manufacturer indorses reciprocity for the reason that "it will open up for us markets, without our being compelled to give for them, as a price, markets well and cheaply supplied by our own labor."

But when we "give our markets," we do not do so to accommodate other people, but ourselves. The pretense that in putting sugar, for instance, upon the free list we are doing a great favor to Cuba is a piece of transparent hypocrisy. We put sugar on the free list because we Americans want cheap sugar.

"Giving our markets" by removing duties is precisely like the citizens of some isolated town going to work to build a railroad in order to put themselves in communication with the outside world—they "give their market" and get a market. The market which they get adds to their source of wealth, but in "giving their market" they do not take one penny from their wealth. On the contrary, they grow richer by opening their market to outsiders. The "give their market" in order to get goods into it; and surely these goods are a blessing, else the citizens of the town were great fools in building their railroad.

Pursuing this analogy further, if these citizens should take up Republican notions about protection and reciprocity, and should determine that their "market" was too valuable a thing to "give away," they could easily protect that precious market and make it harder for outside goods to come in, by passing a law that all in-coming trains should consist of only two cars, that they should not run above ten miles an hour, and that there should be only one such train a day. Of course they build their railroads in order to get goods as well as to sell them, and these regulations would merely defeat the object they had in view in building the road; yet such regulations are an exact parallel to the whole protection system. Duties are levied on foreign goods in order to render the home market more or less inaccessible. The same thing could be accomplished by compelling all steamship companies to use steamers only half as large as those now in use, to make their trips less frequently, or to remain anchored five days outside our harbors before landing.

Such is protection, and such the false notions on which reciprocity rests. Yet for all that, there is no man in the United States doing more to undermine the protection system than Blaine with his reciprocity treaties. Those treaties, if they increase our foreign trade, will only make it plainer to the people that in "giving away our markets" we are gainers and not losers.

Moreover, what are to be the limits of reciprocity? It was first intended to be purely an American affair—a thing for "sister republics." But already it has crossed the Atlantic and has taken in monarchical Spain. Where shall the thing end? If it is good to trade with one country, why is it not good to trade with any other country? If trade is to be freer with Spain, why not cross the Pyrenees and make it freer with France? Why not cross the Channel and make it freer with England?

But all this is strong meat for the backers of reciprocity. They look back with a timid concern to the home market, fearing lest we "give away" that market—"the best market in the world." They are like the farmer who should decide that he would not open his "market"—for every farmer is a market—to more than one manufacturer of plows or wagons or cloth or sugar. The simplest-minded farmer in the country knows that it is best for him to open his little market as widely as possible to all the manufacturers of plows, in order that they may bid against each other and so reduce the price of plows; ditto of wagons, cloth, sugar, and all other commodities.

"Competition is the life of trade," says the old adage, and in order that there may be competition there must be open markets.

American and English Shoe-Making.

The London Boot and Shoe Trades Journal gives an interview with a Mr. A. Harden, an American who is in England for the purpose of introducing American shoe-making machinery there. This Mr. Harden makes some statements which should be read with interest in this country.

The London journal says: "Invited to give his opinion upon our systems and quality of work produced, he expressed himself as considerably surprised at the high degree of excellence attained by the mixed up methods now prevailing here, and candidly admitted that there was little to be desired in the latter respect, but in the former he considered we were just about in the same position as the Americans were about twenty years ago; but he could observe that many of the manufacturers were of a progressive type, and with the facilities afforded by the numerous, large and well-appointed factories we should rapidly overtake his countrymen, the two things necessary being the adoption of good machines and systems and the co-operation of the workmen. The workmen in America had learned that machinery was beneficial to them and to the whole community. It dispensed with a great portion of manual labor, the men using brains instead. It also meant to them higher wages and shorter hours, to the manufacturer increased profits, and to the community at large the advantages accruing by the cost of production being lessened, thereby superior goods could be bought at even reduced prices, and so increasing the consumption to such an extent that hand labor could not cope with the demand, and he was certain our workmen would speedily become cognizant of the above advantages."

If the system of shoe manufacturing in England is twenty years behind ours, where is the need for our 25 per cent. duty on boots and shoes? Certainly it is not necessary to protect labor, for, as Mr. Harden points out, our machinery gives the laborer an advantage over his foreign competitor.

In a late number of the Boston Boot and Shoe Recorder its Brockton (Mass.) correspondent reports that an Englishman had been in that city and had said that he found labor cheaper there than in England. Brockton is the largest boot and shoe manufacturing center in the United States, and it is claimed by the correspondent just quoted that wages are higher there than in other places in New England and the West. Ex-Consul Schoolcraft is authority for the statement that a pair of shoes costing 35 cents to make in this country costs 60 to make in England, this being due to the greater use of machinery here and to the greater efficiency of our labor. What becomes, then, of the claim that our laborers in boot and shoe factories need protection from foreign competition?

Still Humbugging Labor.

At the recent protectionist banquet in New York one Mr. George Gunton, who plumes himself upon being a political economist, made a speech in which he said:

"Are wage laborers benefited by protection, then is the question. If they are not, there is no economic, social or political defense for a protective policy. I for one am willing that the merits of the protective policy shall stand or fall by this test."

In answer to this challenge may be quoted the following list, giving but a few cases of wage reductions in protected industries made within about a month before these words were spoken.

The twelve manufacturers of brick in Trenton, N. J., gave notice on April 5 that the wages of their employes would be reduced 20 per cent. on the following day. On April 6 the workmen, 1,200 in number, went on strike against the reduction.

A reduction of 20 cents per thousand in the cigarette factory of David Billor, in this city, caused a strike on March 26.

In Lehigh, Iowa, 100 miners went on strike April 3 because of a reduction from $1 to 86 cents per ton.

The wages of engravers and chasers at the Middletown (Conn.) Plate Company's establishment have been reduced 15 per cent.

The men employed in Requardi's cigar factory, Baltimore, were on strike April 9 against a reduction of from $1 to $2 per thousand.

Twenty-seven finishers employed at Solomon's leather factory in Newark struck, on April 10, against a threatened reduction of 14 per cent.

Forty ribbon weavers at Frank & Dugan's silk mill in Paterson, N. J., went on strike, April 20, against a reduction of 75 cents per cut. This was the third reduction in two weeks.

The employes of the New Haven Rolling Mill Company, in New Haven, Conn., went on strike, April 6, owing to a reduction of 10 per cent.

On March 31, the weavers at the gingham mills of the Fitchburg Manufacturing Company, at West Fitchburg, struck because the firm refused to pay them a uniform rate of three cents per yard on all grades of goods.

When is protection going to make labor contented and happy?

A "Revival" Promised.

When is protection ever to "do its work?" We have now had high tariff for thirty years, and still protectionists are busy making promises that protection is going to make the country prosperous. President Harrison said to the people of San Francisco:

"I feel that we have come to a point where American industries, American commerce and American influence are to be revived and extended."

American ship building has had for years absolute protection in the shape of laws entirely forbidding the purchase of foreign ships; and despite this absolute protection the President has to confess that, so far as ocean shipping is concerned, we have already gone out of business.

But even the President, hide-bound protectionist that he is, is making progress away from McKinleyism. In his speeches on the tariff in the House of Representatives last year McKinley asked contemptuously, "Why need we vex ourselves about foreign commerce?" He praised his bill for the very reason that it would "diminish the importation of competing foreign goods;" and there was applause on the Republican side of the House.

But lo, what a change in one brief year! Here is our President going about the country telling the people that American industries are at the point of being "revived" since the billion Congress has voted subsidies to ships for the purpose of increasing our foreign trade. McKinley erects his wall and frankly tells us that it is for the purpose of reducing imports.

McKinley bill and subsidy bill are both passed, the one to kill trade the other to "revive" it; and they are both signed by the same President! It is all very amusing.

American Locomotives.

The Railway Gazette says:

"German locomotives are said to cost, on an average, $11,000 each. Our native establishments would be overjoyed at such prices. It has not, we believe, been questioned that the Americans can produce better as well as cheaper engines. The closer the comparison between the railway systems of this country and the old world the more reason we have to be proud of the skill of our artisans and the progressive spirit of our manufacturers."

Last year the Baldwin Locomotive Works, of Philadelphia, built locomotives for the new railway between Jaffa and Jerusalem, in Palestine. It was to this fact that one of the speakers at the late protectionist banquet in New York referred when he triumphantly exclaimed: "It is due to this policy [protection] that the ruins of the ancient world vibrate with the shrieks of a Philadelphia locomotive."

Not long ago a ship steamed out from Philadelphia with an entire cargo of Baldwin locomotives bound for Australia. Last year we exported 161 locomotives, valued at $1,280,000, or slightly less than $8,000 apiece.

Facts like these certainly prove that we are abundantly able to manufacture locomotives in competition with all the world. Yet what does Major McKinley do? He put a duty of 1.8 cents per pound on all locomotives. This means a duty of $40.32 per ton, or a total duty of $1,128 on a standard passenger locomotive weighing twenty eight tons.

There is absolutely no need and no excuse for this duty. The only purpose it can serve is to enable the few manufacturers of locomotives to keep up prices in the home market at the same time that they are selling their locomotives in successful competition with all the world.

He Will Not "Make Her Obey."

In a Sheffield church the other day a marriage ceremony came to an abrupt and altogether unlooked-for termination. It was the fault of the would-be bridegroom, and most people will say in losing his bride he met his deserts.

The ceremony went on right enough till the clergyman, addressing himself to the woman, put the question whether she would have the man to be her husband, "to love, honor and obey."

At the mention of the word "obey" the bridegroom ejaculated, "I'll make thee."

"Are we married yet?" asked the woman of the clergyman.

"No, you are not," he replied.

"Then we shall not be," said she, and thereupon she left the church.

The man protested that it was too late, but she heeded him not, and his discomfiture was made none the less when the parson told him that he thought she had acted very sensibly.—Irish Times.

SILLY people, who are still asking whether the tariff is a tax, can find an answer in the fact that granulated sugar is now selling in the United States at from 4½ to 4¾ cents per pound, while just across the border in Canada, the price is seven cents. The difference, you see is just this: Canada has a duty of 1 cent per pound and 35 per cent. ad valorem on refined sugar.

Is the tariff a tax?

FRANCE collects a duty of 22 cents a ton on coal and Germany admits coal free, yet the wages of coal miners in France is 75 cents a day, while in Germany the miners earn from 75 cents to $1.

Protection does not serve to work any better for labor in France than in our own country.

SINCE Germany undertook to protect itself from American pork by an absolutely prohibitory law, the prices of all kinds of hog-meats have advanced 40 to 60 per cent. in that country. Meantime Germany's imports of our hog products have fallen from $11,000,000 in 1881, to a very low figure last year, excepting the single item of lard, which is still imported under a duty of about 1 cent per pound. Aside from lard, Germany took from us last year only a little more than $200,000 worth of hog-meats.

THE TWINE TRUST.

THE MANUFACTURE OF BINDER TWINE STILL INCREASES.

Opening of an Immense Factory in Brooklyn, N. Y.—Lower Duties Have Not Hurt the Twine-Makers—False Representations to Get Higher Duties.

The following item has recently appeared in a New York trade journal: "The American Manufacturing Co., which consists of the various mills comprising the jute trust, has just completed and will in a few days begin to operate its new mill at Brooklyn, N. Y. Its capacity is said to be 860,000,000 pounds annually of rope, binder twine and bagging."

Here we have the binder-twine industry flourishing like a green bay tree, although the twine men were filling the air with prophecies of blue ruin last year when the reduction of duty was proposed. The original McKinley bill passed the House of Representatives and was sent to the Senate on May 21. On the 26th of May the following statement was sent to the Senate Finance Committee by the binder-twine manufacturers:

SIR—The cordage and binder-twine manufacturers of the United States beg that your honorable committee will amend that clause in the tariff bill which relates to our business. It places a duty of 1¼ cents per pound upon binder twine. Should this become a law it will close our mills. We ask for 1¾ cents per pound, an increase of one-half cent.

In September came the effort to put binder twine on the free list, which was at first successful in the Senate by reason of the Northwestern Republican Senators voting with the Democrats. When, however, the bill was in conference committee, the trust made a determined fight for the restoration of the duty. In this fight the trust was strongly supported by the high tariff New York Tribune, which spoke of the effort to put twine on the free list "in the interest of the farmer," as being "as shallow and indecent a pretext for a raid upon a legitimate industry as was ever made by political bushwhackers of either party."

This foolish defense of the trust was made by the high tariff organ, notwithstanding the fact that Senator Davis of Minnesota had shown in his speech in the Senate that the trust was squeezing profits of 40 per cent. a year out of the farmers. In the face of this fact the organ went on to say that "to put binder twine on the free list is so probably out of harmony with all the principles of protection as to be almost an absurdity in the pending bill." Another organ which came to the aid of the Tribune in defending the trust was the Manufacturer, the mouthpiece of the powerful protectionist organization in Philadelphia known as the Manufacturers' Club.

As the result of this squabble over binder-twine a compromise was made by the Republicans in the conference committee. Twine made of istle, Tampico fiber, sisal grass or sunn bore a duty under the old law of 3½ cents per pound, and that made of manila a duty of 2½ cents. These duties were respectively equal to 27 and 22 per cent. ad valorem. The duty on both classes was made 7-10 of 1 cent per pound. The old duty on jute twine was 35 per cent; this was reduced to 1½ cents per pound.

The cordage trust had said that the duty of 1¼ cents per pound would close their mills and asked for 1¾ cents. They did not get it, but got only 7-10 of a cent on manila and sisal twine. Did the trust then close their mills? On the contrary, within a week or two after the McKinley law went into operation, it issued a prospectus which was advertised in many of the leading newspapers, in which it was said that—

"The annual aggregate profits of the several concerns for the past ten years have been more than enough to pay the annual dividend on the preferred stock and leave a very large surplus, notwithstanding the fact that during some of that period the interests now consolidated were in competition of a character now avoided.

"The committee further certifies that at no time within the past twenty-five years have the aggregate annual profits of the several concerns been insufficient to pay the 8 per cent. dividend on the preferred stock, although the consumption of cordage at the beginning of that period was only one-quarter what it is to-day."

And now comes the report of the completion of the jute trust's enormous factory at Brooklyn. It seems clear that when an industry says that lower duties will ruin it and close its factories, its statements are to be looked upon with suspicion.

Tale of a Joke Maker.

A professional humorist said the other day: "There is a great deal of truth about jokes which both readers and writers recognize in practice but do not often formulate. It is this:

"A good joke improves no less with age than does the wine of Bordeaux. Once upon a time there was a famous speaker whose tolerably bad lecture started off and ended with two of the most exquisite jokes ever invented. People traveled miles and sat patiently through the same lecture year after year to split their sides at the same old jokes. After the effect of the introductory joke had worn off there was always perfect silence until the lecture was three-quarters done, when the anticipations of an audience which had never been swindled would begin to break out in gurgling laughter, nods, winks and whispers of 'it's coming!' And when at last this well-seasoned old chunk of wit brought the performance to a close, the very roof was raised.

"But one fatal night there was a bad case of dyspeptic pessimism in a front seat. It is true that when he roared 'chestnut' at the first joke the audience nearly mobbed him, but the lecturer's tender spot was touched. He prepared a new lecture which began and ended with two absolutely fresh jokes. When the lecturer walked upon the platform with his new manuscript in his hand he received an ovation.

"The first new joke seemed to stupefy the people. But a few sentences of the new lecture seemed to wake them up, and they rose as one man and demanded their money at the box office. At the next town the lecturer affixed the old jokes to the new lecture, and all went so well that he is still cracking them with constantly increasing success."

THE oleomargerine men, who have a protective duty of six cents per pound, are reported to have formed a trust, and already to have made two advances in price. A fine of $1,000 is said to be provided as a punishment for breaking the trust agreement.

Explaining Why There Is Less Deafness.

A perceptible decrease in deafness has been noticed of late, which is partly accounted for by those in position to know to the more general use of artificial means now perfected to a degree hitherto considered impossible. A very complete device of this kind was invented in Bridgeport, Conn., a few years ago by H. C. Wales, which, being placed inside the ear, is worn with a secret delight by many whose deafness is thus never suspected.

Behind the Scenes.

In the case of a big merchant in Chicago it has been discovered that while he gives $25,000 per year to charity he is keeping a hundred employes in his store on starvation wages. Some of his married clerks had to pawn most of their furniture to get through the winter.

ITALIAN WAR SHIPS.

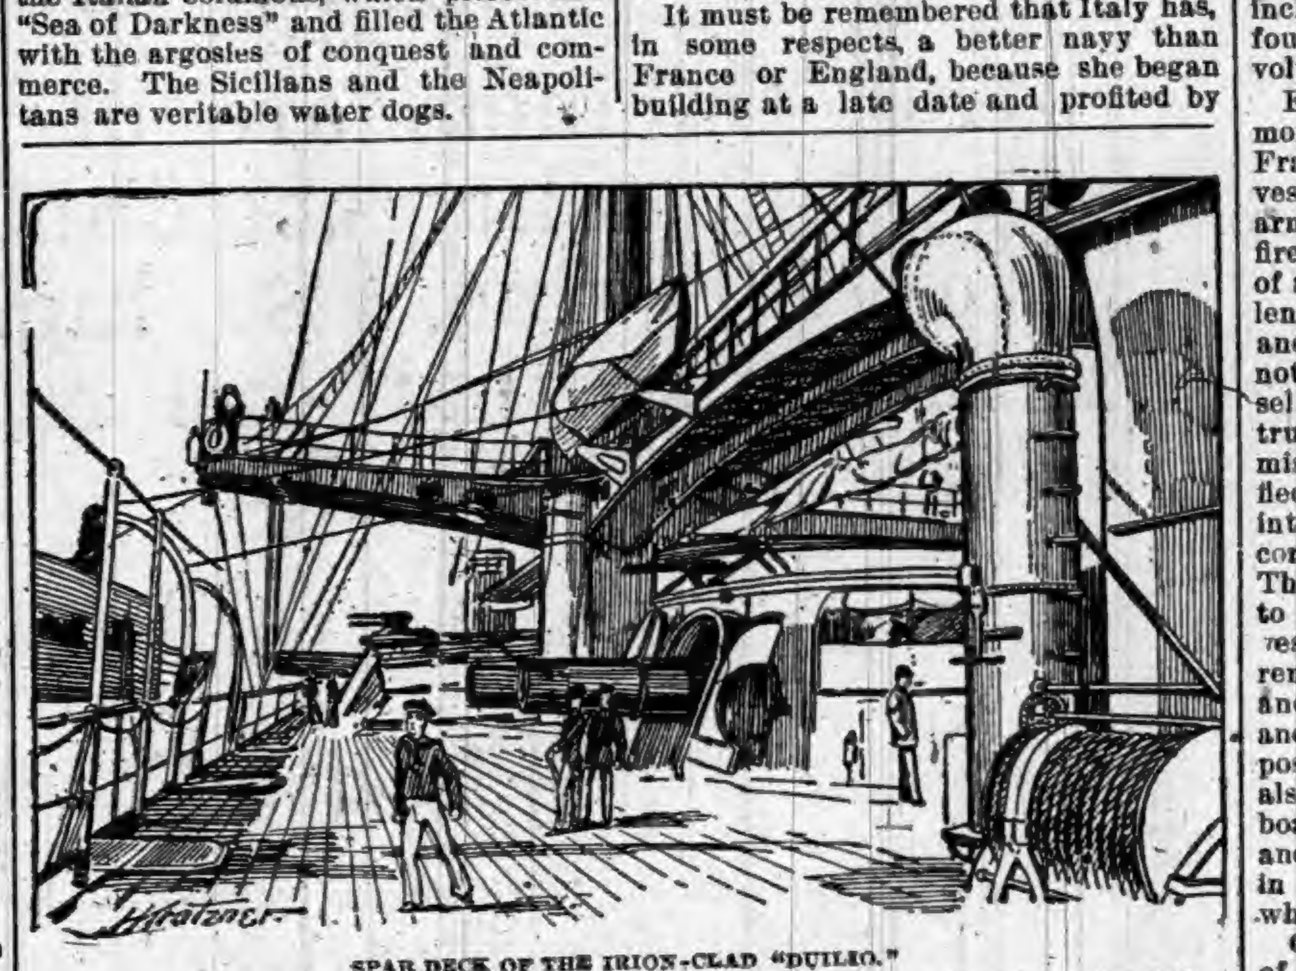
HOW THEY COMPARE WITH OUR OWN.

What Italy Could Do Should War Be Declared—Uncle Sam's Inefficient Navy—Our Coast Cities Would Be at the Mercy of a Well-Armed Foe.

WARS between nations often arise from slight misunderstandings, which occur just as the original quarrel seems settled, and both parties are beginning to congratulate themselves that peace will be maintained. Nations are like individuals; it is very hard to make them understand each other. Each nation thinks that its understanding of the other is perfect; when, presto! it finds that it has been mistaken, it loses its temper, and the cannons are thundering before the mass of the people have found out what it is all about.

The stormy temper of the Italian Government seems to have softened and an era of concessions has been opened. It is well, however, to know with what the United States would have had to deal had the ancient and famous kingdom with which we lately became involved in a dispute formally declared war upon us. And let us remember that, where a collision is possible, it is not only dangerous but it is bad form to underestimate our antagonist.

Italy is a maritime country and has been since the bold Venetians, at a time when other mariners were afraid to venture out of sight of land and tied up their galleys at night, pushed northward through the fog as far as Iceland. It was the daring of the Italian mariners, culminating in the splendid enterprise of the Italian Columbus, which pierced the "Sea of Darkness" and filled the Atlantic with the argosies of conquest and commerce. The Sicilians and the Neapolitans are veritable water dogs.

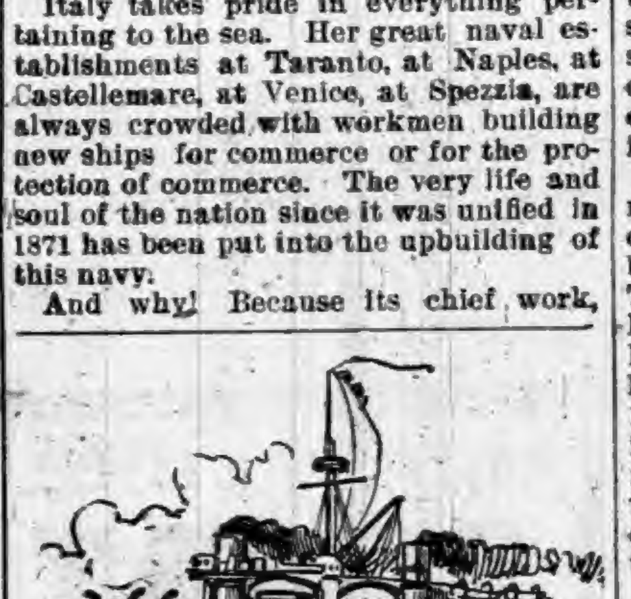


SPAR DECK OF THE IRON-CLAD "DUILIO."

[It is said this mighty-war vessel could anchor at Sandy Hook and bombard New York City.]

Italy takes pride in everything pertaining to the sea. Her great naval establishments at Taranto, at Naples, at Castellemare, at Venice, at Spezzia, are always crowded with workmen building new ships for commerce or for the protection of commerce. The very life and soul of the nation since it was unified in 1871 has been put into the upbuilding of this navy.

And why! Because its chief work, when the great European struggle, so long postponed, but so certain to come, begins, will be to grapple with the gigantic navy of France, and to keep that aggressive nation from changing the political geography of the Mediterranean coast. Italy's navy is essential to the reborn nation's life, and the nation has made the most tremendous sacrifices to maintain it. This navy has been a kind of mystification for Europe, which wondered how Italy, with only just ordinary resources, could go on year after year building huge ironclads like the Duilio and the Dandolo, carrying four 100-ton muzzle-loading Armstrong guns, wearing armor nearly two feet thick at the water-line and eighteen inches thick on the turrets. These vast floating fortresses, with their guns worked by hydraulic mechanism, these ships which cost more than $5,000,000 each, are not intended, it is said, for any extensive cruises; but the Italians claim that even vessels like their Italia and Lepanto, each 400 feet long, 72 feet wide, and with an extreme draught exceeding 30 feet, with engines twice as powerful as those of any other armored ship in existence at the time they were built, could patrol a foreign coast and remain absolute masters of the situation, sinking any ordinary fighting vessels within an hour.



THE "DUILIO."

Now let us see how the naval force of Italy is at present divided. The kingdom has:

Twelve first-class ironclad battleships, with 132 guns and 5,658 men.

Three second-class ironclad battleships, with 22 guns and 727 men.

Ten second-class unarmored battleships, with 88 guns and 2,588 men.

Nineteen third-class battleships, with 89 guns and 1,927 men.

Five transports of the first class, with 23 guns and 1,004 men.

Seven second-class transports, with 16 guns and 411 men.

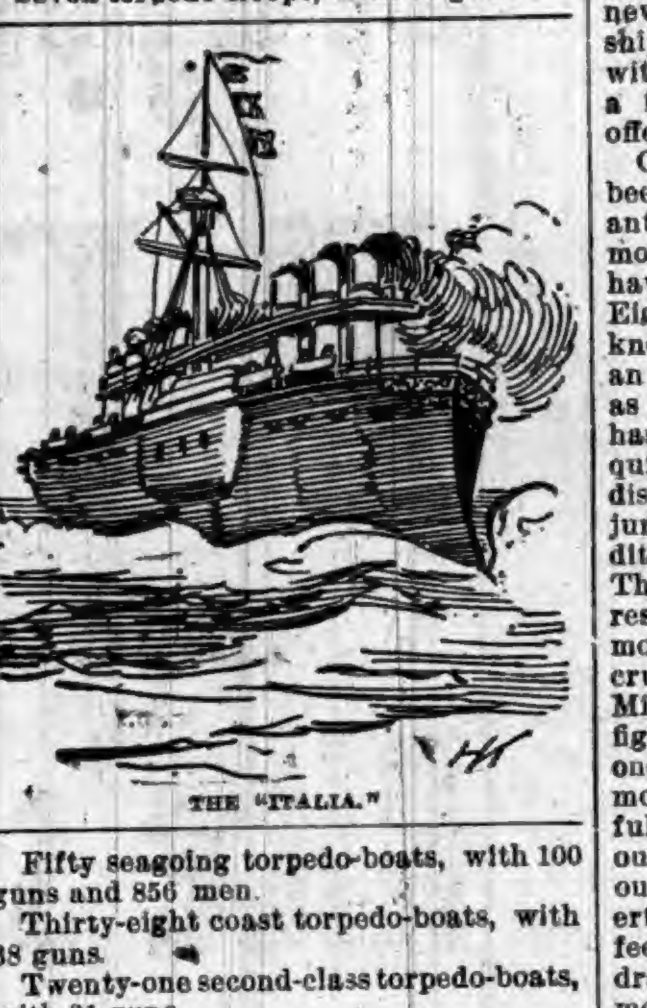
Five third-class transports, with 8 guns and 201 men.

Six schoolships, with 40 guns and 1,456 men.

Five ironclads, armored and unarmored, for coast defense, with 23 guns and 1,200 men.

Forty-six ordinary fighting ships, with 31 guns and 1,100 men.

Seven torpedo sloops, with 20 guns.



THE "ITALIA."

Fifty seagoing torpedo-boats, with 100 guns and 856 men.

Thirty-eight coast torpedo-boats, with 38 guns.

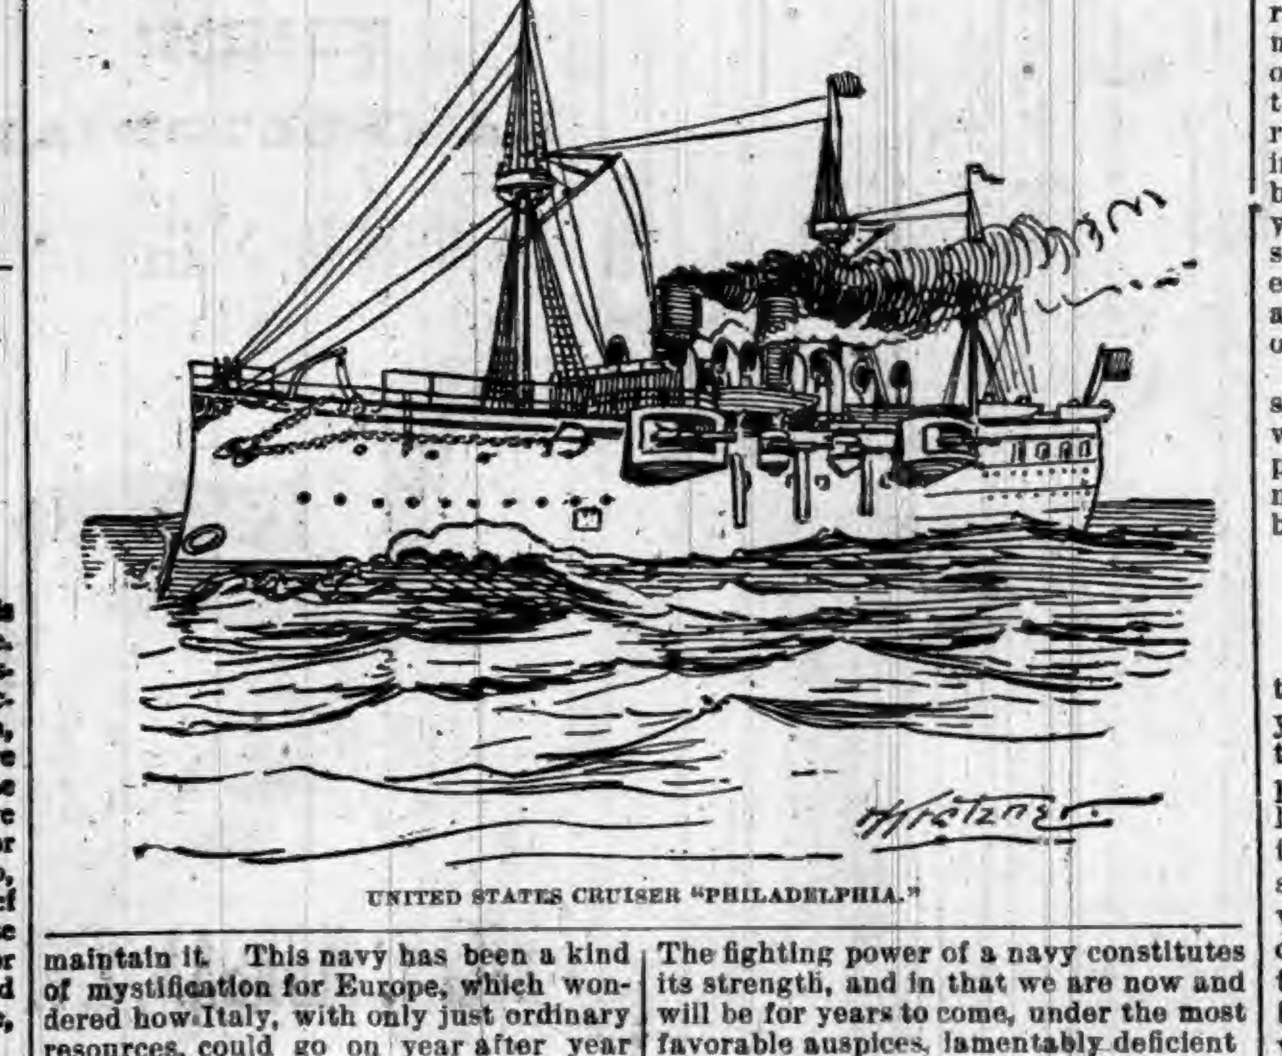
Twenty-one second-class torpedo-boats, with 21 guns.

This fleet, large enough to grapple with such great navies as those of France or England, is manned in time of war by 1,903 officers and 61,007 men, of whom 2,000 are gunners.

It must be remembered that Italy has, in some respects, a better navy than France or England, because she began building at a late date and profited by the latest discoveries, while England is still mourning over huge arks which science has already left behind. Some of Italy's vessels carry the heaviest guns ever made—the Armstrong breech-loading rifle of 13 to 17 inches caliber.

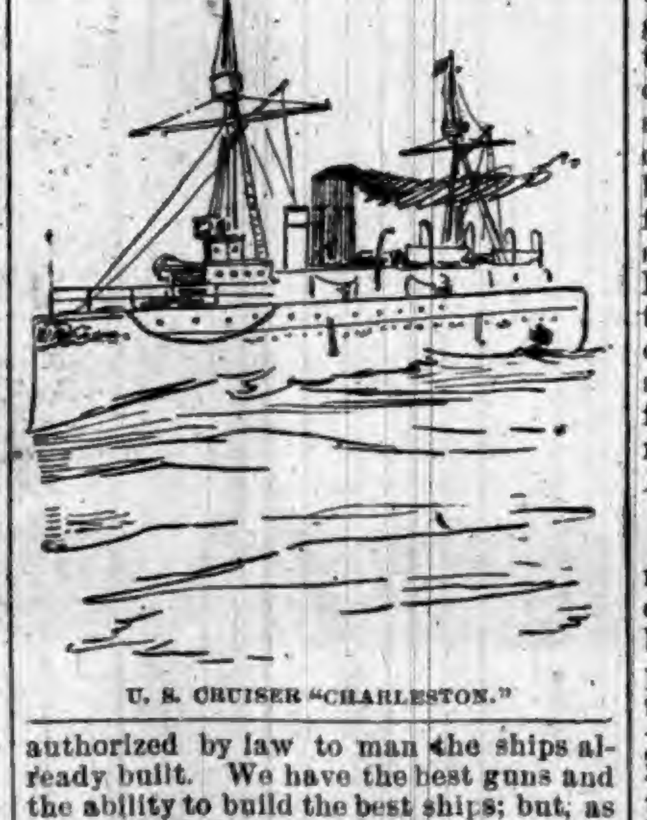
The Duilio and the Dandolo are formidable monsters, and could play mischief on the American coast if assisted by a little squadron of torpedo boats. The Dandolo is nearly 350 feet long and has sixty feet breadth of beam. She has a displacement of 11,202 tons, and, like the Duilio, she has four 17.72-inch 100-ton muzzle-loading rifles, three 4.1-inch breech-loading rifles, and fourteen machine guns, as well as three fixed torpedo tubes. The ironclad cuirasses of these vast ships are eighteen inches thick.

Now as to the ability of the United States to combat with such a power as this the defense would be simply a question of guns mounted on the land, for we have not ships enough to hold at bay a foreign fleet. The matter of our placing guns in position to resist a naval attack is not, however, quite so simple as it seems. Although the efficiency of a gun on the land may be ten times greater than that of one on a mobile base such as a ship, the United States still labors under disadvantages. We have not got the heavy guns. We could not build them in sufficient number under a twelvemonth, and when a year is stated as the limit of time necessary for the construction of a heavy piece of ordnance, our ingenuity and mechanical abilities may be vaunted beyond their capacity of execution.



UNITED STATES CRUISER "PHILADELPHIA."

The fighting power of a navy constitutes its strength, and in that we are now and will be for years to come, under the most favorable auspices, lamentably deficient. Even in men we have not enough now authorized by law to man the ships already built. We have the best guns and the ability to build the best ships; but, as a matter of fact, are to-day more poorly prepared, so far as our naval strength goes, than we were fifty years ago, when twelve line-of-battle ships could have been equipped in sixty days. A navy cannot be improvised or built at will against an enemy that has a navy already constructed. And modern men-of-war, such as we must have if we have any, are complicated machines, requiring years to build. We cannot fight against brass knuckles with kid gloves, and the ability to run away is not the best safeguard for national honor.



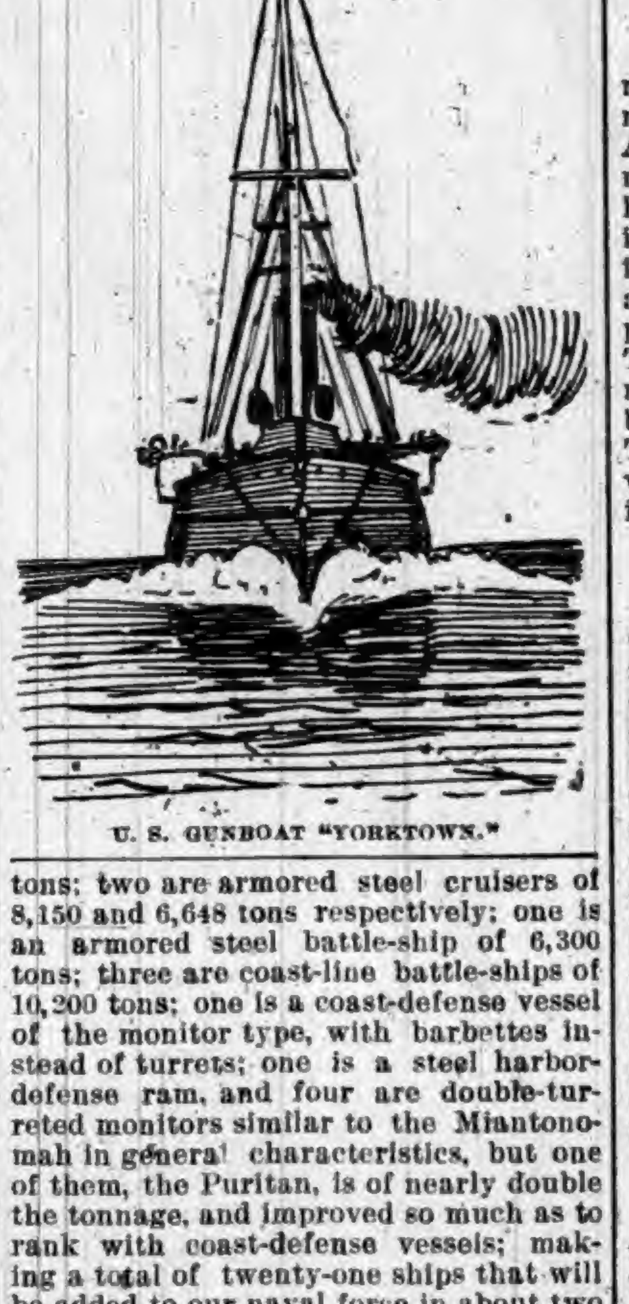
U. S. CRUISER "CHARLESTON."

The American navy to-day is in a state of transition. It has "shaken off the old" and is only beginning to "put on the new." Our twelve remaining wooden ships would be of no benefit in a contest with any naval power. As elements of a fighting force, either for defense or offense, they could render no service.

Of the new steel ships, sixteen have been commissioned. Of these, the Miantonomah is an iron double-turreted monitor, and the only armored ship we have afloat. Four are small gunboats. Eight are protected cruisers. One is known as a dynamite cruiser, and is still an experiment. One is a torpedo-boat, as yet unarmed because the department has not found a torpedo satisfying all requirements; and the remaining ship is a dispatch-boat, indispensable as an adjunct to a fleet, but not a serviceable addition to the actual fighting force. Thus our present naval strength resolves itself into one armored monitor for harbor defense, eight cruisers, and four gunboats. The Miantonomah is practically the only fighting ship we have; that is, the only one that would be able to attack an armored adversary as well as to successfully defend itself against attack. She is our only reliance to protect our coasts, our interests, our rights, and our property, and is of 4,000 tons displacement, 260 feet in length, 55.10 in breadth, and draws 14.6 feet of water. She is of the monitor type—low free-board, two turrets, with a superstructure between for her secondary battery, an assumed speed of ten knots; seven inches of compound armor on her sides, 11½ on her turrets, and an armament consisting of four 10-inch 27-ton guns, two in each turret, four rapid-fire guns, two Hotchkiss revolving cannon, and two gatlings.

Five of the eight cruisers, the Baltimore, Philadelphia, Charleston, San Francisco and Newark, are excellent vessels of their class. They have speed, armament, and protection against the fire of secondary batteries equal to that of any cruisers of any nation, of equivalent displacement. They are well armed, and with guns believed to be equal if not superior to those on any similar vessel yet launched. They constitute the true nucleus of any navy; are the skirmishers, the scouts, the cavalry of the fleet; but their offensive power is only intended for use as against an enemy's commerce or his unarmored cruisers. They are built to maneuver quickly and to run away successfully from armored vessels and fighting ships. The three remaining cruisers, the Chicago, Boston and Atlanta, belong to the same class and are constructed for the same purpose as those just described. They are also effectively armed. The four gunboats, Yorktown, Concord, Bennington and Petrel, find their field in war time in rivers and in shallow waters, going where armored vessels cannot venture.

Of vessels authorized and in process of construction, two are gunboats of 1,050 tons, or 600 tons smaller than the Yorktown class; seven are unarmored cruisers, three of 2,000 tons, two of 3,183 tons, one of 5,500 tons, and one of 7,400 tons; two are armored steel cruisers of 8,150 and 6,648 tons respectively; one is an armored steel battle-ship of 6,300 tons; three are coast-line battle-ships of 10,200 tons; one is a coast-defense vessel of the monitor type, with barbettes instead of turrets; one is a steel harbor-defense ram, and four are double-turreted monitors similar to the Miantonomah in general characteristics, but one of them, the Puritan, is of nearly double the tonnage, and improved so much as to rank with coast-defense vessels; making a total of twenty-one ships that will be added to our naval force in about two years, of which twelve are fighting ships, six of them sea-going, and three of these equal in armor, armament, coal endurance and efficiency to any similar ships of any naval power.



U. S. GUNBOAT "YORKTOWN."

With a force of this size, and of such ships as have been briefly described, and with men enough to man them, we could point with pride to the strength of our navy instead of, as now, being obliged by analysis to demonstrate its weakness.

HARRIS HARRINGTON.

How He Moved.

A little lad, whose family have anticipated the 1st of May, was seen yesterday personally conducting the transference of his own private and personal belongings. He moved in a large toy wheelbarrow, which contained, as he rolled it briskly along the sidewalk, several sets of blocks, a wooden cow with a broken leg, a model of the Eiffel tower in silver cardboard, two dozen or more tattered picture books, half a dozen gayly painted wooden tops, a "pigs in clover" puzzle," a red and green Japanese butterfly kite, an elephant with hide of gray canton flannel, a locomotive and train of tin cars, with joints somewhat dislocated, a foot-ball, some roller skates and various other treasures, over which towered high in the air a bright canvas-covered sign purloined from some small dealer's booth at a summer picnic, urging humanity at large, and all passers-by in particular, to smoke a certain brand of cigarette, drink a certain variety of beer and shoot the doll baby at so many shots for a nickel. The lad felt himself a man of many possessions.—New York Recorder.

SAYS the Chief of Police of Cincinnati: "We have kept pretty good track of our local crooks, and I don't remember a case where a man has gone to prison for a crime, and served out his time, but we had him up again in a year or two, or he was caught red-handed somewhere else. I'd as soon think of trying to reform old Satan himself as a professional crook."

Poisonous Plants and Flowers.

There are many plants whose leaves, flowers and seed contain virulent poisons, which every one should know, so as to avoid them and keep children from them.

Buttercups possess a poisonous property which disappears when the flowers are dried in hay; no cow will feed upon them while in blossom. So caustic are the petals that they will sometimes inflame the skin of tender fingers. Every child should be cautioned against eating them; indeed, it is desirable to caution children about tasting the petals of any flower, or putting leaves into their mouths, except those known to be harmless.

The oleander contains a deadly poison in its leaves, and is said to be a dangerous plant for the parlor or dining-room. The flower and berries of the wild briony possess a powerful purgative; and the red berries, which attract children, have proved fatal. The seeds of the laburnum and catalpa trees should be kept from children; and there is a poisonous property in their bark. The seeds of the yellow and of the rough-podded vetches will produce nausea and severe headache.

Fool's parsley has tuberous roots which have been mistaken for turnips and produced a fatal effect an hour after they were eaten.

Meadow hemlock is said to be the hemlock which Socrates drank; it kills by its intense action upon the nerves, producing complete insensibility, and palsy of the arms and legs, and is a most dangerous drug, except in skillful hands. In August it is found in every field, by seashore and near mountain-tops, in full bloom, and ladies and children gather its large clusters of tiny white flowers in quantities, without the least idea of their poisonous qualities. The water hemlock, or cow-bane, resembles parsnip, and has been eaten for them with deadly effects.

The water-dropwort resembles celery when not in flower, and its roots are also similar to those of the parsnip, but they contain a virulent poison, producing convulsions which end in death in a short time. The fine-leaved water-dropwort, and the common dropwort are also dangerous weeds.

The bulbs of the daffodil were once mistaken for leeks and boiled in soup, with very disastrous effects, making the whole household intensely nauseated, and the children did not recover from their effects for several days.—Country Gentleman.

Geometry.

Three elderly gentlemen, all college graduates, were discussing the effect of time in obliterating early training at school. One of them, Mr. A., asserted that they had all forgotten nearly everything they learned at school, and this the second gentleman, Mr. B., as strenuously denied.

"For instance," said Mr. A. to Mr. B., "what do you know about Geometry now? Anything at all?"

"Certainly," said B., "a good deal."

"Well," said the third man, Mr. C., breaking in, "let's have a little examination. A., what is the shortest distance between two points called?"

"A railroad," said Mr. A., promptly. Mr. B. laughed heartily.

"Well, B." said C., "perhaps you can tell me what the shortest distance between two points is?"

"A telegraph line, of course," said Mr. B., triumphantly.—Youth's Companion.

A Deaf-Mute Cow.

Alexander Skerkoff, the Russian veterinary surgeon, reports the case of a deaf-mute cow. She is 12 years old, of Algava breed, belongs to a Russian nobleman, and has never showed signs of hearing, or been known to bellow. Seeing that other cows bellow she tries to imitate them, stretching out her head and opening her mouth—not, however, producing the least semblance to a sound. Two of her offsprings have been curiously malformed. One had its tail directly between its eyes; it lived but a week. The other is a full-grown cow of 5 years, with her udder in her flank, about eight inches from her backbone.

Changing Defeat to Victory.
The genius of Sheridan at Winchester changed defeat to victory. So when feeble adversaries in the shape of inefficient remedies fail to stay the progress of that obstinate and malignant foe, malaria, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters turns the tide—drives the enemy back. Nothing in materia medica, or out of it, compares with this as an opponent of every form of malarial disease. Chills and fever, dumb ague, bilious remittent, and ague cake—it matters not—one and all are extirpated by the Bitters. To take a course of the great preparative in advance of the malarial season is to buckle on, as it were, an armor of proof which defies attack. So fortified, so protected, you shall be scatheless. Remember, too, that the Bitters is an eradicator of liver complaint, constipation, rheumatism, kidney complaints, and dyspepsia.

Everybody Broke.

Dedbroke—It's no use denying that times are hard. I tested the matter thoroughly this morning.

Jackson—How?

Dedbroke—I accosted a dozen prominent citizens whom I met on the street and asked each one for the loan of $5 for a short time only. Would you believe that not one of the twelve had that paltry sum in his pocket.—Harper's Bazar.

Makes the

The way in which Hood's Sarsaparilla builds up people in run down or weakened state of health conclusively proves the claim that this medicine "makes the weak strong." It does not act like a stimulant, imparting fictitious strength from which there must follow a reaction of greater weakness than before, but in the most natural way Hood's Sarsaparilla overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, purifies the blood, and, in short, gives great bodily, nerve, mental and digestive strength.

Dyspepsia. There is a gentleman at Malden-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., named Captain A. G. Pareis, who has written us a letter in which it is evident that he has made up his mind concerning some things, and this is what he says:

"I have used your preparation called August Flower in my family for seven or eight years. It is constantly in my house, and we consider it the best remedy for Indigestion, and Constipation we have ever used or known. Indigestion. My wife is troubled with Dyspepsia, and at times suffers very much after eating. The August Flower, however, relieves the difficulty. My wife frequently says to me when I am going to town, 'We are out of August Flower, Constipation and I think you had better get another bottle.' I am also troubled with Indigestion, and whenever I am, I take one or two teaspoonfuls before eating, for a day or two, and all trouble is removed." ®

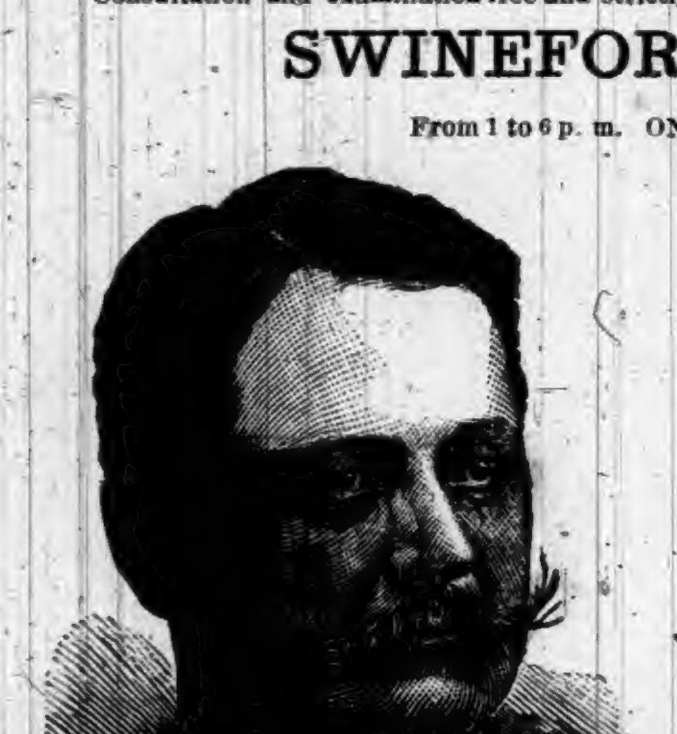
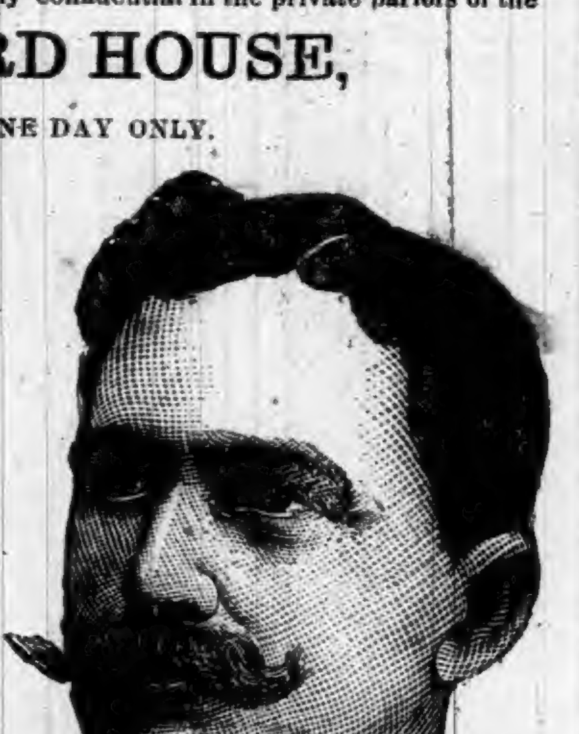
Consultation and examination free and strictly confidential in the private parlors of the

SWINEFORD HOUSE,

From 1 to 6 p. m. ONE DAY ONLY.



DR. D. O. FRUTH,
Celebrated Surgeon.



DR. A. C. FRUTH,
Examining Physician.

—OF THE—

Fruth Medical and Surgical Institute.

Permanently established and incorporated under the laws of the state of Ill., with a capital stock of $100,000, for the scientific and successful treatment of all forms of Chronic and Sexual Diseases, Catarrh, Asthma, Stomach, Kidney Bladder, Nervous and Spinal Diseases of Men and Women.

Ably assisted by a full staff of eminent physicians and surgeons for every department of medicine and surgery.

Female Diseases positively cured by a never failing method. A home treatment entirely harmless and easily applied. Consultation free and strictly confidential.

Dr Fruth after years of experience has perfected the most infallible method of curing Vital drain in Urine. Nocturnal losses, Impaired Memory, Weak Back, Melancholy, Want of Energy, Premature decline of the Manly Powers if consulted, idiocy, insanity, falling fits, or total impotency results. These terrible disorders arising from ruinous practices of youth, blighting the most radiant hopes, unfitting patients for study society or marriage, annually sweeping to an untimely grave thousands of young men of brilliant intellect and exalted talent.

Piles Cured without pain, knife or cautery.

Marriage. Married persons or young men contemplating marriage, aware of physical weakness, loss of procreative powers, impotency or other disqualification, speedily restored.

Epilepsy positively cured by our new and never failing Hospital treatment.

Kidney and Bladder Diseases. Bright's Disease, Diabetes and kindred maladies treated and cures effected in thousands of cases that had been pronounced beyond hope.

Private Diseases—Blood Poison, Syphillis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Stricture, Hydrocele, Varicocele, Loss of Sexual Power and all diseases of the genito-urinary organs speedily and permanently cured. Catarrh Cured.—Catarrhal affections of the nose, throat, lungs, and stomach, bronchitis, asthma, consumption and dyspepsia, successfully treated by the most recent and scientific methods which a vast hospital experience has proved worthy of confidence. We desire no better proof of success than the testimonials on file at the institute, of thousands of helpless cases that have been restored to health and happiness.

Free Examination of the Urine. Each person applying for medical treatment should send or bring an ounce of their urine, which will receive a careful chemical and microscopical examination.

Wonderful Cures Perfected in old cases which have been neglected or unskillfully treated. No experiments or failures. Parties treated by mail and express, but where possible, personal consultation is preferred. Curable cases guaranteed.

☞ Cases and Correspondence confidential. Treatment sent C. O. D. to any part of the U. S. List of 120 questions free. Address with postage, Dr. D. O. FRUTH, 80 East Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

NEW ASSESSMENT LAW.

A Fair Statement of the Principles and Provisions of the New Law—How it Will Benefit Honest Men and Particularly the Farmers.

("U. C." in Princeton Democrat.)

A knowledge of the law destroys much of its supposed rigor and injustice. When a law is once enacted, the partisan press of the opposite political party exhausts all its energy in magnifying and flaunting its imperfections and in studiously and falsely concealing its virtues. This is strikingly illustrated by the conduct of the republican press in reference to the new assessment law in Indiana. The tax payers are informed that the valuation of all property is to be more than doubled, and that hereafter taxes will, by reason of the new law, be enormously increased. In this talk about the burden put on the farmer and other taxpayers, the republican press add to falsehood both insincerity and hypocrisy.

Strange to say they find some people who believe these unwarranted inferences and statements to be true. Without examining the new law, or comparing it with the old, they at once "understand" or "hear" the law to be "so and so" and jump at violent and unfounded conclusions. "The farmers," says one prominent republican journal, "are quick to see that their taxes are just about doubled."

The vital change in the new law is in reference to the valuation of property. When the sections of the old and the new law are placed side by side they will be found to differ most in their resemblances.

Sec. 48 of the acts of 1891, provides as follows:

That the owner of the property shall fix what he deems the true cash value thereof to each item of property for the guidance of such assessor, who shall determine the value of each item, after an examination of such statement and also an examination under oath of the party or any other person if he deem it necessary. In determining and settling such valuation, he shall be governed by what is the true cash value, such being the market or the usual selling price at the place where the property shall be at the time of its liability to assessment, and if there is no market value then the actual value.

Sec. 6,330 of the revised statute of 1881, in reference to the same subject is as follows:

The owner shall affix what he deems the fair cash value thereof to each item of personal property for the guidance of the assessor, who shall determine the value of each item, after an examination of such statement and also an examination of the party, under oath, if he deems it necessary. In determining and settling such valuation the assessor shall be governed by what is the fair cash value, such being the market or usual selling price at the place where the property shall be at the time of its liability to assessment, and if there be no market value then the actual value.

Sec. 95 of the act of 1891 provides:

Lands and the improvements and the buildings thereon or affixed thereto shall be valued at their full, true cash value, estimated at the price they would bring at a fair, voluntary private sale, not at a forced or sheriff's sale, taking into consideration the fertility of soil, the vicinity of the same to railroads, macadamized roads, state or county roads, cities, towns, villages, navigable rivers, water privileges on the same or in the vicinity of the same, the location of the route of any canal or canals, with any other local advantages of situation.

Sec. 6,379 of revised statutes of 1881, on same subject is as follows:

Lands and improvements and the buildings thereon or affixed thereto, shall be valued at their full fair cash value, estimated at the price they would bring at a fair voluntary sale taking into consideration the fertility of the soil, the vicinity of the same to railroads, turnpike roads, macadamized roads, clay roads, gravel roads, state or county roads, cities, towns, villages, navigable rivers, water privileges on the same or in the vicinity of the same, the location of the route of any canal or canals with any other local advantages.

Sec. 53 of the new act provides:

The words "value," "cash value," "true value" or "valuation," whenever used in this act, shall be held to mean the usual selling price at the place where the property to which such term of terms are applied shall be at the time of assessment, being the price which could be obtained therefore at private sale and not at forced or auction sale.

The chief differences between the two in reference to the valuation of personal property are, first, the old law provides that the owner shall fix a "fair" cash value and the new law, that he shall fix a "true" cash value; and the second, the new law gives to the assessor the power to "examine under oath any other persons if he deem it neccessary" to secure a true valuation.

The words "fair" and "true" as used in the two acts are exactly synonyms—each meaning "the market or usual selling price at the place where the property shall be at the time of its liability to assessment."

Section fifty-three simply gives the words "true value," a meaning that "fair value" was always intended to have, and which, in truth, it always did have and should have been given. "True value" in this section is defined as being the price which could be obtained therefor at a private sale and not at forced or auction sale." No one will contend that what an article will bring at a "forced or auction sale" is now or ever was its "true value." The different sections define the two words and this definition fixes their meaning. Both sections provide that the valuation should be honest and fair. The new law adopts the theory that it is easier to determine what an item of property is worth, than it is to guess at what it is not worth. Thus believing, it has determined what "true value" must mean. It has given a legislative definition to these words, and who doubts that it simply declares that to be the law which has always been the law. Fair appraisment, under the law as it was, grew to be a "custom more honored in the breach than in the observance." The necessity of determining the valuation of property by the oaths of persons other than the owner is evident.

Texas Letter.

San Antonio, Texas.

EDITOR COURIER: For a long time I have thought I would write a letter for your paper for the benefit of friends. I promised before leaving Indiana, that I would, after being here long enough to know something of the country, write a description. If I had written in three months after coming, I would not have written as I have to-day. My opinion is, that no person from the north likes Texas at first sight, but after being here long enough to become accustomed to the people and their ways, the country and climate, no one can help liking it. As I have been here more than two years I think I may venture to write about it.

San Antonio is the home of health, history, romance and enterprise. There are many cities in America justly famed for special advantages of commerce or health, but none on all the broad continent posesses those peculiar advantages which are found combined in this lovely city. Her matchless climate, the silvery streams that thread their tortuos ways through her limits, her ancient and historic ruins, her towering monuments of modern thrift, progress and enterprise, all unite to present to the tourist, the health seeker, the capitalist and the speculator inducements to be found no no where else in all the expanse of our country.

I will give a condensed review of the history of this grand old city, within whose gates are now gathered the people of two great republics, exchanging greetings of fraternal regard, and vying with each other in its exhibition of progress, civilization, material growth and development. Here we see collected the products of the tropic and frigid zones. Here the splendors of the luxuriant land of Mexico mingle with the practical evidences of American ingenuity and what the southern people call the Yankees', indomitable enterprise.

San Antonio in prehistoric days was a great Indian city, and was settled by French and Spanish traders in the latter part of the 17th century sometime prior to 1690. It enjoys the distinction of having been under seven flags, and being the field of many bloody battles, until nearly every stone within the city limits has received its baptism in the blood of heroes contending for life and liberty. Blood thirsty savages, Frenchmen, Spanish, Mexican and American pioneers, freebooters, royalists, republicans, Texans, confederates and federals have in turn won and lost, conquered and reconquered its hills and valleys. It is the oldest incorporated city in the United States. In earlier times the settlement upon the banks of the current now called the San Antonio, was known as San Fernando and in this name was granted a charter by the King of Spain in 1733. The ancient plazas, crooked and narrow streets and in many places the old and massive walled adobe houses still remain as they were planned and erected by the hardy pioneers nearly two centuries ago. There are old missions whose picturesque ruins still stand on the river banks, that were built under the directions of the Franciscan Monks about 1716 and are in plain sight of the city. Those pious and adventurous pioneers whose mission was the extension of the religion of God, and the dominion of ancient Spain laid the foundations of their work deep and strong. Where ever the remains of their work is found this fact is apparent. San Antonio seems to have been the main center of their system. No other locality in the whole of the vast territory they traversed, bears evidence of such expensive and elaborate expenditure as this, and it is no small tribute to their judgment that subsequent history has vindicated their good sense. San Antonio was a great distributing point before a railroad ever touched Western Texas. The advent of more modern methods of commercial intercourse has but added to its prestige. It is probably the only city in the southwest, that under all conditions, steadily progressed. Its unequaled climate, the fertility of the soil surrounding it, its splendid and inexhaustible water supply all combine to insure its permanent prosperity.

Some two miles below the Mission Conception, is the Mission San Jose. It was founded in 1720, and the famous artist Herica, sent over by the King of Spain, devoted several years to carving its various ornamentations, and statues. The Mission has been the scene of many memorable conflicts and the hands of the vandals have exceeded the ravages of time in its defacements. A famous Parisian architect, in a recent tour through this country, pronounced it the finest piece of architecture in the United States. There is another Mission called the San Juan a few miles further down the river, it is but a crumbling ruin. In its day it was so large that many families lived in safety and comfort within its bounds. Now there is little to be seen but a small chapel and decaying walls.

Startling Facts.

The American people are rapidly becoming a race of nervous wrecks, and the following suggests the best remedy: Alphonso Hempfling, of Butler, Pa., swears that when his son was speechless from St. Vitus dance Dr. Miles' great Restorative Nervine cured him. Mrs. J. R. Miller, of Valparaiso, and J. D. Taylor, of Logansport, Ind., each gained 20 pounds from taking it. Mrs. H. A. Gardner, of Vistula, Ind., was cured of 40 to 50 convulsions a day, and much headache, dizziness, backache and nervous prostration by one bottle. Trial bottles, and fine book of marvelous cures, free at F. E. Davenport's who recommends and guarantees this unequaled remedy. 6

The construction of the railroad between Joppa and Jerusalem in Syria is now an assured fact.

The First Step.

Perhaps you are run down, can't eat, can't sleep, can't think, can't do anything to your satisfaction, and you wonder what ails you. You should heed the warning, you are taking the first step into Nervous Prostration. You need a Nerve Tonic and in Electric Bitters you will find the exact remedy for restoring your nervous system to its normal, healthy condition. Surprising results follow the use of this great Nerve Tonic and Alterative. Your appetite returns, good digestion is restored, and the Liver and Kidneys resume healthy action. Try a bottle. Sudden Deaths.

Heart disease is by far the most frequent cause of sudden death, which in three out of four cases is unsuspected. The symptoms are not generally understood. These are: a habit of lying on the right side, short breath, pain or distress in side, back or shoulder, irregular pulse, asthma, weak and hungry spells, wind in stomach, swelling of ankles or dropsy, oppression, dry cough and smothering. Dr. Miles' illustrated book on heart disease, free at F. E. Texas Letter.

San Antonio, Texas.

(Concluded from last week.)

Edward King, in a contribution to Scribner's Magazine gives a graphic description of the Conception Mission which in the main will serve for the others. He says: "Indians and friars toiled for twenty-one years upon one of the noblest churches ever erected by Catholicsin America, but to-day it is a ruin." It was at sunset that I first saw, at a distance, the twin towers, with a thrill appreciative of their beauty and grandeur, just as hundreds of weary travelers over the great plain saw them a century ago. A welcome sight, for they guaranteed comparative security in a land where nothing was absolutely certain save death. The towers arose above a massive church of grayish stone, once highly ornate and rich in carving, but now much dilapidated. The portal was destroyed. Here and there were hints of the Moorish spirit, in the arch and vault one sees so much in the Spanish architecture. The great dome over the main hall, was a marvel of grace and precision. Throughout it is a grand piece of masonry. Built of the soft stone of the country, it has crumbled in many places but looks as if it would last another century. I might add that the crumbling ruins serve only to attest the magnitude and magnificence of the original structure. Near San José Mission are the ruins of an ancient aqueduct built of solid stone,, crossing the river and conveying the water of San Pedro Springs to the Alamo and other missions. It has been superseded by modern water pipes in the city, though it is still used for irrigating purposes in the outlaying districts. At the point where it crosses the river, this piece of stalwart masonry, defying the assaults of time and storm, with a roadbed on top on which women may be seen crossing with jars of water on their heads, looks like a scene transformed from modern Rome.

The city is beautifully located, its long axis being north and south; the San Antonio river courses the whole length of the city, and since its earliest history has always remained just as it is seen today. No higher and no lower. It has a fall of 100 feet from its source to the lower border of the city limits, making it an unusually rapid flowing stream. Every minute there passes a given point a volume of water amounting to 16,179 cubic feet. The river is spanned by twenty-eight iron bridges in its course through the city. For about three-fourths of a mile upon either side of the river the land is a level plain and the length of the plain is about six miles From the plain on either side is a gentle rise of the land, until it attains a height of from fifty to one hundred feet.

Within the city limits are other equally interesting and historical monuments of the pioneer days. Chief of these is the Alamo whose bloody history is familiar to every southerner. It was here the immortal Travis, Bowie, Crockett and their gallant companions yielded up their lives for the freedom of Texas, This historic pile is now the property of the state, and stands almost in the center of the city. It is built of white stone, but is now gray with age, and moss grown. It is a memory haunted spot and will live on history's page. One look at those battered, ruined walls, will bring visions of the kneeling priest any gentle nun, and of the dusky hordes who gathered there to worship at the matin hour or vesper chime; and of the brave men who sacrificed their lives for freedom within its walls.

Now we come from the past to the present and behold the picture! Here the development of two civilizations meet the view. The sixteenth and the nineteenth centuries present their separate and distuct systems of business. The irrigation ditches used by the ancients two centuries ago and the great water mains of the modern times perform their respective tasks side by side and afford an interesting comparison of past and present methods. A modest estimate places the population at from 66,000 to 70,000.

Now to enumerate some of the enterprises of the city. There is a complete system of waterworks fed by the never failing springs of pure and crystal water which gush forth some four miles north of the city and form the San Antonio river. These works are the property of Col. Geo. W. Brackenridge and consist of fully 200 miles of mains and nearly 800 fine hydrants. The mains extend to every portion of the city affording drink and protection against fire to every quarter, beside the San Pedro and Alazan creeks which afford a bounteous supply of water. The San Antonio fire department is unsurpassed by any in the state, and is fully equipped with the latest improved steam engines, trucks, hose carts, etc., and steps are now being taken to introduce the most practical and efficient system of electric fire alarm. There are three engine companies well manned, three hook and ladder companies, and three hose companies. Light is furnished for the city by two electric light companies which supply both the arc and the incandescent lights, and by a well equipped gas company, whose many miles of mains cover a vast territory. There is also in operation about 75 miles of street railway, its lines branching out all over the city. When we came to Texas two years ago, they were using only mules. At present it is operated entirely by electricity. San Antonio is an important division on the main lines of both the Southern Pacific & International and Great Northern railway systems, and is the chief headquarters of the great San Antonio and Arransas Paso system, whose branches are reaching out over a vast territory and pouring a golden harvest of trade into San Antonio. There are 42 churches and missions here, representing all the denominations, and also a well conducted Y. M. C. A. The opera house would be a credit to any any city and was built about three years ago at a cost of $190,000. A government postoffice has been built in the last year costing $250,000, a magnificent city hall costing $150,000. Besides the vast business steady progress and boundless resources, there is another possessed by San Antonio whose inestimable importance is not to be overlooked. It is the climate. San Antonio is famous as the home of the cattle kings of Texas, many of whom count their cattle by the hundred thousand. In this delightful climate where the cattle, sheep and horses can be raised without a stable or an hour's care from their birth to maturity, it is no wonder that wealth accumulates and that hundreds of elegant homes are here found where once the easy going Mexican used to exist in his adobe hut. With twelve hundred firms engaged in the mercantile pursuits, failures are very rare. And there are forty-five firms quoted as worth $100,000, and six of which are rated as worth over $1,000,000 each. Long before the advent of railroads this was the great base of the supplies for Mexico. Then as now, one of the chief items of trade was live stock. The broad and fertile prairies were filled with fat cattle, sleek, hardy horses. This increased, until to-day San Antonio is recognized as the chief cattle market of the southwest, and is beyond question the largest horse market in the world.

I believe I have said enough for one time about the city, and will now say our family are all in splendid health. My husband is no longer laid up months at a time with the rheumatism. He is still on the road, and likes the business better than butchering in Auburn. There was a terrible wreck on the I. & G. N., road, a few months since, a great iron bridge gave way precipitating a whole train, engine, coal and stock cars, into the river beneath. By some strange provision of providence, the caboose broke loose from the train and was saved. The engineer and fireman were thought to be dead when extricated, but the engineer has since died and the fireman was badly crushed. We at first thought it was Mr. Dilgard's train, as he had gone out but a short time before, but had run around the train that was wrecked, and had crossed the bridge about twenty minutes in advance. I will now close hoping to write again and tell you something about the Mexicans and their way of living.

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

1847.

The fourth page of a letter sheet unruled when the letter was properly folded presented a face for the address and wafer or sealing wax preceded the use of mucilage.

T. R. Dickinson is said to have been the Auburn postmaster for sometime, including the year of which we write but he was not burdened by business of the office, though each letter came wrapped in its own way bill.

One trade now in this locality practicably obsolete was that of gunsmith. There were but few cabins on whose walls supported by peg or antler, there was not resting a rifle and there were few of the settlers but could shoot with a deadly accuracy in which they had a highly sensitive pride.

James R. Cosper now 78 years of age was one of this class and he as well as others has made mention of a big walnut stump which stood on the edge of the street in front of what is now Messrs Hague & Raut's boot and shoe store on the north of the public square. All parties concur in the opinion that full one hundred pounds of lead in shape of bullets had been fired into that old stump.

Settlers came to the village mainly on foot carrying their rifles to take advantage of a possible shot at wild game and on arrival discharged their loads to avoid accident.

Where so many had rifles, considerable repairing was needed and Isaac Savage is said to have been the pioneer gunsmith. In 1847, Charles Stimeley had built two small frame houses, one on each of his two lots Nos. 55 and 56 on South Main street, and taking up his abode in the latter, quietly attended to his business.

Watt and Coder were later owners of the property, now occupied by the modern residence of Dr. Nusbaum and the brick dwelling of S. U. Tarney has long stood upon the other.

Jonathan Hall the pioneer wagon-maker was this year the owner of fourteen village lots and for full twenty years after was one of Auburn's well known and respected citizens. He lived in a quiet way in a good-sized frame house on lot No. 38, and after his removal various parties occupied as renters, till the sale of the property to George Moss, clerk of the circuit court. Mr. Moss had the house thoroughly remodeled and improved and since his death, it has been the home of his widow, Mrs. Hannah Moss and of her parents Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Reed.

At this period of Auburn's history, the population had to a great extent become acclimated to the locality, in country and in village, and improvements were made as fast as means would permit. We have been given to understand that crude as were the sources of comfort, they abounded in enjoyment and are pleasant to retrospection.

Antagonisms there were, personal, social and political, and they gave occasions for victory that was often dearly won in the crushing defeat of the opposing faction.

A dark cloud of sectional strife was slowly rising from the south and its ominous mutterings were heard in threats of secession. Southern union for the sake of slavery aroused the north to unite for the sake of freedom and for the union.

Settlers of Auburn and vicinity represented both sections and political warfare was bitterly waged. An election, even in those far away days, was as spirited as the partisan could wish and though whigs made a gallant fight, democracy was then as now, triumphant.

Numerous additions, some earlier some quite recent, have been made to Auburn upon every side till the first site forms but a fractional part of our town.

Among additions now known are Kuhlman's, Ensley's, Ralston's, McFarland's, Brandt & Ashley's, Rainier & Headley's, Auburn Mining Co's, McIntyre's, Gross & Dills', each perpetuating the name of the person or company by whose enterprise they were laid out.

The village of Auburn as originally mapped was situated in the east half of the southwest quarter of section No. 29, township 34, or Union, north of range 13 east.

The two tiers of lots lying on the east and the two on the west sides of the old plat are each 132X70¼ feet and all others are 149¼X66 feet. The streets are 66 feet wide and the alleys one rod wide.

The Western or Spencer's addition to the town is located in the southwest ¼ of southwest quarter section 29, and the west ½ of the northwest quarter section 32, and was laid out to correspond with the original survey of the town and immediately adjoining on the west.

All lots in this district are four rods wide by eight and one-half long. Lots one to forty on the east side of Jackson street in the old plat extend north and south, the rest lie at right angles to the main street.

Lots Nos. 136 and 154 were respectively to be donated to the first religious society that might claim either and actually improve the same.

A WEEK'S HAPPENINGS.

THIRTY LABORERS BLOWN TO ATOMS BY DYNAMITE.

The Esmeralda Must Be Supplied with Coal—A Mysterious Death—Fatal Runaway—Kansas Cloudburst.

HORRIBLE!

Thirty Laborers Blown to Atoms on the Hudson River Railroad by an Explosion of Dynamite.

A car laden with dynamite, to be used for blasting along the Hudson River railroad, suddenly exploded a few miles below Ferrytown, N. Y., wrecking everything in the vicinity, tearing up all the tracks of the road and blowing to atoms, it is reported, thirty men. Some were hurled dead to a great distance into the river. The fireman of the locomotive on the track was blown, with the tender of the locomotive, into the river. All traffic on the Hudson River Railroad was stopped. The shock of the explosion was felt for miles in all directions and it is impossible to indicate the extent of the damage. The load of dynamite was on a flat-car in a construction train, and was to be used in building the third track. This was the cause of the disaster.

The remains of nine Italians and two Americans, who were killed outright, were lying at the station, where they had been carried by the crowd engaged in moving the wounded and dead. Four other Italians died after being taken to the station, and twenty-three badly injured workmen were also removed to the station. More than twenty are still missing. Those killed outright were literally blown to pieces and were horribly mutilated. Some of the wounded men had their arms blown away. Others are minus their legs, while others were dismembered in an equally horrible manner. The Italian laborers working on the road are generally known by numbers and it is impossible at present to give their names. A large number of physicians from Ferrytown, Irvington, Dobbs Ferry and Yonkers are attending the wounded. The Italians who were employed in extending the road bed had removed the dynamite from the car and placed it alongside of the tracks. They set a blast, and the concussion of the blast exploded the dynamite.

DESPERATE STRAITS.

The Esmeralda Must Be Supplied With Coal If She Expects to Get to Chili.

A special from Acapulco says: "It seems now certain that the Esmeralda must now have recourse to some desperate means to secure coal, for coal she must have to get back to Chili. It is announced that the Pacific Mail Steamship Company has ordered its agent here not to sell the Esmeralda any coal under any circumstances. This order was communicated to the commander of the Esmeralda, and it is now thought extremely probable that the Chilian will take coal by force. This is thought the more probable as it is now almost certainly known that the Esmeralda's captain is now in command of the Itata, having boarded her when the two vessels met off this port on Friday night. Should the acting captain decide to take coal by force there is absolutely nothing to prevent him from hauling his vessel alongside the coal hulk and taking what he wants, for the forts are worthless as against modern ordnance, and the Esmeralda could, if molested, lay Acapulco in ruins in half an hour. The Mexican authorities will hardly be likely to offer an opposition to a powerful ship like the Esmeralda, and thus bring about a bombardment upon the town. Nevertheless there is intense excitement."

The Daltons Surrounded.

Sac and Fox Agency (I. T.) special: Tussahoe, an Indian scout, one of the posse who have been chasing the Dalton gang who "held up" the Santa Fe express a week ago, arrived here for reinforcements. The gang has been located twelve miles from the agency and are fortified at a deserted ranch surrounded by the posse. When reinforcements arrive the posse will attack the desperadoes and a bloody combat is looked for. Tussahoe left here with twenty new men.

Gas is Scarce at Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh special: The scarcity of gas is again embarrassing Penn avenue mill owners. In Zug & Co.'s and other works the puddlers only make three heats instead of five, and the gas is shut off at night. The Equitable Gas Company intends to stop supplying mills in future and sell only to private consumers. It is said that the mills must use coal or else close down their mills, although they are all crowded with orders.

A Misplaced Switch.

As the south-bound passenger train left Seventh street station, Columbus, Ohio, on the Pennsylvania line, the engine darted into a siding while rounding a curve, striking a freight car, knocking it from the track and also damaging four other cars. The pilot of the engine was knocked off and the passengers badly shaken up, but no one was injured.

Kansas Cloudburst.

Hutchinson (Kan.) special: Another heavy rain visited this section, and reports have reached town that it was accompanied by a great cloudburst six miles southeast of here. Several fields of corn and wheat were completely washed away.

Fire at Jacksonville.

The Mohawk block, Jacksonville, Fla., was destroyed by fire. Loss, $120,000, insured for $35,000. Several people narrowly escaped losing their lives.

A Mysterious Death.

The body of Mrs. Daisy Reynolds, a school teacher at St. Marys, Ohio, who was mysteriously missing for two weeks, was found in a tenantless negro hut near Wilshire. The body was emaciated, but no marks of violence. Her death is a mystery.

A Fatal Runaway.

While Mr. John Hogan and wife, of Danville, Va., were riding out, Mr. Hogan fell out of the buggy and the horse ran away, turning the vehicle over. Mrs. Hogan fell on her head and sustained injuries from which she afterwards died.

Police Law Void.

Terre Haute (Ind.) special: The wide open saloon people received a black eye in the Superior Court here when Judge McNutt held the metropolitan police law enacted by the last Legislature, to be unconstitutional. The decision was accompanied by a written opinion, in which the court set forth its reasons at length, being largely governed therein by the ruling of the Supreme Court. The court will issue an order of ouster, deposing the heads of the metropolitan force, who have had charge of the police under injunction for several weeks, and placing it within the power of the City Council to reinstate Robert Davis as Police Chief, or appoint a new one. This is the greatest victory ever won by the law-and-order people of this city, and it is the first time in many years they have had it in their power to close the saloons. The fight in the courts has been bitterly contested, and the loss of the case is a severe blow to the saloon men.

FIRE-SWEPT.

Terrible Work of the Flames at Muskegon, Mich.

A special from Muskegon, Mich., dated the 18th inst., says: This afternoon at 6:30 fire started in the Launkawell hotel barns, swept ten blocks up Pine street, then by a sudden shift in the wind the flames were driven towards Terrace avenue. Ten Pine street business blocks were wiped out. The court house was burned but its public documents saved. The prisoners in the county jail were liberated. A little child stopping in the Launkawell barns, where the fire started, is missing, and by 9 o'clock the fire reached the southern district of the city. The firemen succeeded in reducing the further progress of the flames. To-night twenty blocks of business houses and dwellings are in smoldering ruins. The total dwellings burned may safely be put at 300. A conservative estimate of the total loss is $500,000. The total insurance is unobtainable and many have no insurance. Hundreds of families are thrust upon their friends for accommodations. Dynamite was used in some instances to clear buildings and in the endeavor to prevent the spreading of the flames.

Among the sad incidents connected with the fire was the death of Harry Stevens, Assistant Postmaster and son of Postmaster Stevens. He was very ill with pneumonia, and the flames made it necessary to remove him to a place of safety. He died amid the crash of falling houses while being removed.

SAILED SOUTH.

The Steamer Charleston at Sea Again.

A Washington special dated the 20th inst., says: Just before 4 o'clock this afternoon the Navy Department received confirmation of a press dispatch to the effect that the Charleston sailed southward from Acapulco last evening leaving the Esmeralda in port. No word from the Itata. The presumption is that the Charleston's commander is satisfied that the Itata passed Acapulco either before she arrived there or while he lay in port, and that is why he resumed the long chase. It is estimated that the Itata has been steaming along at about seven knots, and as she was ten days out last Friday night, she should at that time have been just off Acapulco. It is reported from that place that she met the Esmeralda and as she is a much smaller vessel than the Esmeralda and burns very much less coal, it is regarded as within probabilities that the latter vessel might have supplied her with this necessary article, which would account for the strait the war ship is now in respecting a further supply of coal. If it be true that the Itata was off Acapulco Friday night she has two full days start of the Charleston when the latter again started in pursuit last night. This is about the same lead that she had when she started from San Diego, but if the two vessels now follow the same course, the Charleston steaming at fourteen knots, should come up with the Itata in forty-eight hours.

THE ENGLISH VIEW OF IT.

What They Think of Our Pursuit of the Itata.

The London Standard, in an editorial, says: "We can only account for extraordinary zeal in the pursuing of the Chilian steamer Itata on the assumption that the government is delighted at having an opportunity of retrospectively justifying in Alabama contention as against England. It is doubtful, however, whether this ingenious manœuver can establish any new dictum in international law."

Mob After Stanley.

While Henry M. Stanley was delivering a lecture at Sheffield, England, the hall was invaded by a gang of Socialists, who began to sell among the audience a pamphlet attacking the explorer. The pamphlet was very freely bought, under the belief that it contained a report of one of Stanley's lectures. When the fraud was discovered there was a great commotion, and the venders were violently expelled. The gang lingered around the building, and as Mr. Stanley, at the conclusion of his lecture, left the hall they attempted to mob him. His friends gathered around him and, with the assistance of the police, kept off his assailants. He was then hurried into a cab and driven to his hotel.

Michigan Forest Fires.

A special from Big Rapids, Mich., dated the 16th inst., says: From Manistee to Huron, on the lower peninsula, forest fires are still raging. Up to date the loss is estimated at $2,000,000, and will probably be doubled unless checked by rain. The loss in the upper tiers far exceed this estimate. Fully forty families are destitute at Hart. Twin lake has so far been preserved, but the danger is not yet over. In the vicinity of White Cloud rains have subdued the fires, but hundreds of families are destitute. The situation at Escanada is very serious. All the inhabitants of Walkerville, which was burned, have escaped.

Twelve Killed.

Mrs. A. A. Center, of Pottsdam, N. Y., who is visiting at the home of W. W. Morgan, Kansas City, says that a bridge on the Atchinson, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad, near Albuquerque, N. M., fell, carrying with it a passenger train that had been two hours in advance of the train by which she was traveling. The latter train was flagged and the passengers were obliged to cross the cut which the bridge spanned and meet a train on the other side. Mrs. Center says that it was reported that twelve or fourteen people were killed. No telegraphic report of such a wreck has been received.

A Naval Officer Retires.

Capt. Henry Erben, United States Navy, has succeeded Rear Admiral Daniel L. Braine in command of the Brooklyn navy yard, the Admiral going upon the retired list. Admiral Braine's retirement was made the occasion of great ceremony. The marine battallion paraded, a salute of thirteen guns was fired, and all officers were in full unifrom. The retiring officer was the third in rank in the navy. He entered the service as midshipman in 1846, was in several engagements in the Mexican war and served with distinction in the civil war. He is a native of New York City.

Youngstown Officers Worsted.

The other night the residence of Dr. McCurdy, of Youngstown, O., was burglarized. An hour after the robbery the police discovered three strangers with sealskin sacques, stolen from the residence, trying to jump on a freight train to escape the officers, and the burglars began firing. Officer Wm. Freed was shot through the body, and the surgeons say he will die. Officer Petrie had his left arm badly mangled by a bullet. Officers captured one of the burglars, who gives the name of Wm. Sherman, New York.

Wreck on the B. and O.

A Baltimore and Ohio passenger train bound for Philadelphia, dashed into the side of a freight train at Boundbrook, Pa., wrecking the passenger engine, some of the passenger cars and eight freight cars. The passenger train did not leave the track. The engineer of the passenger train was seriously injured. The fireman and one of the brakemen were also hurt. It is said the accident was caused by a switch tender being unable to get the switch closed in time to avoid the accident.

A Clean Sweep.

Chicago special: Every switchman in the employ of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway Company—200 in this city and 300 employed at points along the line—have been discharged and paid off. The road has been preparing for this action during the past two months, and for every man discharged there was another ready to take his place. Yardmaster Frank McInerney, whose discharge the switchmen demanded and enforced by a tie-up during General Manager Whitman's illness six weeks ago, was reinstated and took charge of the new men.

Young Lady Poisoned.

Near Wesley Chapel, in the northern part of Fayette County, Ohio, some unknown persons are making an effort to poison stock, and in some mysterious way Miss Della Allen has been dangerously poisoned. The stock on the farm of John Dougherty was suddenly taken ill and two cows died. Several piles of salt were discovered in the fields, which, upon examination, were found to contain considerable poison. Miss Allen's illness is supposed to result from drinking water into which some of the stuff had been thrown.

Caught in the Act.

Two men made a desperate attempt to steal a registered letter pouch from one of the mail wagons while it was en route to the Grand Central Depot at Forty-second street, New York. When the wagon had reached Thirty-fifth street the men approached, and pulling open one of the doors, secured the pouch. They started on a run down Fifth avenue. A policeman who witnessed the theft gave chase, and the thieves dropped their booty and escaped.

The Marine Engineers.

The marine engineers' strike at Cleveland is still on. Mr. Gallway, President of the Engineers' Protective Society says: "The report that we are weakening is wholly unfounded. The vessel owners are getting along fairly well now, because very few boats are running. When navigation really opens up our services will be needed, and we will receive what we demand." Both sides are firm in declaring that no concessions will be granted.

Ohio Pythians' Encampment.

Gen. J. W. Greene, of Toledo, commanding the Ohio Brigade, Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, has issued an order locating the annual encampment at Presque Isle, near Toledo, fixing the middle of July as the time. Hamilton, Sandusky and Zanesville offered a bonus for the meeting, but the General got better terms. Two thousand uniformed Knights are expected.

Crushed By an Avalanche of Slate.

Gaylord colliery, one of the Kingstone coal company, at Plymouth, Pa., was the scene of an accident by which two men lost their lives and one was fatally injured. The killed are: Felix Wieczhalowiz, Michael Yiechofshi. The man fatally injured was Joe Rostz. His back is broken. About ten tons of slate broke loose from the roof and fell, crushing the men beneath it.

For Writing to a Lottery Company.

In the United States District Court, Warren M. Frame, of Raleigh County, West Virginia, was convicted of violating the lottery law by sending a letter through the United States mails to the Louisiana Lottery, and was fined $25 and costs by Judge Jackson. This is the first conviction for this offense known to have been made in the United States.

Beyond His Depth.

Frankie Fox, the 6-year-old son of Lawrence Fox, of Fort Wayne, waded into the St. Mary's River with his younger and older brothers and several other playmates. He got beyond his depth and sank beneath the water, only rising to cry for help and then sink out of the view of his little playfellows. His remains were recovered.

Rear End Collision.

At Philaris, Ala., a rear end collision occurred between two south bound freight trains on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad. Brakeman J. M. Costello was instantly killed and his body burned in the wreck. Fireman Lester Brown was also killed and Engineer Edmunds hurt mortally. Three oil cars took fire and the wreck was consumed.

Strong Drink.

Berry Fowler, of Monticello, Ill., and J. H. and Samuel Riley, of Stanford, Ill., drank from a bottle supposed to contain whisky, but which was filled with aconite. Three hours later J. H. Riley died in great agony, and it is believed the other two will die.

Nellie Goodwin Gets Alimony.

Mrs. Nellie Goodwin has been allowed $75 a week alimony, pending the trial of her suit for separation from Actor Nat Goodwin on the ground of desertion. She is allowed $250 for counsel fees.

Blaine Is Better.

The President has received a telegram from Secretary Blaine saying that his health was much improved and that he expected to be about in a few days.

LATEST CROP REPORTS.

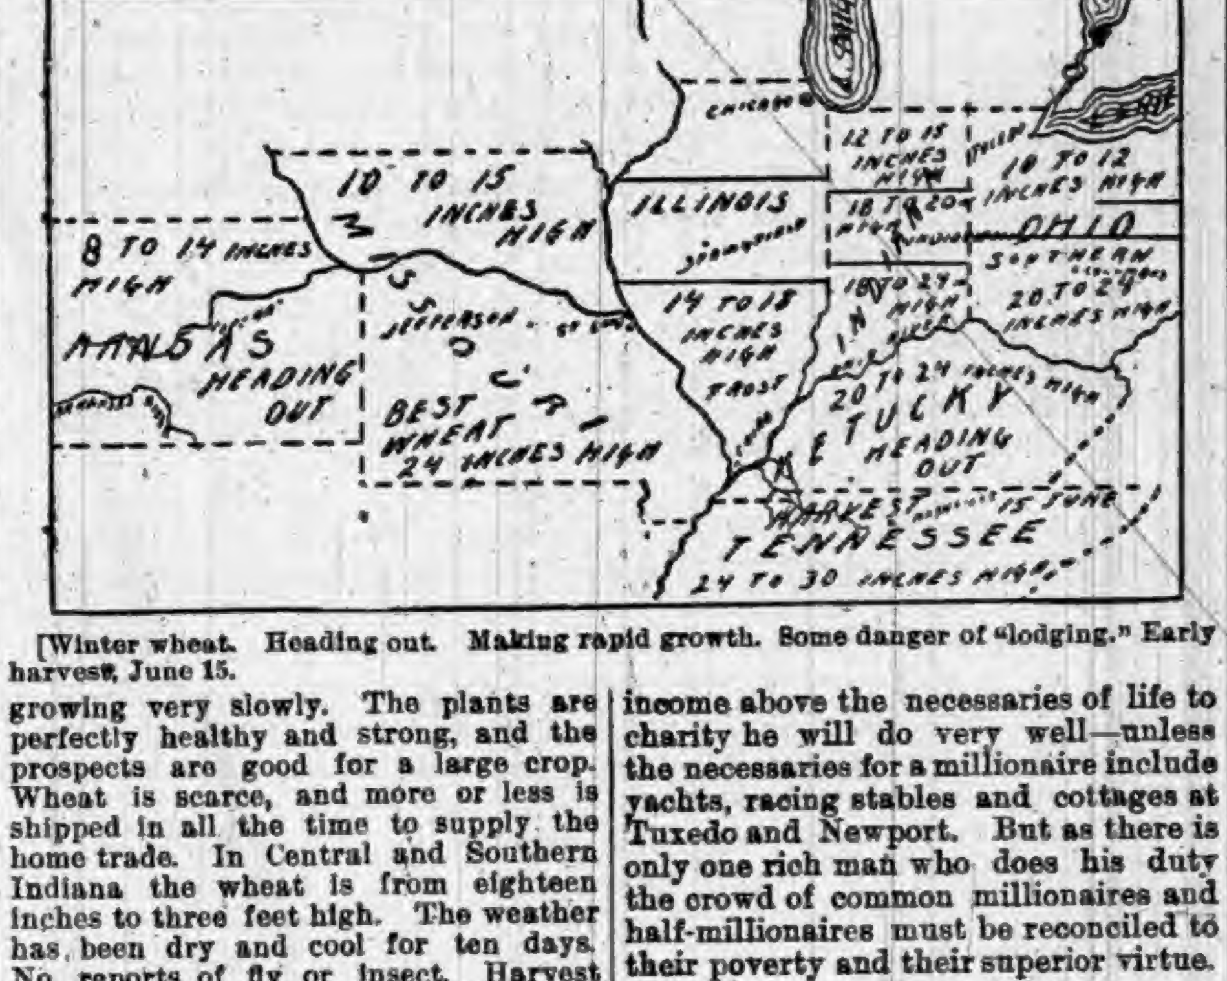
GENERAL CONDITIONS IN ALL SECTIONS ENCOURAGING.

Early Winter Wheat All Headed Out—Spring Wheat All Seeded, Coming Up, and Making a Good Stand—Generally Too Dry and Cold for Oats.

The grain growing areas of the country have experienced a period of dry weather accompanied by severe frosts which are thought to have damaged more or less the small fruit, nipped the spring wheat, and what it has done to the winter wheat, which was just heading out, it is impossible at this time to say.

WINTER WHEAT.

In Central Illinois the prospects now are that the early wheat will be fit to cut by the middle of June. The crop is generally heading out. In Southern Illinois wheat is from fourteen to eighteen inches high. Considerable of it is in head already. There are no signs of fly or insects yet. The frost damaged vegetables and fruit to some extent. There was more or less wheat just ready to head out and the earliest wheat may have been damaged. In many of the largest winter wheat countries in Southern Illinois wheat on the bottom lands is over two feet in height, and on high lands about twelve inches high. Northern Indiana reports a cold, dry week, with a recent hard frost. The crop as a whole stands even, and is growing very slowly. The plants are perfectly healthy and strong, and the prospects are good for a large crop. Wheat is scarce, and more or less is shipped in all the time to supply the home trade. In Central and Southern Indiana the wheat is from eighteen inches to three feet high. The weather has been dry and cool for ten days. No reports of fly or insect. Harvest will be on about June 20. In Northern Ohio wheat has made slow growth during the last fourteen days. Late-sown fields where the water has stood are more or less spotted, although the prospects for wheat are as a whole good. In Southern Ohio wheat has literally caught up with itself. This situation was caused by the unusually favorable weather during April. New wheat ought to be on the market by July 4. Winter wheat in Southern Michigan varies all the way from six to ten inches in height. The weather has been cool and dry and the crop is doing well. In Southern Kansas wheat will probably be harvested about June 15. Its height is from eight to eighteen inches. In Northern Kansas wheat will now average from twelve to fourteen inches in height. None has headed out yet. In Northern Missouri wheat is now from ten to fifteen inches in height, and just ready to head out. In Southern Missouri the largest wheat is now fully twenty-four inches high, and the general condition of the crop is uniform; the earliest varieties will be ready to harvest about the first week in June. In Tennessee the early wheat is now all headed out. In Kentucky there is some complaint of wheat turning yellow on account of the grain louse. These complaints, however, are not very numerous. In Northern Texas wheat is three feet high and headed out. Harvest will commence the last of May. Oregon reports winter wheat about ten inches high. The April rains helped the fall wheat greatly, and the crop looks better than at this time last season. Harvest will commence the latter part of July.



[Winter wheat. Heading out. Making rapid growth. Some danger of "lodging." Early harvest, June 15.

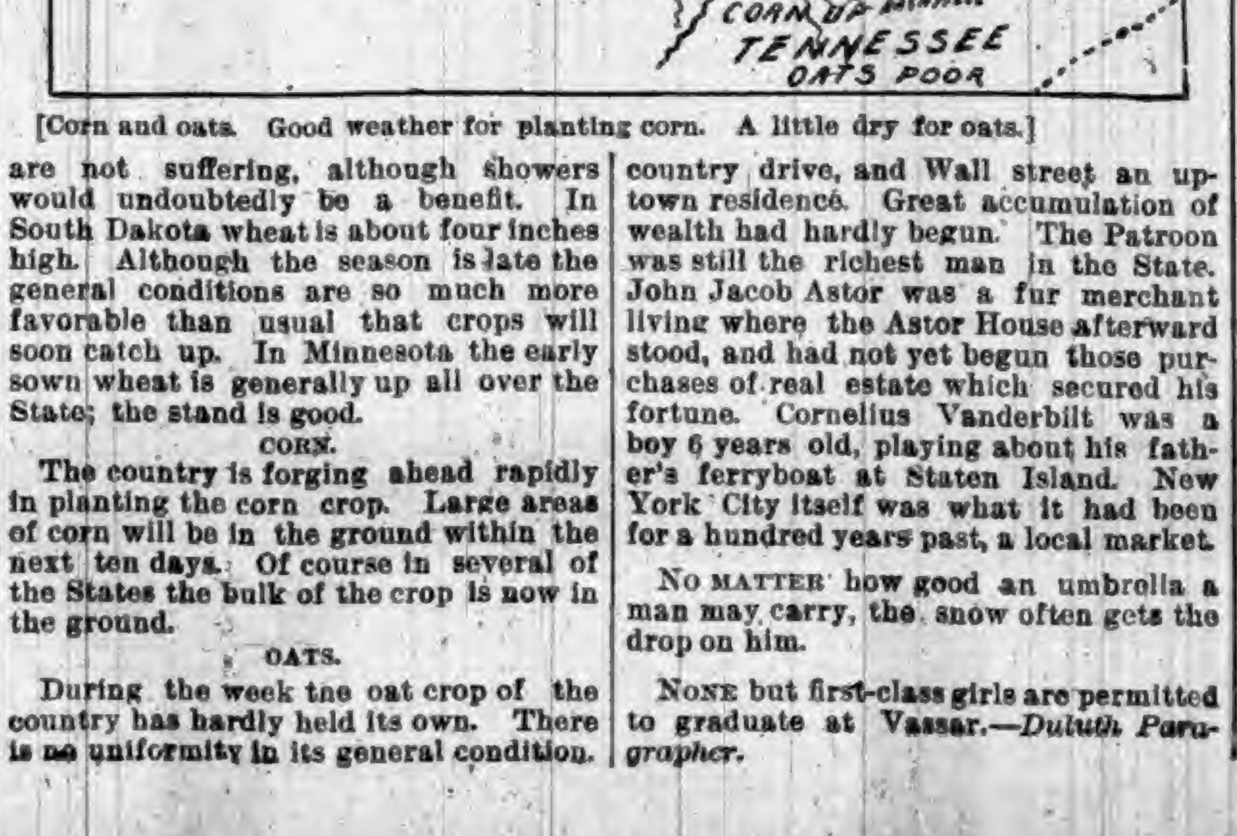
SPRING WHEAT.

In the Red River Valley spring wheat is practically now all seeded. The early sown wheat is coming up evenly and the stand is considered good generally. The acreage is about the same as last year, possibly a trifle larger. There is quite a diversity of opinion with regard to the effect of frost the present week upon the young wheat plants. Some claim frost is beneficial, causing it to root deeply and stool out better. While there have been no rains recently, crops are not suffering, although showers would undoubtedly be a benefit. In South Dakota wheat is about four inches high. Although the season is late the general conditions are so much more favorable than usual that crops will soon catch up. In Minnesota the early sown wheat is generally up all over the State; the stand is good.



[Corn and oats. Good weather for planting corn. A little dry for oats.]

CORN.

The country is forging ahead rapidly in planting the corn crop. Large areas of corn will be in the ground within the next ten days. Of course in several of the States the bulk of the crop is now in the ground.

OATS.

During the week the oat crop of the country has hardly held its own. There is no uniformity in its general condition. Nebraska probably shows the best outlook at present for a full crop of any State where a surplus crop of oats is made. In Missouri and Kansas the conditions are not an average; in Tennessee and Kentucky the prospects are poor; in the State of Illinois fair; very uneven in Indiana and Ohio; in Iowa more or less mixed. It is too early to say anything yet with regard to the condition of the oat crop in the Dakotas and Minnesota.

FROST AND FRUIT.

The late frost was not confined to limited areas. It swept over the country from North Dakota, where the spring wheat was just coming up, and left its mark upon it, and went upon its journey of destruction across the country as far south as the Ohio River, where it caught the early winter wheat, just in head.

Rich Men and Charity.

In a recent speech Abram S. Hewitt is reported to have said that he knew but one rich man in New York—and by rich he meant a man worth at leat $20,000,000—who was doing his duty. That man, he said, devoted his entire income, above the sum required for the necessaries of life, to charity. This shows a decidedly high standard on Mr. Hewitt's part in two respects, remarks the Pittsburg Dispatch. That a man must have $20,000,000 before he is rich reduces the vast bulk of the population to a common level of poverty, while if the rich man gives all his income above the necessaries of life to charity he will do very well—unless the necessaries for a millionaire include yachts, racing stables and cottages at Tuxedo and Newport. But as there is only one rich man who does his duty the crowd of common millionaires and half-millionaires must be reconciled to their poverty and their superior virtue.

Winchesters vs. Negroes.

A terrible race riot was narrowly avoided on the Western Railroad at White Hall, Ala., be the coolness and determination of Conductor R. W. Gorman. Two car-loads of drunken negroes, picnickers, were attached to the regular train. The negroes made a rush for the ladies' car, swearing and using vulgar language. The conductor, rushing into the express car, returned with a half-dozen Winchesters and some revolvers. Quickly organizing a posse among the passengers, he ordered the negroes out. Under the muzzles of the fire-arms they were slowly forced from the car and into their compartment without any bloodshed. The ringleaders were jailed. The conductor could hardly prevent crowds at different stations along the line from assaulting the negroes.

All Sorts.

HEPTARCHY, or government of seven rulers, was gradually formed in England from 455, when Hengist became King of Kent. It terminated in 828, when Egbert became sole monarch of England. There were at first nine or ten Saxon Kingdoms, but Middlesex soon ceased to exist, and Bernicia and Deira were generally governed by one ruler as Northumbria.

THERE is not a single city in the United States.

MORE bicycles are used by ladies in Denmark than in any other European country.

THE largest bear-skin in the world is in Kansas City. It was taken from an animal weighing 2,800 pounds.

THE oldest of four sons in a Kentucky family is Leon C. Carter, and the others are Elno C., Neel C., and Enol C. The use of the same letters in each name was unintentional.

IN the year 1800, except for a few banks and insurance offices, turnpikes, hedges, canals and land companies, neither bonds nor stocks were known. The city of New York was so small as to make extravagance difficult; the Battery was a fashionable walk, Broadway a country drive, and Wall street an uptown residence. Great accumulation of wealth had hardly begun. The Patroon was still the richest man in the State. John Jacob Astor was a fur merchant living where the Astor House afterward stood, and had not yet begun those purchases of real estate which secured his fortune. Cornelius Vanderbilt was a boy 6 years old, playing about his father's ferryboat at Staten Island. New York City itself was what it had been for a hundred years past, a local market.

—A strange case is reported from Michigan City, where Henry Boyle, a life-term convict, has recovered his reason after being a raving maniac for many years. Boyle was received from Fort Wayne for a most atrocious murder. After being confined several months he became deranged. For two years it was found impossible to keep an article of clothing on him. He has now seemingly recovered, and protests his innocence of the crime for which he was convicted.

—At Medoria, Vance Hunsucker, a boy of 7 years, was shot and killed, the whole left side of his face and neck being torn off. The Coroner's verdict in the case showed that he came to his death accidently, at the hands of parties unknown. At the time of the shooting the boy was in a room of his father's house with two little boys of about his own age, and they are so badly frightened they can give no account of the affair. The child's parents are almost wild with grief.

—A bitter fight is going on over the naming of a postoffice recently located at the station east of Elizabethtown.

—Amos Hudson, who cut his throat at Wingate, was insane and imagined a mob was after him. May recover.

—Joseph Micner and Perry Wagner, of Wakarusa, met in Nappanee and swapped horses. On the way home Micner's horse reared up and kicked over the dash-board, planting it's hoofs in Micner's abdomen. The latter died that night.

—The 5 per cent. bonds issued by the city of Crawfordsville for the purpose of erecting an electric-light plant have been bought by the Citizens' National Bank at par, $30,000.

—John Rush, a prominent minister of the Friends's Church, died suddenly at his home, in South Wabash. Death resulted from heart failure. Rush was 48 years old and a popular pastor.

—The little son of Frank Weber, of Fort Wayne upset a teakettle of boiling water and was horribly scalded over the face and body. The child died after suffering terrible agony for many hours.

—Frank and Harris Burns sawed their way out of Jeffersonville Penitentiary.

—An accident occurred four miles northeast of Greenwood, in which the 5-year-old son of David Carney met a horrible death. Mr. Carney was using a roller on his ground, and, wanting a drink of water, left the team in charge of the boy. While his father was absent the boy placed the lines over his head and started the horses. The lines caught under the roller, drawing his head to the ground and against the roller, choking him to death.

—A sad case of accidental poisoning occurred at Huron. Charles King, a boy about 13 years old, with four or five companions, spent the afternoon in the woods. While there they ate some kind of wild roots, which, it is supposed, were wild parsnips. None of the lads experienced any bad effect until after 6 o'clock in the evening, when two or three were taken violently ill. Young King was a stiffened corpse in less than two hours, but his compaions have recovered from the effects of the poisonous herbs.

—A beautiful oolitic limestone monument, ten feet high, and well proportioned, with proper inscriptions, was dedicated ten miles west of Greensburg, as the center of population in the United States. The monument is surrounded by a court, or open space, and on the eastern face is the following inscription. Center of Population of the United States, 1890, 35 degrees 32 minutes and 53 seconds West Longitude, 39 degrees 11 minutes and 56 seconds North Latitude. Erected by Chicago Herald.

—Numbers of fish are being found dead and dying in White River, near Matinsville, and the river banks are lined with buzzards, feeding on the bodies. People who have examined the fish say dynamite cannot have been the cause. It is claimed the fish are poisoned by filth thrown in the river at Indianapolis. Some, however, say that dynamite is being used, regardless of the law, and it is certain that explosions are frequently heard about daylight. The Fish Commissioner's attention will be called in this direction.

—As the south-bound through freight train entered Flat Rock bridge near Columbus, the engineer, Rar Bennett, was horrified at seeing a man step upon the center of the track, only a hundred feet away, and deliberately lay down. The danger whistle was sounded, but to no purpose. The man's head was severed from his body, over which the entire train of thirty cars passed. The unfortunate man was Rost Test, and his home was in Jennings county, near North Vernon. He is a single man and is said to have grown despondent over a love affair.

—The 5-year-old son of James Miller, residing near Round Hill, met a horrible death by hanging himself in the door of a granary. The door was made to slip up and down, and it fell down after the child had put his head through, holding him fast. The boy struggled hard to free himself, and in his efforts knocked the measure from under his feet. This left him hanging by the neck and soon life was extinct. After his mother had missed him for two hours, she found him in his awful position, cold in death. In his efforts to release himself, the boy had knocked all the skin from his knees and otherwise bruised himself.

—Conrad Morgan beat his way from Dublin to Richmond on a freight train, to see Forepaugh's circus, and after the show he was trying to beat his way back. It was dark, and Morgan leaped from the train to avoid arrest. It happened to be on the bridge, nearly seventy feet to the water, where he jumped. The train was stopped and word sent back to look for his dead body, but he had struck some soft dirt in the side of the bluff, and rolled, perhaps, sixty feet to where he was found unconscious. He had sustained only a fractured wrist and a few bruises, and after a night in St. Stephen's Hospital was able to be sent home.

—A large pin-oak log was being sawed at Jesse Cox's saw-mill, at Seymour when the saw struck some hard substance. The engine was stopped, and the side of the log was chopped into, and a whole horse-shoe was found, the outer end of which had been struck by the saw. The tree had been sawed down in the old fair grounds in the northeast part of the city. The shoe was located about three feet from the end of the log, and there were twenty-six distinct yearly growths over the outside part of the shoe. The outside of the tree was smoothly grown over, and there was nothing to indicate the hidden shoe and save an indistinct snare in the bark.

—At the Lake Erie and Western railroad bridge across White River, just east of Muncie, an accident occurred that will likely cause the death of Daniel Ferguson, of Lafayette. The bridge is a covered trestle structure, high enough to permit a man passing safely under it standing on top a box-car. Ferguson was standing on a high car, and as the train rushed into the bridge he was struck in the face. He fell insensible to the top of the car, from where he was in the act of rolling off when caught by the other brakeman on the train. The young man's condition is quite serious, with his face so badly mashed that his friends could not recognize him.

—Martin Griner, a one time wealthy and prominent citizen of Logansport, shot and killed his mistress, Mrs. Anna Keister, and then blew out his own brains. Left a wife and family.

—Spartansburg citizens have met and passed resolutions calling on the jury to do its duty in the trial of Charles Kenny, the tramp who is held for the murder of Farmer Morgan a few days ago. The atmosphere is full of lynch talk around Winchester and the jail is being guarded night and day.

—Dr. F. B. Thomas, of Winimac, cut his throat and stabbed himself in the abdomen with a pair of shears in vain attempts at suicide. He was twenty years the editor of the Winimac Democrat, and a delegate to the Horace Greeley convention.

—Russell L. Squier, of Muncie, has received a check for $1,000 from the Cincinnati, Wabash and Michigan Railroad Co. by way of compromise of a suit for damages against the company. Mr. Squier was injured in a collision on that road near Anderson several months ago, and had entered suit for $10,000 damages.

SAVED AT LAST.

AUBURN, IND., Oct. 3, 1890.

Dr. J. W. Bergen:

Dear Sir:—By this time, I presume, you will want to know how I am getting along with Bergen's Asthma Cure.

Well, you have heard of persons obtaining a new life. Now I really feel that way myself. When I began taking Bergen's Asthma Cure, I was just coming out of a long siege of it, and was reduced to 115 pounds; weak, short of breath, chills, fever, and badly demoralized generally, coughing from half an hour to an hour every night.

Since commencing, from the third night, I have not lost ten minutes' sleep all night, cough gone, gained seventeen pounds, chills gone, fever gone, shortness of breath and difficulty of breathing gone, consequently I feel a thousand per cent. better. I thank God every day that I ever saw your advertisement, and that I was induced to write to you.

This is peculiarly encouraging in my case, as I had suffered so long and was so discouraged about my case, having tried everything. I am telling the good news every day.

Push on the good work; you are on the right track.

Yours Very Gratefully,
R. McDOUGALL.

Wonderful Remedy

That Cures Catarrh, Hay-Fever, Cold in the Head, Sore Throat, Canker, and Bronchitis.

The testimonials to these FACTS are NUMEROUS and STRONG, similar to the following:

From the Hon. Harvey D. Colvin, Ex-Mayor of Chicago:

CHICAGO, July 24, 1890.

S. H. KLINCK—DEAR SIR: I am pleased to say that I consider your remedy the best medicine in existence, for the human afflictions you claim to cure. I suffered from catarrh with bronchitis for many years. During that time I employed physicians and faithfully tried many so-called remedies advertised to cure this disease, without any material benefit, when a friend induced me to try your remedy, claiming others had been cured by it. The first bottle gave me the most pleasing results. I have continued its use and I can not say too much for it. It found me too near the grave for comfort and restored me to health again. It adorns my toilet stand and by using it occasionally I am kept well.

I would not be without it if it cost $5 per bottle. I earnestly recommend it to all my afflicted friends.

THE DANCING SCHOOL.

THE master's old and lean and grim,
And the gout is in
his knees;
And, though he says
his eyes are dim,
My smallest fault
he sees.
Chassez and bow, and turn and bow—
I try my best to please—
No matter now, there's a frown on his brow—
And the gout is in his knees.

He taught my father long ago;
He teaches me to-day;
A thousand small tired feet, I know,
Have stirred at his "chassez!"
Chassez and bow, and turn and bow—
To the girl in pink and gray—
No matter now, there's a frown on his brow—
As he teaches me to-day.

But what care I how stern he be,
If Pink-and-Gray be kind?
Oh, let him frown his best on me,
If so he have a mind.
Chassez and bow, and turn and bow—
My happy eyes are blind
To the frown on his brow—no matter how—
If Pink-and-Gray be kind.

Oh, let him frown, and frown his fill,
Howe'er he make me stir;
The Caledonian Quadrille
To-day I dance with her.
Chassez and bow, and turn and bow—
The fiddles whizz and whirr.
No matter how be the frown on his brow
To-day I dance with her.

Ah, me! What years have slid away,
Sweet Pink-and-Gray, and how!
Since that old "Caledonian's" day—
They do not dance it now.
Chassez and bow, and turn and bow;
And the master, grim and gray,
Has a frown on his brow; and yet, somehow,
The scholars slip away.

I sit here in the evening's cool,
And see you, Pink-and-Gray,
Lead children to the dancing-school—
To the master, grim and gray.
Chassez and bow, and turn and bow—
I might have walked to-day—
No matter how—'twill never be now—
With you, sweet Pink-and-Gray!
